P.L. 540 -- Signed into law May 28.

Congress, under pressure to enact a farm bill before the planting season began, completed action on two omnibus measures in 1956. The first was vetoed, the second approved by the President. Both bills contained the soil bank requested by President Eisenhower, but by the time the legislation was signed into law, it was generally conceded that the soil bank could have little effect on farm income in the first year.

The first bill Congress sent to the President was the outgrowth of one passed by the House in 1955 and carried the same bill number (HR 12). The House bill, originally a measure to restore rigid price supports on basic agricultural commodities, was amended to include mandatory price supports for small feed grains, two-price plans for wheat and rice, and an extension of dual parity for four basic crops -- wheat, cotton, corn and peanuts. These four provisions were listed as "unacceptable" by President Eisenhower, who vetoed the bill "with intense disappointment and regret." The veto was sustained in the House, which failed to muster even a simple majority in its attempt to enact the legislation without Presidential approval. A two-thirds majority was required.

The second bill (HR 10875) differed from HR 12 chiefly in that provisions specifically objectionable to the Administration were modified or deleted. However, the bill retained mandatory price supports for small feed grains and gave the Secretary of Agriculture discretionary authority to establish a two-price plan for rice. It did not carry provision for advance payments under soil bank contracts, a device requested by President Eisenhower to put soil bank money into farmers' hands in 1956. The President signed the bill with the comment that its good provisions outweighed the bad.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, the Agricultural Act of 1956 (HR 10875):

SOIL BANK

Set up an acreage reserve program by directing the Secretary of Agriculture to compensate producers for reducing their 1956-59 crops of basic commodities below their allotments or base acreages; land so retired from production could be put to no other use.

Provided for inclusion in the 1956 acreage reserve of land previously planted, if the crop were plowed under or clipped not more than 21 days after enactment, or later at the Secretary's discretion.

Established a 51-million-acre total base acreage for corn of the commercial area for each year of the acreage reserve program, subject to a 1956 referendum of commercial corn producers.

Limited total compensation for participation in the acreage reserve program to $750 million for any one year's crops and set the following limits for each commodity: wheat, $375 million; cotton, $300 million; corn, $300 million; peanuts, $7 million; rice, $23 million; tobacco, $45 million.

Set up a conservation reserve program by authorizing the Secretary to enter into long-term contracts under which producers would agree to devote to conservation uses a specifically designated acreage of land regularly used in the production of crops.

Required the Secretary to bear part of the cost of establishing the conservation reserve and to make annual payments to producers participating in the program to assure "a fair and reasonable annual return on the land."

Limited total compensation for participation in the conservation reserve program to $450 million in any one calendar year.

Made compliance with acreage allotments and farm base acreages a condition of eligibility for soil bank acreage and conservation reserve payments.

Authorized the Secretary to finance soil bank operations from Commodity Credit Corp. funds until June 30, 1957, after which they would be financed by direct appropriations from the Treasury.

Directed the President to restrict "insofar as practicable" the leasing of federal lands for production of price-supported surplus crops, except on wildlife refuges where such production was necessary to maintain the wildlife population.

Authorized the Secretary to permit farmers "to pool their rights to participate jointly in the conservation reserve program on property other than their home farms."

SURPLUS DISPOSAL

Directed the CCC to dispose of all its stocks of agricultural commodities "as rapidly as possible."

Directed the Secretary to study various means of disposing of surpluses, including a food stamp plan, and report to Congress within 90 days.

Placed cotton of 1-11/16 inches or longer under the import quota program.

Directed the CCC to sell for export at competitive world prices its existing stocks of domestically produced extra long staple cotton.

Directed the CCC to encourage the export of cotton for sale at competitive world prices by making cotton available at price levels not in excess of those of other cotton exporting countries.

Authorized the President to negotiate with foreign countries to limit exports from such countries and imports into the United States of any agricultural commodity.

Authorized an annual appropriation of $500 million to supplement Section 32 funds; increased to 50 percent the amount available for any one commodity.

Directed transfer of materials acquired by CCC under the barter program to the supplemental stockpile.

Authorized appointment of a $15,000-a-year Agricultural Surplus Disposal Administrator.

Increased authorized use of surplus commodities for disaster, famine and other urgent foreign relief from $300 million to $500 million; permitted freight charges to be paid from this fund.

Established a five-member bipartisan Commission on Increased Industrial Use of Agricultural Products; directed it to report to Congress by June 15, 1957.

Authorized the CCC to donate to federal penal institutions and state correctional institutions for minors commodities acquired through price support operations.

Prohibited, for a three-year period, payment of "any crop loans or federal farm payments or benefits" on any surplus commodity grown on newly irrigated or drained lands within federal irrigation or drainage projects subsequently authorized.

Authorized the CCC to pay processing costs on commodities furnished to public and charitable institutions.

MARKETING QUOTAS, ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS

Extended surrender and reapportionment provisions of the 1938 Agricultural Adjustment Act to 1956-57 wheat crops.

Set the national cotton acreage allotment for 1957 and 1958 at no less than the allotment for 1956 (17.4 million acres) and provided that no state's allotment should be reduced more than 1 percent a year for those years.

Increased the 1957-58 national cotton acreage allotment by 100,000 acres in order to establish minimum farm allotments of four acres or the highest acreage planted in the preceding three years, whichever was higher.

Provided minimum state rice acreage allotments for 1956 equal to not less than 85 percent of the 1955 allotment; set the national acreage allotment for 1957 and 1958 at not less than that for 1956.

Increased peanut marketing penalties from 50 percent to 75 percent of the support price.

Eliminated corn acreage allotments for 1956, but required as a condition for price support that the equivalent of 15 percent of the farmer's base corn acreage be placed in the soil bank.

Provided that unless more than two-thirds of the corn growers in a 1957 crop referendum voted to restore acreage allotments, the new program would remain in effect; the Secretary would support corn at a level to assist producers to market their corn, but not encourage its uneconomic production.

Set price supports for the 1956 crops of small feed grains (oats, rye, barley and grain sorghums) at 76 percent of parity and for corn grown outside the commercial corn area at 82.5 percent of the level for commercial corn; provided that if price supports were granted on the 1957 crops of corn grown within the commercial area but not in compliance with acreage limitations, price supports also should be offered on small feed grains and non-commercial corn at not less than 70 percent of parity.

FORESTRY, RICE

Authorized a federal-state program of tree planting and reforestation; directed the Secretary to study price trends and relationships for basic forest products and report to Congress within one year.

Gave the Secretary discretionary authority to institute a two-price plan for rice on 1957 or 1958 crops.

Authorized him, under a two-price plan, to determine a primary market quota, based on domestic consumption and exports to Cuba, and to apportion the quota to states and farms.

Set price supports for rice at 50-90 percent (at Secretary's discretion but at a level that would not discourage exportation) and authorized him to support the primary rice market quota at 90 percent of parity through use of marketing certificates.

MISCELLANEOUS

Provided that whenever the price of either cottonseed or soybeans was supported, the price of the other should be supported at a level to "cause them to compete on equal terms on the market."

Froze transitional parity on basic commodities during 1957 and directed the Secretary to report to Congress on methods of improving the parity formula by Jan. 31, 1957.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Farm Price Supports" (1955 Almanac, p. 169); "Omnibus Farm Program, Price Supports" (1954 Almanac, p. 100).

Between 1947 and 1955 -- a period in which non-agricultural income rose about 68 percent -- net farm income declined 38 percent. During the same period farm production expenses rose 11.4 percent. The parity ratio, the relationship between prices received by farmers and prices paid by farmers, dropped from 115 in 1947 to 80 in January, 1956. Farmers complained they were caught in a "cost-price squeeze."

Production of major farm commodities exceeded consumption, resulting in accumulation of stocks. The federal government held much of the surplus in storage, having taken it over from farmers and processors under the price support program.

The Commodity Credit Corporation -- the government corporation which finances and controls farm products acquired through the price support program -- had $8.7 billion invested in agricultural commodities on Dec. 31, 1955. CCC's investment was made up of a $6.1 billion "inventory" of commodities which it owned, and $2.6 billion worth of commodities pledged for outstanding loans. This was a $1.5 billion increase over the $7.2 billion investment on Dec. 31, 1954.

Definitions of Agricultural Terms

PARITY -- a formula to measure the purchasing power of farm prices. If a bushel of corn sells for 100 percent of parity, the proceeds of that sale will buy the farmer as many Sunday neckties as the price of a bushel of corn bought during the base period. For commodities subject to old parity the base period is 1910-14, while for modern parity the base is the most recent 10 years. Transitional parity gradually bridges the gap between old and modern parity. Dual parity would require the use of old parity or new parity, whichever is higher.

BASIC COMMODITIES -- wheat, corn, cotton, rice, peanuts, and tobacco.

NON-BASIC OR SMALL FEED GRAINS -- oats, rye, barley, and grain sorghums.

MANDATORY PRICE SUPPORTS -- supports required by law, either at a specified level or within a specified range.

PERMISSIVE PRICE SUPPORTS -- supports which may or may not be granted, at administrative discretion. Discretion may be complete or the administrative officer may be required to base his decision on specified criteria.

RIGID OR FIXED PRICE SUPPORTS -- fixed guarantees which do not fluctuate from the specified level.

FLEXIBLE, SLIDING-SCALE, OR VARIABLE PRICE SUPPORTS -- supports which fluctuate within a specified range, depending on supply and sometimes other factors. The support level for a commodity rises as supply declines, and declines as supply rises.

TWO-PRICE OR MARKETING-CERTIFICATE PROGRAMS -- programs which support specified quantities of a commodity at a given level but do not support, or support at lower levels, excess production. Quantities supported at the high level are amounts needed for domestic human consumption. Excess production is used for export or for animal feed. Marketing certificates are part of the mechanics of carrying out the system.

SET-ASIDE -- a device to reduce the amount of surplus which would affect the flexible-supports formula. Specified quantities of certain surpluses would not be counted for purposes of computing the level of support within the flexible range.

NORMAL CARRYOVER -- the quantity of a commodity, in excess of consumption, which is counted as reserve against possible shortages, rather than as surplus.

ALLOTMENTS

ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS -- the area of land which may be used to produce specified crops which are subject to controls. The national allotment is apportioned, by states, to individual farms. Non-compliance affects eligibility for price supports. Allotments may be imposed alone, or they may be accompanied by marketing quotas.

FARM BASE ACREAGE -- the base from which acreage reductions are figured under the acreage reserve program. The farm base acreage is roughly the average acreage planted to a specified crop over a specified period of years.

SURRENDER AND REAPPORTIONMENT -- a provision permitting producers who do not plant their entire acreage allotment of a crop to release the unused allotment for apportionment to other producers. Acreage so released is credited to the releasing farm in establishing future allotments.

MARKETING QUOTAS -- quantities of crops grown on acreage allotments. Penalties may be imposed on farmers who exceed their quotas. Farmers vote on whether or not to accept marketing quotas when they are proclaimed. The level of price supports is reduced if quotas are rejected by more than one-third of the farmers voting. Marketing quotas approved by producers may be suspended by the Secretary if such action is warranted by an increase in export demand or by a national emergency.

NORMAL YIELD -- the quantity of a crop which normally is produced on a given quantity of land in a given area. National acreage allotments and individual marketing quotas are based on normal yield formulas.

NON-COMMERCIAL AREAS -- states or areas of states which produce relatively small quantities of a given crop. Designated non-commercial areas are not subject to the same production controls as commercial areas, and their crops are supported at lower levels.

DIVERTED ACREAGE -- farm land on which the farmer is required to stop production of a crop.

CROSS-COMPLIANCE -- a regulation to require the farmer to comply with acreage allotments on all controlled crops in order to get price supports on any.

TOTAL ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS -- allotments which restrict plantings of all cash crops -- whether subject to individual acreage allotments or not -- on diverted acreage.

SURPLUSES

FOOD-ALLOTMENT AND FOOD-STAMP PROGRAMS -- devices to increase consumption of surplus commodities through subsidized distribution to low-income groups.

BRUCELLOSIS ERADICATION -- a program combining health and surplus-disposal aspects. Dairy farmers are paid indemnities to encourage them to slaughter cows infected with brucellosis, thereby reducing dairy production.

SOIL BANK -- a plan to bolster farm income with cash payments to cut production, to help reduce existing surpluses and to remove marginal land from production. The soil bank consists of two parts: an acreage reserve, a four-year emergency program to reduce production of cotton, wheat, corn and rice; a conservation reserve, a long-term program designed to transfer about 25 million acres of cropland to forage, trees and water storage.

DISPOSAL

BARTER PROGRAM -- The Commodity Credit Corp., under its charter, has authority to barter price support stocks for strategic and critical materials and for other purposes. The Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 authorized CCC to barter commodities for (a) strategic materials, (b) materials, goods or equipment required in connection with foreign aid programs or (c) materials or equipment required for offshore construction.

SECTION 32 FUNDS -- Section 32 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act Amendments of 1935 appropriated for each fiscal year an amount equal to 30 percent of the previous year's customs receipts to encourage domestic consumption and exportation of agricultural commodities, principally non-basic perishable commodities.

The bulk of CCC's investment was in wheat, cotton and corn. Total investment in the three on Dec. 31, 1955:

Product	Quantity	Value
Wheat	1,109,783,000 bushels	$2,854,385,000
Cotton (Upland)	13,343,000 bales	2,330,105,000
Corn	937,771,000 bushels	1,577,902,000

The Eisenhower Administration held that rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity were a major cause of surpluses and that surpluses depressed prices. The President in January, 1954, submitted an omnibus farm program which included a proposal to institute flexible supports for five basic commodities. Most of his program was enacted as the Agricultural Act of 1954. (1954 Almanac, p. 100) Included was a key provision instituting flexible supports for five basics (wheat, corn, cotton, rice and peanuts) at 82.5 to 90 percent of parity for 1955 and at 75 to 90 percent beginning in 1956. The sixth basic, tobacco, remained under rigid supports under terms of the 1954 law (PL 690, 83rd Congress).

In May, 1955, House Democrats, with the support of some farm state Republicans, passed a bill (HR 12) to restore rigid supports at 90 percent of parity on basic commodities. (1955 Almanac, p. 169) Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said he would recommend a veto if the measure was passed by the Senate.

No serious attempt was made to push HR 12 through the Senate in 1955. Instead, the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee late in the year held "grass roots" hearings on the broad issue of price supports, rather than on HR 12 itself.

1956 Farm Message

President Eisenhower Jan. 9, 1956, asked Congress to "pass with maximum speed" a nine-point program to correct "persistent and critical farm problems" which "are a threat to all our people." Key proposal in the President's plan was a voluntary soil bank program to cut surpluses by paying farmers to stop planting crops on part of their land. (For text, see p. 52)

In an 8,000-word special message, the President said farmers faced the "paradox" of a five-year decline in prices and incomes "amid the nation's greatest prosperity." Main source of the problem, he said, were "mountainous surpluses" caused by "wartime production incentives too long continued. Other consequences of past farm programs have been no less damaging. Both at home and abroad, markets have been lost."

Mr. Eisenhower defended the flexible price-support law of 1954, but said it had not had a chance to be effective. Its operation had been "smothered under surpluses amassed by the old program," he added. "Clearly new action is imperative...we must not go back to old programs that have failed."

NINE POINTS

The President's nine-point program:

- A soil bank.
- Measures to step up disposal of surplus commodities, including repeal of a ban on selling government-owned surpluses to "unfriendly" nations.
- Strengthening commodity programs for corn, wheat, cotton, rice, peanuts, sugar, milk and livestock by amending existing laws and adapting programs to the soil bank plan.
- A dollar limit on the size of price support loans to any individual or farm to protect the family farm from the "formidable competition" of large farms.
- Aid to low-income farm families.
- Special assistance to the Great Plains area, including relaxation of wheat planting requirements.
- Increased agricultural research to lower costs of food distribution and provide new uses and markets.
- An adequate supply of credit for farmers.
- Relieving farmers from the federal tax on gasoline purchased for use on the farm.

SOIL BANK

Cornerstone of the President's farm program was a two-part soil bank plan. An immediate acreage reserve program would be established to encourage voluntary reductions in the acreage of crops in serious surplus. Under a long-range conservation reserve program, applying to growers of any crop, farmers would be encouraged to stop planting crops on land poorly suited to cultivation, and would substitute conservation measures. Highlights of the plan:

Acreage Reserve Program -- A farmer who volunteered to take a portion of his acreage out of production would receive a certificate equal to a percentage of the value of the crop he normally would harvest on the retired land. The certificate would be payable in cash or "in kind."

Conservation Reserve Program -- Farmers would contract voluntarily with the government to shift a portion of their acreage from crop production to trees, grass and water storage. The government would help pay for the initial cost of the transfer and would provide annual payments to farmers who agreed to refrain for a specified period from returning the conservation acres to crop production. An estimated 25 million acres would be brought into the conservation reserve.

Cost -- No cost figures were mentioned by the President in connection with the acreage reserve. The program would be financed with commodities already owned by the government and would thus "use the surplus to reduce the surplus," he said. An estimated $350 million would be invested in the conservation reserve during 1956, and a total of about $1 billion over the next three years, the President said. This would be in addition to the existing $240 million annual Agricultural Conservation Program.

Results -- According to the President, the acreage reserve would remove the burden of surpluses, reduce the "massive" storage costs on government holdings, provide some insurance of farmers' incomes, ease foreign apprehension over the disposal of United States surpluses and harmonize farm production with peacetime markets.

Rewards of the conservation reserve listed by Mr. Eisenhower: improved use of soil and water resources, increased supplies of farm-grown forest products, reduction of the "undue" stimulus to livestock production and low livestock prices caused by feed-grain production on diverted acres and protection for producers of small-acreage crops.

PRICE SUPPORTS

While the "frontal attack" on farm problems would be carried "in major part" by the soil bank, the Administration would continue to adhere to the fundamental principles of the 1954 flexible price-support law, the President said. He pledged:

To ease or eliminate controls over farmers whenever possible.

To continue to support at the "highest levels possible" farm prices for commodities on which price supports are discretionary, without accumulating new surpluses.

BASIC COMMODITIES

The President proposed modifying existing programs affecting five of the six "basic" commodities. For corn and rice, the President suggested alternatives -- either adapt the acreage reserve program to the commodities or eliminate acreage allotments and support prices on a discretionary instead of a mandatory basis.

While recommending amendments of existing laws affecting wheat, the President said the new acreage reserve program was "particularly well suited" to that commodity. He anticipated a voluntary reduction of possibly one-fifth of the wheat acreage otherwise permitted by allotments -- "perhaps 12 million acres."

Quantity allotments instead of acreage allotments for cotton, and elimination of the minimum national acreage allotment for peanuts, were requested.

Soil Bank History

The soil bank idea was not new. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) had introduced a bill embodying the soil bank concept in the 83rd Congress and another (S 1396) at the beginning of the 84th Congress. Companion bills (HR 2646, 3912, 5942 and 6052) had been introduced by Democrats in the House. As late as Sept. 30, 1955, the Department of Agriculture opposed the Humphrey bill as an ineffective means of obtaining adjustments in agricultural production. The Department held that such a program would be difficult and costly to administer.

Senate (S 3183, HR 12)

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 12-23, 1956, on the Administration's farm program (S 2949).

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 12 -- Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said "quick action" could make "the soil bank operative for 1956 crops. A month or two of unavoidable delay might cost us a year's time in getting the program launched. Before farmers would comply (by cutting their production acreage 20 percent) they would have to feel that their net income would be at least as high as if they had planted their allotted acres." He said about $1 billion in surplus commodities or the cash equivalent would be paid to farmers in the first year under the acreage reserve program. He said the program was an emergency measure, not a permanent solution.

Jan. 17 -- Committee Chairman Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) detailed another farm program "based largely on testimony by witnesses before the Committee at grassroots hearings during the recess." It included a return to high, rigid supports on basic crops; a soil bank program; a system of sliding supports intended to give small farmers higher supports than large producers; and a two-price system for rice.

Jan. 18 -- James G. Patton, National Farmers Union president, said the Administration's plan to use surpluses to compensate farmers for reducing acreage "would aid only in selling part of Commodity Credit Corp. stock at bargain basement prices in the usual channels of trade." He said 60 million acres should be retired from production and the parity level should be raised to 100 percent. He also urged retroactive support payments on the 1955 crop.

Charles B. Shuman, American Farm Bureau Federation president, called the soil bank plan a "step in the right direction." He urged continuation of flexible price supports and opposed proposals for two-price plans for wheat and rice.

Patrick B. Healy of the National Milk Producers Assn. said dairy farmers were losing about $600 million yearly as a result of the cut in support prices invoked by the Agriculture Department in 1954.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Jan. 19 -- Walter B. Garver of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. said the government should get out of the farm commodity business. He urged limited use of government farm price supports. "We believe the farm situation requires rapid adjustments of supply and output to what the market will absorb. We look upon the soil bank as a promising approach to the adjustment, but with some reservations as to its effectiveness in making the adjustments," he said.

Garver said the average farm income in 1955 was down about 6 percent from the post-war average and "the current situation" was "not as bad as it might appear." Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) said total farm income had dropped $6 billion, or nearly one-third, since World War II and at a time when national income had risen 50 percent.

Sen. George D. Aiken (R Vt.) said he opposed an Administration proposal to sell farm surpluses "at market prices." Sen. Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) said he would not have co-sponsored the bill (S 2949) if he had known it contained this provision.

Jan. 20 -- Spokesmen for the American Cotton Producers Assn., National Cotton Ginners Assn., Agriculture Committee of the Delta Council and Little Rock (Ark.) Cotton Exchange said further cutbacks in cotton farm land as proposed under the soil bank plan would endanger the cotton industry. They recommended selling more cotton abroad at lower prices, restoring 90 percent parity price supports and restricting cotton imports.

DAIRY, WHEAT, CATTLE PLANS

Jan. 21 -- O.M. Reed, Joint Committee of the American Butter Institute and National Creameries Assn. representative, said the organizations favored a soil bank if the retired land would not be used for grazing.

The Dairy Industry Committee of representatives from the American Butter Institute, National Cheese Institute, National Creameries Assn., American Dry Milk Institute, Evaporated Milk Assn., International Assn. of Ice Cream Manufacturers and Milk Industry Foundation said the law authorizing overseas sales of surplus farm commodities (PL 480, 83rd Congress) should be extended beyond its June 30, 1957, expiration date. The committee's representative, M.H. Brightman, said the organizations favored continuing existing price supports for dairy products for at least another year. Brightman said marketing quotas for the dairy industry would be "unworkable and uneconomic."

Herbert J. Hughes of the National Assn. of Wheat Growers said the group had "no faith" in flexible price supports. The association favored more open competition on the world market and domestic price supports, he said. The association supported a voluntary soil bank providing the incentive to retire lands was sufficient.

Spokesmen for the American National Cattlemen's Assn. and Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Assn. said they did not want price supports for their industry. They favored a soil bank providing retired land was not used for grazing.

Jan. 23 -- Minnesota Gov. Orville Freeman (D) said fixed 90 percent price supports should be placed on "all" major farm products, not just five or six as in the past.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- Feb. 10, after an 11½-hour closed session, the Committee ordered reported, by a 12-3 vote, a clean omnibus farm bill which would provide for a $1.1 billion soil bank, a return to rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity and a two-price system for rice.

Voting against the measure: Sens. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.), John J. Williams (R Del.) and Andrew F. Schoeppel (R Kan.). The Committee voted 8-7 for a return to rigid price supports, a step opposed by President Eisenhower.

Feb. 16 -- The report (S Rept 1484) on S 3183 was filed.

Sens. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), Anderson, George D. Aiken (R Vt.), Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) and Williams filed a minority report saying high rigid supports would "continue to stimulate wasteful overproduction." Rigid supports injure farmers, the minority continued, by increasing their costs and decreasing their markets. At the same time they injure the consumer by "holding commodities off the market permanently and making them artificially scarce," the minority said.

PROVISIONS -- As reported by the Committee, S 3183:

PRICE SUPPORTS

Provided for support at 90 percent of parity for the 1956-57 crops of basic commodities, except for wheat. (This would apply principally to cotton, corn and peanuts, since Title V of the bill made other provision for rice, and tobacco covered by marketing quotas already was supported at 90 percent of parity.)

Provided 90 percent supports for the 1956-57 crops of milling quality wheat, supports for other wheat "at such level as the Secretary determines will preserve the competitive relationship between such wheat and corn on the basis of their respective feed values;" in no case would the support level be less than 75 percent of parity.

Required that whenever the price of either soybeans or cottonseed was supported, the price of the other also would have to be supported to keep them in equal competition on the market.

Substituted average grade and staple cotton for middling 7/8-inch cotton as a standard for parity calculations.

Established 80-90 percent supports for whole milk, butterfat and their products.

Required, in the case of basic crops, use of old or modern parity, whichever was higher (a provision known as dual parity).

SOIL BANK

Set up an acreage reserve program by authorizing compensation to producers for voluntarily reducing 1956-59 crops of most basics below their acreage allotments.

Provided that compensation would be made through issuance of certificates redeemable in cash by the Commodity Credit Corp. or (for grains and cotton) in the commodity.

Limited total compensation for participation in the program to $750 million for any one year's crops.

Set up a conservation reserve program by authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to enter into long-term contracts under which producers would agree to devote to conserving uses a specifically designated acreage of land on the farm regularly used in the production of crops.

Required the Agriculture Department to bear part of the cost of establishing the conservation reserve and to make annual payments to producers participating in the program to assure "a fair and reasonable annual return on the land."

Limited payments under the conservation reserve program to $350 million in any one calendar year.

Made compliance with acreage allotments a condition of eligibility for the program.

SURPLUS DISPOSAL

Authorized the Secretary to add up to 250 million bushels of corn to the set-aside.

Directed him to submit a program for disposal of agricultural stocks held by the CCC.

Directed the CCC to develop an export program for cotton and the Secretary to provide incentives for use of extra long staple cotton.

Authorized an annual appropriation of $250 million to carry out provisions of Section 32 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act Amendments of 1935 (7 USC 612c).

Authorized the transfer of materials acquired by the CCC under the barter program to the supplemental stockpile.

Removed sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currency from requirements of the Cargo Preference Act (PL 664, 83rd Congress).

Authorized appointment of a $15,000-a-year Agricultural Surplus Disposal Administrator.

MARKETING QUOTAS, ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS

Extended surrender and reapportionment provisions of the 1938 Agricultural Adjustment Act to 1956-57 wheat crops.

Excluded from the commercial wheat-producing area any state whose allotment for the preceding year was 240,000 acres or less.

Reserved up to 1 percent of the national cotton acreage allotment to establish minimum farm allotments.

Provided minimum state rice acreage allotments for 1956 equal to 85 percent of the 1955 allotment.

RICE

Directed the Secretary to determine primary market quotas for the 1956-57 rice crops, based on domestic consumption and exports to Cuba, and to apportion the quota to states and farms.

Set price supports for 1956 crops at 55 percent of parity and for 1957 and subsequent crops at 50-90 percent (at Secretary's discretion, but at a level which would not discourage exportation).

Directed the Secretary to issue certificates to cooperators equal to their quota of rice for the year.

Directed the CCC to sell certificates to processors of rough rice or importers of processed rice; the value of the certificates would be based on the difference between 90 percent of parity and the current support level.

Required U.S. processors to acquire certificates equal to the amount of rice they processed; CCC would pay the value of the certificates to exporters of rice going to any country except Cuba.

FORESTRY

Authorized a federal-state program of tree planting and reforestation.

Provided for price reporting and marketing research for forest products.

Floor Action (S 3183, HR 12)

After nearly one month of debate, the Senate March 19 passed, by a 93-2 roll-call vote, a bill (HR 12) to provide an improved farm program, after first substituting the amended language of its own omnibus bill (S 3183) for the House-approved provisions of HR 12. Sens. Prescott Bush (R Conn.) and Ralph M. Flanders (R Vt.) cast the dissenting votes. (For roll-call votes, see charts p. 153-160)

The Senate, by a 54-41 roll-call vote March 8, deleted a provision calling for a return to rigid 90 percent price supports on basic farm commodities other than wheat and accepted an amendment to set the 1956 corn acreage allotment at 51 million acres and relate price supports for other feed grains to their feed values as compared to corn.

With Vice President Richard M. Nixon voting to break a tie, the Senate voted, 46-45, to delete from the bill 90 percent supports for millable varieties of wheat. The Senate accepted a domestic parity (two-price) plan for wheat on a 54-39 roll call, but rejected a similar plan for cotton, 33-57. An amendment to eliminate the dual parity formula for basic crops was defeated, 44-45. In the last day of debate Senators accepted amendments to make participation in the soil bank a condition of eligibility for price support payments and to establish set-asides for surplus corn, cotton and wheat, in effect raising the level of price supports on those crops.

EISENHOWER PROTESTS

Dissatisfaction with the bill as passed was widespread, though many Senators expressed hope that Senate-House conferees would devise a measure acceptable to Congress and the President. Mr. Eisenhower March 21 said the bill was not "workable" and would "bury the farmers under surpluses that they couldn't stand."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- Delete section providing that level of support to cooperators shall be 90 percent of parity price for 1956 and 1957 crops of any basic agricultural commodity except wheat; March 8. Roll-call vote, 54-41.

Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa), as modified by Price Daniel (D Texas) and Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Establish farm base acreages for corn in the acreage reserve program; set the 1956 corn allotment at 51 million acres; provide supports for grain sorghums, barley, oats and rye according to the ratio of their feed value equivalents to the feed value of corn, but no lower than support prices already set; require that 15 percent of the farmer's average acreage for these crops be put into the soil bank; March 9. Voice vote.

Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- Allow peanut growers to release acreage to the acreage reserve; March 9. Voice.

Frank A. Barrett (R Wyo.) -- Provide penalties for violation of contract under the conservation reserve and acreage reserve programs; March 9. Voice.

Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- Make 90 percent supports for millable varieties of wheat apply to 1956 crop only; March 9. Voice. (Deleted by adoption of Aiken amendment below.)

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- Delete mandatory 90 percent supports for millable varieties of wheat of 1956 crop; March 9. Roll call, 46-45 (tie broken by Vice President Richard M. Nixon). A motion to reconsider was tabled on a 46-41 roll call.

Aiken -- Place Surplus Disposal Administrator under jurisdiction of Secretary of Agriculture; March 9. Voice.

John J. Williams (R Del.), as amended by Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- Limit to $100,000 a year the amount of price support loans which may be paid to any one producer (Russell's amendment, agreed to by voice vote, increased the limit from $50,000 to $100,000); March 12. Roll call, 78-11.

William E. Jenner (R Ind.) -- Add to Williams amendment a limit of $25,000 per producer for land in any one state put into the acreage reserve; March 12. Roll call, 84-9.

DOMESTIC WHEAT PARITY

Frank Carlson (R Kan.), as modified by Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- Give Secretary of Agriculture discretionary authority to support wheat for domestic human food consumption at 100 percent of parity through use of marketing certificates, provided 2/3 of wheat growers voting in a 1957 crop referendum agree to the plan; wheat used for export, livestock feed or seed would be supported at levels set by the Secretary; March 13. Roll call, 54-39.

Earle C. Clements (D Ky.) -- Restore Kentucky and Tennessee to commercial wheat area by setting minimum state wheat allotment for inclusion in area at 190,000 acres (instead of 240,000 as provided in bill); March 13. Voice. (Nullified by adoption of Smith amendment, March 15.)

Clements, John Marshall Butler (R Md.), John W. Bricker (R Ohio) (3 amendments) -- Add various types of tobacco to acreage reserve program; March 13. Voice.

Clements -- Eliminate provision setting $100 an acre ceiling on payments for tobacco land placed in acreage reserve; March 13. Voice.

Williams -- Prohibit production on federal land of any crop in surplus supply (other than livestock) except on condemned lands, wildlife refuges or flood-control reservoir lands; March 13. Voice.

Williams -- Set $7,500 limit on annual payments to any person for land in any one state put under conservation reserve program; March 13. Voice.

Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- Provide penalties, equal to 75 percent of the support price, for marketing of peanuts in excess of quota; March 14. Voice.

John C. Stennis (D Miss.) -- Set cotton acreage allotments for 1957 and 1958 at no less than allotment of 1956; March 14. Voice.

Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- Place cotton of 1 11/16 inch or longer under the import quota program; direct the Agriculture Secretary to encourage export for sale at world prices of an estimated 125,000 bales of extra long staple cotton; delete provision for incentives to increase domestic consumption; March 14. Voice.

Humphrey -- Increase authorized use of surplus commodities for disaster, famine and other urgent foreign relief from $300 million to $500 million and permit freight charges to be paid from this fund; March 14. Voice.

Humphrey -- Extend Commodity Credit Corp. school milk program through fiscal 1958 and increase annual authorization to $75 million; extend brucellosis control program through fiscal 1958, with annual authorization of $20 million; March 14. Roll call, 89-0.

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.), as modified -- Require the Secretary to send Congress before Feb. 1, 1957, a full program of all soil bank operations for the balance of fiscal 1957; after Feb. 1, 1957, no CCC funds could be used for the soil bank; March 14. Voice.

Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- Direct the Secretary to make a survey of existing systems of grading meat; March 14. Voice.

Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.), as modified by O'Mahoney and William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Establish a Commission on Increased Industrial Use of Agricultural Products and direct it to report to Congress by June 15, 1957; March 15. Voice.

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.), as modified -- Strike out provision restricting the commercial wheat area to states having allotments in excess of 190,000 acres (minimum reverting to 25,000 acres); exempt from marketing quotas farms using their entire wheat crop on the farm for food, feed or seed; March 15. Voice.

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), as modified -- Authorize Secretary to permit farmers to pool their rights to participate jointly in the conservation reserve program on property other than their home farms; March 15. Voice.

William Langer (R N.D.) -- Authorize CCC to donate to federal penal institutions commodities acquired through price support operations; March 15. Voice.

Gordon Allott (R Colo.), as modified -- Increase from $350 million to $450 million the contract authorization for carrying out the conservation reserve program; March 15. Voice.

COTTON ACREAGE

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- Eliminate requirement that one percent of the national cotton acreage allotment be reserved for apportionment among small farmers; March 16. Roll-call vote, 46-43.

Herman Welker (R Idaho), as modified by Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) and Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- Bar, for three years, price supports and soil bank benefits for production of crops in surplus supply on newly irrigated or drained lands within any future federal irrigation, drainage or flood-control project; March 16. Roll call, 63-28.

Earle C. Clements (D Ky.) -- Authorize CCC to pay processing costs on commodities furnished to public and charitable institutions; March 16. Voice vote.

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- Increase, from $250 million to $500 million, authorized appropriations for surplus disposal under Section 32; March 16. Voice .

Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Delete provision exempting sales of surplus agricultural commodities for foreign currencies from requirements of the Cargo Preference Act; March 16. Roll call, 57-23.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Strengthen protection of tenants and sharecroppers in their share of payments under acreage reserve program; March 19. Voice.

Kerr, as modified by O'Mahoney and Anderson -- Require Secretary, in supporting prices through purchase of perishable commodities, to obtain certification from the processor that the price paid the producer was not less than the support price, or a fair price as determined by the Secretary. Roll call, 49-44. A motion to reconsider was tabled on a 52-42 roll-call vote.

SOIL BANK COMPLIANCE

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Beginning in 1957, require as a condition of eligibility for price support on any crop except tung nuts that the producer allocate up to 15 percent of his total price-supported acreage to the soil bank; prohibit payments if a farmer increased his average acreage of price-supported cropland; March 19. Roll call, 48-46.

Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) -- Provide 50 percent increase in acreage allotment for states growing less than 10,000 acres of Virginia and Valencia-type peanuts, if processors first agree to buy the additional production; March 19. Voice.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Delete section of bill which required a 15 percent state contribution to the cost of feed and seed furnished as disaster relief. Rejected on a 42-43 roll call, March 15; motion to reconsider agreed to on a 47-45 roll call, March 19; amendment agreed to on a 47-45 roll call, March 19.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.), as modified by Anderson -- Require the Secretary to establish a corn set-aside of 250 million bushels; establish set-asides for upland cotton at 7½-9 million bales and for wheat at 750-800 million bushels; March 19. Roll-call, 50-44.

John C. Stennis (D Miss.), as modified -- Increase national cotton acreage allotment by 100,000 acres in order to establish minimum farm allotments in each state; set Nevada's apportionment at 1,000 acres; March 19. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Humphrey -- Provide minimum national acreage allotment of 50 million acres for corn; March 8. Roll call, 44-46. (A motion to reconsider was tabled on a 47-44 roll-call vote.)

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- Support price of hogs and beef cattle at 75 percent of parity or at the same level as corn, whichever is higher; March 9. Roll call, 32-61.

Humphrey, as modified by Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- Amend Kerr amendment to authorize Secretary to make incentive payments, up to $1,200 a year, to producers who market cattle and hogs at lighter than normal weights; March 9. Roll call, 41-53.

Kefauver -- Provide graduated price support levels, according to farmers' incomes, for basics other than tobacco; March 9. Voice.

ACREAGE RESERVE TRANSFER

Kefauver -- Authorize consolidation and transfer of acreages within the acreage reserve program; March 9. Voice.

Kefauver -- Permit food supplied to private charitable agencies as emergency relief to be consumed away from the premises of the administering agency; March 9. Voice.

Humphrey, substitute for Williams amendment (of March 12) -- Provide 90 percent supports for basic commodities to any producer whose price support loans do not exceed $5,000 and limit price support loans to any one producer to $50,000; March 12. Roll call, 36-56. (For voting, see chart p. 154)

COTTON PROVISIONS

Russell, as modified -- Direct Secretary to support a minimum of nine million bales of cotton for domestic consumption at 100 percent of parity through use of marketing certificates, unless more than one-third of cotton growers voting in a referendum oppose the plan; limit imports of processed cotton to 1952 levels; March 13. Roll call, 33-57.

George -- Eliminate provision of bill substituting average grade for middling 7/8-inch as the base for cotton price supports; March 14. Roll call, 42-47.

Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) -- Provide mandatory 90 percent supports for dairy products; March 14. Voice.

Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) -- Authorize Secretary of Agriculture to establish production quotas for non-basic commodities in surplus supply and to include these crops in the acreage reserve program; March 14. Roll call, 29-58.

DUAL PARITY

Aiken -- Eliminate dual parity formula which permits, for basic crops, use of old or modern parity, whichever is higher; March 15. Roll call, 44-45. A motion to reconsider was tabled on a 49-42 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 156)

Herman Welker (R Idaho), as modified -- Bar production on newly authorized federal irrigation or drainage projects of any commodity in surplus supply during five-year period; March 15. Standing vote.

Mansfield -- Direct Secretary to institute purchase programs whenever the supply of a commodity causes it to drop below fair price levels; March 15. Voice.

Edward Martin (R Pa.) -- Eliminate section of bill directing price reporting and marketing research for forest products; March 15. Voice.

Kerr -- Permit livestock grazers to participate in the conservation reserve and increase authorization by $75 million; March 15. Roll call, 24-63. (For voting, see chart p. 157)

Milton R. Young (R N.D.), as modified by Welker -- Limit imports of any surplus commodity to the average import level for the preceding three years; March 16. Roll call, 43-47.

Humphrey, as modified -- Give Secretary permissive authority to make incentive payments, from Section 32 funds, to producers who market cattle and hogs at lighter than normal weights; March 16. Voice.

HIGH SUPPORTS URGED

DEBATE -- Feb. 22 -- Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La), Agriculture and Forestry Committee Chairman, opened the debate with a speech devoted chiefly to urging rigid mandatory supports. He said the soil bank alone would do little immediately to boost farm prices and incomes, but in combination with the high rigid price support system it would "give our farm economy the shot in the arm that is so urgently needed." Current surpluses were the product, not of rigid supports, but of improved agricultural research and Korean War production.

Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- "If we get from 30 to 40 percent of the soil bank program in operation in the first year we will be exceedingly lucky.... I fear we will be well into 1957 before the full effects of the surplus disappearance, through the operation of the soil bank, will be reflected in a firmed national market."

Feb. 23 -- Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- "The provision of this bill to reinstate 90 percent supports is of far greater importance than the soil bank provision."

Feb. 24 -- George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- "High rigid supports never have brought prosperity to the American farmer and never will." Only "cold, merciless bloody war" created the demand that made farmers prosperous when high supports prevailed. "Except for the production of feed grains on diverted acres, the corn supply would be in perfect balance today.... The whole Midwest farm economy...has been disrupted by the effect of high rigid supports for the producers of other crops."

Feb. 27 -- James O. Eastland (D Miss.) -- "The pending bill, without the two-year mandatory 90 percent support price provision and with the administrative steps which will be taken, will...save the cotton grower from destruction.... It is my judgment that for 1957 and 1958 the Administration will seriously consider and probably support legislation or an amendment to this bill which will fix the minimum cotton allotment for these years at...the 1956 allotment" (rather than at a smaller amount).

BENSON STATEMENTS

(Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson Feb. 28 said the government would put all federally owned surplus cotton on the world market Aug. 1. He set an export goal of "somewhere in the neighborhood of 5,000,000 bales a year as our share of the world market."

(March 2, in a letter to Aiken, Benson said: "In the event satisfactory legislation were to be passed with respect to...the soil bank, new parity and change in the (cotton) staple length, it would appear desirable to set the support level for cotton for 1956 at about 86 or 87 percent of parity.... The Department should not object to the Congress establishing a minimum national cotton acreage allotment for 1957 at the same acreage as was established for 1956, if the above-mentioned problems concerning S 3183 are worked out satisfactorily.")

Feb. 29 -- Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "Even if we write the best law the human mind can conceive, if this Administration remains in power and Secretary Benson remains on the job, it will be so poorly administered that it will be ineffective." Farmers increased their production in 1952 and 1953 because the government requested it, not because they were receiving 90 percent supports. Low farm prices were caused by "mismanagement of the price support programs, in two principal respects. First, supports have been cut under the sliding scale policy, thus directly driving market prices down; second, the markets have been demoralized by threats that government-owned commodities will be dumped...."

(President Eisenhower Feb. 29 said he was unalterably opposed to rigid price supports for farm crops. He said the Congress should provide action now on a program which would elevate farm income at this time and not 10 years from now. He declined to predict whether he would veto a farm bill with a 90 percent of parity price support provision.)

March 1 -- Humphrey -- The Republican National Committee had hired a public relations firm to popularize its farm program and Benson. He said the firm, Braun and Co. of Los Angeles, "stands accused by the Justice Department of conspiring in criminal violations of the antitrust law."

March 2 -- Earle C. Clements (D Ky.) -- "The basic theory upon which the present farm program has been operated is that there are too many farmers.... The Department took steps to reduce the surplus of farmers by reducing the prospects of making a living income from farming. If the same energy and ingenuity had been used to reduce our surplus farm stocks, they would have long since vanished.... The Administration wants farming to be big business.... This is a process which can best be hastened by...flexible price supports."

Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) -- "The Benson policies ...have had a disastrous effect on the net income of the producers of basic commodities...(and) the same kind of effect on the income of dairy farmers."

March 5 -- James E. Murray (D Mont.) -- "The only provisions of the bill which...will make a net addition to farm income...are those restoring 90 percent of parity ... and the old parity formula.... The most the soil bank payments to farmers can do is create a temporary illusion of added income."

SURPLUSES THE KEY

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- "It was in the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt that flexible price supports first became effective.... No agricultural program will work with the kind of surplus situation that exists at present.... With a fairly high range of supports, no soil bank will become operative. The only way a soil bank can be made operative is to make it mandatory, and then it will work only if the temptation to evade all controls is not too great."

March 6 -- Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- Asked for trial of a domestic parity plan for wheat, defined as "a system of marketing which enables producers to obtain a return equal to parity for that portion of the crop which is consumed domestically for human food, and to receive competitive market prices for the portion used for feed or for export."

March 7 -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "The advocates of flexible supports do not give ample consideration to the extremely important item of the farmer's fixed costs. If returns per bushel drop, the farmer intensifies his production.... If it costs money to reduce surpluses to a reasonable level, I think the people as a whole should share in that cost."

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- "The restoration of price supports to the level of 90 percent of parity will not only encourage and stimulate production at a time when we are actively trying to reduce production, but will react in other ways to further increase the surpluses held by the Commodity Credit Corporation.... The restoration of fixed price supports at 90 percent of parity is a complete contradiction to the soil bank program which holds so much promise of reducing government surpluses to the point where farm income can be restored...."

March 8 -- Debate centered on amendments to change the price support programs on corn and wheat.

Thomas E. Martin (R Iowa) -- "The result of the (Hickenlooper) amendment is simply this: in 1956 instead of having the so-called acreage allotments in the corn belt for corn acres, we substitute for it a farm-base acreage" based on 1953, 1954 and 1955 plantings. "It means we will base participation in the soil bank on the traditional planting base of something over 56 million acres, instead of the allotment base of approximately 43 million acres."

Humphrey -- "The Hickenlooper amendment would... say to those who have not cooperated at all under the acreage-allotment programs, 'Now you are going to get all the benefits of the price support program without any necessity to cooperate....'"

March 9 -- Francis Case (R S.D.) -- No one "wants a record written that will say, 'We give 87 percent (supports) to cotton for 1956 and 81 percent to corn for 1956, but when it comes to wheat...we give it a 76 percent deal.'"

March 12 -- Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) -- "The chief beneficiaries of the farm price support program have been, and are, the upper one-third of our farmers who produce 85 percent of the annual marketable crop value and who likewise receive 80 percent of farm income."

March 13 -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- "If...one by one, we write commodities into the bill on a two-price system, the farm bill...will become confusion worse confounded;...no Member of this body will know what we have done, either for or to the farmers."

March 15 -- Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- "Modernized parity is based on mechanized production of agricultural products.... To inject the factor of price supports on the basis of 1910-14 is...completely unrealistic."

Ellender -- The dual parity formula is "the only provision remaining in the bill that will give the farmers who produce basic crops immediate relief...."

BILL PASSED

March 19 -- Comments on the bill just before it was passed:

Aiken -- "It would be better to continue under the present law than to adopt the tortured and battered bill which is now before us."

Humphrey -- "Man's work is never perfect and never will be. But at least the bill represents intelligent, consistent, persevering efforts for progress...."

Hickenlooper -- "Fundamentally it is probably the worst agricultural bill that has been passed by the Senate.

It has been influenced by political manipulations which are almost beyond belief...."

Holland -- "I shall vote for (the bill) only in order that it may go to conference, and with the expressed hope that it may come back to us in much better shape than it is in now."

HOUSE COMMITTEE HEARINGS

While the Senate debated S 3183, the House Agriculture Committee conducted a series of hearings on general farm legislation. Representatives of the Department of Agriculture and major farm organizations outlined their views on the soil bank, price supports and other aspects of farm policy. (For organizations' stands, see Senate Committee hearings, p. 379, and Group Stands, p. 391)

Conference (HR 12)

The Senate-House conference committee April 6 reported (H Rept 1986), by an 8-2 vote, a reworked version of the Senate bill. As reported by the committee and approved by both chambers, the bill restored 90 percent supports on the 1956 crops of basic agricultural commodities, provided for voluntary participation in the soil bank, established mandatory supports for feed grains, provided for their inclusion in the acreage reserve program and initiated domestic parity programs for wheat and rice.

"Rather than adopt any of the devious devices which have been proposed for raising the level of support prices by indirection," the committee said, it had "agreed that the most effective way of accomplishing this purpose is the simple and straightforward procedure...of establishing price support levels for the basic commodities at not less than 90 percent of parity for 1956."

PROVISIONS -- The final version of HR 12:

PRICE SUPPORTS

Established price supports at 90 percent of parity for the 1956 crop of basic agricultural commodities "with respect to which producers have not disapproved marketing quotas."

Provided that whenever the price of either cottonseed or soybeans was supported, the price of the other should be supported at a level to "cause them to compete on equal terms on the market."

Established 80-90 percent supports for whole milk and butterfat, but provided that for the marketing year ending March 31, 1957, manufacturing milk should be supported at not less than $3.25 a hundredweight and butterfat at not less than 58.6 cents a pound.

Extended, in the case of basic crops, use of old or modern parity, whichever was higher.

Directed the Secretary of Agriculture to study methods of improving the parity formula and report to Congress by Jan. 31, 1957.

SOIL BANK

Set up an acreage reserve program by authorizing the Secretary to compensate producers for reducing their 1956-59 crops of basic commodities and feed grains (oats, barley, rye, grain sorghums and corn grown in non-commercial areas) below their allotments or base acreages; land so retired from production could be put to no other use. (The committee said the rate of payment generally would be "approximately 50 percent of the price support for that quantity of the commodity which would normally be produced on the land placed into the acreage reserve.")

Provided for inclusion in the 1956 acreage reserve of land previously planted, if the crop were plowed under or clipped to prevent maturing within 21 days from the date of HR 12's enactment.

Established a 51-million-acre total base acreage for corn of the commercial area for each year of the acreage reserve program, subject to a 1956 referendum of commercial corn producers.

Provided for establishing farm base acreages for other feed grains, based on 1953-55 plantings, for the 1956 crops; for 1957 and subsequent years a total base acreage would be established and apportioned on the basis of feed grain acreage for the immediately preceding five years.

Limited total compensation for participation in the acreage reserve program to $750 million for any one year's crops and set the following limits per commodity: wheat, $375 million; cotton, $300 million; corn, $300 million; other feed grains, $175 million; peanuts, $7 million; rice, $23 million; tobacco, $45 million. (The committee made the following tentative estimates of payments per acre: cotton, $48-$60; wheat, $18-$25; corn, $36-$50; rice, $60-$75; peanuts, $50-$70; tobacco, $100-$300; feed grains, $15-$50.)

Set up a conservation reserve program by authorizing the Secretary to enter into long-term contracts under which producers would agree to devote to conservation uses a specifically designated acreage of land regularly used in the production of crops.

Required the Secretary to bear part of the cost of establishing the conservation reserve and to make annual payments to producers participating in the program to assure "a fair and reasonable annual return on the land."

Limited total compensation for participation in the conservation reserve program to $450 million in any one calendar year.

Made compliance with acreage allotments and farm base acreages a condition of eligibility for soil bank acreage and conservation reserve payments.

Authorized the Secretary to finance soil bank operations from Commodity Credit Corp. funds until June 30, 1957, after which they would be financed by direct appropriations from the Treasury.

Directed the President to restrict "insofar as practicable" the leasing of federal lands for production of price-supported surplus crops.

Authorized the Secretary to permit farmers "to pool their rights to participate jointly in the conservation reserve program on property other than their home farms."

SURPLUS DISPOSAL

Directed the CCC to dispose of all its stocks of agricultural commodities as "rapidly as possible."

Directed the Secretary to study various means of disposing of surpluses, including a food stamp plan, and report to Congress within 90 days.

Placed cotton of 1-11/16 inches or longer under the import quota program.

Directed the CCC to sell for export at competitive world prices its existing stocks of domestically produced extra long staple cotton.

Authorized the President to negotiate with foreign countries to limit exports from such countries and imports into the United States of any agricultural commodity.

Authorized an annual appropriation of $500 million to supplement Section 32 funds; increased to 50 percent the amount available for any one commodity.

Directed transfer of materials acquired by CCC under the barter program to the supplemental stockpile.

Authorized appointment of a $15,000-a-year Agricultural Surplus Disposal Administrator.

Increased authorized use of surplus commodities for disaster, famine and other urgent foreign relief from $300 million to $500 million; permitted freight charges to be paid from this fund.

Established a five-member bipartisan Commission on Increased Industrial Use of Agricultural Products; directed it to report to Congress by June 15, 1957.

Authorized the CCC to donate to federal penal institutions and state correctional institutions for minors commodities acquired through price support operations.

Prohibited, for a three-year period, payment of "any crop loans or federal farm payments or benefits" on any surplus commodity grown on newly irrigated or drained lands within federal irrigation or drainage projects subsequently authorized.

Authorized the CCC to pay processing costs on commodities furnished to public and charitable institutions.

MARKETING QUOTAS, ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS

Extended surrender and reapportionment provisions of the 1938 Agricultural Adjustment Act to 1956-57 wheat crops.

Set cotton acreage allotments for 1957 and 1958 at no less than the allotment for 1956 (17.4 million acres).

Increased the 1957-58 national cotton acreage allotment by 100,000 acres in order to establish minimum farm allotments of four acres or the highest acreage planted in the preceding three years, whichever was smaller.

Provided minimum state rice acreage allotments for 1956 equal to 85 percent of the 1955 allotment.

Increased peanut marketing penalties from 50 percent to 75 percent of the support price.

Eliminated corn acreage allotments for 1956, but required as a condition for price support that the equivalent of 15 percent of the farmer's base corn acreage be placed in the soil bank.

Provided that unless more than two-thirds of the corn growers in a 1957 crop referendum voted to restore acreage allotments, the new program would remain in effect; the Secretary would support corn at a level to assist producers to market their corn, but not encourage its uneconomic production.

Provided that corn produced outside the commercial corn area should be supported at 85 percent of the level for commercial corn.

Provided mandatory supports for rye, barley, oats and grain sorghums at 5 percent less than the support level for commercial corn.

Provided, as a condition of eligibility for price support on non-commercial corn and the other small feed grains, that the producer must devote the equivalent of not less than 15 percent of his base acreage to either the acreage reserve or the conservation reserve and must not plant a total acreage of feed grains in excess of 85 percent of his base acreage.

Permitted, for the 1956 crops of these commodities, use of the previously existing price support formula for producers who did not participate in the soil bank.

WHEAT AND RICE

Directed the Secretary to support wheat for domestic human food consumption at 100 percent of parity through use of marketing certificates, provided two-thirds of the wheatgrowers voting in a crop referendum agreed to the plan; acreage allotments could be continued, and eligibility for marketing certificates "would be conditioned both upon compliance with acreage allotments and upon the planting of an acreage of wheat sufficient to fill the producer's domestic quota at normal yields."

Directed the Secretary, beginning in 1956, to determine primary market quotas, based on domestic consumption and exports to Cuba, for rice harvested "prior to 1958" and to apportion the quotas to states and farms.

Set price supports for the 1956 rice crop at 55-90 percent of parity and for subsequent years at 50 to 90 percent (at the Secretary's discretion but at a level which would not discourage exportation).

Directed the Secretary to support the primary rice market quota at 90 percent of parity through use of marketing certificates.

FORESTRY

Authorized a federal-state program of tree planting and reforestation.

HOUSE ACTION

The House April 11 agreed to the conference report by a 237-181 roll-call vote. A motion to recommit the report with instructions to substitute 82.5 percent to 90 percent supports on basics for 1956, eliminate the dual parity provision and mandatory supports for feed grains and delete the domestic parity plans for wheat and rice was rejected on a 181-238 roll-call vote. A motion to reconsider was tabled. (For voting, see chart , p. 194)

DEBATE -- Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R Mass.) -- "The conference report...is a fantastic mixture of good and bad provisions in which the bad features tend to cancel out the good.... The President cannot be expected to sign an unsound total bill, just to get the soil bank.... My motion to recommit...incorporates, I think, all that is acceptable to the Administration from the conference report."

Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- "The only thing in this bill that will increase farm income in 1956...will be stricken from this bill, if I understand what the motion to recommit will contain.... The leadership responsible for offering that motion will today, here in this House, put the farmers of America on the auction block and try to buy them at the cheapest possible price."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate April 11 agreed to the conference report on a 50-35 roll-call vote. A motion to reconsider was tabled. (For voting, see chart, p. 162)

DEBATE -- Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) -- "...the choice is clear. Either we can wait another year to give our farmers much-needed relief, by depending upon the soil bank to do the job, or we can approve a method by which plummeting farm income can be arrested and substantially raised this year by voting for the pending conference report.... The fallacious cry...that 90 percent of parity, as written into this bill, will increase production is pure unadulterated buncombe."

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- "Congress has now delayed this legislation so that the soil bank can hardly be effective this year.... It would be better to do the best we can with the program we now have in operation. The bill as it now stands is completely unacceptable to the Administration."

Veto of HR 12

President Eisenhower April 16 vetoed HR 12 "with intense disappointment and regret." The President said the bill was "contradictory and self-defeating even as an emergency relief measure and it would lead to such serious consequences in additional surpluses and production controls as to further threaten the income and the welfare of our farm people."

Provisions of the bill which he listed as "unacceptable" and his comments upon them:

Return to rigid 90 percent supports on basic commodities -- "Production would be stimulated. Markets would be further destroyed, instead of expanded, as must be done. More surplus would accumulate -- and surpluses are price-depressing. Regimentation by ever stricter production controls would be the end result. It is inconceivable that we should ask farm families to go deeper into this self-defeating round of cause and effect."

Dual parity for wheat, corn, cotton and peanuts -- "Four crops would receive preferential treatment out of 160 products for which parity prices are figured.... Such a device for parity manipulations could destroy the parity concept itself."

Mandatory price supports for feed grains -- "The market for feed grains would shrink as livestock production would come to depend more on forage and less on grain. The flow of feed grains into government stocks would increase and production controls would necessarily be intensified. Price relationships between feed, livestock and livestock products would be distorted."

Multiple-price plans for wheat and rice -- The plans "would have adverse effects upon producers of other crops, upon our relations with friendly foreign nations and upon our consumers."

Mr. Eisenhower said the Administration would act "immediately" to improve farm income on "four major fronts."

Basics -- Wheat, cotton, corn, rice and peanuts would be supported at not less than 82.5 percent of parity in 1956. On a national average wheat would be supported at $2 a bushel (a 19-cent increase over the previously announced support level), corn at $1.50 a bushel (a 10-cent increase) and rice at $4.50 a hundred pounds (a 46-cent increase). Tobacco would be supported "as voted in the referendum in accordance with existing law." (Tobacco of the 1956-58 crops will be supported at 90 percent of parity.) A separate support price for corn not under acreage control in the commercial area would be announced "at an early date." Details of a new cotton export sales program would be announced shortly by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Milk -- The support price of manufacturing milk would be increased from $3.15 to $3.25 a hundred pounds; butterfat would increase from 56.2 to 58.6 cents a pound.

Perishable commodities -- Over $400 million would be available in fiscal 1957 for use in strengthening the prices of these commodities.

Soil bank -- The President asked Congress to pass a straight soil bank bill "as promptly as possible." (In an address to the nation explaining his veto action the President April 16 also proposed that Congress "authorize the government to begin making payments to a maximum of 50 percent after the farmer signs a contract" to enter either the acreage reserve or the conservation reserve. Such initial payments, he said, would provide farmers with as much as $500 million in additional income in 1956. Final payments would be made to farmers upon compliance.)

House Upholds Veto

The House April 18, by a 202-211 roll-call vote, failed to override President Eisenhower's veto of HR 12. A two-thirds majority of both houses of Congress was required. (For voting, see chart, p. 196)

DEBATE -- Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- "By vetoing HR 12, the President has deprived the Secretary of Agriculture of at least 14 new provisions of law to assist in dealing with the surplus problem.... I believe the President now has all the authority he needs to deal with all of the problems of the soil of America."

William L. Springer (R Ill.) -- "No country lawyer after reading all of the legislation having to do with this problem would render a decision that the Secretary of Agriculture has the authority to put into effect the kind of a soil bank which is contained in the bill under discussion."

Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- "In the veto message the President announced several increases in price supports.... Could it be that the raises, coming after the support prices were already announced, constitute just a little political bait for the November election?"

NEW BILLS REPORTED

The House Appropriations Committee April 19 reported a bill (HR 10654 -- H Rept 2016) to provide an additional Agriculture Department appropriation of $1.2 billion for "acreage reserve and soil conservation payments." The report said the President and Secretary of Agriculture Benson had failed to use existing authority for a soil bank program. The House Rules Committee April 25 considered, but took no action on, granting a rule for the bill. Democrats contended authority for the soil bank existed under the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act of 1936. Republicans asked the Committee to let them hitch authorization for the soil bank to the money bill, then pass it in a single package form. Five days later, a new farm bill was reported.

House (HR 10875)

COMMITTEE -- House Agriculture.

ACTION -- April 30 unanimously reported a new omnibus bill (HR 10875 -- H Rept 2077) that contained most of the uncontroversial provisions of HR 12. Deleted were provisions for 90 percent supports, dual parity computations and domestic parity programs for wheat and rice. The bill retained the controversial provision for mandatory supports on small feed grains.

The Committee rejected, by a 15-19 party-line vote, an effort to substitute a bill containing the soil bank prepayment provision requested by President Eisenhower. It also rejected a proposal for direct government payments to farmers.

Floor Action (HR 10875)

The House May 3, by a 314-78 roll-call vote, passed HR 10875. The House accepted, by a 199-195 roll-call vote, an amendment to add grazing lands to the acreage reserve and rejected, by a 186-208 roll-call vote, an amendment to fix price supports for upland cotton at 84 percent of parity. A motion to recommit the bill with instructions to incorporate the soil bank prepayment provision was rejected on a 184-211 roll call. Previously, a prepayment amendment failed on a 157-181 teller vote. (For voting, see chart p. 198)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 10875:

SOIL BANK

Set up an acreage reserve program by authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to compensate producers for reducing their 1956-59 crops of basic commodities, feed grains (oats, barley, rye, grain sorghums and corn grown in non-commercial areas), grazing lands and other field crops at the Secretary's discretion; land so retired from production could be put to no other use.

Provided for inclusion in the 1956 acreage reserve of land previously planted, if the crop were plowed under or clipped to prevent maturing within 21 days from the date of enactment.

Established a 51-million-acre total base acreage for corn of the commercial area for each year of the acreage reserve program, subject to a 1956 referendum of commercial corn producers.

Provided for establishing farm base acreages for other feed grains -- based on 1953-55 plantings -- for the 1956 crops; for 1957 and subsequent years a total base acreage would be established and apportioned on the basis of feed grain acreage for the immediately preceding five years.

Limited total compensation for participation in the acreage reserve program to $800 million for any one year's crops and set the following limits per commodity: wheat, $375 million; cotton, $300 million; corn, $300 million; other feed grains, $175 million; peanuts, $7 million; rice, $23 million; tobacco, $45 million; grazing lands, $50 million; other field crops, $50 million.

Set up a conservation reserve program by authorizing the Secretary to enter into long-term contracts under which producers would agree to devote to conservation uses a specifically designated acreage of land regularly used in the production of crops.

Required the Secretary to bear part of the cost of establishing the conservation reserve and to make annual payments to producers participating in the program to assure "a fair and reasonable annual return on the land."

Limited total compensation for participation in the conservation reserve program to $450 million in any one calendar year.

Made compliance with acreage allotments and farm base acreages a condition of eligibility for soil bank acreage and conservation reserve payments.

Authorized the Secretary to finance soil bank operations from Commodity Credit Corp. funds until June 30, 1957, after which they would be financed by direct appropriations from the Treasury.

Directed the President to restrict "insofar as practicable" the leasing of federal lands for production of agricultural commodities in surplus supply.

Authorized the Secretary to permit farmers "to pool their rights to participate jointly in the conservation reserve program on property other than their home farm."

SURPLUS DISPOSAL

Directed the CCC to dispose of all its stocks of agricultural commodities as "rapidly as possible."

Directed the Secretary to study various means of disposing of surpluses, including a food stamp plan, and report to Congress within 90 days.

Placed cotton of 1-11/16 inches or longer under the import quota program.

Directed the CCC to sell for export at competitive world prices its existing stocks of domestically produced extra long staple cotton.

Authorized the President to negotiate with foreign countries to limit exports from such countries and imports into the United States of any agricultural commodity.

Authorized an annual appropriation of $500 million to supplement Section 32 funds; increased to 50 percent the amount available for any one commodity.

Directed transfer of materials acquired by CCC under the barter program to the supplemental stockpile.

Authorized appointment of a $15,000-a-year Agricultural Surplus Disposal Administrator.

Increased authorized use of surplus commodities for disaster, famine and other urgent foreign relief from $300 million to $500 million; permitted freight charges to be paid from this fund.

Established a five-member bipartisan Commission on Increased Industrial Use of Agricultural Products; directed it to report to Congress by June 15, 1957.

Authorized CCC to donate to federal penal institutions and state correctional institutions for minors commodities acquired through price support operations.

Prohibited, for a three-year period, payments of "any crop loans or federal farm payments or benefits" on any surplus commodity grown on newly irrigated or drained lands within federal irrigation or drainage projects subsequently authorized.

Authorized the CCC to pay processing costs on commodities furnished to public and charitable institutions.

MARKETING QUOTAS, ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS

Extended surrender and reapportionment provisions of the 1938 Agricultural Adjustment Act to 1956-57 wheat crops.

Set cotton acreage allotments for 1957 and 1958 at no less than the allotment for 1956 (17.4 million acres).

Increased the 1957-58 national cotton acreage allotment by 100,000 acres in order to establish minimum farm allotments of four acres or the highest acreage planted in the preceding three years, whichever was smaller.

Provided minimum state rice acreage allotments for 1956 equal to 85 percent of the 1955 allotment.

Increased peanut marketing penalties from 50 percent to 75 percent of the support price.

Eliminated corn acreage allotments for 1956, but required as a condition for price support that the equivalent of 15 percent of the farmer's base corn acreage be placed in the soil bank.

Provided that unless more than two-thirds of the corn growers in a 1957 crop referendum voted to restore acreage allotments, the new program would remain in effect; the Secretary would support corn at a level to assist producers to market their corn, but not encourage its uneconomic production.

Provided that corn produced outside the commercial corn area should be supported at 82.5 percent of the level for commercial corn.

Provided mandatory supports for rye, barley, oats and grain sorghums at 5 percent less than the support level for commercial corn.

Provided, as a condition of eligibility for price support on non-commercial corn and the other small feed grains, that the producer must devote the equivalent of not less than 15 percent of his base acreage to either the acreage reserve or the conservation reserve and must not plant a total acreage of feed grains in excess of 85 percent of his base acreage.

Permitted, for the 1956 crops of these commodities, use of the previously existing price support formula for producers who did not participate in the soil bank.

FORESTRY

Authorized a federal-state program of tree planting and reforestation.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

W.R. Poage (D Texas) -- Give Secretary discretionary authority to support non-compliance corn produced within the commercial area at a level not to exceed that of corn grown on farms participating in the soil bank. Voice vote.

Poage (three amendments, considered en bloc) -- Provide supports, in 1956-57, for corn produced outside the commercial area at 82.5 percent of the level for commercial corn; May 2. Voice.

Carl Albert (D Okla.) -- Include grazing lands in acreage reserve program and provide a $50 million limit on payments for participation in the acreage reserve in any one year for these lands; May 2. Teller, 103-66; roll call, 199-195.

Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- Provide that compensation shall be paid producers for participating in the acreage reserve program for any year, including 1956, when Secretary has ascertained that producer has complied with acreage reduction requirements; May 2. Voice.

Cooley (two amendments, considered en bloc) -- Delete requirement that Secretary's report on soil bank financing be referred to Senate and House Appropriations Committees; delete requirement that bills embodying recommendations of Commission on Increased Industrial Use of Agricultural Products be referred to Senate or House Agriculture Committees; May 2. Voice.

W. Pat Jennings (D Va.) -- Direct President to restrict leasing of federal lands for production of any agricultural commodity, rather than price-supported crops, in surplus supply; May 2. Voice.

Clifford G. McIntire (R Maine) -- Give Secretary discretionary authority to include other field crops in acreage reserve program and set a $50 million limit on any one year's payments for these crops; May 2. Voice.

Shepard J. Crumpacker (R Ind.) -- Give participants in acreage reserve same opportunity to appeal notice of termination of contract as is given participants in conservation reserve; May 2. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Clifford R. Hope (R Kan.) -- Provide for advance payments of up to 50 percent of acreage reserve and conservation reserve compensation for producers who sign contracts to participate in the soil bank; May 3. Teller vote, 157-181.

Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio) -- Amend Hope amendment to require reporting "in the same manner as other political contributions" of all 1956 payments under the act; May 3. Teller, 102-125.

Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- Support 1956 crop of upland cotton at not less than 84 percent of parity. Division, 127-128; teller, 168-152; roll call, 186-208.

DEBATE -- May 3 -- Clifford R. Hope (R Kan.) -- "I am rather surprised that there exists apprehension that these advance payments will be made in anything other than a straightforward way or for other than legitimate purposes. The fact is if this program should be used in a political way it would defeat that purpose. The farmers of this country are not for sale...."

Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio) -- "...there is no question in anybody's mind...about what this prepayment is. It is an attempt to do something political at the last minute because of the fact that reports have come in from a couple of primaries that have been disturbing to Mr. (Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft) Benson."

Senate (HR 10875)

COMMITTEE -- Senate Agriculture and Forestry.

ACTION -- May 11 reported, by a 13-2 vote, with amendments, the revised farm bill (HR 10875 -- S Rept 1966). Sens. George D. Aiken (R Vt.) and John J. Williams (R Del.) opposed the measure. The Committee amended the bill to delete House provisions calling for inclusion of grazing lands and all field crops in the soil bank. It also added a discretionary two-price system for rice and a two-year freeze on transitional parity prices for corn, peanuts and wheat.

The Committee changed the feed grains section to provide for support at 76 percent of parity in 1956 without the requirement that feed grain producers participate in the soil bank in 1956. The Committee also directed the Secretary of Agriculture to establish an acreage reserve program for the 1957-59 crops "and to the extent he deems practicable for the 1956 crop."

According to the majority report, "HR 10875 contains most of the provisions of HR 12...the provisions objected to by the President having been either eliminated or modified."

A five-man minority, however, said the provision for mandatory supports on feed grains was "the kind of contradiction which caused the President to veto the original farm bill of 1956." The minority said the provision would have "the effect of penalizing livestock and poultry producers for the benefit of other producers" and could defeat the purpose of the soil bank by encouraging farmers "to put millions of acres into feed grain production that otherwise would go into the conservation reserve program." Sens. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), James O. Eastland (D Miss.), Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa), Aiken and Williams signed the minority report.

The Senate May 18 passed HR 10875 by voice vote, with amendments. (For roll-call votes, see chart p.167)

The Senate reduced from two years to one year the freeze on transitional parity prices for corn, wheat and peanuts. It also accepted amendments to fix price supports for corn grown outside the commercial area at 82.5 percent of the level for commercial corn and to require that if price supports were offered on the 1957 crop of non-compliance corn grown within the commercial area, price supports also would be offered on small feed grains and non-commercial corn at not less than 70 percent of parity.

The Senate rejected amendments which would have eliminated mandatory price supports for the small feed grains and deleted the certificate program for rice. It first accepted, then reconsidered and rejected amendments to place dollar limits on price support and soil bank payments to any one producer.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- Authorize CCC to sell up to 100 million bushels of feed wheat annually, without regard to existing requirement that wheat be sold at 105 percent of prevailing price support level; May 18. Roll-call vote, 49-31.

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) as modified -- Extend transitional parity through 1957, rather than 1958; May 18. Voice vote.

Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) -- Modify provision prohibiting production of surplus crops on government lands to exclude wildlife refuges where such production is necessary to maintain wildlife population; May 18. Voice.

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) (two amendments, considered en bloc) -- Provide for price support forfeiture as a penalty for violation of grazing restrictions under conservation reserve and acreage reserve contracts; May 18. Voice.

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), as modified (five amendments considered en bloc) -- Fix price supports for the 1956 crop of feed grains at 76 percent of parity; fix price supports for corn grown outside the commercial area at 82.5 percent of the level for commercial corn; and provide that if price supports were granted on the 1957 crop of non-compliance corn grown within the commercial area, price supports also would be offered on small feed grains and non-commercial corn at not less than 70 percent of parity; May 18. Roll call, 73-14..

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- Provide that in applying the national cotton acreage allotment in 1957 and 1958, no state should lose more than 1 percent of its acreage each year; May 18. Voice.

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- Modify language of cotton export provision to permit acceptance of bids at price levels at which substantial quantities of cotton are offered by other exporting countries, or at higher levels if bid; May 18. Voice.

Harry F. Byrd (D Va.) -- Exempt producers of wheat for on-the-farm use from marketing penalties under the act; May 18. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Delete provision extending mandatory price supports to oats, rye, barley and grain sorghums; May 18. Roll call, 39-44. (A motion to reconsider was tabled.)

Price Daniel (D Texas) (12 amendments considered en bloc as substitute for Holland amendment, above) -- Establish 1956-57 price supports for feed grains at 5 percent less than level for commercial corn for farmers who place 15 percent of their base acreage in soil bank; May 18. Voice.

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- Eliminate provision directing CCC to develop export sales program for cotton; May 18. Roll call, 13-71.

Smith -- Eliminate provisions placing cotton of 1-11/16 inches or longer under the import quota program and directing CCC to sell its stocks of extra long staple cotton at competitive world prices; May 18. Voice.

Smith, as modified -- Provide for treatment of Cuba on same basis as other countries in computation of rice quotas under rice certificate program; May 18. Voice.

Everett M. Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Delete certificate program for rice; May 18. Standing.

Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) -- Provide that producers who enter into soil bank contracts before Dec. 31, 1956, shall have satisfied requirements for 1956 corn price supports; May 18. Voice.

John L. McClellan (D Ark.), as modified -- Encourage agreements with oriental countries for sale of surplus rice; May 18. Standing.

Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) -- Increase state allotments for production of Valencia- or Virginia-type peanuts; May 18. Voice.

Edward Martin (R Pa.) -- Delete section providing for price reporting and research on forest products; May 18. Standing.

A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- Include grazing lands in conservation reserve program and add $75 million to conservation reserve funds for this purpose; May 18. Voice.

Williams (three amendments considered en bloc) -- Limit annual payments to $25,000 a producer for land in any one state put into the acreage reserve and $7,500 for land put into the conservation reserve; limit to $50,000 a year total price support payments to any one producer; May 18. The amendment was first agreed to on a 44-29 roll-call vote. A motion to reconsider was then agreed to on a 49-22 roll call, and upon reconsideration the Williams amendment was rejected on a 28-43 roll call.

DEBATE -- May 18 -- Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- His amendment would set price supports for small grains, corn produced in commercial corn areas by farmers who do not comply with acreage restriction, and corn produced outside the commercial area, at five-sixths of the support level set for commercial corn produced by complying farmers.

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- "If there is to be a corn support program, it is necessary to have an amendment such as this (Holland amendment) to preserve the relationship between corn grown on unallotted acres, unrestricted, and the small grains, which can be used as a substitute for corn as feed."

Conference (HR 10875)

The Senate-House conference committee reported HR 10875 May 22 (H Rept 2197). Conferees accepted deletion of House provisions which would have included grazing lands, small feed grains and other field crops in the acreage reserve and increased the annual authorization for the program from $750 to $800 million. They accepted House language requiring the Secretary to begin the soil bank with 1956 crops. A Senate section directing the CCC to develop an export sales program for cotton was retained, as was the Senate provision governing price supports for feed grains. Conferees also accepted a provision to freeze transitional parity for corn, wheat and peanuts in 1957.

PROVISIONS -- For final provisions of the bill, see "1956 Agricultural Act," p. 375.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate May 22 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- "Although I do not believe that the bill as reported from the conference...will be nearly as effective as some of its advocates hoped, I believe it is probably the best bill which could be obtained during this session of Congress.... I believe that probably too much is expected from the acreage reserve program, and that in the long run the conservation reserve program, which would take marginal land out of production to build up its fertility, or put it to producing that for which it is best suited, will probably prove to be the most beneficial part of the bill."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "I serve notice now that, come the next session of Congress, I intend to press again for the adoption of a domestic parity program for wheat."

HOUSE ACTION

The House May 23, by a 305-59 roll-call vote, agreed to the conference report on HR 10875. The action sent the bill to the President. (For voting, see chart, p. 202)

DEBATE -- W.R. Poage (D Texas) -- "This is not the second best farm bill that we have had before us this year, as some have described it...but it is still probably the best farm bill that has any chance of becoming law..."

H. Carl Andersen (R Minn.) -- "Half a loaf is better than none, and we will take the half a loaf here today."

PRESIDENT SIGNS BILL

President Eisenhower May 28 signed HR 10875 into Public Law 540. In a statement he said the acreage reserve was "a concept rich with promise for improving our agricultural situation" and the conservation reserve "could be the most significant advance in the conservation field in many years." He said delay in enacting the bill "makes it virtually impossible to put the soil bank properly into effect in 1956" and added he was "disappointed that advance payments to farmers are not provided for." Among provisions in the bill to which he objected, he said, were those calling for a cotton export program and freezing rice and cotton acreage allotments for two years. "Despite the shortcomings of the bill," Mr. Eisenhower said, "its advantages outweigh its harmful provisions."

Group Stands

Chairman Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) of the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee Nov. 23, 1955, wrote the heads of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the National Farmers Union, the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives and the National Milk Producers Federation suggesting "that the major farm organizations...put their heads together in the hope that agreement can be attained on some of the plans or solutions suggested to meet the present challenge to agriculture." He asked for "unanimity" on plans for surplus disposal, a soil bank, two-price plans for certain commodities, price supports, marketing quotas, marketing orders and dairy products.

At Ellender's suggestion, major farm groups held a series of meetings in late 1955 and early 1956, but came to no general agreement on what ailed agriculture or how to cure it. Following are their stands on basic farm issues:

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION

FOR: Flexible farm price supports; soil-bank plan, as a condition for price supports; permitting farmers to underplant acreage allotments in return for negotiable certificates valid for purchase of government-owned farm commodities; permitting farmers to place other land in the soil bank for at least three years in return for negotiable certificates for surplus stocks or other payments; "orderly disposal of surpluses;" expansion of exports.

AGAINST: Rigid farm price supports; multiple-price plans for wheat; perpetuation of "uneconomic patterns" of production.

NATIONAL FARMERS UNION

FOR: 100 percent of parity "for all the commodities farm families produce;" parity level production payments on 1955 crops; a nationwide food stamp plan and other methods to dispose of surpluses; expanded exports; conservation reserve program; export of $1 billion of non-commercial commodities.

AGAINST: Flexible price supports; changing determination of support price of cotton; acreage allotment part of soil-bank plan; two-price plan; haying or grazing on reserve acres.

NATIONAL GRANGE

FOR: Expansion of disposal program by every possible means "short of dumping;" use of surpluses to implement United States foreign policy; acreage reserve part of a soil-bank plan on a voluntary basis "as a temporary expedient;" conservation reserve part of soil bank; two-price policy for wheat and rice.

NATIONAL MILK PRODUCERS FEDERATION

FOR: Price supports for dairy products at "not less than 80 percent of parity;" parity for manufacturing milk based on the free market period July, 1946-December, 1948; voluntary soil-bank plan for all agriculture; use of all domestic and foreign outlets for surplus commodities, including a program of dairy stock distribution to school lunch programs and other outlets; food allotment program.

NATIONAL FARMERS' ORGANIZATION

FOR: 100 percent farm price supports; a floor of $20 a hundred pounds on hogs and $30 a hundred pounds on cattle; emergency farm credit.

AGAINST: Flexible farm price supports; reclamation of desert lands for farm purposes.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF FARMER COOPERATIVES

FOR: Expansion of soil, water and farm forest conservation; development of forest resources; re-establishment of U.S. competitive position in marketing.

AGAINST: "Public policy which has the effect of... reducing the American agricultural plant."

Research Groups

There were four studies of the agriculture situation by private research groups in 1955-56. The most extensive study, made by The Twentieth Century Fund, was a 530-page book entitled "Can We Solve the Farm Problem?" The Conference on Economic Progress, a group of farm, labor, and business leaders, published a 110-page study called "Full Prosperity for Agriculture." The Committee for Economic Development issued "An Economic Policy for American Agriculture" and The National Planning Assn. offered a joint statement on farm policy. A summary of major proposals and recommendations of these research groups:

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND

The Twentieth Century Fund Dec. 5, 1955, said "the existing...(farm)...program is an outgrowth of depression and war and must be revised and adapted to present and future conditions if it is to deal effectively" with farm problems. The Fund recommended discontinuing government accumulation of stocks, with no longer-term objective than of taking them off the farmers' hands; reliance on automatic adjustments in the market; recognition of variations in type and grade of wheat; placing the cotton loan program on a bona fide loan basis moderately lower than currently provided.

COMMITTEE FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

The Committee for Economic Development Jan. 25 said costs of necessary economic readjustment for agriculture "should be shared by the country as a whole and not left to be borne entirely by the farmer." CED recommended a soil-bank plan; flexible price supports; encouraging industrial growth in low income farm areas; creating a "non-partisan" Agricultural Stabilization Board to determine broad policies.

CONFERENCE ON ECONOMIC PROGRESS

The Conference on Economic Progress Nov. 26, 1955, said the nation's farmers needed a "national prosperity budget" to end their "depressed" state. CEP recommended 90 percent of parity farm price supports for 1956 crops "as an emergency measure;" a soil bank; realigning price and income support programs to give more help to family-size farms; liberalizing food distribution plans in the U.S. and abroad, including the subsidization of food consumption by the government for U.S. needy.

NATIONAL PLANNING ASSOCIATION

The National Planning Assn. Dec. 12, 1955, said the nation's farm problem "cannot be viewed from the perspective of the short run alone." The NPA recommended using price supports and production payments to keep farm income at a reasonable level; abandoning purchase and storage of surplus dairy products to support prices; a soil-bank plan for acres in wheat, cotton and grain; a policy to distinguish reserve stocks from surpluses; use of surpluses abroad to strengthen foreign economies and add new productivity in poverty-stricken lands.

SOCIAL SECURITY

HR 7225 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 1189) July 14, 1955.
- Passed by the House, by a 372-31 roll-call vote, July 18, 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 160)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 2133) June 5, 1956.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, on a 90-0 roll-call vote, July 17. (See p. 179)
- Conference report (H Rept 2936) agreed to by the House July 26 and the Senate July 27, by voice votes.

P.L. 880 -- Signed into law Aug. 1.

Controversy over liberalization of the Social Security Act centered on reduction of the retirement age for women and establishment of a disability program at age 50. Both proposals were enacted, with modifications, although the Administration opposed them. HR 7225 also extended Old Age and Survivors' Insurance coverage to approximately 250,000 additional persons and increased federal payments to state public assistance programs.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 7225:

OASI

Paid OASI benefits to fully insured, totally and permanently disabled workers at age 50, instead of 65, effective July 1, 1957.

Set up a separate trust fund from which disability payments would be made.

Increased OASI taxes, effective Jan. 1, 1957, by one half of 1 percent and directed that an amount equal to the additional revenues be diverted to the disability trust fund.

Made women eligible for OASI benefits at age 62, instead of 65, effective Nov. 1, 1956; widows and dependent mothers of deceased workers would receive full benefits at 62, but other women electing to retire between 62 and 65 would receive reduced benefits.

Continued OASI children's benefits beyond the cutoff age of 18 if total disability was sustained before the age of 18.

Extended OASI coverage to lawyers, dentists, chiropractors, osteopaths, veterinarians, naturopaths, optometrists, share-croppers, turpentine and gum naval store workers and certain Tennessee Valley Authority and Federal Home Loan Bank employees.

Prohibited payments to aliens residing outside the United States unless the alien was a citizen of a country that made payments to American citizens outside the foreign country.

Established an Advisory Council on Social Security Financing to review the status of the OASI trust funds before each scheduled increase in social security taxes.

Increased interest income accruing to the funds.

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE

Increased the federal share of old-age assistance and aid to the blind and disabled to four-fifths of the first $30 and one-half of the next $30, to a maximum of $60. (Under existing law the federal share was four-fifths of the first $25 and one-half of the next $30, to a maximum of $55.)

Increased the amount matchable in the program of aid to dependent children by $2.

Made the increased public assistance payments effective from Oct. 1, 1956, through June 30, 1959.

Provided that the federal government would pay half of medical care expenses paid by the states; limited the program to $6 a month, multiplied by the number of adults on the public assistance rolls, and $3 for children.

Increased, from $10 million to $12 million annually, the amount authorized for the federal child welfare program.

Authorized appropriation of $5 million in fiscal 1957 for federal participation in state or private non-profit research and training projects.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Social Security" (1955 Almanac, p. 261); "Social Security Extension" (1954 Almanac, p. 188).

The Social Security Act of 1935 established a program for retirement pension insurance. Benefits for survivors of insured workers were added in 1939. Subsequent amendments extended the coverage and broadened the scope of the Act.

The 1954 amendments, the first adopted under a Republican administration, extended OASI coverage to 10 million persons, bringing nine out of 10 workers under the program. They also increased benefit payments and established a rising scale of OASI taxes which would not reach their peak until 1975.

In view of the extensive amendments in 1954, President Eisenhower in his 1955 State of the Union message asked Congress only to modify the formula for federal sharing in old-age assistance payments to the states.

Congress took no action on this request in 1955, but the House passed a bill (HR 7225) to liberalize and extend benefits of the OASI program. As passed by the House in 1955, HR 7225 extended OASI coverage to virtually every professional group but physicians, established a new program of benefits for disabled workers at age 50, provided full benefits for women at 62 and established gradual increases in OASI tax rates to pay for the increased benefits. The Administration criticized the House Ways and Means Committee for holding closed hearings on the bill and prevailed on the Senate Finance Committee to wait until 1956 before considering it.

In his 1956 State of the Union message, President Eisenhower cautioned against amendments to OASI which would destroy the actuarial soundness of the program. "Under the 1954 amendments to the old-age and survivors' insurance program," he said, "protection was extended to some 10 million additional workers and benefits were increased. The system now helps protect nine out of 10 American workers and their families against loss of income in old age or on the death of the breadwinner. The system is sound. It must be kept so. In developing improvements in the system, we must give the most careful consideration to population and social trends, and to fiscal requirements."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 25-March 22, 1956, on HR 7225.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 25 -- Robert J. Myers, Social Security Administration chief actuary, said HR 7225 would increase benefits by about $650 million in the first year. Tax increases carried in the measure would more than pay for the bigger benefits, he said.

Jan. 26 -- Robert A. Gilbert of the Investors League, in urging defeat of the bill, said social security "was never intended" to "replace life insurance, accident and health insurance, workmen's compensation and all of the private employee welfare and benefit plans."

Jan. 27 -- Matt Triggs of the American Farm Bureau Federation said the disability provisions involved "a wholly new and different concept." He said "the end result" might be compulsory health insurance.

Kenneth R. Morefield of the Florida Fruit and Vegetable Assn. said that temporary or migrant workers should be excluded from Social Security coverage because of the difficulty of keeping track of them.

Under Secretary of Agriculture True D. Morse wrote that the Department favored coverage for landowners who operate their property through sharecroppers. Committee Member Walter F. George (D Ga.) said he would introduce an amendment to that effect.

George Conitz of the Farmers Liberty League said he opposed social security coverage of farm operators and employees.

DOCTORS, LAWYERS TESTIFY

Dr. Joseph M. Babcock of the American Optometric Assn. favored coverage for optometrists. Dr. J.A. McCallam of the American Veterinary Medical Assn. opposed coverage for self-employed veterinarians.

Jan. 31 -- Henry L. Bridges, North Carolina state auditor, and Mayor R.H. Jennings of Orangeburg, S.C., recommended coverage of firemen and policemen.

Feb. 1 -- The American Bar Assn. wrote that preliminary results of a poll of its members favored compulsory social security coverage for self-employed lawyers if they could not get it on an optional basis. The result represented a reversal of ABA's earlier position.

Walter A. Slowinski of the District of Columbia Bar Assn. said the association had unanimously endorsed compulsory coverage for lawyers. Harry C. Lamberton, National Lawyers Guild, in urging lawyer coverage, said: "It is unsound that those who need the protection most and are the poorest risks should come in while the best risks stay out."

Vernon Herndon of the American Hotel Assn. opposed extending social security taxes to tips of hotel employees on grounds it would be difficult to administer.

Feb. 2 -- Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) said the age at which women qualify for payments should be lowered to 60 instead of 62.

E. Russell Bartley of the Illinois Manufacturers Assn. said "the situation is getting out of hand" when Congress keeps increasing benefits. He attacked the disability provision as "a big step toward socialized medicine. This proposal might encourage certain individuals to become or remain disabled," he said.

Feb. 8 -- Dr. Paul E. Jones of the American Dental Assn. and Dr. Kenneth M. Haggerty of the Arlington (Va.) County Dental Society said they favored extension of social security coverage to dentists on a voluntary basis.

DISABILITY ITEM OPPOSED

Feb. 9 -- Several doctors said the disability provisions in HR 7225, which would extend social security benefits to permanently or totally disabled persons at age 50, were unworkable because they would encourage people to refuse rehabilitation.

Feb. 14 -- Leigh Cruess of the Mutual Insurance Co., New York, said in 1940-52 there was a 7.4 percent increase in life expectancy at age 65 for men and 12.5 percent for women. This "suggests an increase in the general Old Age and Survivors Insurance retirement age, rather than any reduction," he said.

Edwin C. McDonald of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., New York, said his firm's retirement plan showed retirement age for women had changed from 60 to 65 in recent years.

John H. Miller of the Monarch Life Insurance Co., Springfield, Mass., said the United States should increase its spending for rehabilitation services "and avoid the negative and dangerous course of entering into the unknown field of cash disability benefits...." Similar positions were taken by John W. Joanis of the Bureau of Accident and Health Underwriters, Albert C. Adams of the National Assn. of Life Underwriters and Edward H. O'Connor of the Insurance Economics Society of America.

SUPPORT FROM AFL-CIO, ADA

Feb. 15 -- The AFL-CIO endorsed HR 7225, called it a "minimum program" to aid "many millions of Americans." Nelson H. Cruikshank, AFL-CIO spokesman, said the provision to establish benefits as a matter of right to permanently and totally disabled persons at age 50 was the "most important feature" of HR 7225.

Edward D. Hollander, Americans for Democratic Action national director, said ADA endorsed HR 7225 but would like social security liberalized even more. The National Assn. of Social Workers and National Consumers League also supported the bill.

Feb. 16 -- E.B. Whitten, National Rehabilitation Assn. executive director, said it was highly important "that procedures designed to encourage the rehabilitation of the largest possible number of the disabled be adopted at the beginning of a cash benefits program," but took no stand on HR 7225.

Dr. James L. Doenges, Assn. of American Physicians and Surgeons president, said the bill should be defeated.

Feb. 21 -- A.D. Marshall, General Dynamics Corp. vice president, said the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. opposed the two main provisions of HR 7225: lowering the retirement age for women and liberalized disability provisions.

William G. Caples, Inland Steel Co. vice president, said the National Assn. of Manufacturers felt no changes should be made in social security laws "until a study has been made by an advisory council truly representative of various viewpoints and with full access to data not presently available."

Walter P. Reuther, United Auto Workers president, supported the disability provisions of HR 7225. He said UAW experience "proves that long-term disability benefits are entirely feasible." He said the union found, "contrary to the sweeping charges that disability cannot be verified, there was relatively little difficulty in determining...a permanent disabling condition."

Feb. 22 -- Three doctors representing state medical societies -- J.P. Rousseau, N.C.; R.O. Porter, Utah; and Leon Higdon, Ky. -- opposed the disability provisions of HR 7225. Dr. Rousseau said the disability program "would create millions of malingerers who would falsely claim all types of symptoms which the medical profession unfortunately cannot disprove."

Miss May Bagwell, American Nurses Assn., supported HR 7225's disability provisions and lowered age limits for women. She said nurses' "traditionally low" pay prevented puchase of individual insurance protection.

J. Douglas Brown, Princeton University economics professor, endorsed the disability provision but opposed lowering the age for women on grounds it was "a very costly venture" and the money "would pay far larger returns in social benefit if used in other ways."

PHYSICIANS' OPPOSITION

Feb. 23 -- Dr. F.J.L. Blasingame, representing the American Medical Assn., said "virtually every physician in the United States" is opposed to the disability provisions of HR 7225. He said doctors want "a complete, unbiased and impartial survey of the financial, social, medical and economic aspects of the Social Security Act" before futher changes are made.

Feb. 28 -- Roy W. Bornn, Virgin Islands Commissioner of Social Welfare, said the $160,000 limit on federal participation in Virgin Islands public assistance programs should be removed. Rt. Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, said the disability provisions of HR 7225 would require close supervision.

Feb. 29 -- Dr. Francis E. Townsend said the Townsend Plan for National Insurance contained in HR 4471 should be adopted.

George McLain, National Institute of Social Welfare president, endorsed HR 7225, recommended further liberalization of the social security program, including adoption of a surplus food stamp plan and increased benefit payments.

March 1 -- Henry Viscardi Jr., president of Abilities Inc., a New York firm which employs only disabled persons, said adoption of the disability provisions of HR 7225 would be a "disservice" to disabled persons and would "destroy all opportunity for the disabled to help themselves." He urged action on a rehabilitation program.

March 5 -- Thirteen witnesses supported an amendment to HR 7225 providing for a food stamp plan to distribute agricultural surpluses to the aged, dependent children, blind, disabled, unemployed and other needy persons.

Arthur T. Thompson, editor of Wallaces' Farmer and Iowa Homestead magazine, said nearly three-quarters of the persons polled by the magazine in 1954 and 1956 thought the food stamp plan a "good idea." Jack T. Jennings, Cooperative League of the U.S.A., said the amendment offered "at least a partial solution" to the surplus problem.

James G. Patton, National Farmers Union president, said about 7.6 million persons would be eligible for assistance under the plan.

March 22 -- Marion B. Folsom, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said: "The old age and survivors' insurance system is in excellent condition. For all practical purposes, the system is in approximate actuarial balance; it will thus be self-supporting, under present estimates, providing taxes are increased as scheduled and benefits are not increased without a corresponding increase in revenue."

Folsom opposed the disability and women's retirement provisions of HR 7225. "The proposal to lower the retirement age for women to 62," he said, "would tend to reduce job opportunities for many older workers at a time when our objective is to increase employment prospects for those who desire to work and need to work."

Of the disability payments plan he said: "There is a great divergence of opinion on the difficulties of administering a cash disability program, our ability to control the costs and the effects on vocational rehabilitation. On the other hand, we are making significant progress in helping disabled people -- through assistance payments to the needy, the rehabilitation program and the disability freeze. We need more time to develop these programs fully and evaluate their results."

Folsom said that Congress in 1954 made major changes in the scope of coverage and benefits, adding: "I would not initiate at this time in OASI further major innovations or broad departures in principle which would increase taxes substantially and raise serious uncertainties for the future."

BILL AMENDED

ACTION -- The Committee June 5 reported HR 7225 with amendments (S Rept 2133). The Committee eliminated the disability provision and the tax increase, limited retirement benefits at age 62 to widows only.

The majority report said lowering the eligibility age for all women workers, not just widows, to 62 "would have the undesirable effect of encouraging employers to lower their maximum hiring ages and compulsory retirement ages for women." The House version would extend the coverage to all women of 62 years.

The Committee said it had eliminated a House provision to start payments to disabled workers when they reached 50 because: "Lack of objectivity in determination of disability makes it both easier for the claimant to maintain, and harder for the Administration to deny, the presence of qualifying disability. In many instances, physical disability does not necessarily produce economic disability, although this would in many cases be the tendency if monthly benefits were available." The report said "significant progress" had been made since 1950 in meeting the needs of disabled workers under the program of federal grants to the states for aid to the permanently and totally disabled. More time, the report said, was required to evaluate the results of this and other programs to assist disabled persons.

Minority views of Sens. Walter F. George (D Ga.), Russell B. Long (D La.) and Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) criticized the Committee for eliminating provisions for disability payments to workers who become disabled after age 50. "There are around a million persons between the ages 50 and 65," the minority said, "who would be working but for serious long-term disability. At present they have little recourse but the charity of friends and relatives and the federal-state programs of assistance to the needy.... Such state welfare plans no more meet the needs of insurance to care for disability than do the welfare plans for the needy aged eliminate the need of old-age insurance."

The minority said a disability benefits program had been under consideration for almost 20 years and that "the continued objections regarding the uncertainties of such a program and the continued call for further study constitute a tactical maneuver on the part of those who basically are opposed to the idea."

The minority answered complaints about cost aspects of the disability program with: "Seldom is this cost explained in terms of additional insurance the worker is buying. American people are perfectly willing to pay a nominal increase in taxes to obtain this vital protection.... Under our proposal the top cost...for the employee paying on the full $4,200 would approximate $10 per year.... In return he will receive benefits of $108.50 per month."

The minority added: "The majority report stresses the difficulty of determining disability in a public program providing such benefits. But we know that disability determinations are being made successfully every day, not only in connection with the 'disability freeze' provision of the old-age and survivors insurance system, but also in numerous public programs which pay benefits."

George, Long, Douglas and Sen. George A. Smathers (D Fla.) advocated setting the retirement age for all women at 62.

Floor Action

The Senate July 17 passed HR 7225, by a 90-0 roll-call vote, with amendments. (For voting, see chart p. 179) The Senate restored the disability program to the bill, added a provision permitting all women to retire on reduced benefits at age 62 and changed the federal-state matching formula to increase federal funds for three public assistance programs -- aid to the needy aged, blind and disabled.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate and sent to conference, HR 7225:

OASI

Paid OASI benefits to fully insured, totally and permanently disabled workers at age 50, instead of 65.

Set up a separate trust fund from which disability payments would be made.

Increased OASI taxes, effective Jan. 1, 1957, by one-half of 1 percent and directed that an amount equal to the additional revenues be diverted to the disability trust fund.

Made women eligible for OASI benefits at age 62, instead of 65; widows and dependent mothers of deceased workers would receive full benefits at 62, but other women electing to retire between 62 and 65 would receive reduced benefits.

Continued OASI children's benefits beyond the cutoff age of 18 if total disability was sustained before the age of 18.

Extended OASI coverage to lawyers, dentists, chiropractors, veterinarians, naturopaths, optometrists, share-croppers, turpentine and gum naval store workers.

Prohibited payments to aliens residing outside of the United States unless the alien was a citizen of a country that made payments to American citizens outside the foreign country.

Established an Advisory Council on Social Security Financing to review the status of the OASI trust fund before each scheduled increase in social security taxes.

Increased interest income accruing to the fund.

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE

Increased the federal share of old-age assistance and aid to the blind and disabled to five-sixths of the first $30 and one-half of the next $35. (Under existing law the federal share is four-fifths of the first $25 and one-half of the next $30.)

Prohibited states using the new matching formula from reducing their per capita contributions to the welfare program.

Extended until June 30, 1959, the 1952 matching formula with respect to dependent children.

Provided that the federal government would pay half of medical care expenses paid by the states; limited the program to $8 a month, multiplied by the number of adults on the public assistance rolls, and $4 for children; permitted states to continue to switch other public assistance funds to their medical care programs if they chose to do so.

Permitted states, in determining need of recipients of old-age assistance, to disregard the recipient's first $50 of monthly income.

Increased, from $10 million to $12 million annually, the amount authorized for the federal child welfare program.

OTHER PROVISIONS

Authorized appropriation of $5 million in fiscal 1957 for federal participation in state or private, nonprofit research and training projects.

Established a Commission on the Aging and Aged and directed it to report to Congress by May 31, 1957.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Russell B. Long (D La.) as modified, -- Extend, until June 30, 1959, the 1952 matching formula for aid to dependent children; increase federal share of old-age assistance and aid to the blind and disabled to five-sixths of the first $30 and one-half of the next $35, prohibit states using new matching formula from reducing their per capita contributions to the welfare program; July 16. Roll-call vote, 62-21.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Permit Oregon policemen and firemen to be included in OASI coverage on a voluntary basis; July 17. Voice.

Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- Pay OASI benefits to permanently and totally disabled workers at age 50, instead of 65; set up a separate trust fund for disability payments; increase OASI taxes by one-half of one percent and provide that an amount equal to the additional revenues be diverted to the disability trust fund; July 17. Roll call, 47-45. A motion to reconsider was tabled on a 49-43 roll call.

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- Make OASI benefits available to women at age 62, instead of 65; widows and dependent mothers of deceased workers would receive full benefits at 62, but other women electing to retire between 62 and 65 would receive reduced benefits; July 17. Roll call, 86-7.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Permit states, in determining need of recipients of old-age assistance, to disregard the recipient's first $50 of monthly income; July 17. Roll call, 56-34.

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Increase to $300,000 the annual ceiling on federal matching funds to the Virgin Islands; eliminate prohibition against expenditure of funds to a relative caring for an Island child under program of aid to dependent children; July 17. Voice.

Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- Prohibit discrimination because of sex in determining needs of recipients of public assistance; July 17. Voice.

Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- Permit OASI coverage of Minnesota organizations having their own retirement systems; July 17. Voice.

Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.) -- Redefine child to include a child taken into a home but not formally adopted, under certain conditions; July 17. Voice.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Permit OASI coverage of non-professional school district employees of Minnesota; July 17. Voice.

Humphrey (three amendments, considered en bloc) -- Provide that persons refusing surgery or medical services under the rehabilitation program shall be presumed to have done so with good cause; July 17. Voice.

Douglas -- Permit states to operate medical payments plans as under existing law with additional federal matching of one-half of $8 per month for each adult recipient; July 17. Voice.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Terminate OASI benefits to persons who have been convicted of espionage, sabotage, treason, sedition or subversive activities; July 17. Voice.

Lehman, as modified -- Increase to $5,312,500 the annual ceiling on federal matching funds to Puerto Rico; eliminate prohibition against expenditure of funds to a relative caring for a child under program of aid to dependent children; July 17. Voice.

George A. Smathers (D Fla.) -- Permit state and local employees in Florida to come under OASI rather than their state retirement system; July 17. Voice.

Charles E. Potter (R Mich.), amendment presented by Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) -- Establish Commission on the Aging and Aged to report to Congress by May 31, 1957; July 17. Voice.

Lehman -- Increase, from $10 million to $12 million annually, the amount authorized for the federal child welfare program; July 17. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) (two amendments, considered en bloc) -- Reduce retirement age for men to 62 and for women to 60; increase from $100 to $150 a month the amount a retired person may earn and still be eligible for OASI benefits; July 17. Voice.

Kefauver -- Require states, in applying needs test under old-age assistance, to disregard ownership of a home with value of less than $5,000; July 17. Voice.

Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Increase federal share for aid to dependent children; July 17. Voice.

AID TO THREE MILLION

DEBATE -- July 16 -- Russell B. Long (D La.) -- "The (Long) amendment means that 2,552,000 needy, aged persons over 65 years of age, together with 105,000 needy blind persons and 250,000 totally and permanently disabled persons, would receive at least $5 additional in their monthly welfare payments, beginning October 1.... The cost of this amendment to benefit three million needy persons in the United States is approximately the same as the annual cost of the aid to Tito's Communist government of Yugoslavia."

July 17 -- Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- "I find it singularly distressing and very strange in the year 1956 to hear the arguments of those who say we can rely upon public assistance to meet the needs of our disabled....

It is only the timorous or those who do not want to pay benefits to the persons who have earned them under a compulsory insurance system, not a voluntary system, who seem to have some doubt about it.... I undertake to say that this is the most important question I have ever presented to the American people. Senators may do as they please now. Within the next Congress they will accept this principle."

Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- George's amendment "would endanger the rehabilitation program, and it would burden workers, employers and self-employed individuals with a tax that is unpredictable as to amount in future years. As the years go by, it is most likely that safeguards in the pending amendment will be eliminated. It is certain that any disability provision will be greatly liberalized in the future, either by changing the age limit or increasing benefits to dependents or adopting a program for partial disability."

Thomas E. Martin (R Iowa) -- "Women are citizens and taxpayers -- let us consider whether we have the right to relegate them, as a class, into earlier retirement than men, and, at that, at a reduced rate of benefit."

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- "A reduction in the eligibility age for women does not in and of itself cause people to stop working, if they do not wish to stop."

Conference

A Senate-House conference committee July 26 reported (H Rept 2936) a compromise version of HR 7225. Conferees agreed generally on the Senate version, making only minor changes in sections dealing with extension of OASI coverage, lowered retirement age for women and the disability program.

Changes made by the conferees in Senate public assistance provisions:

Increased the federal share of old-age assistance and aid to the blind and disabled to four-fifths of the first $30 and one-half of the next $30, to a maximum of $60.

Increased the amount matchable in the program of aid to dependent children by $2. (The Senate would have preserved the existing formula.)

Reduced the program for medical care payments to $6 a month an adult and $3 a month a child. (The Senate figures had been $8 and $4, respectively.)

Deleted a Senate provision permitting states to disregard the first $50 of monthly income in determining need of old-age assistance recipients.

Set the ceiling on matching payments to the Virgin Islands at $200,000, instead of the Senate's $300,000.

Conferees also extended OASI coverage to osteopaths, deleted a Senate provision establishing a Commission on the Aging and Aged, and another providing that persons refusing surgery or medical treatment should be deemed to have done so with good cause. They also deleted a Senate amendment prohibiting discrimination because of sex in determining needs of public assistance recipients.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 26 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- "It is unfortunate that the Committee on Ways and Means, as well as this House as a whole, has had no opportunity to determine what other areas of improvement within the social security system might be appropriate. For example, no effort was made to study a possible increase in minimum benefits, even though such an action would have benefited all of our retired workers and not just a selected few."

Peter W. Rodino Jr. (D N.Y.) -- "There is no logic, no justifiable reason for denying benefit payments to insured workers who become totally and permanently disabled at 49 or 48 or 38 or 28 years of age."

John A. Blatnik (D Minn.) --"Basically we are still operating under a 1935 law trying to solve the social security problems of 1956.... The real solution is to extend coverage to all persons -- to enact a truly overall and comprehensive social security program for all today and not wait another few years to make a change here and a change there."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 27 -- the last night of the session -- agreed to the conference report by voice vote without debate.

BILL SIGNED

President Eisenhower Aug. 1 signed HR 7225 into Public Law 880. In approving the measure, the President said provisions "about which the Administration had serious reservations" had been "modified and improved before their final enactment and now meet, in part, some of the Administration's objections." At his Aug. 1 press conference, Mr. Eisenhower, in an apparent reference to the disability provisions of the bill, said: "...we are loading on the social security system something I don't think should be there, and if it is going to be handled, should be handled another way."

Group Stands

(For stands of major organizations on OASI issues, see 1955 Almanac, p. 263.)

Stands on HR 7225 made public in 1956:

The AFL-CIO urged enactment of HR 7225. In the May issue of Labor's Economic Review it said: "Insurance for the permanently and totally disabled is (the bill's) most notable feature but not the only important one."

The American Medical Assn. said the bill was a "specific threat to good medical care through governmental interference with medical practice." AMA said it opposed disability payments because permanent disability would be difficult to determine, payments would kill incentive to be rehabilitated and the cost could not be accurately estimated.

The American Farm Bureau Federation opposed any liberalization of benefits which would require an increase in social security taxes.

The American Bar Assn. reported a poll of its members showed they favored compulsory coverage of lawyers if optional coverage was denied them.

The Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. opposed lowering the retirement age for women and establishing a disability program. According to the Chamber, these two proposals would upset both the social security and the federal-state old-age assistance programs.

13 - YEAR HIGHWAY PROGRAM

HR 10660 -- Reported, with amendments, by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 2022) April 21, 1956.

- Passed, with amendments, by the House on a 388-19 roll-call vote April 27. (See p. 198)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Public Works Committee May 10 (S Rept 1965) and by Senate Finance Committee May 25 (S Rept 2054).
- Passed by the Senate May 29, by voice vote with amendments. (For roll-call votes, see p. 170)
- Conference report (H Rept 2436) agreed to June 26 by the House by voice vote and by the Senate on an 89-1 roll call. (See p. 172)

P.L. 627 -- Signed into law June 29.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1956 and Highway Revenue Act of 1956 (HR 10660) authorized the biggest road-building program in United States history, nearly $31.5 billion in federal-state funds over a 13-year period. The total authorization of federal funds was $26,883,000,000; total state contributions were estimated at $4,608,000,000. HR 10660 also provided for new taxes, scheduled to yield an estimated $14.8 billion over a 16-year period. Chief architects of the measure were Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) and Rep. George H. Fallon (D Md.)

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1956 (Title I of HR 10660):

PRIMARY, SECONDARY ROADS

Authorized appropriations of an additional $125 million for fiscal 1957, $850 million for fiscal 1958 and $875 million for fiscal 1959 to be matched equally by the states and distributed as follows: 45 percent for projects on the federal-aid primary system, 30 percent for projects on the secondary system and 25 percent for approved urban extensions of these systems.

Apportioned the money to states according to the following formula: one-third in the ratio of a state's area to total U.S. area; one third in the ratio of a state's rural population to total U.S. rural population as shown by the 1940 census; and one-third in the ratio of the mileage of a state's rural delivery and star routes to total such mileage in the U.S.

Provided that sums given any state would be available for expenditure in that state for two years after the end of the fiscal year for which they were authorized, but then would lapse.

Permitted the states, if the governor, state highway department and U.S. Secretary of Commerce approved, to shift 20 percent of each of their federal-aid primary, secondary and primary-urban funds to one of the other funds.

Included Alaska in the federal-aid primary, secondary and urban systems, but provided that only one-third of its area should be considered in apportioning funds.

FEDERAL ROADS

Authorized appropriation of $30 million for forest highways and $27 million for forest development trails and roads for each fiscal year, 1958-59.

Authorized $16 million for each fiscal year 1958-59 for construction and improvement of roads and trails in national parks.

Authorized $16 million for each fiscal year 1958-59 for U.S. parkways.

Authorized $12 million for each fiscal year 1958-59 for highway construction and improvement within Indian reservations.

Authorized an additional $2 million for fiscal 1957 and $2 million for each fiscal year 1958-59 for completing sections of federal-aid highways lying entirely within the public domain.

INTERSTATE SYSTEM

Authorized the following additional amounts for construction and improvement of the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways: $1 billion for fiscal 1957; $1.7 billion for fiscal 1958; $2 billion for fiscal 1959; $2.2 billion for each fiscal year 1960-67; $1.5 billion for fiscal 1968; and $1.025 billion for fiscal 1969.

Apportioned one-half the funds for interstate highways during the first three years in the ratio of a state's population to total U.S. population, but provided no state would receive less than .75 percent of the total interstate appropriation; the other half would be apportioned according to the formula for distribution of federal-aid primary funds. (This works out to apportionment based two-thirds on population, one-sixth on mileage and one-sixth on area.)

Provided that apportionment in subsequent years would be based on revised estimates of costs by the Secretary of Commerce, subject to Congressional approval.

Authorized the government to pay 90 percent of the total cost of interstate highways; in addition it would pay part of the remaining 10 percent in any state containing unreserved lands and nontaxable Indian lands, up to a total of 95 percent.

Provided that sums given any state would be available for expenditure in that state for two years after the end of the fiscal year for which they were authorized, but then would lapse.

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce to reimburse states for construction by them in advance of apportionment, provided construction plans had been approved by him.

Permitted the Secretary to advance funds to the states to provide a revolving fund with which to pay construction contractors as work progressed.

Prescribed construction standards and maximum weights and dimensions of vehicles used on the Interstate System.

Increased total mileage of the Interstate System from 40,000 to 41,000 miles, but provided that the increased mileage should not be considered in computing cost estimates.

Permitted the Secretary of Commerce to acquire lands -- including control of access from adjoining lands -- required for construction of projects in the National System of Interstate Highways, with 10 percent of the costs of acquiring the land to be paid from state highway funds.

Permitted reimbursement to states for cost of relocating utility facilities when such relocation was made necessary by construction of the Interstate System.

Barred states from permitting construction of service stations or other commercial establishments on rights-of-way of the Interstate System.

Authorized inclusion of toll roads, bridges and tunnels within the Interstate System.

Provided that the Secretary of Labor, in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act and after consultation with state highway departments, should determine locally prevailing rate of wages to be paid workers employed on construction of the Interstate System.

Directed the Secretary of Commerce to make a study of highway safety and report to Congress by March 1, 1959.

Increased from $10 million to $30 million the emergency fund for repair and reconstruction of roads and bridges damaged by natural disasters.

FINANCING PROVISIONS

The Highway Revenue Act (Title II of HR 10660):

Increased gasoline, diesel and fuel taxes from 2 cents to 3 cents a gallon for vehicles registered for highway use.

Excluded local transit vehicles from the increased fuel taxes.

Increased tire taxes from 5 cents to 8 cents a pound and imposed a new 3-cent tax on camelback.

Raised the manufacturers' tax on trucks, buses and truck trailers from 8 percent to 10 percent.

Imposed a tax of $1.50 a thousand pounds on trucks and buses weighing more than 26,000 pounds, but excluded local transit vehicles.

Taxed the stock of highway vehicles, fuel and tires in the hands of dealers.

Set up a Highway Trust Fund into which taxes imposed under the Act would be paid and from which federal-aid grants would be made to the states.

Required the Secretary of Commerce to reduce funds apportioned to the states if the Secretary of the Treasury determined that payment of the full apportionment would cause a deficit in the Trust Fund.

Made the tax provisions effective through fiscal 1972.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Highway Proposals." (1955 Almanac, p. 431)

Congress considered several highway proposals in 1955 but could not agree on financing provisions.

A report of the President's Advisory Committee on a National Highway Program, submitted early in 1955, recommended creation of a Federal Highway Corporation to issue $20 billion worth of 3 percent bonds for the National System of Interstate Highways. The bond issue would not have counted as part of the federal debt. The Committee, headed by Gen. Lucius Clay (ret.), proposed a $27 billion program for modernizing the Interstate System. The federal government's share of the cost would be $25 billion. (1955 Almanac, p. 432)

President Eisenhower, in a special message to Congress Feb. 22, 1955, endorsed a federal bond issue, as recommended by the Clay committee, to finance highway improvements. This proposal was rejected by both the Senate and House. (1955 Almanac, p. 434)

The Senate, in May, 1955, passed a bill (S 1048) which followed the lines of past federal-aid highway acts but increased funds to be allocated. The bill would have authorized $900 million for primary and secondary roads in each of fiscal years 1957-61. It also would have authorized appropriation of $7.75 billion over the five-year period for the Interstate System. The Senate bill did not spell out any method of providing special funds for the program, so -- if it had been enacted -- the money would have had to come from the general fund of the Treasury. (1955 Almanac, p. 434)

The House Public Works Committee in 1955 reported its own bill (HR 7474). The House bill was a "pay-as-you-drive" proposal which would have authorized $24 billion over 13 years for improving the Interstate System, plus nearly $12 billion for primary and secondary roads. The federal share of the program would have been financed through a 16-year levy of additional taxes on trucks, buses, fuel, tires and inner tubes. The states would have provided another $13 billion.

The House rejected HR 7474 on a 123-292 roll-call vote July 27, 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 441) It was suggested that a propaganda drive against the tax features of the bill was responsible for its defeat.

The controversy over highway financing continued through the closing months of 1955. Governors attending the 47th annual governors conference Aug. 10 called upon Congress to enact a national highway program immediately, but disagreed on how the program should be financed. Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks Nov. 17 said the Administration was "leaning toward" a pay-as-you-go proposal involving increased taxes on gasoline and other highway items.

DAVIS-BACON ACT

Another unsettled dispute which seemed certain to claim the attention of Congress in 1956 consideration of highway proposals was the question of inclusion of Davis-Bacon minimum wage provisions. A Davis-Bacon provision had been deleted from S 1048 on the Senate floor in 1955; a similar provision had been included in the rejected House bill.

The Davis-Bacon Act (40 USC, 276-a) requires that all contracts in excess of $2,000 for construction of federal public works or buildings include the condition that wages must be paid laborers and mechanics at rates not less than those paid workers on similar projects in the city, town, village or other civil subdivision of the state where the work is performed. The Secretary of Labor determines what the prevailing wage is in the locality.

The determination is made by the Secretary before the bids for contracts are advertised. The boundaries of the area and the methods for determining prevailing rates are decided by him. There is no appeal from his decision. Currently, about 20,000 separate decisions predetermining the prevailing wage rates are issued by the Department of Labor each year.

If the contractor pays mechanics and laborers less than the minimum prevailing wage determined by the Secretary, payment may be withheld to make up the difference and the government may cancel the contract. Contractors who do not fulfill the prevailing wage requirement are prohibited from receiving government contracts for three years thereafter.

HISTORY

In the late 1920's some contractors obtained contracts for federal construction projects by bidding low and then organizing construction crews in low-wage areas, transporting them to the site of the project and housing them in camps. Competition for low-wage labor caused strikes and work stoppages, shut out contractors willing to pay local wage rates, damaged the wage structure of local craftsmen and disrupted local economies. To protect communities from such practices, a Republican-controlled Congress in 1931 enacted the Davis-Bacon Act requiring the payment of prevailing local wages on federal hospital construction projects. The law was written by Sen. James J. Davis (R Pa., 1930-45) and Rep. Robert L. Bacon (R N.Y., 1923-38), in whose district a veterans hospital had been constructed by a contractor who imported cheap labor. No roll-call vote was taken on passage of the Act, so party lineups are not recorded.

During the early depression years, Congress authorized greatly expanded government public works programs. In 1935 a Democratic-controlled Congress amended the Davis-Bacon Act to make it apply to all direct federal construction, not only hospitals.

Following enactment of the basic law applying to federal construction, Congress began including a Davis-Bacon provision in laws authorizing federal aid to non-federal construction programs for hospitals, housing, airports and schools in federally affected areas.

Existing laws containing a Davis-Bacon provision include the Federal Airport Act of 1946, the School Survey and Construction Act of 1950, the Hospital Survey and Construction Act of 1946, low rent public housing under the National Housing Acts of 1937 and 1949, as amended, Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act of 1951, slum clearance and urban-renewal program in the Housing Act of 1954 and the Lease Purchase Contracts Act of 1954.

President Eisenhower, in his 1956 State of the Union message, requested "legislation to provide a modern interstate highway system." He warned against a "piecemeal approach" and "solutions outside the bounds of sound fiscal management," but did not recommend any specific financing method for the program: (For text of the message, see p. 45)

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. (Mass.) Jan. 31 said the President had agreed to approve a Democratic pay-as-you-go tax program for highway construction. Martin said the President decided to "yield" because his own bond-financing program apparently was stalemated and he wanted the program to get under way.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 14-21, 1956, on HR 9075, a bill to provide revenue for a national highway program.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 14 -- Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey said the revenue provided for in HR 9075 would fall far short of the estimated $36.5 billion federal share of a proposed $51.5 billion highway construction program. He said the program should be geared to 12 instead of 15 years. Humphrey said he had no recommendations on how to make up the deficit. "I've told you the amount of money you've got to raise and all the places you can get it from," he said. "It's up to you how to do it." He said Congress could raise another $4.5 billion over a 12-year period if it imposed a federal registration tax of $1 per 1000 pounds on motor vehicles.

Feb. 15 -- Matt Triggs of the American Farm Bureau Federation opposed further federal spending for highways. He said the states "should continue to have the primary responsibility for financing highways." Triggs said tax boosts would "bear with particular severity on farmers" who would pay in increased truck transportation rates.

Jack Garrett Scott, National Assn. of Motor Bus Operators, said new taxes on tires and fuels would have "a very severe impact" on the bus industry which was already "in precarious financial condition." He said bus companies were "paying considerably more than their proper share of highway costs."

George J. Burger of the Burger Tire Consultant Service and the National Federation of Independent Business said small business opposed "all moves to increase taxes on grounds that the tax load is already so steep as to all but break the back of independent business."

William A. Bresnahan of the American Trucking Assn. gave "unhesitating and unequivocal support" to HR 9075.

Feb. 16 -- W.W. Marsh of the National Tire Dealers and Retreaders Assn. said the proposed new taxes of three cents a pound on retread material and three cents a pound on tires would impose a great burden on dealers.

J.W. Gaskins of the National Assn. of the Off the Road Tire Retreaders said retread rubber for non-highway equipment should be exempted from the tax.

TRUCK TAXES DEBATED

Feb. 17 -- Mayor Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati called "a bit shortsighted" the American Automobile Assn.'s. contention that across-the-board tax increases on all motorists placed an "unfair burden" on the average car owner. He said HR 9075 gave trucks "a very fair share of the financial burden."

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks said the highway program should be completed in 10 years "because we are falling further and further behind in our efforts to keep the interstate system adequate to meet our needs." He said he would not make any recommendations on financing methods because it would be out of his Department's jurisdiction.

Feb. 20 -- Burton N. Behling, Assn. of American Railroads spokesman, said HR 9075 "failed to meet tests of equity and sound economy." He said there should be a sliding scale of tax increases on the basis of weight and mileage of vehicles. He proposed a special graduated tax on large tires and graduated annual permit fees ranging up to $250 a year on the heaviest trucks.

General Counsel Jeremiah Courtney of the American Taxicab Assn. said taxicab owners should not be required to pay tax increases for interstate highways, since they operated mainly within city limits.

Feb. 21 -- J. S. Giles, AAA Highway Committee chairman, said the heavy truck share of highway excise taxes should be increased from its current 23 percent to 26 percent because the trucks were "not now paying an equitable share of federal aid highway costs."

Burge M. Seymour, Independent Advisory Committee to the Trucking Industry president, said there no longer was any real distinction between the uses of trucks and automobiles. "By any reasonable standard, trucks have always paid their share and do now," Seymour said.

TAXES APPROVED

ACTION -- The Committee March 19 unanimously reported HR 9075 with amendments (H Rept 1899).

The Committee said it had acted on the assumption that the highway expenditures to be met would be those of HR 8836, which envisioned federal expenditures totalling $37.3 billion. The Committee estimated receipts from existing taxes plus the additional taxes imposed by HR 9075 would amount to $38.5 billion for the 16-year period beginning July 1, 1956, and ending June 30, 1972.

The Committee approved proposals to:

Increase gasoline, diesel and fuel taxes from 2 to 3 cents a gallon for highway vehicles. Local transit vehicles were excluded.

Increase tire taxes from 5 to 8 cents a pound and impose a new 3-cent-a-pound tax on retread material (camelback).

Raise the manufacturers' tax on trucks, buses and truck trailers from 8 to 10 percent.

Impose a new annual tax of $1.50 per 1,000 pounds on trucks and buses weighing more than 26,000 pounds. Local transit vehicles were excluded.

Tax the stock of highway vehicles, fuel and tires in the hands of dealers.

Set up a Highway Trust Fund into which taxes imposed under HR 9075 would be paid and from which federal-aid grants would be made to the states.

Require the Secretary of Commerce to report to Congress by March 1, 1959, on who benefited most from federal-aid highways. The study would serve as a guide for future highway tax policies, the Committee said.

CLEAN BILL REPORTED

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- April 21 reported a clean bill (HR 10660 -- H Rept 2022) which incorporated the financing provisions of HR 9075 and most of the authorizing provisions of HR 8836. The bill authorized federal highway grants of $26,565,000,000. Of this amount, $24,825,000,000 was earmarked for the Interstate System. The Committee said the traditional concept of apportioning federal highway grants on a basis of population, area and mileage would "not meet the objective of completing the Interstate System in a given period of time. Nor will it provide proper apportionment to the states from the standpoint of the estimated cost of completing the system in each state at a uniform rate of progress." The Committee bill provided for apportionment in fiscal 1957-58 based on cost estimates supplied by the states in 1954. It also provided for new estimates in 1958 and periodically thereafter.

The Committee bill included a provision requiring that all laborers and mechanics employed on the initial construction work be paid wages comparable to those on similar construction in "the immediate locality," as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act. Five Republican members filed a supplemental statement objecting to this provision.

Floor Action

The House April 27, by a 388-19 roll-call vote, passed HR 10660. (For voting, see chart p. 198) The bill authorized $30.87 billion in federal-state spending. Two minor amendments were accepted on the floor.

Debate centered on whether the government should reimburse utilities for moving facilities to make way for roads and whether the government should set wage scales for highway workers. An amendment to eliminate that provision was rejected on a 77-192 standing vote.

A motion by Rep. Bruce Alger (R Texas) to recommit HR 10660 was rejected by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 10660:

PRIMARY, SECONDARY ROADS

Authorized appropriations of an additional $25 million for fiscal 1957 ($700 million was already authorized), $750 million for fiscal 1958 and $775 million for fiscal 1959 to be matched equally by the states and distributed as follows: 45 percent for projects on the federal-aid primary system, 30 percent for projects on the secondary system and 25 percent for approved urban extensions of these systems.

Apportioned the money to states according to the following formula: one-third in the ratio of a state's area to total U.S. area; one-third in the ratio of a state's rural population to the total U.S. rural population, as shown by the 1940 census; and one-third in the ratio of the mileage of a state's rural delivery and star routes to total such mileage in the U.S.

Provided that sums given any state would be available for expenditure in that state for two years after the end of the fiscal year for which they were authorized, but then would lapse.

Declared it the intent of Congress to increase the authorizations for the primary and secondary systems by not less than $25 million annually, beginning in fiscal 1960 and continuing through fiscal 1969.

Permitted the states, if the governor, state highway department and Secretary of Commerce approved, to shift 20 percent of each of their federal-aid primary, secondary and primary-urban funds to one of the other funds.

FEDERAL ROADS

Authorized appropriation of $25 million for forest highways and $27 million for forest development trails and roads for each fiscal year, 1958-59.

Authorized $16 million for each fiscal year 1958-59 for construction and improvement of roads and trails in national parks.

Authorized $16 million for each fiscal year 1958-59 for U.S. parkways.

Authorized $10 million for each fiscal year 1958-59 for highway construction and improvement within Indian reservations.

Authorized $1 million for each fiscal year 1958-59 for construction and maintenance of federal-aid highways lying entirely within the public domain.

INTERSTATE SYSTEM

Authorized the following additional amounts for construction and improvement of the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways: $1.025 billion for fiscal 1957 ($175 million already was authorized); $1.7 billion for fiscal 1958; $2 billion for fiscal 1959; $2.2 billion for each fiscal year 1960-63; $2.3 billion for each fiscal year 1964-65; $2.2 billion for fiscal 1966; $2 billion for fiscal 1967; $1.5 billion for fiscal 1968; and $1 billion for fiscal 1969.

Based apportionment of funds on the ratio of the estimated cost of completing the Interstate System within each state to the estimated cost of completing the entire system. (Fiscal 1957-58 apportionment would be based on cost estimates submitted to the Bureau of Public Roads by the states in 1954; fiscal 1959-69 apportionment would be based on revised estimates.)

Authorized the federal government to pay 90 percent of the total cost of interstate highways; in addition it would pay part of the remaining 10 percent in any state containing unreserved lands and nontaxable Indian lands, up to a total of 95 percent.

Provided that sums given any state would be available for expenditure in that state for two years after the end of the fiscal year for which they were authorized, but then would lapse.

Prescribed maximum weights and dimensions of vehicles used on the Interstate System.

Declared it the intent of Congress to reimburse states for construction, between Aug. 2, 1947, and June 30, 1957, of highways which met the standards for the Interstate System.

Directed the Secretary of Commerce to conduct a study to determine what highways met these standards and to report to Congress by Jan. 12, 1958.

Authorized the Secretary to advance funds to the states for acquisition of rights-of-way.

Provided that construction workers on the Interstate System be paid the prevailing wages for the area in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act.

Provided for states that paid for the relocation of utilities occasioned by federal-aid highway realignment to be reimbursed with federal money.

Directed the Secretary to approve access roads to Interstate System highways to insure maximum safety and traffic flow.

Prohibited any firm from monopolizing such businesses as gas stations on the Interstate System.

FINANCING PROVISIONS

The Highway Revenue Act (Title II of HR 10660):

Increased gasoline, diesel and fuel taxes from 2 cents to 3 cents a gallon.

Excluded local transit vehicles from the increased fuel taxes.

Increased tire taxes from 5 cents to 8 cents a pound and imposed a new 3-cent tax on retread material.

Raised the manufacturers' tax on trucks, buses and truck trailers from 8 percent to 10 percent.

Imposed a new annual tax of $1.50 per 1,000 pounds on trucks and buses weighing more than 26,000 pounds. Local transit vehicles were excluded.

Taxed the stock of highway vehicles, fuel and tires in the hands of dealers.

Set up a Highway Trust Fund into which taxes imposed under the Act would be paid and from which federal-aid grants would be made to the states.

Directed the Secretary of Commerce to report to Congress by March 1, 1959, on who benefited most from federal-aid highways.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) -- Declare it to be the sense of Congress to help small business get a fair share of the highway work; April 27. Voice vote.

Sam Rayburn (D Texas) -- Require the Secretary of Commerce to make progress reports on the highway program to the Congress instead of to committees; April 27. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

George A. Dondero (R Mich.) -- Permit states, instead of the federal government, to set prevailing wages for highway workers; April 27. Standing vote, 77-192.

John A. Blatnik (D Minn.) -- Direct the Secretary of Commerce to make a three-year traffic safety study and make recommendations for greater highway safety; April 27. Standing, 67-163.

John F. Baldwin Jr. (R Calif.) -- Limit federal outlays to utilities to 50 percent of the relocation costs; April 27. Voice.

Charles A. Vanik (D Ohio) -- Strike out provisions relating to federal reimbursement of utility relocation costs; April 27. Voice.

DEBATE -- April 26 -- Elmer J. Holland (D Pa.) -- "The requirements of the Davis-Bacon Act specifying that all contractors on federal construction must pay their employees the prevailing wage existing in the community in which a federal project is located is an accepted requirement of all legitimate contractors. There has been some opposition by those unprincipled contractors who would like to underbid on government work by paying their employees far below livable wages."

George H. Fallon (D Md.) -- "We must build this (Interstate) System of highways if we are to continue our economic growth and expansion."

Russell V. Mack (R Wash.) -- "We Republicans must vote for these new and additional Democratic taxes even if we do not like them or otherwise there will be no highway bill this year."

Thomas A. Jenkins (R Ohio) -- The utilities "do have a just complaint. We ought to listen to them and give them assistance and protection" when forced to relocate lines.

April 27 -- Mack -- "The Davis-Bacon prevailing wage provision has been in force in some cases for 25 years and it has not hindered in any way the carrying out of federal works in the many fields in which it is in effect. Why discard from this legislation a provision...that has worked so well for so long a period of time?"

Dondero -- "There is nothing in this amendment which takes away the rule of the prevailing wage.... All we ask is that the states do it as they have in the past and not the federal government."

Robert E. Jones (D Ala.) -- Under the Baldwin amendment there would be a 50-50 federal-state matching formula on payments to utilities. "I think the Committee was very generous in reserving to the states their own formulas as to how they wanted to apportion the payments to the utilities for relocation."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- May 10 reported, by a 11-2 vote, HR 10660 (S Rept 1965). The Committee substituted most of the provisions of S 1048, passed by the Senate in 1955, for Title I of the House version (1955 Almanac, p. 436). The Committee increased the mileage on the Interstate System to 42,500 miles and eliminated the Davis-Bacon provision of the House bill.

It also based the method apportionment of Interstate System funds on the area-population-mileage formula. The Committee said that under the House apportionment formula "each state's share would depend in large measure upon its ability to convince the Bureau of Public Roads of the accuracy of its estimates. Whatever may be said about the efficacy of distribution of federal funds on the basis of need, the Committee considers it contrary to the public interest to initiate a policy of distributing federal funds on the basis of what each state claims it needs."

The Committee agreed to spread the construction program for the Interstate System over a 13-year period, as in the House version, but kept the rest of the highway program on a five-year basis as in S 1048.

TAX PROVISIONS

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- May 17-18 on Title II of HR 10660.

TESTIMONY -- May 17 -- Secretary of Treasury Humphrey said he "heartily" endorsed pay-as-you-build financing for highways but felt the House-passed bill "falls far short" of that type of financing. Humphrey said the revenue provisions of HR 10660 would bring in more money than was earmarked for expenditure, 1957 through 1959, but "there would be 10 successive years with an excess of expenditures over receipts, with annual deficiencies of from $500 million to $800 million in most of these years. The cumulative deficiency in the trust fund would begin in the sixth year, 1962, and would exceed $4.7 billion by 1969. This would be made good only in the last three years, 1970-71-72."

He said no provision was made in the bill to allocate funds to the primary, secondary and urban federal-aid roads in 1970-72. Despite plans to pour unexpended money from previous federal-aid appropriations and excess money from the National System of Interstate Highways program into the federal-aid highway fund, Humphrey estimated failing to make specific allocations would leave the program $1.4 billion short. He added that financing for the extra 2,500 miles of interstate highways authorized in the Senate version of HR 10660 had not been provided for, an expenditure he estimated at $1.7 billion.

"To eliminate the prospective deficits under either the House bill or alternative Senate plan," Humphrey said, "I urge that the bill be amended to permit allocation of funds to be so timed that the estimated expenditures from the allocations will not exceed the estimated available amounts in the trust funds."

Stating he had no objection to the proposed new taxes, Humphrey said diversion of excise taxes "which have always been regarded as part of the general revenue means that these amounts must be made up in the general budget by new taxes or by a continuation of old taxes which might otherwise be reduced.... The dedication (to highways) of the existing gasoline and diesel fuel taxes is reasonable because they have come to be regarded as available for highway expenditures.... But the tire, tube, truck and bus taxes are included in our regular excise tax program and have always been considered as part of the general revenue.... Their diversion to pay for highways is not really consistent with pay-as-you-build financing."

The Cummins Engine Co. of Columbus, Ind., declaring its statement represented the views of companies which manufactured 80 percent of the new automotive diesel engines in the U.S. in 1955, said "if additional taxes are necessary, a uniform across-the-board increase on all types of automotive fuel should be levied," not a higher one for diesel oil than for gasoline.

Spokesmen for the National Coal Assn., National Lumber Manufacturers Assn. and the American Pulpwood Assn. said exemptions from tax hikes on highway user items should extend to all those who did not use the public roads.

TAX AMENDMENTS

ACTION -- In reporting Title II of HR 10660 (S Rept 2054) May 25 the Committee approved amendments to:

Make the House-approved additional 1-cent taxes on regular and special motor fuels applicable only to vehicles registered for highway use.

Increase the truck use tax from $1.50 to $2.50 per thousand pounds and make the tax applicable only to the weight over 26,000 pounds.

Place a special limitation on the availability of expenditures for highways, to insure that no deficit would develop in the highway trust fund.

Delete special refunds or exemptions for local transit systems.

Provide that floor stock tax payments would not be required until at least 90 days after the date the tax increases in the bill became effective.

Floor Action

The Senate May 29, by voice vote, passed HR 10660, authorizing total federal spending of $28.88 billion. State matching was estimated at $6.56 billion.

Action came at the end of a fourteen-hour session in which debate centered on the formula to be used in apportioning funds for the Interstate Highway System and on inclusion of Davis-Bacon minimum wage provisions.

As passed by the Senate, the bill retained the apportionment formula of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1954. (1954 Almanac, p. 499) Under this formula funds for the Interstate System would be apportioned 2/3 in the ratio of state to national population, 1/6 in the ratio of state to national mileage of rural free delivery routes and 1/6 in the ratio of state to national geographic area. The House bill would have distributed funds according to cost estimates drafted by state highway commissioners.

In an atmosphere of parliamentary confusion, the Senate first agreed to an amendment offered by William F. Knowland (R Calif.) to permit state agencies to determine prevailing wages for projects in the Interstate System. Approval came on a 40-39 roll call with Vice President Richard M. Nixon voting to break a tie. A motion to reconsider was tabled 41-39. The Senate then agreed, by a 42-37 roll-call vote, to an amendment by Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) to give the Secretary of Labor the right to fix minimum wages on interstate projects. As it went to conference, HR 10660 carried the Chavez, not the Knowland, amendment. (For voting, see chart p. 170)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, the Federal Highway Act of 1956 (Title I of HR 10660):

PRIMARY, SECONDARY ROADS

Authorized appropriations of an additional $200 million for fiscal 1957 and $900 million a year for fiscal 1958-61 to be matched equally by the states and distributed as follows: federal-aid primary highway system, $90 million for fiscal 1957 and $400 million annually for fiscal 1958-61; federal-aid secondary system, $60 million for fiscal 1957 and $300 million annually for fiscal 1958-61; federal-aid primary highway system in urban areas and for approved urban extensions of the secondary system, $50 million for fiscal 1957 and $200 million annually for fiscal 1958-61.

Apportioned the money to states according to the following formula: one-third in the ratio of a state's area to total U.S. area; one-third in the ratio of a state's rural population to the total U.S. rural population, as shown by the 1940 census; and one-third in the ratio of the mileage of a state's rural delivery and star routes to total such mileage in the U.S.

Provided that sums given any state would be available for expenditure in that state for two years after the end of the fiscal year for which they were authorized, but then would lapse.

Permitted the states, if the governor, state highway department and Secretary of Commerce approved, to shift 20 percent of each of their federal-aid primary, secondary and primary-urban funds to one of the other funds.

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce to spend not more than $100 million for fiscal 1956 to acquire rights-of-way for federal-aid highway projects.

INTERSTATE SYSTEM

Authorized the following amounts for construction and improvement of the National System of Interstate Highways, including extension through urban areas: $1 billion for fiscal 1957; $1,750,000,000 for fiscal 1958; $2 billion for each of the fiscal years 1959-69

Apportioned one-half of the funds for interstate highways in the ratio of a state's population to total U.S. population, but provided no state would receive less than .75 percent of the total interstate appropriation; the other half would be apportioned according to the formula for distribution of federal-aid primary funds. (This works out to apportionment based two-thirds on population, one-sixth on mileage and one-sixth on area.)

Provided the government would pay 90 percent of the total cost of interstate highways; in addition it would pay part of the remaining 10 percent in any state containing unreserved lands and nontaxable Indian lands, up to a total of 95 percent.

Increased total mileage of the Interstate System from 40,000 to 42,500 miles.

Required the Secretary of Commerce to send Congress by Feb. 1, 1957, his recommendations as to how undesignated mileage in the Interstate System should be utilized.

Provided that Secretary of Labor, in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act, should determine locally prevailing rate of wages to be paid to workers employed on construction of Interstate System; provided for judicial review of such wage determinations.

Permitted reimbursement to states for cost of relocating utility facilities when such relocation was made necessary by construction of the Interstate System.

Prescribed maximum weights and dimensions of vehicles used on the National System of Interstate Highways.

Allowed the continued operation of all vehicles permitted by state law to operate on July 1, 1956, despite the new weight-dimension standards.

Barred states from permitting construction of service stations or other commercial establishments on rights-of-way of Interstate System.

Permitted the Secretary of Commerce to acquire lands, including control of access from adjoining lands, required for construction of projects in the National System of Interstate Highways, with 10 percent of the costs of acquiring the land to be paid from state highway funds.

FEDERAL ROADS

Authorized appropriation of $33,750,000 for forest highways and $27 million for forest development trails and roads for each fiscal year, 1958-61.

Authorized $18 million for each fiscal year 1958-61 for construction and improvement of roads and trails in national parks and for access roads to mines.

Authorized $16 million for each fiscal year 1958-61 for U.S. parkways.

Authorized $12.5 million for each fiscal year 1958-61 for highway construction and improvement within Indian reservations.

Authorized $2 million for each fiscal year 1957-62 for completing sections of federal-aid highways lying entirely within the public domain.

Directed the Secretary of Commerce to make a study of highway safety and report to Congress by June 30, 1957.

FINANCING PROVISIONS

The Highway Revenue Act (Title II of HR 10660):

Increased gasoline, diesel and fuel taxes from 2 to 3 cents a gallon for highway vehicles.

Increased tire taxes from 5 to 8 cents a pound and imposed a new 3-cent tax on camelback.

Raised the manufacturers' tax on trucks, buses and truck trailers from 8 to 10 percent.

Imposed a tax of $2.50 a pound on trucks and buses for weight over 26,000 pounds.

Taxed the stock of highway vehicles, fuel and tires in the hands of dealers.

Set up a Highway Trust Fund into which taxes imposed under the Act would be paid and from which federal-aid grants would be made to the states.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Provide that state highway departments determine the locally prevailing wages to be paid workers employed on construction of Interstate System; May 29. Roll-call vote, 40-39, with tie broken by the Vice President. (A motion to reconsider was tabled on a 41-39 roll call.) (For voting, see chart, p. 170)

Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) -- Provide that Secretary of Labor determine, in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act, locally prevailing rate of wages to be paid workers employed on construction of Interstate System; May 29. Roll call, 42-37. (Previously, a motion to table the Chavez amendment was defeated on a 37-41 roll call.)

Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) -- Direct Secretary of Commerce to make a study of highway safety and report to Congress by June 30, 1957; May 29. Voice.

Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- Increase authorization for Indian roads from $10 million to $12.5 million; May 29. Voice.

Frank A. Barrett (R Wyo.), as modified -- Increase authorizations for: forest highways from $22.5 million to $33.75 million; forest development roads and trails from $24 million to $27 million; national park roads from $12.5 million to $18 million and include access roads to mines in this authorization; and federal parkways from $11 million to $16 million; May 29. Voice.

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- Amend House version to include Alaska in federal-aid primary, secondary and urban systems, but provide that only one-third of its area shall be considered in apportioning funds; May 29. Voice.

Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- Bar states from permitting construction of service stations or other commercial establishments on rights-of-way of Interstate System; May 29. Voice.

George H. Bender (R Ohio) -- Authorize states to use airspace above and below established gradeline of highway pavement for parking; May 29. Voice.

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- Direct Secretary of Commerce to study allocation of mileage in Interstate System and report to Congress by Jan. 15, 1958; May 29. Voice.

Case -- Provide for consultation between Secretary of Labor and state highway departments and for determination of prevailing wages before advertisement for bids; May 29. Voice.

Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.) -- Provide for preservation of archeological and paleontological salvage; May 29. Voice.

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Authorize judicial review of wage determinations by Secretary of Labor under Davis-Bacon Act; May 29. Voice. (A motion to reconsider was tabled on a 36-33 roll call.)

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Authorize reimbursement to a state for cost of relocation of utility facilities, if state normally pays relocation costs; May 29. Voice.

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- Bar funds to states allowing vehicles exceeding certain size and weight to use Interstate System, unless permitted to do so by states on July 1, 1956; May 29. Voice.

Prescott Bush (R Conn.) -- Provide for repayment to federal government of funds expended on construction of highways on which states wish to levy tolls; May 29. Voice.

Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- Authorize one cent per gallon refund on gasoline and diesel fuel tax used on private roads; May 29. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- Substitute House provision, providing for apportionment of funds for the Interstate System on the basis of cost estimates drafted by state highway commissioners, for population-mileage-area formula reported by Senate Committee; May 29. Roll call, 27-55.

Bush, as modified -- Declare it the intent of Congress to reimburse states for highways, whether toll or free, constructed after Aug. 2, 1947, which are part of designated Interstate System; May 29. Voice.

Bush -- Apportion funds for Interstate System in fiscal 1957-58 on basis of population-mileage-area formula; beginning in fiscal 1959, apportion them on the basis of estimated costs; May 29. Voice.

Lehman -- Define construction to include relocation of persons on condemned property; May 29. Voice.

Patrick V. McNamara (D Mich.) -- Strike Title I of the bill and substitute Title I of the House bill; May 29. Voice.

DEBATE -- Controversy over the House and Senate formulas for allotting interstate highway funds was based on the widely differing sums that would go to the states under the two versions.

May 28 -- Kerr -- "The formula in the House bill is based upon guesses (made)...on the basis of private correspondence between the (Gen. Lucius D.) Clay committee and the highway commissions of the several states. That is the reason why a law basing allocations upon such a formula would be so unjust."

Capehart -- "I thought...the federal government was going to pay 90 percent of the cost and that each state was going to bear 10 percent of the cost, based on 100 percent of what the actual cost was, after careful auditing and after careful contracting for the construction of the highways."

May 29 -- Knowland -- "...if my amendment (on prevailing wages) is adopted and stays in the bill through the subsequent parliamentary procedures, the Senate (will) continue its historic position in favor of keeping the authority over wage scales in the hands of the states."

Neuberger -- "If the federal government...can set the specifications of how the highways should be built, there is nothing sinful or immoral or inimical about having the federal government set the wage standards."

Conference

A joint Senate-House conference committee reported HR 10660 June 25 (H Rept 2436). Two Sets of conferees worked on the bill, one group dealing with construction provisions, the other with tax sections.

The compromise bill called for federal spending of $24,825,000,000, over a 13-year period, for construction and improvement of the Interstate System. It also included $1,850,000,000 of federal spending, over a three-year period, on the other three federal-aid systems -- the primary, secondary (farm-to-market) and urban -- and $208 million for the so-called federal domain roads. State matching funds were estimated at $4,608,000,000.

Biggest controversy before the conferees was how to apportion the Interstate System money among the states. They agreed to follow the formula in the Senate bill, based on population, area and rural road mileage, for the first three years. Under the conference version, in the last 10 years of the program funds would be distributed on the basis of cost estimates submitted by the states by January, 1958, instead of on 1954 cost estimates, as provided in the House version. Congress would have to approve the new apportionment plan before it took effect.

Conferees agreed to permit the Bureau of Public Roads to add 1,000 miles to the existing 40,000-mile Interstate System but provided that a state should not receive any extra federal funds by reason of an additional allocation of mileage. The Senate had voted to add 2,500 interstate miles but the House had decided against any additional mileage.

Conferees agreed to exempt non-highway users from additional taxes imposed under the bill, as the Senate had voted. The House version would have applied the taxes to all motor vehicles. Conferees also accepted a House provision exempting local or mass transit systems from the increased taxes.

HOUSE ACTION

The House June 26 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Thomas A. Jenkins (R Ohio) -- "This was a hard, colossal job that the Congress undertook, but the Members of Congress, always feeling a sense of responsibility to do what the people want done, took up the task of drawing legislation.... I hope that future generations will rise up and call us blessed for having given to the country a fine piece of legislation."

Charles A. Vanik (D Ohio) -- "It is indeed regrettable that initial allocation among the states for the Interstate System will be under the Senate formula.... To allocate construction on any other basis than need is unwise and shortsighted."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate June 26 agreed to the conference report by an 89-1 roll-call vote. Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.) was the lone dissenter. (For voting, see chart p. 172)

DEBATE -- Long -- "It is my judgment that the highway users are already paying more than enough taxes for all the roads which the federal government expects to assist in building and for all the roads authorized by the proposed legislation.... I should be glad to vote for a highway bill (that did not) shift the burden to the highway users, in order to afford tax relief for persons who are better able to pay."

Group Stands

Pressure groups generally favored a greatly stepped-up federal-aid highway program but were spirited in their disagreement over how it should be handled. The most controversial issues were inclusion of Davis-Bacon minimum wage provisions and pay-as-you-drive financing.

Stands of major organizations on highway issues:

HIGHWAY USERS

AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE ASSN. -- For: Pay-as-you-go financing; "emphasis on improvement of the National System of Interstate Highways;" a "large increase in available federal funds for highway purposes;" an "adjustment" in the federal tax structure so that heavy trucks would "more nearly" pay an "equitable share" of highway costs; payment by the federal government of 90 percent of the cost of improving the Interstate System, the job to be completed within 15 years. AGAINST: Federal excise taxes on autos, parts, fuel and oil; limitation of federal aid to the amount of revenue derived from such taxes; "repeated pressure" to increase size and weight limitations for trucks.

AMERICAN TRUCKING ASSNS. INC. -- FOR: Construction and financing "by the federal government" of a 40,000-mile system of interstate and defense highways; use of existing federal automotive taxes; "bond financing or any other equitable method" of financing the highway program; truckers to "share" any necessary tax increases applied "across-the-board to all highway users;" state control of size and weight limitations. AGAINST: "High special taxes" which "single out trucks to carry the entire load of additional federal taxation for the highway program;" proposals to "freeze truck sizes and weight limits."

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION -- FOR: Adoption by state governments of long-range plans for highway construction; letting states levy motor fuel taxes instead of the federal government; highway and road costs financed primarily by state motor fuel and registration taxes. AGAINST: Expansion of federal financing of highways; diverting highway user taxes to non-highway purposes.

NATIONAL ASSN. OF MOTOR BUS OPERATORS -- FOR: A program to provide "urgently needed" highway improvements; willing to pay "its proper share" of the cost of the program. AGAINST: "Differential tax rates" on buses.

NATIONAL GRANGE -- FOR: An expanded highway program; federal-state cooperation in highway financing; additional taxes levied on various types of highway users based on the "best available knowledge" of the allocation of highway costs among them; increased federal aid on primary roads not on the Interstate System, farm-to-market roads and urban extensions.

PRIVATE TRUCK COUNCIL OF AMERICA INC. -- FOR: A long-range highway construction program. AGAINST: Imposition of the truck weight "freeze" as provided in HR 8836; registration fee of $1.50 per 1,000 pounds on vehicles over 26,000 pounds gross weight; the proposed exemption from increased motor fuel tax of buses operated by transit companies which derive at least 60 percent of their revenue from fares not subject to the federal transportation tax.

INDUSTRY AND COMMERCE

ASSOCIATED GENERAL CONTRACTORS OF AMERICA INC. -- FOR: Legislation that "will enable the nation's urgent highway needs to be accomplished in the minimum time." AGAINST: Inclusion of a Davis-Bacon clause.

AMERICAN ROAD BUILDERS' ASSN. -- FOR: The "traditional" federal-state program based on matching funds with "deficiencies" to be corrected in 10 years; assumption by the federal government of at least 90 percent of the cost of the Interstate System and 50 percent of the primary and secondary systems; determination by the states of employment practices and prevailing wage rates.

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN RAILROADS -- FOR: Graduated user charges upon the heavy vehicles. AGAINST: Use of general funds "obtained from taxpayers as a whole...including railroads" to finance any part of the highway program; use of fuel taxes alone as a substitute for "equitable" user charges.

AUTOMOBILE MANUFACTURERS ASSN. -- FOR: Modernizing the Interstate System in the next 10 years; federal assumption of "most of the cost;" "some increases" in federal aid for other highways.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE U.S. -- FOR: An expanded federal-aid highway program with the national government accepting "primary responsibility" on the Interstate System; financing from "current revenue," but, if necessary, "equitable and reasonable" taxes on highway users; reimbursement to localities for the cost of moving utilities for construction of the Interstate System only. AGAINST: "Any financing device outside the federal budget and debt limit;" federal regulation of motor vehicle sizes and weights; Davis-Bacon prevailing wage provisions.

NATIONAL TIRE DEALERS AND RETREADERS ASSN. -- FOR: An expanded highway program. AGAINST: Any tax on tread rubber.

RUBBER MANUFACTURERS ASSN. INC. -- FOR: An expanded highway program; taxing provisions on rubber products as originally proposed in HR 9075; imposition of a tax on raw tread rubber (formerly called camelback).

STATE, LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

AMERICAN MUNICIPAL ASSN. -- FOR: Payment by the federal government of 90 percent of the funds for 10 years to complete the Interstate System, "including urban feeders;" federal matching for all right-of-way costs, including relocation of publicly owned utilities.

AMERICAN ASSN. OF STATE HIGHWAY OFFICIALS -- FOR: An enlarged and accelerated construction of the Interstate System financed "substantially" by the federal government; state payment for maintaining, operating and policing all federal-aid roads; a "balanced" federal-aid program for the several road systems. AGAINST: Determining at the federal level such subjects as reimbursement for utility relocation, labor relations and wage requirements, and vehicle sizes and weights.

NATIONAL ASSN. OF COUNTY OFFICIALS -- FOR: An "accelerated" completion of the Interstate System; "pay-as-you-go" financing; increased highway user taxes "across the board," if existing user taxes proved inadequate. AGAINST: Diversion of highway user taxes to non-highway programs; "freezing" the secondary road program over an extended period.

U.S. CONFERENCE OF MAYORS -- FOR: "Immediate acceleration" of road construction; federal financing of the Interstate System.

DAVIS-BACON STANDS

The following organizations took stands on inclusion of a Davis-Bacon clause in the highway program:

FOR: AFL-CIO, the National Joint Heavy and Highway Construction Committee (formed in January, 1955, by the four basic construction unions: United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America; International Union of Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union of America; and International Union of Operating Engineers).

AGAINST: Associated General Contractors of America; American Road Builders' Assn.; Chamber of Commerce of the U.S.; and the American Assn. of State Highway Officials (however, some state highway officials individually supported inclusion of Davis-Bacon in the highway bill).

Roads Chief Authorized

In the closing hours of the 1956 session, the Senate and House passed a bill (S 4164 -- PL 966) to create a post of Federal Highway Administrator in the Bureau of Public Roads. The bill also provided for appointment of one additional Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

UPPER COLORADO PROJECT

S 500 -- Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 128) March 30, 1955.

• Passed by the Senate, amended, on a 58-23 roll-call vote April 20. (1955 Almanac, p. 122)

HR 3383 -- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 1087) July 8, 1955.

S 500 -- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote March 1, 1956, after passage of HR 3383 by a 256-136 roll-call vote. (See p. 188)

• Conference report (H Rept 1950) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate March 28.

P.L. 485 -- Signed into law April 11, 1956.

A long-sought goal of Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah was realized in 1956 when the $760 million Upper Colorado River Basin water storage and reclamation project was signed into law.

The four states looked upon the project as a way to harness the river's water for irrigation, power and drinking and still assure downstream users their legal share of water. The project also promised irrigation for Navajo Indians trying to eke out a living on dusty farm land.

Half of the battle was won in 1955 when the Senate authorized the project by a 58-23 roll-call vote. The bill was opposed by conservationists who feared construction of Echo Park Dam would flood the Dinosaur National Monument on the Utah-Colorado border. Most vocal of the opponents of the project as a whole represented southern California. They claimed the proposed dams upstream would rob California of its deserved share of Colorado River water.

The House, after two committee studies and reports on the legislation, in 1956 passed a version which did not include Echo Park Dam and limited the initial federal outlay to $760 million. The Senate had not set a dollar ceiling but estimated construction costs at $1.5 billion.

DAMS AUTHORIZED

The revised bill (S 500) signed by President Eisenhower, which was essentially the House version, authorized three major dams: Glen Canyon on the Colorado River in northern Arizona; Flaming Gorge on the Green River in northeastern Utah; and Navajo Dam on the San Juan River in northwestern New Mexico. A fourth dam, Curecanti, would be built on the Gunnison River in Colorado if a special study proved it feasible.

Glen Canyon would be the largest of the dams, rising 700 feet above the Colorado River. It would hold back 26 million acre-feet of water, part of which would be harnessed to generate 800,000 kilowatts of electric power. The dam would cost $379 million.

Flaming Gorge would be 440 feet high, store 3.9 million acre-feet of water and cost $74.6 million. It would have a 72,000 kilowatt generating capacity.

Navajo would rise 335 feet and be of earth construction, store 1.4 million acre-feet and cost $32.9 million. It would store water used in irrigating Navajo Indian lands.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, S 500:

Authorized the Secretary of Interior to construct these initial units of the project, which would include dams, reservoirs, power plants and transmission facilities: Curecanti, Flaming Gorge, Navajo (dam and reservoir only) and Glen Canyon.

Specified that Curecanti could not be constructed until the Secretary certified to Congress and the President that its benefits would exceed its cost.

Required that Curecanti Dam impound at least 940,000 acre-feet of water.

Authorized additional dams and irrigation facilities on these sites: Central Utah (initial phase), Emery County, Florida, Hammond, La Barge, Lyman, Paonia (including the Minnesota unit), Pine River Extension, Seedskadee, Silt and Smith Fork.

Required the Secretary to protect Rainbow Bridge National Monument in developing Glen Canyon and to build recreational and wildlife facilities.

Declared it was the "intention of Congress that no dam or reservoir constructed under the authorization of this Act shall be within any national park or monument."

Required the Secretary to give top priority to finishing planning reports on these other projects: Gooseberry, San Juan-Chama, Navajo, Parshall, Troublesome, Rabbit Ear, Eagle Divide, San Miguel, West Divide, Bluestone, Battlement Mesa, Tomichi Creek, East River, Ohio Creek, Fruitland Mesa, Bostwick Park, Grand Mesa, Dallas Creek, Savery-Pot Hook, Dolores, Fruit Growers Extension, Animas-La Plata, Yellow Jacket, Sublette and the Juniper project.

Limited the San Juan-Chama project to a single offstream dam and reservoir on a tributary of the Chama River, to be operated by the Bureau of Reclamation and not to include power facilities.

Declared it was not the intent of Congress to limit development of the Upper Colorado River Basin to projects specified in the bill.

Denied, for 10 years after the legislation was enacted, irrigation water from new projects for crops declared in surplus.

Subjected the division of the water from the projects built under the Act to the Colorado River Compact, Upper Colorado River Basin Compact and to the United Mexican States Treaty.

Permitted states of the Colorado River Basin to sue the government if the agreements were violated.

FUNDS AUTHORIZED

Authorized appropriations of $760 million for the project: recreation and wildlife facilities, $7.4 million; hydroelectric power, $422.7 million; municipal water works, $41 million; irrigation, $287.7 million.

Provided that money for power, irrigation and municipal water projects be repaid within 50 years after completion of each project, with interest on all but irrigation projects. (Appropriations for recreation ($7.4 million) and flood control ($8.2 million) would not be repaid. Flood projects would be in conjunction with water storage and power facilities.)

Declared that after the federal grants were repaid, profits from the project would be apportioned on this basis: Colorado, 46 percent; Utah, 21.5 percent; Wyoming, 15.5 percent; New Mexico, 17 percent.

Required that profits be used for improvement or maintenance of the project.

Set up a separate fund in the Treasury for the program.

Background

REFERENCES -- For background on the issue, see "Colorado River Plan," 1955 Almanac, p. 442; "Colorado River Storage Project," 1954 Almanac, p. 508.

The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee held hearings on S 500, introduced by Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.), from Feb. 28 through March 5, 1955.

The Subcommittee favorably reported S 500 to the full Committee, which, on March 30, 1955, reported out the bill (S Rept 128) by an 11-1 vote after voting, 2-10, against eliminating the Echo Park Dam.

The Senate April 20 passed S 500 by a 58-23 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, 1955 Almanac; p. 122)

SENATE BILL

As sent to the House, S 500 differed from the final version in these respects:

Included Echo Park and Juniper as storage projects (Juniper would have had to be restudied for feasibility), Gooseberry as a participating unit, and Woody Creek as a participating project if a study found it feasible for development.

Did not include Animas - La Plata, San Miguel and Yellow Jacket as projects to be studied by the Secretary of Interior for feasibility.

Authorized "such sums as may be required" instead of limiting the initial authorization to $760 million.

Did not spell out how project revenues were to be apportioned among the four states.

Did not prohibit irrigation for price-supported crops declared in surplus.

1955 HOUSE ACTION

In March, 1955, the House Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee held hearings on several bills to authorize the project. The Committee July 8 reported HR 3383 (H Rept 1087), which would authorize $760 million for the project and eliminate the controversial Echo Park Dam. The House did not act on the bill before the 1955 adjournment of Congress.

EISENHOWER'S STAND

President Eisenhower in 1955 asked for approval of the project, saying it was "of such complexity and size" that it "requires federal development."

In his State of the Union Message Jan. 5, 1956, the President said: "The development of our water resources cannot be accomplished overnight. The need is such that we must make faster progress and without delay. Therefore I strongly recommend that action be taken at this session on such wholly federal projects as the Colorado River Storage Project...."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

ACTION -- Feb. 14, 1956, issued a supplementary report on HR 3383 (H Rept 1087, Part 2). The Committee amended its earlier version (1955 Almanac, p. 445) to satisfy demands of conservationists and other critics. The changes made in HR 3383:

Directed the Secretary of Interior to protect the Rainbow Bridge National Monument in constructing the Glen Canyon unit.

Substituted the San Miguel project for the Woody Creek unit on the list of those to receive priority in future developments. The action was sought by people in both areas, according to the Committee.

Added the Yellow Jacket project to those listed for early attention on grounds it was "very much needed."

Required the Secretary of Interior to give priority to developing the Juniper unit if the Curecanti development appeared infeasible after detailed study.

Incorporated four changes agreed upon by the Upper Colorado River Basin states regarding distribution of power revenues. The percentage of power money for the states was spelled out.

MINORITY VIEWS

In a minority report appended to the Committee's supplementary report, Republicans John P. Saylor (Pa.), Craig Hosmer (Calif.), James B. Utt (Calif.), John R. Pillion (N.Y.), and Democrats George A. Shuford (N.C.) and James A. Haley (Fla.) said:

"The 'new' HR 3383 contains all of the vices of the original, and more, such as the direct apportionment of project revenues (among Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming).

"The $1.25 billion project approved by the Senate and ostensibly smaller House bill are one and the same thing. The ultimate direct and hidden costs of the project total at least $5 billion.

"None of the irrigation reclamation projects are financially sound (since)...only about 12 percent of the irrigation investment" would be repaid.

"The bill is wholly incompatible with the recommendations of the Presidential Advisory Committee on Water Resources Policy of Dec. 22, 1955.

"The project would seriously impair water rights in the lower basin of the Colorado River."

Floor Action

The House March 1 passed on a 256-136 roll-call vote, with amendments, the revised version of HR 3383. After passage, the text of HR 3383 was substituted for S 500, which was passed by voice vote.

The rule (H Res 311) covering debate on HR 3383 was adopted Feb. 28 on a 354-26 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 188)

PROVISIONS -- See provisions of final version, above.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

William H. Avery (R Kan.) -- Deny for 10 years after the legislation was enacted irrigation water for basic, price-supported crops declared surplus; March 1. Voice vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

James Roosevelt (D Calif.) -- Prohibit federal construction of a dam exclusively for power; March 1. Voice.

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- Authorize $421 million for the Glen Canyon project; the money would not have to be repaid to the U.S.; March 1. Voice.

WATER CONTROL STRESSED

DEBATE -- Feb. 28 -- John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- "The completion of this project will, through its controlled features, preserve millions of acre-feet of water now permitted to escape in eroding fury during wet years. It will assure the lower basin states of a constant and dependable source of water for the indefinite future."

William A. Dawson (R Utah) -- "To us in the arid states where we have less than 12 inches of rainfall a year, I want to assure you that this is a matter of life and death.... Ninety-nine percent of this money will be paid back, the major portion of it with interest."

Craig Hosmer (R Calif.) -- "This tremendous and complicated piece of legislation should not be passed while there is pending in the Supreme Court a suit between states of the (Upper Colorado River Basin) compact .... I have consistently termed this piece of legislation the solid gold reclamation project.... Would it not be just as sensible to grow bananas on Pike's Peak?"

Feb. 29 -- Saylor -- Opposed the bill and said "all of the testimony that has been offered by the Bureau of Reclamation is in direct contradiction of this project's feasibility."

Gordon L. McDonough (R Calif.) -- "The Upper Colorado River project would bring 580,000 acres of new land into production while...Congress is being asked (in the soil bank program) to...remove 40 million acres from production.... With cheap nuclear power just around the corner, these gigantic hydroelectric dams would be obsolete by the time they were built.... The project would cost the nation's taxpayers $5,000 an acre to put water on land to grow more surplus crops.... Hidden costs of the project total at least $4 billion."

March 1 -- Chet Holifield (D Calif.) -- "You are turning over millions and millions of kilowatts to private companies...and you are denying the people the right to use those facilities and damsites for all future time to generate cheap power."

Henry Aldous Dixon (R Utah) -- "These 132,360 (reclaimed) acres will not come into full production until about 1975 and by that time demands for foods will far exceed the supply."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Feb. 29 -- President Eisenhower said: "...I believe water is rapidly becoming our most valuable natural resource, and here is an opportunity, at last, to treat this whole great mighty Colorado River as a single entity, to treat it on a basin basis, instead of merely local and individual. We should get busy and get on to it.... I hope that we can have positive action on that as rapidly as possible."

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee March 27 reported (H Rept 1950) a compromise version of S 500. It incorporated the House-passed version almost completely but included one Senate provision which required that power projects' costs be repaid in 50 years. The House measure set a 100-year deadline.

HOUSE ACTION

The House March 28 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Clair Engle (D Calif.) -- "If (the states) run out of money they have to come back (to Congress) for additional money."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate March 28 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- "The stamp of approval the Congress registers through adopting the conference report will serve as a rebuke to detractors of the reclamation program as an instrument for the conservation of the water resources of the West for irrigation, hydroelectric power production, municipal, industrial and domestic water supply."

EISENHOWER SIGNS

President Eisenhower signed S 500 into PL 485 April 11, 1956, with a statement expressing his satisfaction with the project.

Group Stands

Though southern California groups held firmly to their opposition to the Upper Colorado project, the deletion of Echo Park Dam from the 1956 bill won support for the measure from leading conservation groups.

The Council of Conservationists Jan. 23 withdrew its opposition to the project in identical letters to Chairman Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) of the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs' Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee and Wayne Aspinall (D Colo.), chairman of the similar House subcommittee.

The Council said it had been assured by "Congressmen from the Upper Colorado basin states and prospective Senate conferees" that Echo Park Dam would not be considered by Congress in 1956. The Council also said it had Anderson's support for "protective measures" to preclude impairment of the Rainbow Bridge National Monument and a declaration of intent that "no dam or reservoir" would be constructed "within any national park or monument."

The letters were signed by: Horace M. Albright, representing the Trustees for Conservation; Ira N. Gabrielson of the Citizens Committee on Natural Resources; and Howard Zahniser, Washington representative of the Council of Conservationists.

In July, 1955, the same persons wrote all Members of Congress they opposed Echo Park Dam because it endangered national park beauty spots. The letter urged Congress to "kill" the Colorado River project and "take time to consider all the conflicting evidence which has been introduced into this controversy."

CALIFORNIA LOBBY

Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) Jan. 30 said the "state-supported million-dollar southern California water lobby" was using "big lie propaganda" techniques to oppose the Upper Colorado project. Watkins said the "lobby" distributed a tax map purported to be the work of the Tax Foundation. The map, said Watkins, showed that upper river basin states would pay virtually nothing toward construction costs of the project and other states would pay the bill through increased taxes. Actually, Watkins said, upper basin states would repay 99 percent of the construction costs. He said the Tax Foundation was "mailing out letters denying any connection with that propaganda effort."

AID TO SCHOOLS

HR 7535 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 1504) July 28, 1955.
• Rejected by the House on a 194-224 roll-call vote July 5, 1956. (See p. 214)

A bill to authorize $1.6 billion in federal grant aid for local school construction over a four-year period was rejected by the House July 5, 1956, by a 194-224 roll call, after a battle over a civil rights rider. The bill (HR 7535) was reported in 1955 by the House Education and Labor Committee but was not cleared for floor action by the House Rules Committee until June 20, 1956.

Attached to the measure on a 225-192 roll call in the House was an amendment by Adam C. Powell Jr. (D N.Y.) that in effect barred aid to states operating racially segregated schools. Some opponents argued that, whatever the merits of the amendment, its adoption would kill the school aid bill by inciting a Senate filibuster. (For voting, see chart, p. 214)

Party breakdowns on the Powell amendment roll call found 148 Republicans and 77 Democrats in favor, and 146 Democrats and 46 Republicans opposed. On the final vote 75 Republicans and 119 Democrats voted for the bill, 119 Republicans and 105 Democrats against it.

CQ's analysis of the votes on the Powell amendment and the final bill showed that 77 Democrats and 52 Republicans voted for the amendment and for the bill; 42 Democrats and 23 Republicans against the amendment and for the bill. For the amendment and against the bill were no Democrats and 96 Republicans; against the amendment and against the bill were 104 Democrats and 22 Republicans.

President Eisenhower in his State of the Union Message Jan. 5 urged Congress to "move promptly to enact an effective program of federal assistance to help erase the existing deficit of school classrooms." In a special message Jan. 12 the President spelled out his school aid program, requesting federal grants of $1.25 billion over a five-year period, and other assistance. The Administration plan was contained in a Senate bill (S 2905) which never emerged from the Labor and Public Welfare Committee. The House acted on a bill introduced by Augustine B. Kelley (D Pa.). The Kelley bill differed from the Administration measure not only in providing more aid over a shorter period, but also in the method of apportioning it among the states.

PROVISIONS -- HR 7535, as finally rejected by the House, would have:

Authorized $1.6 billion, or $400 million for four fiscal years, for grants to state educational agencies for school construction on a dollar-matching basis, subject to approval of a state plan taking into account school needs.

Allocated the grants among the states on the basis of school-age population (7-15 years of age).

Authorized a $750 million federal revolving fund, with an initial authorization of $300 million, to buy 30-year bonds over a four-year period for school construction when local groups could not obtain reasonable financing from other sources.

Authorized federal funds to put up half the amount of reserves equal to one year's principal and interest for issue of bonds for local school construction; limited such bonds to $6 billion and federal obligations under this title to $150 million.

Required that labor on federal-assisted projects be paid the prevailing wage in the area as determined by the Secretary of Labor.

Provided expressly that no federal control should be exercised over school personnel, curriculum or instruction.

Provided that no federal school construction funds should go to states that did not comply with Supreme Court decisions.

Background

REFERENCE -- "School Aid" (1955 Almanac, p. 265)

HR 7535 was reported (H Rept 1504) July 28, 1955, by the House Education and Labor Committee. An attempt in the Committee to attach to the bill an amendment barring aid to states operating racially segregated schools was rejected by a 10-17 vote. (1955 Almanac, p. 270)

President Eisenhower in 1955 had presented to Congress a three-year, $1.1 billion program of federal assistance to states for school construction. Most of the aid would be in loans, $200 million in grants. He proposed a modified but similar program in 1956.

In addition to federal grants of $1.25 billion over a five-year period, he proposed a formula that would reduce grant aid to "those few states which are noticeably lagging, behind their ability, to support their public schools." Under the replaced 1955 formula, grants would have been based on "proved need and proved lack of local income."

The President said he was "confident the federal government with this program can help construct schools without in any way weakening the American tradition that control of education must be kept close to local communities." He said the first principle to be followed in making grants was that they "must not reduce the incentive for state and local efforts -- but rather should stimulate such efforts." (For text of message, see p. 59)

President Eisenhower Jan. 25 voiced opposition to tacking an anti-segregation amendment on the school aid bill. He said he believed the bill should have nothing in it that might interfere with getting needed new classrooms immediately. The Supreme Court decision against segregation, Mr. Eisenhower said, specifically provided for gradual integration. The President had taken a similar stand July 6, 1955.

CONSTRUCTION NEED

In a release issued with the President's message, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said there was an ebb in school construction and maintenance from 1930 to 1950 caused by the depression and World War II. Accumulating deficiencies, HEW said, were intensified by increases in public school enrollment from about 25 million pupils in the school year 1949-50 to about 30.5 million pupils in the fall of 1955. It said the enrollment increase was expected to continue to about 37.3 million pupils in 1960.

States and local communities had increased their school construction activities to meet these needs, HEW said. In 1949-50, they built 36,000 new classrooms at a cost of $1 billion. In 1955, "they estimate they are building 67,000 classrooms at a cost of almost $2.5 billion."

HEW said "a reasonable goal" for classroom construction over the next five years would be about 470,000 rooms: 210,000 to cover future enrollment increases,

80,000 to relieve the existing shortage of classroom space and 180,000 to replace "obsolete, unsafe and otherwise unsuitable facilities."

ADMINISTRATION BILL SUBMITTED

Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) and 14 co-sponsors Jan. 12 introduced a bill (S 2905) embodying the recommendations contained in President Eisenhower's 1956 school message. A comparison of major features of the Administration program as contained in S 2905 and the Kelley bill (HR 7535) on which the House acted follows:

FEDERAL GRANTS

Kelley Bill -- Authorize $400 million annually for four years. Allotments based on the school-age population of each state and its ratio to total U.S. population. Total federal payments to a state could not exceed one-half the cost of constructing all the projects in the state assisted under the program. Remainder of funds to come from state or local sources.

Administration Bill -- Authorize $250 million annually for five years. Allotments would be based on the ratio of state income per school-age child to that of the nation as a whole. A state's allotment would be reduced if its "effort index" -- ratio of school expenditures per public school pupil to income per school-age child -- fell below the national effort index. However, the state effort index would be considered equal to the national effort index if the state's dollar expenditures per student were not less than the national average. The formula for federal-state fund matching would, like the allotment formula, be based on the ratio of state to national income per school-age child. The maximum federal share for any state would be 66 2/3 percent, the minimum 33 1/3 percent. In the first year of the program, the matching requirement could be met by state or local funds. Subsequently, state matching would be required.

PURCHASE OF OBLIGATIONS

Kelley Bill -- Authorize $300 million to provide initial capital to permit,over a four-year period, federal purchase of local school construction bonds where the local groups were unable to obtain reasonable financing from other sources. The total amount of bonds purchased could not exceed $750 million, would have to be paid off in 30 years. No more than 15 percent of the annual appropriation would be available for purchase of the obligations of local educational agencies in any one state. The bill would create a revolving fund to be used in purchasing bonds.

Administration Bill -- Authorize $750 million for school bond purchase over a five-year period. No revolving fund would be established. Other bonding provisions similar to Kelley bill.

CREDIT ASSISTANCE

Kelley Bill -- Authorize, over a four-year period, up to $6 billion to back the credit of local school districts for a type of installment financing of school buildings in which the federal government would insure construction obligations. A reserve fund would be established to which states and federal government would contribute an amount equal to one-half the annual debt service on obligations supported by the fund.

Administration Bill -- Provisions similar to Kelley bill. Would help assure payment of obligations on up to $6 billion worth of bonds over a five-year period.

ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

Kelley Bill -- No provision.

Administration Bill --Appropriation of $20 million over a five-year period to states to assist in meeting administrative expenses in developing state programs.

ALLOTMENT ESTIMATES

The U.S. Office of Education had estimated allotments for each state under the Kelley and Administration bills, and the amount each state must put up if it was to receive its full federal allotment under the Administration bill. (See adjoining table).

On the basis of tentative figures, Texas would be eligible for the highest total allotment under the Administration bill -- $16.8 million. Nevada would receive the smallest grant -- $153,000. A high of $10.86 per student would go to Alabama, Arkansas and South Carolina. Connecticut would receive the lowest per student allotment, $3.62.

Twelve states stood to be penalized under the Administration bill for failures to match the other states in construction effort: Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, Ohio, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee. Amounts of reduction in these states would total $5,927,000. This amount would be distributed among the other states in proportion to the size of their initial allotment.

The Office of Education estimated that under the Administration bill federal allotments and state matching funds would total $494,354,000 per year for school construction, if each state put up the minimum funds required to match the full federal allotment.

Under the Kelley bill, the Office of Education estimated yearly grants would amount to $11.27 per child of school age. New York would lead the field with annual grants of $32,154,000, and four other states would receive more than $20 million -- California, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Texas. Four states would be eligible for less than $1 million in grants, with Nevada -- the smallest -- receiving $462,000.

House

The House July 5 rejected by a 194-224 roll-call vote a bill (HR 7535) to give federal aid to states for school construction. An amendment by Adam C. Powell Jr. (D N.Y.) to bar aid to states operating racially segregated schools was adopted, after bitter debate, by a 225-192 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 214)

Earlier, with the House sitting as a Committee of the Whole for preliminary consideration of the bill, the amendment was adopted by teller vote, dropped, amid parliamentary confusion, by adoption of another amendment and adopted a second time by teller vote. Debate on the bill began June 28 after the House adopted, by a roll-call vote of 327-67, a rule (H Res 554) to bring the bill up for consideration.

Before the final vote, a motion to recommit the bill and insert the Administration's school aid proposals was defeated on a 158-262 roll call.

Also defeated, on a 168-250 roll call, was an amendment by Ralph W. Gwinn (R N.Y.) which would have scuttled HR 7535's plan to make matching federal grants for school construction, subject to approval of state plans, and substituted a provision to return to the states for educational purposes 1 percent of their federal income tax payments. The Gwinn amendment was adopted earlier by a teller vote of 122-120, knocking out by substitution the Powell amendment.

The House rejected amendments to substitute features of the Administration plan for school aid for provisions of HR 7535. A compromise amendment by Peter Frelinghuysen Jr. (R N.J.) July 3 to authorize a total of $1.5 billion spread over five years instead of $1.6 billion over four years was first adopted, then knocked out July 5 by the Gwinn amendment. An amendment by Samuel K. McConnell Jr. (R Pa.) July 3 to substitute an apportionment formula based on need and penalizing states where educational efforts were lagging was rejected, 97-109. A second McConnell amendment, to change the matching formula to require state as well as federal grants to local groups, was rejected July 5.

In the course of debate, the floor manager for the bill, Graham A. Barden (D N.C.), withdrew from that role and denounced the bill.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Cleveland M. Bailey (D W.Va.) -- Limit government obligation under Title III, federal credit assistance in local bond issues, to $150 million; July 5. Voice.

Adam C. Powell Jr. (D N.Y.) -- Bar federal aid to states which fail to comply with decisions of the Supreme Court; July 5. Standing, 177-123; roll call, 225-192.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Peter Frelinghuysen Jr. (R N.J.) -- Authorize up to $300 million in federal grants annually for five years; July 3. Adopted by voice vote. Rejected July 5 by adoption of Gwinn amendment (below).

Graham A. Barden (D N.C.) -- Strike requirement for submission of state plans to the U.S. Commissioner of Education, make grants payable to state educational agencies on their certification that the grant is not more than half the cost of planned construction, and empower U.S. Attorneys to bring suit in federal courts to enjoin states from improper use of aid funds; July 3. Standing, 89-124.

Samuel K. McConnell Jr. (R Pa.) -- Change apportionment formula to one that would take into account state income per child of school age, the school-age population and the efforts made for school purposes by the states; July 3. Standing, 97-109; teller, 110-140.

Antoni N. Sadlak (R Conn.) -- Authorize as federal school aid the surplus in U.S. Treasury for fiscal 1956, or $1.6 billion, whichever was less; and allocate funds to each state on the basis of the number of its Presidential electors; July 3. Voice.

Powell -- Bar federal aid funds to states operating racially segregated schools; grant aid to counties or other local authorities that operate integrated schools in such states; and pay full amount of aid if state within three years complies with Supreme Court decision on desegregation; July 3. Adopted, teller vote, 164-116. Rejected July 5 by adoption of Gwinn amendment (below).

McConnell -- Change HR 7535's matching formula to require, after the first year, state as well as federal grants to local school construction, and limit federal share to not less than one-third and not more than two-thirds of total state-federal contribution; July 5. Standing, 66-126.

Herbert Zelenko (D N.Y.) -- Permit review by U.S. Court of Appeals, on application of state or any aggrieved person, of ruling by Commissioner of Education on state construction plans; July 5. Voice.

Zelenko -- Provide for review of same by U.S. district court; July 5. Standing, 12-59.

Ralph W. Gwinn (R N.Y.) -- Substitute for grant plan a provision to turn back to each state for school construction purposes 1 percent of its federal income tax payments; July 5. Adopted, teller, 122-120. Rejected on roll call, 168-250.

Stewart L. Udall (D Ariz.) -- Provide additional grants necessary to construct facilities to carry out racial integration policy, and bar aid to local agencies failing to carry out such a policy; July 5. Standing 45-120.

CLASSROOMS NEEDED

DEBATE -- June 28 -- Ray J. Madden (D Ind.) -- "President Eisenhower, as far back as 1952, (said) the country needed 340,000 additional classrooms. Almost four years have passed, and today is the first time the Congress has had an opportunity to consider this important problem.... A great deal of false propaganda" about HR 7535 "endeavors to frighten the public into thinking that aid for school construction means federal control.... No provision of this bill takes one iota of control of the operations of city, township and county schools."

Harris Ellsworth (R Ore.) -- "The bill should be amended to conform to the President's proposal" that grants be made on the basis of the states' needs, instead of on the school-age population.

William M. Colmer (D Miss.) -- "I know there is no enthusiasm today among the general membership (of the House) for this legislation.... There is not a state in this Union...a county or parish...and I doubt if there is a municipality...whose financial situation is not better than that of the federal government." Whether an amendment barring federal funds to states practicing segregation is adopted "is not material" -- the objective "no doubt will be reached in this or some other Administration through administrative action" or through the federal courts. "The states maintaining segregation in their public schools are going to be taxed to build schools in other states without receiving any of their tax money back" for their own schools.

Samuel K. McConnell Jr. (R Pa.) -- "I favor a bill for federal aid of a temporary nature to eliminate more rapidly the present shortages of school facilities in various areas of the United States.... A reasonable objective for classroom construction for the next five years would be approximately 470,000." HR 7535 "seeks to provide adequate school facilities, and in such a way that danger of federal control in the operation of our schools is avoided. Rather, it seeks to stimulate state and local action."

Graham A. Barden (D N.C.) -- The bill should be amended to take away much of the authority of the U.S. Commissioner of Education, lest he "foul up the situation." Grants should be made to the states upon their certification that their requests do not exceed half the cost of constructing necessary school facilities. For states that have segregated schools, "the Commissioner of Education could, within the law, withhold funds under the bill as it is now written."

Augustine B. Kelley (D Pa.) -- The bill "forces nothing upon our state and local governments, it requires no change in the many different methods of taxing and financing school buildings now employed by state and local governments; it offers concrete help, hope and stimulation. I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of our citizens want this legislation...."

"COSTLY, CORRUPT SCHEME"

June 29 -- Ralph W. Gwinn (R N.Y.) -- Under his amendment "the southern states will be able to keep (1 percent of their tax) money at home and be better off than they will under this complicated, costly, even corrupt scheme to buy votes with the tax money taken from some of the states for the special benefit of others."

Henderson Lanham (D Ga.) -- "When an effort is made to bribe my state and the South with school construction money to accept the mixing of the races in our schools, I cannot vote for (it)...."

Lee Metcalf (D Mont.) -- "If the school aid bill is defeated in this Congress, the losers will be the boys and girls all over America."

Bruce Alger (R Texas) -- "Federal aid means federal control...embracing the principles of socialism."

Peter Frelinghuysen Jr. (R N.J.) -- "It is unquestionably in the national interest to relieve a nationwide shortage of classrooms.... The field of construction... would be a proper...role for the federal government. In this bill there is no possibility of controlling the curriculum, improving the quality of teaching or providing funds for the operation of schools or teachers' salaries."

Adam C. Powell Jr. (D N.Y.) -- "I have exhausted every possible avenue trying to find someone...who would speak the word so that I would be sure that my amendments were not vitally necessary.... During the past two years since the Supreme Court decision, public schools have been built with federal funds in the impacted areas and they have been...built on a Jim Crow, segregated basis.... The Supreme Court has never had the power to compel any state to obey any of its decisions."

July 3 -- Martin Dies (D Texas) -- Because "local communities and the states have failed to consolidate school districts" or raise their debt and tax limitations, "they come to the Congress (for federal aid).... We are in far worse financial condition than any state in this union."

John E. Henderson (R Ohio) -- "Federal aid to education...is a distasteful subject.... Education is a matter of local concern and local control."

EISENHOWER APPEALS

After defeat of the school aid bill in the House, White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty July 6 said President Eisenhower would continue to press Congress to pass school aid legislation before adjourning. When asked whether the President would want the bill "with or without the Powell amendment," Hagerty replied that the President had expressed himself many times and "thinks they should be separate."

July 17, after a White House legislative conference of the President and his Congressional leaders, Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) said the President still hoped for action on school aid, but "it is a long shot at this date." No further action was taken before Congress adjourned.

At his Aug. 8 press conference Mr. Eisenhower was asked to comment by a reporter who said "the Democrats accuse the Administration of having sabotaged its own bill." The President said the Administration bill had two "primary features:" allocation of funds on the basis of need; and a requirement that federal aid be in addition to, and not a replacement for, state aid to school construction. Three-quarters of the Republicans supported those features on the recommittal motion, he said. "When those features were taken out (by failure of the recommittal motion), then is when the Republicans did vote against the bill. But so did a lot of Democrats. They not only killed my bill but they helped to kill their own," the President concluded.

Group Stands

Potent forces ranged themselves for and against two separate principles involved in the legislative struggle on HR 7535: the question of granting federal aid to local school construction, and that of adding an anti-segregation clause to the legislation.

Leading protagonist in the fight for federal aid legislation was the National Education Assn., with over 600,000 members, including about half the nation's school teachers. The Association said June 11 that "unless Congress acts this year on a school construction bill it will be 1960 or later before schools built with federal funds open their doors."

SUPPORTERS OF FEDERAL AID

Along with NEA, support for federal aid came from the big labor unions -- the newly federated American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations -- and from such civic and professional groups as the Council of Chief State School Officers, American Assn. of School Superintendents, American Parents Committee, American Vocational Assn., Jewish War Veterans of the U.S., Friends Committee on National Legislation, National Farmers Union, American Assn. of University Women and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

A 28-member majority of the 34-member Committee for the White House Conference on Education April 6 said that "federal aid for school construction should be made available on a limited basis to all states and territories and the District of Columbia to help overcome the present school building emergency...under the philosophy of encouraging greater use of state and local funds."

A conference of Catholic bishops meeting Nov. 20, 1955, said private and parochial schools should share in any federal aid given public schools.

OPPONENTS

Opposed to federal school aid were the Daughters of the American Revolution, who adopted a resolution stating opposition at their convention in April, 1956. Among individual opponents was the American Bar Assn. president, E. Smythe Gambrell, who said Jan. 29 dependency on federal aid in the field of education "would be nothing short of a national calamity." Illinois Gov. William G. Stratton (R) said April 14 the amount of federal aid offered his state under the Administration aid program was "almost an insult" and "a drop in the bucket."

STANDS ON POWELL AMENDMENT

Strongly opposed to any civil rights rider on the school aid bill or any other measure were many southern groups, whose views were expressed by governors of five southern states meeting Jan. 24 in Richmond, Va. Representing Virginia, Georgia, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, they decided to urge their state legislatures to take steps, including seeking a Constitutional amendment forbidding integration (the so-called doctrine of interposition), to prevent integration of schools.

Strongly in favor of an anti-segregation rider on school aid legislation was the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. Clarence Mitchell, director of NAACP's Washington office, said Jan. 20 the organization was "determined" to have an amendment outlawing segregation before it would support any school aid bill.

Opposed was the National Education Assn., chief advocate of federal school aid. NEA's Board of Directors Feb. 18 adopted a resolution condemning Powell's proposal which it said "would serve no useful purpose...would contradict the intent of the Supreme Court in its decrees which provide for gradual compliance...(and)...would not hasten the integration of a single school system."

Mitchell said that since the 1955 dispute over such an amendment, officials of both NEA and NAACP had met to work out a compromise, but no agreement had been reached.

Major labor organizations first supported an anti-segregation amendment, then officially opposed it. President Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers said Jan. 26 that unless the Administration would pledge to withhold federal funds from segregated districts, UAW would back an anti-segregation amendment.

AFL-CIO President George Meany Feb. 14 said labor's executive council had decided not to support the proposed Powell amendment to prohibit federal school aid funds to segregated schools. Meany said the amendment was "unnecessary in view of the Supreme Court decision barring expenditures for segregated schools."

On March 12, 101 southern Congressmen presented a manifesto denouncing the Court's decision. (See p. 416)

REPRESENTATIVES ASK PLEDGE

Eight Democratic Representatives Feb. 10 asked President Eisenhower to declare he would not allocate federal funds to any public school system defying the decision outlawing segregation. Such a declaration, they wrote, would make unnecessary Powell's proposal. The letter was signed by Thomas L. Ashley (Ohio), Charles A. Boyle (Ill.), Frank M. Clark (Pa.), James M. Quigley (Pa.), Edith Green (Ore.), Don Hayworth (Mich.), Henry S. Reuss (Wis.) and George M. Rhodes (Pa.).

Bryce N. Harlow, administrative assistant to the President, March 1 replied that such a pledge would be "inconsistent both in act and in spirit with the decision of the Supreme Court." In reply to a second letter from the Representatives pressing for a pledge, Gerald D. Morgan, special counsel to the President, wrote March 15 that their request involved an "assumption that the judicial branch of the government is incapable of implementing the Supreme Court decision." He said the President believed implementation of the Court's decision and the building of schools could go forward at the same time, and that he would not assume that it was essential to integration to reserve or withhold funds.

SOUTHERN CONGRESSMEN PRESENT SEGREGATION MANIFESTO

One hundred and one southern Congressmen from 11 states -- 19 Senators and 82 Representatives -- March 12 presented a "Declaration of Constitutional Principles" to Congress criticizing the Supreme Court for its 1954 decision calling for the desegregation of schools. The manifesto had no legal standing in Congress and required no Congressional action.

The Southerners said they regarded Supreme Court decisions calling for school integration "a clear abuse of judicial power." They said the decisions undertook to "legislate in derogation of the authority of Congress, and to encroach upon the reserved rights of the states and the people."

The Supreme Court was charged with exercising "naked judicial power" and substituting "personal political and social ideas for the established law of the land."

100 PERCENT PARTICIPATION

Seven state delegations had 100 percent participation in the manifesto -- Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Virginia. Originally the manifesto contained 97 names, but four Representatives signed it after it was submitted -- Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.), William Cramer (R Fla.), Martin Dies (D Texas) and Ross Bass (D Tenn.).

Neither Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) nor House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) was asked to sign. Southern leaders explained they did not want the manifesto to appear to reflect national Democratic policy or the leadership of either chamber.

Other southern legislators who did not sign the document (all are Democrats unless otherwise noted):

Florida -- Rep. Dante Fascell.

North Carolina -- Reps. Thurmond Chatham, Charles B. Deane, Harold D. Cooley. (Chatham and Deane lost their bids for renomination in the state Democratic primary May 26. Their failure to sign the manifesto was a major issue used against them.)

Tennessee -- Sens. Albert Gore, Estes Kefauver; Reps. J. Percy Priest, B. Carroll Reece (R), Howard H. Baker (R).

Texas -- Reps. Bruce Alger (R), Jack B. Brooks, Brady Gentry, Olin E. Teague, Albert Thomas, Clark W. Thompson, Homer Thornberry, W. R. Poage, James C. Wright Jr., Frank Ikard, John J. Bell, Joe M. Kilgore, J. T. Rutherford, Omar Burleson, George M. Mahon and Paul J. Kilday.

There were no signers from Kentucky or Oklahoma.

GEORGE, SMITH PRESENT DOCUMENT

The manifesto was submitted in the Senate by Walter F. George (D Ga.), in the House by Howard W. Smith (D Va.). While there was no comment following House presentation, Wayne Morse (D Ore.) told the Senate: "A historic debate is due...because Congress will have to decide whether or not we are going to follow the Supreme Court decision, recognizing the supremacy of the Court in protecting the American people in their constitutional rights."

Sen. Strom Thurmond (D S.C.), one of the prime movers in drawing up the manifesto, said: "It would be submission to cowardice if we failed to use every lawful means to protect the rights of the people. We are free morally and legally to oppose the (Supreme Court) decision. We must fight it to the end." Sen. Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) said the document was "part of the plan of massive resistance we've been working on and I hope and believe it will be an effective action."

The complete text of the manifesto and signers (all Democrats unless otherwise noted):

The Complete Text

The unwarranted decision of the Supreme Court in the public school cases is now bearing the fruit always produced when men substitute naked power for established law.

The Founding Fathers gave us a Constitution of checks and balances because they realized the inescapable lesson of history that no man or group of men can be safely entrusted with unlimited power. They framed this Constitution with its provisions for change by amendment in order to secure the fundamentals of government against the dangers of temporary popular passion or the personal predilections of public office holders.

We regard the decision of the Supreme Court in the school cases as a clear abuse of judicial power. It climaxes a trend in the federal judiciary undertaking to legislate, in derogation of the authority of Congress, and to encroach upon the reserved rights of the States and the people.

The original Constitution does not mention education. Neither does the Fourteenth Amendment nor any other Amendment. The debates preceding the submission of the Fourteenth Amendment clearly show that there was no intent that it should affect the systems of education maintained by the States.

The very Congress which proposed the Amendment subsequently provided for segregated schools in the District of Columbia.

ESTABLISHED SEGREGATED SCHOOLS

When the Amendment was adopted in 1868, there were 37 States of the Union. Every one of the 26 States that had any substantial racial differences among its people either approved the operation of segregated schools already in existence or subsequently established such schools by action of the same law-making body which considered the Fourteenth Amendment.

As admitted by the Supreme Court in the public school case (Brown v. Board of Education), the doctrine of separate but equal schools "apparently originated in Roberts v. City of Boston... (1849), upholding school segregation against attack as being violative of a State constitutional guarantee of equality." This constitutional doctrine began in the North -- not in the South, and it was followed not only in Massachusetts, but in Connecticut, New York, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania and other northern States until they, exercising their rights as States through the constitutional processes of local self-government, changed their school systems.

In the case of Plessy v. Ferguson in 1896 the Supreme Court expressly declared that under the Fourteenth Amendment no person was denied any of his rights if the States provided separate but equal public facilities. This decision has been followed in many other cases. It is notable that the Supreme Court, speaking through Chief Justice Taft, a former President of the United States, unanimously declared in 1927 in Lum v. Rice that the "separate but equal" principle is"...within the discretion of the State in regulating its public schools and does not conflict with the Fourteenth Amendment."

This interpretation, restated time and again, became a part of the life of the people of many of the States and confirmed their habits, customs, traditions and way of life. It is founded on elemental humanity and common sense, for parents should not be deprived by government of the right to direct the lives and education of their own children.

'NO LEGAL BASIS'

Though there has been no constitutional amendment or Act of Congress changing this established legal principle almost a century old, the Supreme Court of the United States, with no legal basis for such action, undertook to exercise their naked judicial power and substituted their personal political and social ideas for the established law of the land.

This unwarranted exercise of power by the Court, contrary to the Constitution, is creating chaos and confusion in the States principally affected. It is destroying the amicable relations between the white and Negro races that have been created through 90 years of patient effort by the good people of both races. It has planted hatred and suspicion where there has been heretofore friendship and understanding.

Without regard to the consent of the governed, outside agitators are threatening immediate and revolutionary changes in our public school systems. If done, this is certain to destroy the system of public education in some of the States.

With the gravest concern for the explosive and dangerous condition created by this decision and inflamed by outside meddlers:

We reaffirm our reliance on the Constitution as the fundamental law of the land.

We decry the Supreme Court's encroachments on rights reserved to the States and to the people, contrary to established law and to the Constitution.

COMMEND MOTIVES

We commend the motives of those States which have declared the intention to resist forced integration by any lawful means.

We appeal to the States and people who are not directly affected by these decisions to consider the constitutional principles involved against the time when they too, on issues vital to them, may be the victims of judicial encroachment.

Even though we constitute a minority in the present Congress, we have full faith that a majority of the American people believe in the dual system of government which has enabled us to achieve our greatness and will in time demand that the reserved rights of the States and of the people be made secure against judicial usurpation.

We pledge ourselves to use all lawful means to bring about a reversal of this decision which is contrary to the Constitution and to prevent the use of force in its implementation.

In this trying period, as we all seek to right this wrong, we appeal to our people not to be provoked by the agitators and troublemakers invading our States and to scrupulously refrain from disorder and lawless acts.

MUTUAL SECURITY ACT

HR 11356 -- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committed (H Rept 2213) May 25, 1956.

- Passed by the House, by a roll-call vote of 275-122, June 11. (See p. 206)
- Reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 2273) June 19.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a roll-call vote of 54-25, June 29. (See p. 175)
- Conference report (H Rept 2643) agreed to by both houses July 9 by voice votes.

P.L. 726 -- Signed into law July 18.

Congress completed action July 9 on the Mutual Security Act of 1956 (HR 11356). The bill carried new fund authorizations for the Mutual Security Program in fiscal 1957 of $3,928,575,000 -- $743,900,000 less than the Administration had asked but $1.2 billion more than Congress appropriated for the program in 1955.

Most of the money -- $2,225,000,000 -- was for military aid, but the amount approved was $700 million less than the President asked. An additional $1,175,-200,000 was included for economic aid to help countries receiving military assistance sustain their defense efforts. Of the remainder, $193 million was for economic development aid to other countries, and $140.5 million for technical assistance programs.

Later, in HR 12130 -- PL 853, Congress appropriated $3,766,570,000 for the program in fiscal 1957. (See p. 427)

The 1956 authorization bill abolished the Asian Economic Development Fund set up in 1955 and failed to include a requested new fund for the Middle East and Africa. Other requests of the President for greater flexibility in administering the aid program fared somewhat better: his Emergency Fund created in 1955 received a second $100 million; he was allowed greater authority to transfer funds without regard to provisions of the Act; and certain funds were continued available for longer than 12 months, to permit more time for programming.

The House, which acted first on the measure, chopped $1.1 billion off the Administration's request for $4.7 billion. The Senate restored the authorization to within $361,400,000 of the amount the President had requested. When the bill went to conference, a compromise was effected about midway between the two versions.

Battles were waged in both houses over continuing aid to Yugoslavia. The result -- to be modified later in action on the foreign aid appropriations bill -- was that all outright prohibitions on such aid were defeated. Its continuance was left to the discretion of the President, who in making the decision was to take into account certain specified considerations.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, HR 11356 authorized the following new funds:

Military assistance (including direct forces support)	$2,225,000,000
Economic aid to countries receiving military aid (defense support)	1,175,200,000
Economic aid to other countries (development assistance)	193,000,000*
Technical Cooperation
Bilateral programs	140,500,000
Multilateral programs (United Nations and Organization of American States)	$ 17,000,000
President's Emergency Fund	100,000,000
Aid to joint control areas (mostly Berlin)	12,200,000
Refugee and escapee programs	9,300,000
UN Children's Fund	10,000,000
Shipping charges	3,000,000
Administration and trade control act costs	36,425,000
Foreign atomic reactor projects	5,950,000
Food and Agriculture Organization	1,000,000
TOTAL	$3,928,575,000

*In addition to new funds under this section (to be expended in the Middle East, Africa and Asia), $100 million authorized in 1955 for the President's Asian Development Fund, but not appropriated, was diverted to this title, and the Fund abolished.

In addition the bill:

Pledged to continue foreign aid as long as the danger to peace and U.S. security existed, and aid was needed, in amounts compatible with U.S. stability, strength and other obligations.

Authorized $52 million for defense support to Latin America to be used to sustain or increase military efforts or political or economic stability; authorized $15 million of that amount, of which 75 percent should be loans, to be available until expended -- preferably for regional projects promoting health, education and sanitation, and land resettlement.

Declared that aid to Yugoslavia should be suspended unless the President decided that continued aid was in the U.S. interest and that Yugoslavia was independent of Soviet control and not part of the Communist world conquest program. He decided Oct. 15 to allow economic aid.

Required that 80 percent of development assistance funds for individual countries be extended as loans, except funds to finance sales of farm surpluses; limited bilateral assistance to any one country to 25 percent of total funds; authorized carryover into fiscal 1957 of balances under this title, and made new funds available until June 30, 1960.

DISCRETIONARY FUNDS

Increased from $50 million to $150 million the amount the President might spend at his discretion without regard to provisions of the Act; authorized a second $100 million for the President's Emergency Fund established in 1955; permitted use of discretionary funds for programs to keep alive the hopes of people enslaved by Communism.

Earmarked not less than $250 million to finance the sales of farm surpluses.

Repealed the 1955 authorization of $100 million for the Asian Economic Development Fund in fiscal 1957, and diverted that amount to development assistance funds.

Expanded the investment guarantee program, extended it to 1967 and included war among the risks guaranteed against.

Increased from $2 million to $3 million the U.S. contribution to the Food and Agriculture Organization, but limited the U.S. share of its annual budget to 31.5 percent.

Authorized use of the contract authorization system in expending funds under the Act.

Instructed the Administration to make "a special effort" to use foreign currencies derived from farm surplus sales for educational exchanges, and authorized up to $5 million of such funds for translating, publishing, and distributing books and periodicals abroad.

Authorized the President to transfer up to $11 million from foreign aid funds to the State Department for its international educational exchange program.

Adopted a new pricing formula for determining the value of military equipment sent abroad.

Made up to 25 percent of funds for defense support, technical cooperation or joint control assistance available for three months beyond the end of the fiscal year.

Struck out the prohibition on the carryover of unexpended and unobligated balances in excess of $200 million.

Stated the sense of Congress that in preparing the foreign aid program the President should take fully into account the desirability of promoting the economic development of underdeveloped countries.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Survey of U.S. Aid since 1945" (this volume, p. 432)

First indication that the Administration would seek a greatly increased foreign aid authorization and appropriation over the amounts approved in 1955 came in December, 1955. Congress in 1955 had authorized $3,285,800,000, appropriated $2,703,341,750 for the Mutual Security Program. (1955 Almanac, pp. 235, 301)

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles Dec. 20, 1955, said the Administration would ask Congress in 1956 to appropriate $4.9 billion for foreign aid -- $3 billion for military, and $1.9 billion for economic aid. He said most of the increase would be used to keep up the flow of military supplies. Actual spending in fiscal 1957 would be only about $200 million more than in fiscal 1956, he said, with the difference going to replenish the foreign aid "pipeline".

President Eisenhower in his State of the Union message Jan. 5, 1956, said it was necessary to "sustain and fortify" the Mutual Security Program. He asked Congress to give him "limited authority to make longer-term commitments" on aid projects so as to give "assurance of continuity in economic assistance" programs. (For text of message, see p. 45)

Secretary of State Dulles Jan. 11 released a statement signed by the United States delegation to the United Nations calling for the U.S. to "wake up" to the economic and social contest with Russia in which defeat would be "disastrous." Dulles said he had shown the statement to President Eisenhower, and the President concurred with it.

In the statement, the delegation asked for "more emphasis on economic and educational endeavors," but warned against trying to outbid Communism by the size of U.S. aid alone.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

In a special foreign aid message March 19 President Eisenhower spelled out his requests for the fiscal 1957 Mutual Security Program. (For text of message, see p. 75) He asked for authorizations totalling $4,672,475,000 and for appropriations of $4,859,975,000 (including amounts previously authorized but not appropriated).

In addition the President requested:

Authority to make commitments of as much as $100 million a year in economic aid for periods up to 10 years.

A second $100 million for the President's Emergency Fund established in 1955, to be spent with "the maximum degree of flexibility", and "increased" authority to transfer funds from other parts of the program for such uses as the President determined "important to the security of the United States."

A second $100 million (authorized in 1955, but not appropriated) for the Asian Development Fund.

A new special $100 million fund for the Middle East and Africa similar to the Asian Fund.

Funds of $530 million to begin a program of sharing advanced weapons -- including missiles and radar warning systems -- with U.S. allies.

Funds of $5,950,000 to help other nations build atomic reactors for research purposes.

Greater flexibility in authority to spend funds when the President determined it was important to U.S. security.

BREAKDOWN OF FUNDS

Of the amounts requested to be authorized and appropriated in fiscal 1957, the President indicated the following breakdown:

	AUTHORIZATION	APPROPRIATION
Military Assistance (including direct forces support)	$2,925,000,000	$3,000,000,000
Defense Support (economic aid to countries receiving military assistance)	1,130,700,000	1,130,700,000
Development Assistance (economic aid to other countries)	170,000,000	170,000,000
Technical Cooperation	157,500,000	157,500,000
Other programs	289,275,000	401,775,000
TOTALS	$4,672,475,000	$4,859,975,000

Amounts required to be appropriated but not authorized included $75 million for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (infrastructure) authorized in 1954; $12.5 million for the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration authorized in 1954; and $100 million for the Asian Development Fund authorized in 1955.

Military aid would continue to go to North Atlantic Treaty countries, but no economic aid to NATO nations except Greece and Turkey. Economic aid would continue for Berlin, with military and economic aid for Spain and Yugoslavia.

Increased economic and military aid would go to Asia and the Middle East, where, the President said, "serious risk of aggression still exists." Military aid to those areas would total approximately $1,640,000,000 and defense support, more than $1 billion, in addition to development assistance and technical cooperation funds.

Latin America would continue to receive both military and economic aid.

House

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Affairs.

HEARINGS -- March 20 to May 10, intermittently, on a bill (HR 10082) to extend the Mutual Security Program through fiscal 1957.

TESTIMONY -- March 20 -- Under Secretary of State Herbert Hoover Jr. said: "The Mutual Security Program is a fundamental and essential aspect of the conduct of our foreign policy.... The purpose of the proposed program is to carry on at approximately the same rate of expenditure as last year and the year before. In view of the increased threat of Communist economic penetration in the free world, we cannot afford to reduce our efforts at this time."

John B. Hollister, International Cooperation Administrator, said the proposed program was "a balanced effort to meet the Communist challenge for world domination.... (There is a) special need for the capacity for flexible action on the economic front in the Middle East and Africa.... Authority (to make long-range commitments) may prove to be a very powerful and useful mutual security instrument in the difficult years...ahead.... I know and understand the Congressional reluctance to permit long-term arrangements.... (The opportunity for annual review) will not be completely lost under the proposal, for annual appropriations must be made."

March 21 -- Assistant Secretary of Defense Gordon Gray said: "The recent changes in Communist tactics and the current Soviet emphasis on economic infiltration provide no basis for relaxing collective security efforts."

March 27 -- C. Burke Elbrick, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs, said: "With relatively minor exceptions, the proposed Mutual Security Program in Europe is devoted entirely to military defense .... It is primarily designed to maintain and strengthen (NATO's) defensive power.... A recent analysis by my staff indicates that these (European) countries are now spending the equivalent of six dollars of their own money (for defense purposes) for each dollar of United States aid received."

Stuart H. Van Dyke, Regional Director of European Operations for ICA, said "there remain areas in Europe where local economic difficulties are of direct security concern to the U.S."

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee May 25 reported by a 24-4 vote a clean bill (HR 11356 -- H Rept 2213) to extend the Mutual Security Program through fiscal 1957.

HR 11356 authorized total new funds of $3,563,475,000, which was $1,109,000,000 less than the Administration requested. The Committee authorized military aid funds of $1,925,000,000 instead of the $2,925,000,000 asked by the Administration.

The President's request for special authority to enter into long-term agreements that would permit him to allocate funds over a 10-year period was denied. Instead the Committee pledged to continue aid as long as there was a danger to peace and the security of the United States and aid was needed.

The President, under terms of the bill, would be permitted to allocate up to $150 million according to his discretion, an increase of $100 million over existing law.

The Committee rejected amendments to cut off aid to countries that exercised criminal jurisdiction over U.S. servicemen stationed within their borders and to initiate a study of the aid program. The Committee said it felt the President already had authority to begin such a study. In its report the Committee said any foreign aid study should explore the technical cooperation program with a view to giving it "the special emphasis which it merits," possibly by setting it up separately from the rest of the aid program.

In other actions the Committee cut economic aid to Yugoslavia by 50 percent and stipulated that not more than $450 million of the $1.9 billion military aid funds should go to Europe, with at least $48 million for Spain. Almost all economic aid for countries not receiving military aid was to be extended as loans, not grants.

A minority report (H Rept 2213, Part 2) signed by Lawrence H. Smith (R Wis.), Marguerite Stitt Church (R Ill.) and E. Ross Adair (R Ind.) said the Mutual Security Program was not the "right answer to our need for national security and world peace."

Floor Action

The House June 11 passed, by a roll-call vote of 275-122, the Mutual Security Act of 1956 (HR 11356). (For voting, see chart p. 206) The House June 7 defeated on a teller vote of 112-192 an Administration-backed move to restore $600 million of the $1 billion reduction in military aid made by the Foreign Affairs Committee. The House June 11 rejected, by a 52-142 standing vote, a move to recommit the bill.

Only change decreed by the House in the amounts recommended by the Foreign Affairs Committee was an increase of $5 million in aid to Guatemala, approved June 7 by voice vote.

In a round of preliminary voting on amendments, the House defeated attempts to bar aid to Yugoslavia and India. The House adopted an amendment stating that aid to Yugoslavia should end unless the President decided that its continuance was in the U.S. national interest.

Attempts to reduce economic aid to Asia by $500 million and military aid by another $500 million were rejected. Also defeated was a proposal that the President revise Status of Forces agreements so as to give the U.S. exclusive criminal jurisdiction over American forces stationed abroad.

PRESIDENT INTERVENES

President Eisenhower, in an attempt to restore $600 million of the Foreign Affairs Committee cut, June 5 met with Republican and Democratic leaders of the House. Both House Speaker Sam Rayburn (Texas) and Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. (Mass.) supported the President and urged the House to restore $600 million of the Committee's cut. Martin also read the House a June 7 letter from the President in which Mr. Eisenhower said the nation's security would be "seriously impaired" if the Committee cut was not withdrawn.

Chairman James P. Richards (D S.C.) of the Foreign Affairs Committee accused the executive branch of trying to dictate to Congress. He said the bill as reported by his Committee contained "plenty of money" for the Mutual Security Program.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of new funds authorized by HR 11356, as passed by the House:

Military assistance (including direct forces support)	$1,925,000,000
Economic aid to countries receiving military aid (defense support)	1,152,700,000
Economic aid to other countries (development assistance)	143,000,000*
Technical cooperation
Bilateral programs	140,500,000
Multilateral programs (United Nations and Organization of American States)	17,000,000
President's Emergency Fund	100,000,000
Aid to joint control areas (mostly Berlin)	12,200,000
Refugee and escapee programs	9,300,000
UN Children's Fund	10,000,000
Shipping charges	15,400,000
Administration and Trade Control Act costs	36,425,000
Foreign atomic reactor projects	5,950,000
Food and Agriculture Organization	1,000,000
TOTAL	$3,568,475,000

*In addition to new funds under this section (to be expended in the Middle East, Africa and Asia) $100 million, authorized in 1955 for the President's Asian Development Fund but not appropriated, was diverted to this title.

Other provisions of the bill:

Pledged that foreign aid would be continued as long as the danger to peace and security existed and aid was needed.

Increased from $50 million to $150 million the amount the President might spend in his discretion without regard to provisions of the Act.

Stipulated that all development assistance to individual countries be in the form of loans except funds to finance sales of farm surpluses and limited to 25 percent of the total any one nation's share.

Provided not less than $250 million to finance the sales of farm surpluses.

Expanded the investment guarantee program and extended it to fiscal 1967.

Stipulated that all recipient countries be required to agree to "equitable treatment" of U.S. private investment.

Limited military aid to Europe to $450 million, of which $48 million should go to Spain.

Directed that no aid be given Yugoslavia unless the President declared it in the national interest.

Proposed that the President initiate a study of an independent, long-term technical cooperation program.

Authorized an increase from $2 to $3 million in the U.S. annual contribution to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization.

Authorized up to 25 percent of defense support, technical cooperation and joint control area funds to be available for 15 months instead of 12 months to allow more time for programming.

Authorized continued availability of unspent mutual security balances, and cancelled the $200 million limitation on carryover of unspent balances.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) -- Increase defense support assistance for Guatemala by $5 million (for a total of $15 million); June 7. Voice vote.

Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D N.J.) -- Terminate all aid to Yugoslavia unless the President finds that continuing aid is in the interest of United States security, and that Yugoslavia is independent of Soviet control; June 8. Standing, 97-86; teller, 123-95.

Edna F. Kelly (D N.Y.), as amended by Williams, above -- Terminate all aid to Yugoslavia unless the President orders it; June 8. Standing, 183-3.

Lawrence H. Smith (R Wis.) -- Declare that a study of the technical cooperation program should be made under the direction of the President, with a view to setting it up apart from the Mutual Security Program on a long-term basis; June 8. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) -- Restore the $1 billion Committee cut in military aid; raise the ceiling on military aid for Europe (except Spain) from $402 million to $589.5 millon; June 7. Voice vote.

Alvin M. Bentley (R Mich.) -- Cut military aid an additional $500 million, from $1,925,000,000 to $1,425,000,000; June 7. Standing, 69-178.

Brooks Hays (D Ark.) -- Restore $600 million of the $1 billion Committee cut in military aid; eliminate the ceiling on aid to Europe and the fixed amount for Spain; June 7. Teller, 112-192.

George H. Christopher (D Mo.) -- Cut defense support aid to Asia by $500 million (from $882 million to $382 million); June 7. Voice.

Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) -- Add to Williams amendment on aid to Yugoslavia a requirement that the President transmit to Congress his reasons for continuing aid; June 8. Standing, 82-97; teller, 92-96.

Bentley -- Eliminate development assistance for India; June 8. Standing, 28-62.

Michael A. Feighan (D Ohio) -- Prohibit use of refugee funds to aid persons without security clearances based on "reasonable standards" and refugees from Communist China with Soviet passports or Communist Chinese exit permits; June 8. Standing, 4-37.

George Meader (R Mich.) -- Adopt policy declaration that funds be spent so as to eliminate trade barriers, discourage socialism and nationalized industries and avoid support of "erroneous policies and practices of foreign governments;" June 8. Voice.

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Eliminate provision guaranteeing private investment in foreign countries against losses by reason of war, revolution or insurrection; June 8. Standing, 28-78.

Meader -- Direct Commerce Department to study impediments to private investment in foreign countries and suggest means of removing them; June 8. Voice.

Frank T. Bow (R Ohio) -- State view of Congress that Status of Forces agreements be modified to give U.S. exclusive criminal jurisdiction over its military personnel stationed abroad; June 8. Standing, 30-93.

Porter Hardy Jr. (D Va.) -- Require executive branch, before spending foreign aid funds, to transmit to the Congressional committee concerned any documents or records relating to the program, except those relating to military assistance and defense support; June 8. Standing, 37-74.

Gross -- Eliminate provision for paid health and accident insurance for foreign trainees in the technical cooperation program while away from home; June 8. Voice.

LOSING FRIENDS

DEBATE -- June 6 -- James C. Davis (D Ga.) -- "From the very beginning I have questioned the wisdom of trying to buy the friendship of other nations.... History has shown that my doubts were fully justified.... We have spent billions on various forms of foreign aid. Today we have fewer friends than we had at the start.... It is high time that we stop and reconsider...before we lose all of our friends."

Ray J. Madden (D Ind.) -- "The authorization for military assistance (approved by the Committee) is $1,925,000,000.... The Committee (felt) that if equipment already financed from prior appropriations and now scheduled for Europe is diverted to Asia, the Near East, Africa and Latin America, this amount is adequate to carry forth the military programs in these countries. According to the latest information available, Nov. 30, 1955, $6,405,643,000 of undelivered military items were in the pipeline."

James P. Richards (D S.C.) -- "The committee voted 24-4 to report this bill.... The funds authorized are absolutely essential to the security of the U.S..... Over $3 billion of the funds authorized...about 86 percent... goes to support military programs in countries that have not the resources to keep the men under arms that they now have.... By far the largest single amount (of military aid) for any country is for Korea.... We have no choice but to hold the line in Korea.... In Europe there is less feeling of danger and less enthusiasm for defense than there used to be.... There is no use going ahead with a program for Europe as though nothing had happened.... The thing to do under the circumstances is to slow down our deliveries to Europe and to divert (them)...to Asia and to Turkey.... We have made cuts in this bill which will reduce the programs which should be curtailed. We believe that the materials in the pipeline, plus the new money authorized in this bill, will permit us to meet any new situation which may arise between now and next January."

June 7 -- Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R Mass.) -- "All of us who attended the meeting at the White House night before last...were deeply impressed by the statements of the President.... Are you going to turn down the views of the President?.... Is the whole security program to be wrecked by this drastic reduction?"

James P. Richards (D S.C.) -- "Here...are the former Speaker of the House and the present Speaker...leading this fight to repudiate what a Committee, an arm of this House, has done.... Here we find the executive department... attempting to dictate to the Congress, and the position is taken by our leaders that we dare not differ with the dollar figures sent here.... Do you want to destroy constitutional government?"

AID TO YUGOSLAVIA

June 8 -- Edna F. Kelly (D N.Y.) -- "Yugoslavia has failed to live up to agreements under which it has received military assistance.... If Tito is going to accept aid from Russia we should cease giving further aid."

Richards -- "I hold no brief for Tito.... In (the Committee's) bill...he has been handed a pretty heavy jolt. The executive department was after $30 million in economic aid and it has been cut in half.... Tito...is the only living dictator of a Communist country that has ever dared to stand up to Stalin and has lived to tell the tale.... If the (Kelly) amendment is approved, Tito will have no choice but to throw in his lot with the Soviet Union."

Sam Rayburn (D Texas) -- "We have a lot of neutrals in the world.... Is it not much better to have them as neutrals than to have them as enemies?"

T. James Tumulty (D N.J.) -- "We are trying to bribe Tito in the hope that he will forget his dedicated life as a Communist, as a sworn revolutionary, and help us defeat the cause he represents...."

Alvin M. Bentley (R Mich.) -- Because the U.S. "insisted upon pouring money into India...the Indian government, in an effort to observe neutrality, has felt compelled to go the other way.... If we terminate our aid to India... the government...would be able to take a more neutral attitude."

James G. Fulton (R Pa.) -- "Even though India is now neutral in foreign policy, if we will help the people of India develop...we will have a government and country that will be a showcase of democracy in the Far East."

Lawrence H. Smith (R Wis.) -- "Underdeveloped areas...should be assisted...on a business basis and not by gifts or grants.... Preferential inducements (such as tax write-offs, extension of time limits on loss carry-overs and optional war risk insurance) would provide a profit motive for American investors."

Edward T. Miller (R Md.) -- The Bow amendment on Status of Forces agreements "would probably do more to wreck NATO and other mutual assistance programs, so vital to our own defense, than if we subtracted a lot of money from the bill.... We cannot expect free nations to discard their laws and accept the slight that we consider their administration of justice inferior and unfair."

John M. Vorys (R Ohio) -- The Hardy amendment would require "the automatic disclosure of papers not yet prepared, of state secrets not yet learned regarding events that have not yet occurred.... An executive cannot be independent if somebody else has the right to look not only at his mail but at every scrap of memoranda...."

Richards -- "There is a long line of precedents and clear-cut court decisions saying that the legislative branch has no right to demand information of this kind."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

HEARINGS -- April 13 to May 31, intermittently, on the proposed Mutual Security Program for fiscal 1957.

TESTIMONY -- April 30 -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said the proposed mutual security expenditure of $4 billion represented only 10 percent of the nation's annual investment in national security. The program, he said, was "necessary for the security of the United States.... Nothing has yet happened to make it prudent to terminate or curtail the present program."

Dulles said without the aid program to Korea, China, Indochina and other Far Eastern allies "these forward positions would have to be held by greatly increased U.S. forces, or else left exposed to a Communist takeover...." He said it would be "reckless not to help" Pakistan, Iran, Turkey and Iraq, which were "subject to Soviet threats and the proximity of Soviet power."

The U.S., Dulles said, "is far and away the most wealthy nation in the world.... (We) cannot live either happily or safely as an oasis of prosperity in a desert of misery.... New Communist tactics make it more than ever imperative that the U.S. should continue the economic phase of our Mutual Security Program...with greater flexibility and...greater assurance of continuity than ever before."

Dulles said the existing aid program operated "in a very cumbersome manner." He asked for "more discretionary funds and...the right to commit, out of future non-military appropriations,...up to $100 million a year for 10 years on long-range development projects." Dulles said "that part of the program which contributes to the security of the U.S. will have to go on so long as our security is threatened."

Dulles said President Eisenhower felt "a number of aspects" of the Mutual Security Program "could usefully be studied by men who are highly qualified but who are not available to serve the government on a full-time, long-term basis."

To have the Mutual Security Program "appreciably reduced, interfered with, or put in jeopardy would gravely endanger the security of the U.S.," said Dulles.

MILITARY CHIEFS SUPPORT AID

May 14 -- Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson said that any substantial cut in the Administration's request would constitute a "serious risk" to our defenses. A reduction of foreign aid would necessitate "a complete re-evaluation of our own international position and of our own military budget," he said. With the aid program the United States is "helping to support about 200 divisions in the armies of our allies," a force "several times the strength of our own Army," said Wilson.

Chairman Arthur W. Radford of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said: "The military assistance program...this year amounts to about $3 billion. This is substantially larger than last year's request.... The reduced requests of last year were permitted by a sizeable backlog which enabled us to maintain a steady flow of military assistance deliveries to recipient nations. Gauged by the current situation and by the increasing demands of technological advance...this year's request is not excessive .... Any substantial reduction...would have seriously adverse effects upon the continued building of military strength in the free world.... The program is austere to the degree that any major reduction would require a complete restudy of our own military program (which) is based upon the assumption that we will have capable allies."

May 22 -- After an executive session, Secretary Wilson said he had sought restoration of the House cuts in the aid program. "I don't think the people realize military assistance is an essential part of our defense. I think it would be a great mistake to reduce military assistance by any such amount as $1 billion. To cut it by one-third would be just as disastrous as to cut a third of our funds for own defenses," he said.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee June 19 reported, by a 13-2 vote, an amended bill (HR 11356 -- S Rept 2273) that carried a total in new funds of $4,271,075,000, compared with $3,568,475,000 approved by the House June 11.

As reported, HR 11356:

Restored $600 million of the House's $1 billion cut in military aid. Of the total $2.5 billion authorized for military aid, the Committee stipulated that $1.6 billion must be spent on advanced weapons for United States forces to replace those sent to allies as aid.

Restored $100 million to the President's Asian Development Fund. (The House diverted the fund to another title and reduced the total amount by $100 million).

Restored $15 million of economic aid to Yugoslavia, granting the full $30 million requested by the Administration.

Required that 75 percent (compared to 100 percent in the House bill) of development assistance funds should be loaned, not given, to individual nations (except funds to finance sales of farm surpluses.) The Committee repealed the House provision that not more than 25 percent of such funds could go to one country.

Limited to $200 million the amount of unexpended and unobligated balances that could be carried over to fiscal 1957, excepting the balances in the Asian Development and Palestine Refugee funds.

Specified that not less than 5 percent of the counterpart funds accruing from farm surplus sales be used for Fulbright educational exchanges (compared with the current .8 percent).

Stated that the President should explore with other nations establishing an International Food and Raw Materials Reserve (S Res 86) and report to Congress.

The Committee June 16 voted 9-4 to refer to the Finance Committee an amendment to impose quotas on imports of farm commodities and derivatives in surplus in the U.S. from countries receiving aid. (The amendment was aimed principally at Japanese textiles.)

Floor Action

The Senate June 29, by a roll-call vote of 54-25, passed the Mutual Security Act of 1956 (HR 11356). As sent to conference, the bill authorized $4,311,075,000 in new funds for fiscal 1957, which was $742,600,000 more than the House voted June 11 and $361,400,000 less than the President requested.

In earlier voting, the Senate June 28 rejected, by a roll-call vote of 38-50, an amendment to cut off aid to Yugoslavia, but added, by a 52-36 roll call, two more strings to the President's discretionary authority to continue aid. The Senate also turned down, by a roll-call vote of 27-58, an amendment by Russell B. Long (D La.) to limit the total aid authorization to the amount appropriated and carried over in fiscal 1956 -- $2,765,875,000. (For voting, see chart p. 173)

The Senate rejected June 29, by a roll-call vote of 41-45, a proposal of Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) on behalf of the Administration that a 12-member commission -- half public officials, half private persons -- conduct a study of foreign aid. Opponents said the Foreign Relations Committee intended to conduct its own study, and Congress should not surrender its investigating power. (See "Foreign Aid Studies," this volume)

Also rejected June 29 by a 23-56 roll call was an amendment to halve aid to India. Rejected also were amendments to cut the total authorization $1 billion, to shut off aid to countries that did not abide by U.S. embargo rules and to require the executive branch to furnish Congressional committees with any information requested on the aid program.

Among amendments accepted were two aimed at supporting programs to keep alive the hopes of liberation of people enslaved by Communism. Aid to Latin America was increased by creation of a Latin American Economic Development Fund similar to the Asian Fund created in 1955.

Amendments to place import quotas on cotton and other farm surpluses were rejected June 28.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to conference, HR 11356 authorized:

Military assistance (including direct forces support)	$2,525,000,000
Economic aid to countries receiving military aid (defense support)	1,167,700,000
Economic aid to other countries (development assistance)	143,000,000
Special authorization for Middle East, Africa	100,000,000
Technical Cooperation
Bilateral programs	140,500,000
Multilateral programs (United Nations and Organization of American States)	17,000,000
President's Emergency Fund	100,000,000
Authorization for special activities for enslaved peoples	5,000,000
Aid to joint control areas (mostly Berlin)	12,200,000
Refugee and escapee programs	9,300,000
UN Children's Fund	10,000,000
Shipping charges	3,000,000
Administration and trade control act costs	36,425,000
Foreign atomic reactor projects	5,950,000
Food and Agriculture Organization	1,000,000
Latin American Economic Development Fund	35,000,000
TOTAL	$4,311,075,000

Other provisions of the bill, differing from the House version:

Declared that as long as world conditions required it, the U.S. would expand its air power and aid friendly countries.

Stipulated that of the total $2.5 billion authorized for military aid, $1.6 billion should be spent for advanced weapons for United States forces to replace those sent to allies as aid.

Restored the $100 million authorization for Asian Economic Development made in 1955 and repealed by the House.

Required that 75 percent of development assistance funds for individual countries be extended as loans, except funds to finance sales of farm surpluses; struck out the House provision that not more than 25 percent of such funds should go to one country.

Authorized transfer of $20 million of total authorization (in addition to $5 million in new funds) for programs to keep alive the hopes of liberation of people enslaved by Communism.

Authorized the President to transfer $11 million from foreign aid funds to the State Department for its international educational exchange program.

Limited to $200 million the amount of unexpended and unobligated balances that could be carried over from fiscal 1956 to fiscal 1957.

Authorized use of at least 5 percent of counterpart funds, derived from surplus sales abroad, for exchange of persons program and $5 million for translating, publishing and distributing books and periodicals abroad.

Broadened and extended the investment guarantee program, but stipulated that "war, revolution or insurrection" should not be among the risks protected against.

Adopted a new pricing formula for determining the value of military equipment sent abroad.

Stated that aid to new African states should be extended directly to governments.

Requested the President to explore with other nations establishment of an international Food and Raw Materials Reserve (S Res 86) and report to Congress.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- Add, as conditions for continued aid to Yugoslavia, requirements that the President find Yugoslavia is not part of a conspiracy for Communist world conquest, and that he report to Congress his reasons for a decision to continue aid to Yugoslavia; June 28. Roll-call vote, 52-36.

O'Mahoney -- Alter policy statement to declare that, as long as world conditions require it, the United States would expand its air power and give such foreign aid as it deemed "compatible with...stability, strength and other obligations;" June 29. Voice vote.

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Authorize use of contract authorizations if provided for in fiscal 1957 Mutual Security Appropriation Act; June 29. Voice.

Dirksen -- Authorize additional $5 million for the President's discretionary fund to be used for programs to encourage the hopes of enslaved peoples; June 29. Voice.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), as modified -- Express policy of Congress to keep alive the hopes of liberation of enslaved peoples, and authorize $20 million of mutual security funds for programs for that purpose; June 29. Voice.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.), as modified -- Express sense of Congress that in planning future foreign aid programs the President should take into account more fully the desirability of promoting economic development of underdeveloped countries; June 29. Voice.

George A. Smathers (D Fla.) -- Establish Latin American Economic Development Fund, to be administered by the President, with preference to be given to regional projects; authorize $35 million for the purpose, with 74 percent earmarked for loans; June 29. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- Limit imports of agricultural commodities or derivative products already surplus in U.S. to average of previous three years' imports, if not already subject to import quotas; June 28. Roll call, 43-45.

Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- Limit, pending action by Tariff Commission and the President, imports of cotton and derivatives to average of previous three years' imports when cotton is in surplus in U.S.; June 28. Roll call, 36-52.

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- Cut off all aid to Yugoslavia in 90 days; June 28. Roll call, 38-50.

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- Reduce total foreign aid authorization (including unobligated and unreserved funds continued available) to $2,765,875,000 (the amount appropriated in 1955 plus carryover); June 28. Roll call, 27-58.

William Langer (R N.D.) -- Cut total authorization by $1 billion; June 29. Voice vote.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Establish a commission of six private citizens and six public officials to "conduct a comprehensive study and investigation of the operation of the present and past foreign aid programs" and to report by Feb. 15, 1957; June 29. Roll-call vote, 41-45.

Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) -- Suspend for 12 months aid to countries shipping to the Soviet bloc materials embargoed by the U.S.; June 29. Roll call, 23-60.

O'Mahoney -- Direct executive branch to furnish any information on Mutual Security Program requested by committees of Congress; June 29. Roll call, 23-58.

Johnston -- Withhold foreign aid funds after 90 days if income tax exemptions are not increased from $600 to $700; June 29. Voice.

Bridges -- Cut economic aid and technical assistance to India to $40 million (from $80 million); June 29. Roll call, 23-56.

DEBATE -- June 27 -- Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- "There is a chance that conditions have so changed in the past year that our children may be able to avoid the horrors of another war. But they will not be able to avoid that danger if we begin in this bill to liquidate the military strength of the free world.... The Soviet...switch from a military emphasis to an economic emphasis in its attack on freedom has had a tendency to induce us to lower our guard.... I hope we may not be lulled to sleep, letting our defenses fall into discard. It is in our interest to support strong regional defense groupings.... We must also take account of the fact that huge masses of people are determined to raise their living standards.... We must be ready to help these people.... Those Members of this body who may want to alter drastically our approach to mutual security must assume the risk of drastic change. The greatest risk...is that we may by ill-considered action sacrifice our present necessary position in world affairs."

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- "The foreign military support which our present policy calls for ($2.52 billion under the Senate bill) is a relatively small percentage of the over-all total of our defense program. It...probably saves us at least two or three times what the cost to us would be without this foreign cooperation."

Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.) -- "I...support this year's bill...only after a good deal of soul-searching.... The Committee hearings (revealed) loose language...loose thinking.... While the actions of the Soviet Union have undergone marked changes since last July, there is little evidence that the Administration has shown the flexibility...to meet these fresh challenges."

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- "What have we got in exchange for the $1 billion we gave to Tito?.... We get a Tito honeymoon staged in Moscow...a statement from Marshal Zhukov...that in war...the Kremlin and Tito will fight shoulder to shoulder."

Ralph E. Flanders (R Vt.) -- "Undertaking to buy Tito is...fruitless.... We can rent him for a period of time, but the rent will be raised every month. I am ashamed to have my country enter into an auction with Soviet Russia for the good intentions of Tito..."

Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) -- "We have poured out a billion dollars to a shrewd international blackmailer who was playing both sides against the middle.... We should wake up to the fact that...Tito is an example...to other countries to do the same thing...."

June 28 -- Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) -- "Today our country owes more money than all the other countries of the world combined. We...continue to be blood-sucked for more and more by our friends.... It seems to me we have reached the end of the road.... No effort is being made to cause our allies who are prosperous today to assist us in carrying this load."

Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- "I always have supported our program for mutual assistance (but) I cannot support any part of the measure which extends aid to Yugoslavia."

George -- "We cannot end...aid...(to Yugoslavia) simply because we do not like Tito.... Show me an honestly neutral country...and I will show you a country which stands in the way of Soviet aggression."

CUTS DEBATED

June 29 -- William Langer (R N.D.) -- "The point has been reached...when even its most fanatical supporters can no longer suppress their misgivings as to the soundness and effectiveness of a foreign policy which is predicated upon a profligacy of the public funds..."

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- The "blanket cut" proposed by Langer would affect principally "the military aid item, because 80 or 85 percent (of the bill) consists of military aid. A great part of that...goes to Asia, and particularly to Formosa..."

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- "There has been general unanimity of opinion that a study (of foreign aid) should be made (but) an honest difference of opinion as to how the study may best be conducted.... Having the survey made only by members of the Foreign Relations Committee...does not meet the situation, because the problem is broader...than the jurisdiction of the...Committee."

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- "Are we going to shirk our responsibility and vote for a Hoover-type commission which will give the executive the opportunity to do...what it sees fit?" Knowland's amendment "would constitute a fundamental surrender of the Congressional investigative power to the executive.... Any proposal for a study that would be guided by the tender hands of the people who have been engaged for years in the foreign aid program would only result in a beautiful whitewash."

A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- "I am disappointed to find the foreign aid program so muscle-bound, and so encumbered with retreaded ideas that it cannot possibly meet the new cold war problem which now is facing us. The only alternative to misdirection of aid or overemphasis on military aid is to vote for deep and heavy cuts to try to bring about...an agonizing reappraisal...."

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- His program to encourage hopes of liberation of enslaved peoples "is clearly in line with the campaign pledges made to the American people in 1952 by President Eisenhower and Secretary Dulles.... We are not proposing an armed revolt at an inopportune time. We are proposing that the spirit of revolt be kept alive, and that a collective slowdown be encouraged...."

Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) -- "It is hopeless idiocy for the U.S. on the one hand to subsidize a foreign aid program designed to fight world Communism, and on the other to permit countries receiving that aid to help build the Communist war machine.... The Battle Act of 1951 provided that no nation that shipped strategic materials to the Soviet bloc should receive American aid. However, the Battle Act was circumvented in 1954 by the...Administrator, Mr. Harold E. Stassen (who decided) arbitrarily that certain highly strategic materials...were not in fact 'strategic' for the purposes of allied trade with the Communists.... The loophole in the Battle Act, which has been so cynically exploited by certain appeasement-minded officials in the bureaucracy, must be closed by Congress."

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- McCarthy's amendment "would have the effect of forbidding any country from receiving our aid if it shipped anything -- even baby powder -- to Communist China.... We embargo everything to Communist China.... East-West trade controls depend on cooperation of our allies. Without such cooperation there can be no effective controls...."

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- "We gambled on Yugoslavia and lost. We are gambling on NATO and SEATO and most of it appears to be a pretty good gamble ... (with) some weak spots. We are gambling on India and frankly it is a gamble that I do not feel like backing with too many American taxpayer dollars."

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- "As responsible men we should not...strip the gears or wreck the machinery of existing foreign aid programs because we have little faith that serious thought is being given to the future of this program.... There is no blinking the fact...that the American people are not convinced that today's program serves America's national interest.... The Administration has done little to allay these genuine doubts....(I) hope that a comprehensive...reappraisal of our entire foreign aid program will be made during the next year by the Foreign Relations Committee...."

Conference

The conference committee on HR 11356 July 7 reported (H Rept 2643) a total new authorization of $3,928,575,000, or $360,100,000 more than the House figure and $382,500,000 less than the Senate. The conferees agreed to the House provisions on the policy of continuing aid and on repealing the limit on unobligated balances to be carried over.

They adopted a Senate amendment increasing aid to Latin America, adding a new clause permitting funds to be spent in that area to resettle migrants. Instead of setting up a separate Latin American fund as provided under the Senate amendment, the conferees diverted the increase (only $15 million of the $35 million voted by the Senate was allowed) to defense support funds, but stipulated broader purposes for which the Latin American funds could be expended.

Senate amendments giving new impetus to the international educational exchange program were accepted. The conferees compromised on 80 percent as the amount of development assistance to individual countries to be extended as loans -- the House figure was 100 percent and the Senate, 75 percent -- and approved the House limit of 25 percent to any one country. They deleted, on insistence of the Senate conferees, a House provision that recipient countries be required to agree to "equitable treatment" of U.S. private investment and dropped a Senate authorization of $100 million for the Middle East and Africa.

The conferees deleted the House provision for a special study of the technical cooperation program on grounds it would be included in the studies projected by the Foreign Affairs and Foreign Relations Committees.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 9 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Francis E. Walter (D Pa.) -- The provision for resettlement programs in Latin America "would do more to relieve pressure on our immigration quotas than anything we can conscientiously do unless we want to let down the bars and open the flood gates.... Under the amendment...it will be possible to...open up new vast areas of South America for the benefit of European migrants who should be resettled in larger numbers on farmlands and not in congested industrial areas."

Alvin M. Bentley (R Mich.) -- "I intend...to offer an amendment (to the foreign aid appropriation bill) that will, in effect, cut off aid to the Communist government of Yugoslavia. The adoption of such an amendment would restore consistency to the foreign aid program:"

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 9 approved the conference report by voice vote, sending the Mutual Security Act to the President.

DEBATE -- Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- "The Senate has cause to be satisfied with the results of the conference.... The two biggest items of difference had to do with military assistance and development assistance. For military assistance...the conferees agreed on a lump sum of $2,225,000,000 without earmarking any for Spain or Europe. In regard to Spain, it is the intention of the conferees that the full amount programmed for that country ($48 million) be furnished. In regard to Europe, the Senate conferees were most insistent that there be no limitation which might interfere with our participation in NATO.... The conferees also agreed to delete a House provision limiting development assistance to countries who had signed agreements with the U.S. for the participation of private enterprise in furthering the policies of the Mutual Security Act. This was one of the most contentious and most important points in conference.... The conferees are...strongly of the opinion that there should be a very substantial increase in the use of PL 480 currency (from sale of farm surpluses) for the exchange program."

Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- "While in 1954 it cost our nation about $5,900 to maintain one of our own soldiers, it cost us only $747 to maintain an allied soldier. It is because of the favorable economics of this military assistance to our allies that we have been able to maintain NATO.... It was our determination to 'stay with it' in Europe...which paved the way for the relaxation of Soviet control over her satellites. Tito could not have stood alone.... We see the rumblings of other satellite countries.... If we abandon Europe now, these stirrings will cease."

Group Stands

Public pressures on foreign aid were manifest not only in statements generally for and against the Mutual Security Program, but also in comments on specific aspects of the program.

H. Christian Sonne, chairman of the National Planning Assn.'s board of trustees, said Dec. 12, 1955, the U.S. must be prepared to use foreign economic aid "as long as the period of competitive coexistence lasts." Sonne said that "In the face of the shift in Soviet techniques the U.S. cannot wisely terminate economic aid to other countries."

George Meany, AFL-CIO president, Dec. 31 said "labor will support a program of substantial military and economic aid to other free nations to protect them from being forced to yield to Communism."

The Committee for Economic Development Feb. 16 said "the national interest requires that the U.S. expand its program of public investment in the underdeveloped countries and take steps to stimulate private investment." CED urged private foreign investment by U.S. firms be encouraged with a 27 percent cut in corporate income tax on income earned abroad and "consideration...be given to a large reduction."

75 GROUPS BACK ECONOMIC AID

More than 150 delegates of 75 national organizations gathered in Washington April 10 for a one-day Conference on Foreign Economic Aid.

The Conference, exploratory in nature, took no action and passed no resolutions. J.D. Zellerbach, CED chairman, reflected the views of many attending. He said the Soviet Union's trade and aid drive underscored the "urgency" of U.S. assistance. Zellerbach termed the Administration's $4.9 billion foreign aid request the "beginning of the Answer to this challenge."

The Conference was sponsored by the Point Four Information Service, an informal group of representatives from 31 organizations interested in foreign aid. The Service, set up in 1949, conducted similar conferences in 1952 and 1955. Members include representatives of farm, labor, educational, religious, veteran, cooperative and civic associations.

Participating in the Conference, in addition to CED, were representatives of the Friends Committee on National Legislation, League of Women Voters of the U.S., Public Affairs Institute, National Catholic Rural Life Conference, National Council of Jewish Women, American Veterans Committee, International Association of Machinists (AFL-CIO), United World Federalists, National Farmers Union, Americans for Democratic Action, United Auto Workers (Detroit), Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, the Cooperative League of the U.S.A. and the Committee for a National Trade Policy.

Among other groups backing the Mutual Security Program at Congressional hearings in 1956 were the American Council of Voluntary Agencies, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and the American Association of University Women.

Alfred Kohlberg of New York May 10 presented a statement to the Senate Committee signed by 70 persons saying aid should be extended by the U.S. "only to cooperating allies." Signers included Gov. J. Bracken Lee (R Utah), Maj. Gen. Clair L. Chennault (ret.), H.V. Kaltenborn and Clarence Manion.

George J. Burger of the National Federation of Independent Business May 11 told the Committee a poll of over 100,000 members resulted in 80 percent opposed to continuance of foreign aid "as a permanent feature of our nation's foreign policy", with 16 percent in favor of it.

FOREIGN AID FUNDS

HR 12130 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 2636) July 6, 1956. Recommended appropriation: $3,425,120,000.

- Passed by the House, on a 284-120 roll-call vote, July 11. (See p. 218) Appropriation voted: $3,425,120,000.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2579) July 14. Recommended: $4,105,420,000.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, on a 60-30 roll-call vote July 24. (See p. 182) Voted: $4,110,920,000.
- Conference report (H Rept 2931) agreed to by the House July 26 and the Senate July 27, by voice votes.

P.L. 853 -- Signed into law July 31. Final appropriation: $3,766,570,000.

Congress completed action July 27, 1956, on the Mutual Security Appropriation bill (HR 12130) providing foreign aid funds for fiscal 1957. Although the final figure was a full $1 billion more than Congress appropriated for the same purpose in 1955, it was $1 billion less than the Administration had asked to replenish the pipeline in order to keep the aid program going at the same pace.

New funds appropriated totalled $3,766,570,000, plus re-appropriation of unspent balances from fiscal 1956 of $240,800,000. Authorizing legislation passed July 9 had approved $3,928,575,000 in new funds for the 1957 Mutual Security Program. (See p. 418) Included in the appropriations bill were amounts authorized under previous years' legislation as well as those in the 1956 Act. Most items in the authorizing legislation were cut during the appropriations process.

Attached to the appropriation bill by a Senate floor amendment, and sustained in conference, was a rider forbidding the use of new funds for military aid to Yugoslavia except to maintain equipment already sent to that country. The authorizing bill had left the question of continuing aid to Yugoslavia to the discretion of the President. Another rider forbade the use of aid funds for international educational exchanges as provided by the authorizing measure.

HOUSE REBUFFS PRESIDENT

The House July 11 approved its Appropriations Committee's recommendation to slash $1.4 billion from the Administration's request despite a July 9 message from President Eisenhower asking that the amounts be increased. The Senate restored $600 million to the bill. The final version was about midway between the two.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of new funds in HR 12130 as it became law:

Military assistance (including direct forces support)	$1,950,000,000
Infrastructure (NATO)	67,500,000
Economic aid to countries receiving military aid (defense support)	1,161,700,000
Economic aid to other countries (development assistance)	250,000,000

Technical Cooperation
Bilateral programs	135,000,000
Multilateral programs (United Nations and Organization of American States)	17,000,000
President's Emergency Fund	100,000,000
Aid to joint control areas (mostly Berlin)	12,200,000
Refugee and escapee programs	20,400,000
UN Children's Fund	10,000,000
Shipping charges	2,500,000
Administration and trade control act costs	34,770,000
Foreign atomic reactor projects	5,500,000
TOTAL	$3,766,570,000

In addition, the bill:

Authorized carryover through fiscal 1957 of unobligated balances of $195,500,000 for military assistance and $45,300,000 for Palestine refugee relief.

Barred the use of funds under the bill for military equipment for Yugoslavia, except for maintenance and replacement of spare parts of equipment already furnished.

Stipulated that $15 million of defense support funds should go to Guatemala; and $50 million, all in grant form, to Spain, of which $18.5 million should be for agricultural commodities.

Stipulated that U.S. contributions to the United Nations Technical Assistance Program, as of 1958, should not exceed one-third of the total contributions.

Limited to 20 percent funds that could be obligated in the last two months of the fiscal year, but excepted the $100 million of the President's Emergency Fund.

Barred use of mutual security funds for international educational exchanges.

Stated Congress' opposition to the seating of Red China in the United Nations.

AUTHORIZATION, APPROPRIATION COMPARED

Below is a comparison of the amounts authorized and appropriated for the fiscal 1957 Mutual Security Program (for amounts requested, see p. 75):

	Authorization	Appropriation
Military Assistance (including direct forces' support)	$2,225,000,000	$1,950,000,000
NATO (infrastructure)	*	67,500,000
Defense Support (economic aid to countries receiving military assistance)	1,175,200,000	1,161,700,000
Development Assistance (economic aid to other countries)	193,000,000	250,000,000
Technical Cooperation	157,500,000	152,000,000
Other programs	177,875,000	185,370,000
TOTALS	$3,928,575,000	$3,766,570,000

*Authorized under previous legislation but requiring appropriation.

Diverted to this title was $100 million of the Asian Development Fund authorized in 1955 but requiring appropriation. The Fund was abolished.

The authorization figure includes $1 million for the Food and Agriculture Organization which was not appropriated. The appropriations figure includes $12.5 million for the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration authorized under previous legislation but requiring appropriation.

Background

President Eisenhower March 20 requested (H Doc 360) over $5 billion in mutual security funds for fiscal 1957 -- $4,859,975,000 in new funds and $211,900,000 in carryover balances which would lapse unless reappropriated. (For breakdown, see p. 419)

Congress in 1955 appropriated $2,703,341,750 for the Mutual Security Program for fiscal 1956. (1955 Almanac, p. 235)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations, Foreign Operations Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 24 to June 14, intermittently, on mutual security funds for fiscal 1957.

ACTION -- July 6 reported the Mutual Security Appropriation bill for fiscal 1957 (HR 12130 -- H Rept 2636). The Committee cut the Administration's request by $1.4 billion, recommending appropriation of $3,425,120,000 in new funds and reappropriation of $240,800,000 in unobligated balances from fiscal 1956, making $3,665,920,000 available in fiscal 1957 for obligation under the bill.

In its report the Committee said its deliberations were made "more difficult...by the lack of information as to past accomplishments and the vagueness of data of projected programs." The Committee said the foreign aid pieline or total unexpended balance on hand June 30 was "estimated at $6,877,700,000...made up of $5,059,-100,000 for the military and $1,818,600,000 for non-military." At the fiscal 1956 rate of expenditure, estimated at $3.7 billion, the pipeline "would carry the program for nearly two years," the Committee said.

Floor Action

The House July 11 passed HR 12130 by a roll-call vote of 284-120. (For voting see chart p. 218) The House approved the total recommended by its Appropriations Committee, which was about $500 million less than Congress authorized July 9.

The House amended the bill to stipulate that Guatemala receive $15 million in economic aid and to bar the use of foreign aid funds for international educational exchanges, as provided under the authorization bill. Amendments were defeated which would have barred aid to Yugoslavia, forced full security checks for any migrant helped with foreign aid funds, and knocked out funds for administering the trade control (Battle) act.

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R Mass) July 9 said it was leadership strategy not to attempt to raise the amount of the appropriation in the House but to fight for the increase in the Senate. President Eisenhower July 9 sent a message from Gettysburg asking for restoration of "a substantial part" of the foreign aid cuts. He said failure to increase the funds "would definitely injure our efforts to help lead the world to peace based on cooperation and justice."

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of new funds in HR 12130, as passed by the House:

Military assistance (including direct forces support)	$1,675,000,000
Infrastructure (NATO)	60,000,000
Economic aid to countries receiving military aid (defense support)	1,128,700,000
Economic aid to other countries (development assistance)	130,000,000
Technical Cooperation
Bilateral programs	135,000,000
Multilateral programs (United Nations and Organization of American States)	11,500,000
President's Emergency Fund	100,000,000
Aid to joint control areas (mostly Berlin)	12,200,000
Refugee and escapee programs	20,500,000
UN Children's Fund	10,000,000
Shipping charges	1,400,000
Administration and trade control act costs	35,320,000
Special authorization for Middle East and Africa	100,000,000
Foreign atomic reactor projects	5,500,000
TOTAL	$3,425,120,000

In addition, the bill:

Authorized carryover of unobligated balances of $195,500,000 for military assistance and $45,300,000 for Palestine refugee relief.

Prohibited use of foreign aid appropriations and counterpart funds for the payment of foreign government debt.

Stipulated that not less than $15 million in defense support funds should go to Guatemala.

Barred use of mutual security funds for international educational exchanges.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Robert L.F. Sikes (D Fla.) -- Specify that $15 million of Latin American defense support aid should go to Guatemala; July 11. Voice vote.

John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) -- Bar use of mutual security funds for the international educational exchange program; July 11. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Michael A. Feighan (D Ohio) -- Bar use of funds to assist in the migration of any person not cleared by a full-scale field security investigation; July 11. Standing, 4-54.

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Strike out provision of $1,175,000 for administration of trade control (Battle) act; July 11. Standing, 29-68.

Alvin M. Bentley (R Mich.) -- Prohibit aid to Yugoslavia; July 11. Standing, 58-97; teller, 65-117.

DEBATE -- July 9 -- Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R Mass.) -- "It is not the leadership purpose to make a fight to replace some of these cuts at this time, although we do... believe the Committee has made a decision which if allowed to stand will be harmful to this country.... The President...says (this program) is necessary for the security not only of our own country but also of the free world.... We make a tragic mistake when we overrule the President.... For a billion dollars, $6 a person, we are playing havoc with the safety of our country."

Otto E. Passman (D La.) -- "It is quite obvious to me that the old steamroller was started several weeks ago to bypass (the Appropriations) subcommittee and it is still working.... We are providing more money in this bill than is needed or can be spent."

July 11 -- John Taber (R N.Y.) -- "I have many times voted against appropriations for...foreign aid.... This time...I...support...efforts...to increase the bill at least to the authorization level on the item for military assistance.... If we do not(support) troops...native to Korea, Thailand, Vietnam, the Philippines, Taiwan...to head off Communist infiltration...we are going to have to send our own boys over there."

Richard B. Wigglesworth (R Mass.) -- "This is no time to slacken our efforts to build and maintain a powerful free world when results are beginning to show...."

Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) -- "Nearly 100 percent of the billions of dollars spent in this program...are spent in the United States.... This is not a giveaway program." Appropriations should be increased in the final version.

T. Millet Hand (R N.J.) -- "Day-by-day events are indicating the failure of this fantastic program...."

Henderson Lanham (D Ga.) -- The Administration "asked for less than they thought they needed last year in order to balance the budget this...election year.... They simply have not sold the American people on an increased foreign aid program.... A part-time President cannot sell it to the American people.... Our foreign policy is almost totally bankrupt today."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- June 19 to July 12, intermittently, on mutual security funds for fiscal 1957.

TESTIMONY -- June 19 -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said that "to relax our efforts (in foreign aid) would lead our allies to relax their efforts and weaken the entire structure of the free world alliances at a time when resoluteness offers bright prospects of achieving solid results." Dulles said aid to Yugoslavia should be continued "so long as it seeks to maintain genuine independence."

June 20 -- Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said the aid program was "helping to support approximately 200 divisions in the armies of our allies.... To cut military assistance materially at this time...would require a complete re-evaluation of our international position and of our own military budgets." Wilson said cuts would require increases in U.S. forces "at a very much greater cost in manpower and money."

Adm. Arthur W. Radford, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, supported the program. He said U.S. defensive strategy depended on military bases around the "Communist periphery" in countries friendly to the U.S.

June 21 -- Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther said material cuts that would slow down the development of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would have a "direct, unfavorable impact" on U.S. defenses. "Free Europe is indispensable to our own security," he said.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee July 14 reported HR 12130 (S Rept 2579). As approved by the Committee, the bill carried total new funds of $4,105,420,000, compared with $3,425,120,000 approved by the House July 11. The Committee restored military assistance funds to the full amount authorized July 9 -- $2,225,000,000 plus $75,000,000 for NATO authorized under previous legislation. The Committee rejected by a 10-11 vote an amendment to cut off military aid to Yugoslavia.

The Appropriations Committee also:

Deleted a House amendment barring the use of foreign aid funds for the international educational exchange program.

Barred aid to Egypt for construction of the Aswan Dam without prior approval of the Committee.

Approved the House cut in contributions to the United Nations Technical Assistance program.

Cut another $1.1 million from funds to administer the aid program, aready cut by the House.

Deleted a House provision earmarking $15 million in defense support funds for Guatemala, and stipulated that $50 million of such funds should go to Spain.

Diverted the House's special authorization of $100 million for the Middle East and Africa to the general title, Development Assistance, that includes Asia as well.

Added provisions continuing certain funds for periods longer than 12 months to permit more flexible programming.

Reiterated Congress' opposition to the seating of Red China in the United Nations.

Floor Action

The Senate July 24 passed HR 12130 by a roll-call vote of 60-30, approving new funds of $4,110,920,000. The Senate beat down a series of attempts to reduce the total. (For voting, see chart p. 182)

The Senate adopted, by a 50-42 roll call, a revised amendment by Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- in opposition to President Eisenhower's views -- to bar the use of funds under the act for military equipment for Yugoslavia, except to maintain and replace spare parts of equipment already furnished. The amendment did not affect economic aid to Yugoslavia.

As originally submitted, the Knowland amendment would have barred use of all unexpended foreign aid funds -- including an estimated $100 million in the pipeline (previously appropriated) -- for military equipment for Yugoslavia, except maintenance. A point of order that the amendment as applied to funds already appropriated was legislation and not properly part of an appropriations bill was sustained by John L. McClellan (D Ark.), presiding. A motion by Knowland to suspend the rules to make its consideration in order failed to receive the necessary two-thirds vote -- the roll call was 59-33. Knowland then altered the amendment to apply only to new funds and it was approved. Another amendment to bar all aid to Yugoslavia under the bill was rejected by voice vote.

A floor amendment July 20 restored a $5.5 million cut from the United Nations Technical Assistance program but provided that future contributions should not exceed one-third of the program's budget. Successive attempts by Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) to cut military assistance funds were rejected, and the Committee provision for $2.3 billion in military aid was upheld by a 50-39 roll call. Amendments by Ellender to cut defense support and development assistance funds also failed; the Committee provisions were upheld by a 57-33 roll call.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of new funds in HR 12130, as approved by the Senate and sent to conference:

Military assistance (including direct forces support)	$2,225,000,000
Infrastructure (NATO)	75,000,000
Economic aid to countries receiving military aid (defense support)	1,175,200,000
Economic aid to other countries (development assistance)	293,000,000
Technical Cooperation
Bilateral programs	140,500,000
Multilateral programs (United Nations and Organization of American States)	17,000,000
President's Emergency Fund	100,000,000
Aid to joint control areas	12,200,000
Refugee and escapee programs	20,300,000
UN Children's Fund	10,000,000
Shipping charges	3,000,000
Administration and trade control act costs	34,220,000
Foreign atomic reactor projects	5,500,000
TOTAL	$4,110,920,000

In addition, the bill:

Authorized carryover of unobligated balances of $195,500,000 for military assistance, to be available until June 30, 1958, and $45,300,000 for Palestine refugee relief.

Authorized up to 25 percent of funds for defense support, technical cooperation and aid to joint control areas to be available for 15 instead of 12 months.

Limited to 20 percent funds which could be obligated in the last two months of the fiscal year, but excepted the $100 million of the President's Emergency Fund.

Stated Congress' opposition to the seating of Red China in the United Nations.

Stipulated that $50 million of defense support funds should go to Spain, of which half should be for agricultural commodities.

Authorized $15 million of defense support funds for Latin America to remain available until June 30, 1958.

Made military assistance and development assistance funds available until June 30, 1958.

Barred the use of funds under the bill for military equipment for Yugoslavia, except for maintenance and replacement of spare parts of equipment already furnished.

Stipulated that U.S. contributions to the United Nations Technical Assistance program, as of 1958, should not exceed one-third of the total contributions.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), as modified -- Restore full $15.5 million authorized for the UN Technical Assistance program; limit U.S. contributions beginning with calendar 1958 to one-third of total contributions; July 20. Voice vote.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.), as modified -- Bar use of funds under HR 12130 to furnish military equipment to Yugoslavia, except to maintain or replace spare parts of equipment already furnished July 24. Roll call, 50-42.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) -- Reduce military assistance funds from $2,300,000,000 to $1,735,000,001; July 20. Roll-call vote, 42-46.

Ellender (as modified) -- Reduce military assistace funds to $2 million; July 20. Roll call, 37-44.

Ellender -- Reduce military assistance funds to $2.1 million; July 20. Roll call, 42-44.

Ellender (four amendments voted en bloc) -- Reduce defense support funds for Europe, the Near East and Africa and Asia by 10 percent; reduce development assistance funds from $293 million to $278.7 million; July 24. Roll call, 36-54.

Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) -- Bar use of funds under HR 12130 to aid Yugoslavia; July 24. Voice.

TECHNICAL AID RAISED

DEBATE -- July 20 -- Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- Explained his amendment to raise the amount in the United Nations Technical Assistance Fund from $10 million to $15.5 million, the full amount authorized. "The proposed U.S. calendar year 1957 contribution to the central UNTA fund, as in 1956, is 50 percent of the total contributions. If contributions of host countries to local projects are counted, the U.S. contribution is 16 percent of the...1957 program...."

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- The effect of the Committee's cut "is enormous. The decrease of $5,-500,000 is one-third of the total authorization. It means a 20 percent cut in the whole program. Since the money contributed...is matched by the other participating nations, the loss to the program is doubled."

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- "The (UN) program was established through the leadership of this country...in 1950.... Its accomplishments have been rather impressive.... If we reduce (our contribution) summarily at this time, there will be...dismay in foreign quarters."

Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.), Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- Argued for cuts in military aid. "...the amount of money on hand unexpended and available for use in connection with the military assistance program is $4,992,-900,000." (Ellender).

Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- "U.S. military expenditures for all forms of national defense during the past two and a half years have been...$93,500,000,000. For North Atlantic Treaty forces, where most of our military assistance money has gone, we have spent $5,900,000,000.. We have spent 94 percent on our own forces and 6 percent on our allies.... Other nations have put up $6 out of their treasuries to $1 put up by the U.S. Any businessman who could get two for one for his money would be happy. We are getting six to one for our own national defense."

July 21 -- William E. Jenner (R Ind.) -- "This American foreign-aid-follies racket has become an international blackmail game."

July 24 -- William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- On his amendment to cut off military aid to Yugoslavia, "I do not speak for the Administration...I have given more consideration to this amendment...than...to anything...I have done in my 11 years (in) the Senate.... (The amendment does not affect economic aid...Tito...has taken a position directly contrary to the foreign policy...we support....(He) favors the admission of Communist China into the United Nations.... Tito apparently does not need (our military aid) because he has made his peace with the Kremlin."

Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- "By taking this action we...push Yugoslavia, which today has the strongest army in Europe outside the Kremlin...into the arms of the Kremlin.... We would lose face throughout the world." George read a letter dated July 23 from President Eisenhower which said he "would deplore any abrupt mandatory cutoff involving the military aspects of our Yugoslav relationship."

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- "...to cut off all military shipments permanently...except...replacement parts does not give the President...the ability to appraise the situation and determine whether Tito has really gone over to the Soviet side...there is one chance in 10 that the situation can be salvaged. We must take that chance...."

Conference

Senate and House conferees reported (H Rept 2931) July 25 on HR 12130. They agreed on new funds of $3,766,570,000, almost a 50-50 split between the two versions. The conferees deleted all Senate provisions making funds available for longer than 12 months to permit more flexible programming. Upheld were a Senate amendment barring use of new funds for military equipment for Yugoslavia, except for maintenance, and a House amendment barring transfer of aid funds to the State Department's educational exchange program. The conferees deleted the House's special authorization for the Middle East and Africa.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 26 agreed by voice vote to the conference report and concurred in three Senate amendments reported in disagreement by the conferees. Accepted was an amendment earmarking $50 million of defense support funds for Spain, with a further amendment that $18.5 million of that amount should be for agricultural commodities. Other amendments limited U.S. contributions to the United Nations Technical Assistance program beginning in 1958 to one-third of the budget and opposed the seating of Communist China in the UN.

DEBATE -- Gerald R. Ford Jr. (R Mich.) -- Five House members of the conference committee did not agree to the compromise sum for military assistance. "If this conference report is approved, the President's original request for both economic and military aid will be cut approximately 20 percent. The reduction in the military figure itself will be approximately 33 percent.... It is a very serious calculated risk.... In my judgment the figure ...in the Senate version was far...preferable to what we finally agreed to in conference."

Richard B. Wigglesworth (R Mass.) -- Described the cut as "an unwarranted gamble in the field of national security."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 27, by voice vote, without debate, agreed to the conference report and the House amendment earmarking $18.5 million worth of aid to Spain for agricultural commodities.

President Eisenhower, signing HR 12130 into law July 31, said he considered the provisions of the Act earmarking funds for Spain and Guatemala as "authorizations, and also as limitations on the availability of the amounts specified, rather than as directives. To construe them otherwise would raise substantial constitutional questions."

CQ Fact Sheet — On Foreign Aid

SURVEY OF U.S. AID SINCE 1945

As background to the foreign aid debate of 1956 over President Eisenhower's requests for increased mutual security appropriations and for "limited" authority to commit funds on a long-term basis (see p. 418), Congressional Quarterly prepared a review of foreign aid from World War II to 1956.

An analysis was made of foreign aid programs undertaken by the United States on the basis of purposes, recipients and costs.

The number and over-lapping nature of aid programs during the early postwar years ruled out either a simple chronological or functional review. Therefore, this review was divided arbitrarily into two time periods: the six years from 1945 to 1951, and the period since 1951 when aid was consolidated under the Mutual Security Act.

In terms of functions, aid was extended to meet three broad needs:

- Civilian relief and rehabilitation.
- Economic recovery and development.
- Military preparedness.

Generally speaking, the program emphasis since 1945 shifted from relief to recovery to preparedness, but all three purposes were found to some degree throughout the post-war period.

FOREIGN AID: 1945-51

Well before the end of World War II, plans were laid to meet the most pressing relief needs of civilians in the devastated areas of Europe and Asia, including enemy territories to be occupied. Substantial relief aid was continued through 1948 under a variety of programs. Meanwhile, Communist threats to Greece and Turkey led, in 1947, to a program for those countries emphasizing military aid. Also in 1947, plans were laid for the long-range European Recovery Program, underway in 1948. Continued threats of Soviet aggression led to negotiation in 1949 of the North Atlantic Treaty and to the Mutual Defense Assistance Act, granting military aid to NATO members. In mid-1950, the Korean War opened, causing military aid to United States allies to rise. This fact, coupled with the recovery of European production, paved the way for the consolidation of foreign aid under the Mutual Security Program in 1951. Following are the major relief, recovery and military programs launched during this six-year period.

Relief and Rehabilitation

- Lend-Lease Assistance: This program, under which the U. S. distributed about $40 billion in net aid to its allies during the war, officially was terminated on V-J Day, Sept. 2, 1945. However, supplies already in the "pipeline" -- that is, on order or in transit -- continued to be delivered for another year or more. Gross value of these postwar lend-lease shipments was $1.9 billion.

- Armed Forces Civilian Supply Programs: As the armed forces moved into liberated areas, and later occupied Germany and Japan, they took over responsibility for providing food, medical care and other emergency civilian services. About $800 million was spent under these programs before the end of the war, and $5.3 billion from 1945 through fiscal 1951, mostly in Germany and Japan.

- United Nations Relief & Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA): Established in 1943 by 46 free nations, UNRRA was financed by contributions of $3.7 billion, of which the U. S. provided $2.7 billion. UNRRA aid, which continued from 1944 to 1947, went chiefly to China and the countries of southern, central and eastern Europe.

- British Loan: In July, 1946, Congress approved a loan to Britain of $3,750,000,000, subject to repayment in 50 equal installments beginning Dec. 31, 1951, at 2 percent interest. The loan was drawn in installments and finally exhausted in March, 1948. Repayments on principal totaled $183 million as of Sept. 30, 1955.

- Post-UNRRA Relief: When UNRRA funds began to run out in 1947, Congress authorized additional relief aid of about $300 million. The bulk of this went to Austria, Greece, Italy and China.

- Interim Aid: Pending final action on the European Recovery Program, the Foreign Aid Act, passed in December, 1947, provided about $600 million for emergency aid to Austria, France and Italy.

Economic Recovery, Development

Despite the foregoing and other aid measures, Europe remained in acute economic straits. Among the causes were vast war-time destruction, obsolescence and deterioration of productive facilities and the extreme dislocation of trade. An offer of U. S. assistance in a long-range coordinated program of economic reconstruction was made by Secretary of State George C. Marshall in a speech at Harvard University in June, 1947. The West European nations joined to draw up such a plan, which became the European Recovery Program (ERP), authorized by Congress on April 3, 1948.

ERP, as set forth in Title I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948, was to be "a plan for European recovery, open to all such nations which cooperate in such a plan, based upon a strong production effort, the expansion of foreign trade, the creation and maintenance of internal financial stability and the development of economic cooperation, including all possible steps to establish and maintain equitable rates of exchange and to bring about the progressive elimination of trade barriers."

Although the original U. S. proposal envisaged participation by all European nations, including the Soviet Union and the East European satellites, the latter group declined to join. The other European nations, except for Spain, joined in forming the 16-member Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC), which, in collaboration with the Economic Cooperation Administration (ECA) set up to administer the program, worked out the details of ERP. Members of OEEC: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey and the United Kingdom. Later, West Germany and Trieste were added. Switzerland alone received no U. S. aid.

ERP introduced at least four new elements into the planning and administration of foreign aid:

- The program was long-range, projected over four years.
- The approach was regional; aid was allocated to member countries on the basis of needs and goals jointly agreed to by the U. S. and all of the recipients working through OEEC.
- Aid recipients had to match U. S. dollar grants with equal deposits of local currencies in so-called counterpart funds, which in turn were used to meet recovery objectives.
- Procurement of supplies was handled for the most part through normal trade channels, with ECA acting as financial agent.

By June 30, 1951, ERP assistance totaling $10.3 billion had been furnished. Of this, $1.1 billion was on a credit basis.

Major Aid Agencies

ECA -- Economic Cooperation Administration, the first independent foreign aid agency; established by the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948 to administer the European Recovery Program and other programs; abolished by the Mutual Security Act of 1951; functions transferred to Mutual Security Agency Dec. 30, 1951.

TCA -- Technical Cooperation Administration, established within the Department of State by the Foreign Economic Assistance Act of 1950; transferred to Mutual Security Agency by Executive Order 10458 June 1, 1953, then to Foreign Operations Administration by Reorganization Plan No. 7 of 1953, effective Aug. 1, 1953.

MSA -- Mutual Security Agency, established by Mutual Security Act of 1951; abolished by Reorganization Plan No. 7 and functions transferred to--

FOA -- Foreign Operations Administration, established Aug. 1, 1953; abolished by Executive Order 10610 effective June 30, 1955, and functions transferred to--

ICA -- International Cooperation Administration, established July 1, 1955, as a semi-autonomous agency within the Department of State.

Technical Assistance

Technical cooperation programs, involving the exchange of "know-how," first were developed in Latin America during World War II. Under ERP, extensive use was made of technical assistance, both for the improvement of productivity in Europe and for economic development in the overseas territories of OEEC members.

In his inaugural address of January, 1949, President Truman, as the fourth point of foreign policy, called for "a bold new program for making the benefits of our scientific advances and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of underdeveloped areas." The so-called Point Four program was authorized in 1950 by the Act for International Development. About $27 million was appropriated to start the program administered by the Technical Cooperation Administration (TCA) within the Department of State. Other technical assistance and development funds were contributed to United Nations programs. This type of aid has been maintained and expanded under the Mutual Security Program.

Military Assistance

With V-J Day, military aid came to a halt except in China, where about $700 million in post-war lend-lease military assistance was furnished. This aid was used to bolster Chinese Nationalist forces in their civil war with the Chinese Communists. First new postwar military aid program was developed in 1947, when British forces withdrew from Greece and that country appealed for U. S. aid in its struggle with Communist guerrilla forces. Turkey, then under Soviet pressure, likewise appealed for military assistance.

- Greek-Turkish Aid: On March 12, 1947, President Truman laid down, as U. S. policy, the support of "free peoples who are resisting attempted subjugation by armed minorities or by outside pressure." The so-called Truman Doctrine became the basis for a program, authorized by Congress May 22, of military and economic aid to Greece and Turkey. Gross grants extended under this program totaled $653 million, of which $530 million was in military assistance.

- Mutual Defense Assistance Program (MDAP): Increasing Soviet aggressiveness led to the negotiation and signing, Aug. 24, 1949, of the North Atlantic Treaty by the U. S., Canada and 10 European nations. In October, the Mutual Defense Assistance Act was passed, authorizing military aid to the European members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), and also to Greece and Turkey, Iran, Korea, the Philippines and the "general area of China." Appropriations for MDAP purposes (which were coordinated with the economic aid programs under ECA) totaled $6.5 billion for fiscal 1950 and 1951. Of this amount, $5.5 billion was allocated to NATO countries.

Mutual Security Program

The outbreak of war in Korea on June 25, 1950, started a reappraisal of U. S. foreign aid programs that culminated, in October, 1951, in passage of the Mutual Security Act of 1951. By then, the chief goals of the European Recovery Program had been achieved, and emphasis shifted to the use of aid to support rearmament. Economic aid, although continued, was conceived as a backstop for the military buildup.

From 1951 until 1954, all foreign aid was authorized under Mutual Security legislation, although previous laws governing ERP, Point Four, MDAP and other aid programs remained in force. The Mutual Security Act of 1954 was a complete codification of aid legislation. Appropriations were continued under this Act in 1955, for the current 1956 fiscal year.

Since 1951, MSP has been administered successively by three agencies: the Mutual Security Agency until Aug. 1, 1953; the Foreign Operations Administration until June 30, 1955; and the International Cooperation Administration, currently in charge as a semi-autonomous agency within the Department of State. At present, MSP comprehends four categories of aid:

- Mutual Defense Assistance -- Included outright military aid (such as the delivery of armaments), direct forces support (such as clothing and fuel to maintain forces in being) and defense support (economic-type aid to offset the cost of maintaining defense forces).
- Development Assistance -- Used to maintain "economic and political stability" in countries which do not receive military assistance.
- Technical Cooperation -- A continuation of the Point Four Program.
- Other Programs -- Included refugee aid, contributions to the UN Children's Fund, an emergency fund of $100 million and a $100 million Asian Development Fund.

Appropriations for the Mutual Security Program have declined every year since 1951 from a high of $7.3 billion to a low of $2.7 billion in 1955. Expenditures, slow to catch up with appropriations, have varied less. High was $5.7 billion in fiscal 1953. Expenditures for the current 1956 fiscal year are estimated at $4.2 billion. The excess of current spending over current appropriations was drawn from unexpended funds previously appropriated.

In 1953, Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey testified on MSP, said Administration policy would be "to request each year less than will be spent in the next 12 months." He added that the aid "pipeline" of accumulated but unspent appropriations constituted a "snowballing threat to financial stability." In 1954, President Eisenhower said foreign economic grants should be ended "as swiftly as our national interest will allow" and replaced by "more durable" private undertakings.

Program Requested for 1957

In his Budget Message of Jan. 16, President Eisenhower made the following points:

- Mutual Security Program -- Expenditures in fiscal 1957 "are estimated at $4.3 billion, about $100 million more than in 1956. Recommended new authority to incur obligations is $4.9 billion, an increase of $2.2 billion over the $2.7 billion enacted for 1956.... (This) exceeds estimated expenditures for 1957 by approximately $600 million reflecting the amount for additional funding of long lead-time items for delivery in future years."

Major Lending Agencies

Ex-Im -- Export-Import Bank, established as a U.S. Government corporation in 1934; became a major U.S. channel for postwar credit designed to stimulate international trade; lending authority was increased in 1945 from $700 million to $3.5 billion, in 1947 to $4 billion, in 1951 to $4.5 billion, in 1955 to $5 billion; gross new postwar credit transferred by Ex-Im Bank reached $4.5 billion on Sept. 30, 1955; collections on principal during the same period totaled $2 billion.

IBRD -- International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, better known as the World Bank, established in 1945 with a total subscribed capital stock of $8.3 billion; only 20 percent has been paid in by member countries; the U.S. has paid in $635 million of its subscription of almost $3.2 billion.

IMF -- International Monetary Fund, set up at the same time as the World Bank; not a lending agency, IMF sells and buys foreign exchange, chiefly to overcome temporary deficits in any member country's balance of payments; the U.S. subscription was $2,750,000,000.

(Although U.S. payments to the Bank and the Fund represent efforts to promote foreign economic development, they are not included in Department of Commerce foreign-aid totals.)

- Military Aid -- "Total expenditures for military assistance and direct forces support in the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at approximately the current rate of $2.5 billion annually. To carry forward these programs, I am recommending new obligational authority of $3 billion .... In the fiscal years 1955 and 1956, the backlog of unexpended balances made it possible to maintain an adequate level of expenditures and deliveries while the amount of new authority to incur obligations was reduced. The backlog of unexpended balances for military assistance...is being reduced from a total of $7.7 billion at the beginning of the fiscal year 1955 to an estimated $4.5 billion at the end of the current fiscal year.... This level of unexpended balances should not now be further reduced."
- Economic Aid, Other MSP Programs -- The President requested 1957 appropriations of $1.9 billion and projected expenditures of $1.8 billion, the bulk of which will go for defense support in Asia. He said he considered it "essential that the Mutual Security Act be amended to assure greater continuity in providing economic assistance for development projects and programs which we approve and which require a period of years for planning and completion. Accordingly, I shall ask for limited authority to make longer term commitments for assistance for such projects, to be fulfilled from appropriations made in future years."

Cost of Foreign Aid

The cost of foreign aid was estimated variously in terms of monies appropriated by Congress, expenditures and net transfers of grants and credits. According to ICA, foreign aid appropriations from 1945 through 1955

Counterpart Funds

By terms of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948, countries receiving U. S. grants were required to set up "local currency counterpart accounts." Deposits were to be equivalent to the dollar value of U. S. non-military grants, and were to be "held or used within such countries...for a variety of purposes consistent with the objectives of the Act." Except for a small portion reserved for U. S. use, usually 5 percent, these deposits belonged to the foreign countries. However, withdrawals must be approved by the U. S.

From April 3, 1948, through June 30, 1955, the equivalent of $13,745,700,000 had been deposited in these accounts. About $700 million had been transferred for U. S. use, while $11.8 billion had been withdrawn by the countries involved. Largest depositors:

	Adjusted Deposits	Withdrawals

totaled $51.4 billion. To this can be added $16 billion in authorizations to expend public debt funds, and another $4 billion in authorizations to transfer agricultural surpluses, military vessels and other surplus property. Grand total: $71,346,793,323.

The contrast between appropriations and expenditures is shown in the following figures on the Mutual Security Program, also supplied by ICA. Amounts are in billions.

Fiscal Year	Appropriations			Expenditures
	Mil.*	Non-Mil.	Total	Mil.*	Non-Mil.	Total
1952	$5.3	$2.0	$7.3	$2.4	$2.2	$4.6
1953	4.0	2.0	6.0	4.0	1.7	5.7
1954	2.8	1.9	4.7	3.5	1.4	4.9
1955	1.3	1.5	2.8	2.5	1.7	4.2
1956	1.0	1.7	2.7	2.5	1.7	4.2
Total	$14.4	$9.1	$23.5	$14.9	$8.7	$23.6
1957 Est.	$3.0	$1.9	$4.9	$2.5	$1.8	$4.3

* Military includes direct forces support.
 Non-military includes defense support.

As shown, total MSP appropriations of $23.5 billion over five years approximated total expenditures of $23.6 billion, although the components varied year by year.

Foreign Aid 'Pipeline'

The time-lag between the appropriation of funds, their obligation to various programs, their actual expenditure and in the case of supplies, their final delivery overseas, accounts for the "pipeline" concept of aid in transit. However, estimates of what is in the "pipeline" at any given moment vary widely. Some estimates include only unexpended balances, others include only grants. Most complete estimate appears to be that of the Department of Commerce (see Survey of Current Business, Oct. 1955):

"Including the pipeline of assistance on order and the carryover from prior authorizations, $14 billion was potentially available at the beginning of fiscal year 1956 for transfer to foreign countries without further Congressional action. This compares with a total carryover plus new legislative authority at the beginning of fiscal year 1953 -- when annual utilizations were at a peak postwar rate of $7 billion -- of almost $20 billion. The total amount available for foreign aid has decreased by approximately $2 billion each successive year as new appropriations were smaller."

Of the $14 billion available July 1, 1955, according to this estimate, $2.8 billion represented available credits, chiefly unused lending authority of the Export-Import Bank. The balance consisted of $7.3 billion for military supplies and services (not including direct forces support) and $3.9 billion for all other programs. If estimated fiscal 1956 expenditures of $4.2 billion were subtracted from the $14 billion, a total of $9.8 billion might remain available for foreign aid after July 1, 1956, without new appropriations.

Analysis of the President's Budget for fiscal 1957 shows that, of the $4.3 billion he expected to spend in fiscal 1957, $3.3 billion would come from funds already appropriated, while only $1 billion would come from the $4.9 billion that he was asking in new appropriations. Much of the $3.3 billion to be spent from prior appropriations already was obligated for the purchase of long lead-time items, such as planes. Following is a breakdown of projected appropriations and expenditures for fiscal 1957. Amounts are in millions of dollars.

Net Transfers: Grants, Credits

Neither appropriation nor expenditure figures show returns, whether in the form of repayments on loans or reverse grants of goods and services. Therefore, the cumulative data on foreign grants and credits, prepared by the Department of Commerce, offered the best index of net aid transferred since 1945. In this compilation:

"Grants are largely outright gifts for which no payment is expected...Credits are loan disbursements or transfers under other agreements which give rise to specific obligations to repay, over a period of years, usually with interest.... All known returns to the United States Government stemming from grants and credits are taken into account in net grants and credits."

Although credit transactions of the Export-Import Bank and other agencies are included, the data excluded U.S. capital investments of $635 million in the International Bank and of $2,750 million in the International Monetary Fund, which were managed independently.

Gross and net grants and credits are shown in the following table, both as totals and for the periods before the Korean action (July 1, 1945, to June 25, 1950) and after (June 25, 1950, to Sept. 30, 1955). Amounts are shown in millions.

Trends in Postwar Aid

Analysis of the preceding table of gross and net transfers, and of the table of net grants and credits by area and type (see page 437) points to these trends:

• Military Aid -- Net military grants from July 1, 1945, to Sept. 30, 1955, totaled $15.3 billion. Of this, $1.4 billion was transferred before Korea, chiefly to China, Greece and Turkey. Of the $13.9 billion transferred after Korea, $9.3 billion or two-thirds went to Western Europe; $2.8 billion or 20 percent to Asia.

• Non-Military Grants -- This category, which included direct forces support, totaled $26.1 billion, of which $15.6 billion or 60 percent was transferred before Korea. Western Europe received approximately 60 percent of both pre- and post-Korea non-military grants. Asia's share rose from 23 percent before Korea to 26 percent after Korea.

• Net Credits -- Of a total of $10.9 billion, $9.3 billion or 85 percent was transferred before Korea. Of the latter amount, $8.1 billion or 87 percent went to Western Europe.

• Total Net Transfers -- Of $52.3 billion total, some 50 percent has been in non-military grants, 20 percent in non-military credit, and 30 percent in military grants. By area, Western Europe has received 64 percent of all net aid; Asia 20 percent; the Near East 8 percent.

Legislative Restrictions

In acceding to Administration requests for foreign aid funds, Congress has asserted its own authority in two ways: by appropriating less money than was requested, and by adding a variety of stipulations and restrictions concerning the use of funds. Of the latter, several have been opposed by the executive branch as being too restrictive and a few have been repealed.

Broadly speaking, the stipulations currently in the law have one of three purposes: to control the administration of foreign aid, to achieve certain foreign policy goals or to achieve certain domestic policy goals. Following are some of the major provisions in existing legislation which bear on these three objectives. (Unless otherwise noted, citations refer to the Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, Public Law 665, 83rd Congress, and Public Law 138, 84th Congress.)

ADMINISTRATIVE CONTROL

Transferability of Funds: "Not to exceed 10 per centum of the funds made available pursuant to any provision of this Act may be transferred to and consolidated with the funds made available pursuant to any other provisions of this Act..." (Sect. 501)

Loan Assistance: "...Not less than $200 million shall be available only for the furnishing of assistance on terms of repayment." (Sect. 505 (b))

President's Fund for Asian Economic Development: Of $100 million appropriated "not less than 50 per centum...shall be available only for furnishing assistance on terms of repayment..." (Sect. 418 (c))

Rate of Obligation: "Not more than 20 per centum of any funds made available...shall be obligated and/or reserved during the last two months of the fiscal year." (Mutual Security Appropriation Act, 1956, Sect. 106)

Propaganda: No money is to be used for "the dissemination within the United States of general propaganda in support of the mutual security program..." (Sect. 508)

FOREIGN POLICY OBJECTIVES

Communist China: It is "the continuing sense of the Congress that the Communist regime in China has not demonstrated its willingness to fulfill the obligations contained in the Charter of the United Nations and should not be recognized to represent China in the United Nations." (Mutual Security Act of 1955, Sect. 12)

European Unification: Foreign aid "should be so administered as to support concrete measures to promote greater political federation, military integration and economic unification in Europe." (Sect. 105 (b)(1), as amended)

Conditions for Military Assistance: Any recipient nation must agree, among other things, to--

"Make, consistent with its political and economic stability, the full contribution permitted by its manpower, resources, facilities and general economic condition to the development and maintenance of its own defensive strength and the defensive strength of the free world. (Sect. 142 (a)(4))

"Impose appropriate restrictions against transfer of title to or possession of any equipment and materials, information or services furnished..." (Sect. 142 (a)(7))

"Permit continuous observation and review by U. S. representatives" of military assistance programs. (Sect. 142 (a)(10))

Strategic Trade: "No military, economic or financial assistance shall be supplied to any nation unless it applies an embargo on such shipments (of arms and other strategic items) to any nation or combination of nations threatening the security of the United States, including the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and all countries under its domination." (Mutual Defense Assistance Control Act of 1951, Sect. 101)

DOMESTIC POLICY OBJECTIVES

Farm Surpluses: "Not less than $300 million shall be used to finance the export and sale for foreign currencies of surplus agricultural commodities or products thereof produced in the United States..." (Sect. 402, as amended by Sect. 8 (b), Mutual Security Act of 1955)

Use of American Vessels: Steps must be taken to see that "at least 50 per centum of the gross tonnage of commodities, materials and equipment procured out of funds made available (under the Act) and transported to or from the United States on ocean vessels...is so transported on United States flag commercial vessels." (Sect. 509)

Offshore Procurement: Defense support and development assistance funds "may be used for the procurement of commodities outside the United States unless the President determines that such procurement will result in adverse effects upon the economy of the United States, with special reference to any areas of labor surplus, or upon the industrial mobilization base, which outweigh the economic advantages to the United States of less costly procurement abroad." Duration of Assistance Programs

In 1948, Congress approved President Truman's request that the European Recovery Program be undertaken on a four-year basis by writing into the authorizing legislation a terminal date of June 30, 1952. However, Congress refused the President's request for funds for 15 months (from April 1, 1948, to June 30, 1949) designed to put the program on a fiscal year basis. Instead, funds were voted for 12 months. But in 1949, funds were authorized for 15 months, through the 1950 fiscal year.

In writing the Mutual Security Act of 1951, Congress wrote in a terminal date of June 30, 1954, for the program. No terminal date was included in the Mutual Security Act of 1954, except for Title II (Development Assistance), which was to expire June 30, 1955. That reservation was repealed in 1955. So there is no terminal date at present. However, Congress must appropriate the funds with which to run the program each year.

Congressional Reaction

After a series of conflicting statements concerning the Eisenhower Administration's foreign aid plans, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, at a Dec. 20, 1955, press conference, affirmed reports that the President would ask for $4.9 billion in new appropriations, and the Administration viewed foreign aid as a continuing necessity. Said Dulles: "We consider that both the economic and the military aid will need to go on for a considerable period of time at about the present level."

Dulles' statement, together with the President's State of the Union and Budget messages, brought varied reactions from Members of Congress. Major comments concerning the size and scope of the Administration's foreign aid program:

• Sen. Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.), Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Dec. 21 -- "The current rate of supply should be cut to begin with. We have already spent $40 billion on foreign economic aid alone since this policy was initiated, and the call for unlimited extension at the same level is fantastic..."

• Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.), Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Jan. 7 -- "I am not in favor of adding anything to the pipeline, reserves or the unexpended balances.... It is good to have continuity in the foreign aid program, but that does not outweigh my objections" to a permanent program.

• Sen. Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Jan. 7 -- "I am absolutely opposed to any permanent foreign aid program -- and that is what would be involved in a 10-year, or even a five-year, plan."

• Sen. William F. Knowland (R Calif.), Minority Leader, Jan. 14 -- "It would be far better for the Administration to come up and make its presentation each year than to seek a 10-year commitment in advance."

• Rep. James P. Richards (D S.C.), Chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Jan. 16 -- "It is only being honest with the country and the people not to keep coming back at each session saying this thing will end next year. If the program is worthwhile for the defense of the United States, it must be projected into the future as long as this cold war continues, and the fiscal responsibility of the U.S. can stand it."

• Joint statement by 17 Democratic Representatives, Jan. 22 -- Called for "authority in this year's legislation for the President to make certain advance commitments of economic development funds for a period not exceeding five years. Within a reasonable limit, this will increase, not reduce, the flexibility of our aid program by permitting the executive to meet emergency situations as they arise."

Party Records

Since 1945, foreign aid legislation almost always has encountered spirited Congressional opposition from Democrats as well as Republicans. Before 1953, the Republican majority generally supported moves to cut foreign aid funds, while the Democratic majority opposed such moves. With the advent of the Eisenhower Administration, the GOP majority generally has voted with the Democratic majority in support of foreign aid. However, funds have been cut in committee, sustained on the floor.

Following are some of the major roll-call votes since 1950, which involved moves to cut foreign aid, and the way the parties divided

Foreign Assistance Act of 1950. Kem (R Mo.) amendment to reduce authorization by $1 billion, from $2.95 to $1.95 billion. Rejected by the Senate, 17-62 (R 12-24; D 5-38).

Same bill. Taft (R Ohio) and others, amendment to reduce authorization by $500 million. Rejected, 40-40 (R 30-6; D 10-34).

Same bill. Bridges (R N.H.) amendment to reduce authorization by $250 million. Agreed to, 47-33 (R 33-3; D 14-30).

Mutual Security Act of 1951, authorizing $7.5 billion in military and economic aid. Dirksen (R Ill.) amendment to cut European economic aid by $500 million. Rejected by the Senate, 31-41 (R 26-7; D 5-34).

Same bill. Dirksen amendment to cut European economic aid by $250 million. Agreed to, 36-34 (R 26-5; D 10-29).

Same bill. Reece (R Tenn.) motion to recommit bill with instructions to cut $350 million from economic aid. Agreed to by House, 186-177 (R 149-14; D 37-162).

Mutual Security Act of 1952. Vorys (R Ohio) amendment to reduce economic aid to Europe by $615 million. Agreed to by House, 221-137 (R 160-10; D 61-127).

Same bill. Vorys amendment to cut funds for Asia by $111 million. Agreed to, 192-165 (R 132-36; D 60-129).

Mutual Security Act of 1953. Long (D La.) motion to recommit bill with instructions to reduce total authorizations of $5.3 billion by $1 billion. Rejected by the Senate, 34-48 (R 21-21; D 13-26).

1954

Mutual Security Authorization for 1955. Long (D La.) amendment to reduce total figure of $3.2 billion by $1 billion. Rejected by the Senate, 38-48 (R 20-24; D 18-23).

Same bill. Long amendment to cut total by $500 million. Agreed to, 45-41 (R 19-25; D 26-15).

Mutual Security Appropriations for 1956. Senate Committee amendment to restore $420 million for military assistance cut out by House. Adopted, 50-38 (R 19-15; D 21-23).

12 - PART HEALTH PROGRAM ENACTED

President Eisenhower, in a special message to Congress Jan. 26, 1956, said "the nation still has not summoned the resources it properly and usefully could summon to the cause of better health." He asked for substantial increases in medical research funds, a new program of construction grants for research and training facilities, and training programs for public health specialists. (For text of the message, see p. 71.)

During the session, a total of 15 legislative proposals on health were considered, and 12 approved. However, while Congress bettered by nearly $58 million the President's request for a 28 percent increase in funds for basic medical research, it whittled down his proposal for a five-year, $250 million construction program for research and teaching facilities to a three-year, $90 million program. Congress also failed to take any action on health reinsurance proposals.

On the whole, the President's health program fared better than his 1954 and 1955 proposals. In 1954 Congress approved a broadening and expansion of the hospital construction program and an expanded vocational rehabilitation program. In 1955, however, action was deferred on most of Mr. Eisenhower's proposals, and the only significant health legislation was the Poliomyelitis Vaccination Act (PL 377) and the Mental Health Study Act of 1955 (PL 182). (1955 Almanac, p. 259)

MEDICAL RESEARCH

In his 1956 requests, the President asked Congress to authorize a 28 percent increase to $126,525,000 in federal funds for National Institutes of Health basic medical research, and a five-year, $250 million construction program for research and teaching facilities, with institutions to supply matching funds. Congress, in its appropriations bill (HR 9720 -- PL 635) for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare for fiscal 1957, allotted NIH $184 million for research -- almost $58 million more than President Eisenhower requested. (See story, p. 635) A Congressional report (H Rept 2093) said the Administration's request was "wholly inadequate" and showed "lack of foresight and imagination."

The President's request for construction of health research and training facilities did not fare so well. Congress authorized only a three-year, $90 million program, restricted to research facilities, on the grounds that a limited program was desirable "on an experimental basis" (S 849 -- PL 835, see below). In signing the measure July 30, President Eisenhower said it was "deficient in two important respects.... It fails to provide assistance...for construction of facilities for the training of medical scientists, and the amounts authorized are inadequate in the light of these needs." HEW Secretary Marion B. Folsom Aug. 6 said the Administration would "continue to press" for a longer program, including medical training facilities. He said the health legislation passed by Congress would greatly increase research into the causes, prevention and cure of diseases, but that the proposal for medical training facilities was "vital legislation."

OTHER REQUESTS

The President also requested, as he had in 1955: a five-year grant program for training of nurses and other public health specialists; federal matching support of state and local funds for care of the aged, disabled and dependent children; group health insurance benefits for government employees; and improved medical care for servicemen's families. He also proposed sickness surveys, expansion of medical care facilities, a new program of mental health project grants, extension of the polio vaccination program, strengthening of the Water Pollution Control Act, improvements in Indian health facilities, and increased funds for the Food and Drug Administration, civil defense program, vocational rehabilitation and veterans' medical programs.

Congress met his requests for extended hospital construction, mental health projects and nurse and specialist training programs in the Health Amendments Act of 1956 (S 3958 -- PL 911, see below).

Improved medical care for servicemen's families was provided in HR 9429 -- PL 569. (See p. 454)

The President's request for a comprehensive illness survey resulted in passage of the National Health Survey Act (S 3076 -- PL 652, see below) which provided for a continuing survey and special studies on the extent of illness and disability in the United States.

The Water Pollution Control Act was strengthened and extended, as President Eisenhower requested, in S 890 -- PL 660. (See p. 570)

Provisions for federal support in the care of the aged, disabled and dependent children were included in the Social Security Act Amendments (HR 7225 -- PL 880, see p. 392).

Congress extended until June 30, 1957, the Poliomyelitis Vaccination Assistance Act of 1955, through passage of S 2990 -- PL 411. The Act authorized "such sums as may be necessary" for states to provide vaccine for children under 20 years of age and expectant mothers. President Eisenhower Feb. 8 requested a $33 million supplemental appropriation for the program, to be available, with left-over funds from 1955, until June 30, 1957. In HR 10004 -- PL 533, Congress appropriated $27.8 million.

HEALTH INSURANCE

Congress took no action on health insurance or proposals for pooling arrangements among small health insurance companies. Although the President had requested reinsurance legislation both in 1953 and 1954, he made no specific recommendations for such measures in 1956. He said private insurance companies had developed new types of policies and prepayment plans, and the Administration was considering proposals to permit pooling agreements.

Secretary Folsom June 29 proposed a bill (S 4172) to cover such pooling, but no action was taken by Congress. The measure would have removed antitrust restrictions and permitted small insurance companies and voluntary health insurance groups to pool resources to expand their hospital and medical expense coverage.

HEALTH AMENDMENTS ACT

S 3958 -- Reported by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 2070) May 29, 1956.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate June 11.
- Reported, amended, by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 2569) July 2.
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 23.
- Senate agreed to House amendments by voice vote July 24.

P.L. 911 -- Signed into law August 2.

The Health Amendments Act of 1956 incorporated five items of President Eisenhower's health program: traineeships for professional public health personnel; advanced training for professional nurses; practical nurse training; extension of hospital survey and construction programs; and assistance in mental health programs.

No opposition to the bill was expressed in Congress and the Senate and House passed almost identical versions.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, S 3958:

Authorized the Surgeon General to make traineeship awards during a three-year period -- either directly to individuals or through grants to institutions -- for public health specialists in federal, state or local institutions. Administration of the program would be supervised by an expert advisory committee, appointed by the Surgeon General; the program would be appraised at a special conference of representative groups in 1958.

Authorized the Surgeon General to make grants over a three-year period to institutions for advanced training of professional nurses for teaching or administrative work. An expert advisory committee would be appointed, and a conference would be called in 1958 to review the program and consider the desirability of state participation on a matching basis during the remaining years.

Amended the Vocational Education Act of 1946 and authorized a five-year program of grants to the states for the training of practical nurses, with yearly grants not to exceed $5 million. The program would be administered by the Commissioner of Education. During the first two years the states would be required to pay one dollar for every three federal dollars; in the last three years the program would be on a 50-50 matching basis.

Extended for two years, to June 30, 1959, the medical facilities survey and construction program (Hill-Burton Act).

Authorized the Surgeon General to make "special project grants" for investigations, experiments and demonstrations in the mental health field, particularly those designed to improve the operation or administration of state mental institutions.

BACKGROUND -- President Eisenhower, in his Jan. 26 health message to Congress, said there were serious shortages in health service personnel and recommended, as he had in 1955, legislation to provide for training programs. He also recommended extension of the Hill-Burton Act, covering a hospital survey and construction program, and repeated his 1955 request for a program of mental health project grants.

SICKNESS STUDY

S 3076 -- Reported by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 1718) March 28, 1956.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate March 29.
- Reported, amended, by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 2108) May 3.
- Passed by voice vote of the House June 18.
- House amendments concurred in by voice vote of the Senate June 27.

P.L. 652 -- Signed into law July 3.

The National Health Survey Act authorized continuing Public Health Service surveys of sickness and disability in the United States, as requested by President Eisenhower.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, S 3076:

Authorized the Surgeon General to conduct a continuing survey and special studies, on a non-compulsory basis, on the extent of illness and disability in the United States; and to develop and test new or improved methods for obtaining such information.

Authorized annual appropriations for the studies.

Authorized the Surgeon General to use federal, state or private agencies in carrying out the Act; encouraged consultation and cooperative arrangements with interested agencies wherever possible.

Authorized the Surgeon General to make available to health officials, scientists and appropriate organizations technical advice and assistance on the use of new statistical and survey methods.

RESEARCH FACILITIES

S 849 -- Reported by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 869) July 14, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate July 18, 1955.
- Reported, amended, by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 2184) May 21, 1956.
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 13.
- Conference report (H Rept 2773) agreed to by voice votes in the House, July 19, and the Senate, July 20.

P.L. 835 -- Signed into law July 30.

The bill, providing for a three-year, $90 million construction program for health research facilities, was called "an important step forward" by President Eisenhower when he signed it July 30. However, both the President and Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Marion B. Folsom expressed regret that Congress had not fulfilled Mr. Eisenhower's request for a five-year, $250 million program covering teaching as well as research facilities. The House Committee's report on the measure said a limited program was desirable on an experimental basis and that after about 18 months the possible need for extending and enlarging the program would be studied.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, S 849, the Health Research Facilities Act of 1956:

Established a National Advisory Council on Health Research Facilities, to be headed by the Surgeon General, and to include an official of the National Science Foundation, designated by the National Science Board, and 12 members appointed by the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Directed that of the 12 appointed members, four were to be from the general public and eight were to be leading medical, dental or scientific authorities.

Authorized appropriation of $30 million annually for fiscal 1957-59, to be matched by the recipients on a 50-50 basis, after approval by the Council, for construction of health research facilities by public or non-profit institutions.

Permitted the institutions to receive conditional approval of their applications if assurance was given of securing matching funds within a reasonable time.

Set the following standards for approval of applications: the facility would be used for a minimum of 10 years after completion for health research; sufficient funds would be available for effective use after completed construction; the projects would expand or improve the institution's research capacity and promote equitable geographical distribution of research (with due regard to population, available workers and resources).

Directed the Surgeon General to submit an annual report to the President on the program.

BACKGROUND -- S 849 was passed by the Senate on July 18, 1955. It set up a three-year, $90 million program, with the United States divided into four regions to share approximately equally in the funds.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARINGS -- The Health and Science Subcommittee held hearings on S 849 April 11, 12, 13 and 18, 1956. Scientific leaders testified on the need for support for facilities at all levels in the health sciences.

ACTION -- The Committee May 21 reported S 849 (H Rept 2184) with amendments. The report said it was hoped "that under the impetus of this program, and without need to make further federal funds available," additional health research facilities would be constructed and additional equipment provided by private citizens, industry, voluntary organizations, and through state and local funds.

In amending the bill the Committee said the Senate's provisions for allotting grants "might prove too rigid." Instead, the House measure provided that the relative effectiveness of proposed facilities in promoting an equitable geographical distribution should be used as a guide in grants.

Floor Action

The House July 13 passed S 849 by voice vote, with the committee amendments. An amendment by Peter Mack (D Ill.) to include a provision for medical training facilities was ruled out of order.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, S 849 conformed to the final version of the bill except that it would have begun the program in fiscal 1958, rather than in fiscal 1957.

DEBATE -- July 13 -- Mack -- Training was "more important today than research because you cannot do the research unless you train young men and women...."

Martin Dies (D Texas) -- There was no disposition to delay a workable medical training bill, but the record was not "sufficiently complete."

William L. Springer (R Ill.) -- There still was "a great deal of doubt" on how medical training grants should be made, but there was recently a "general willingness" by medical schools to increase enrollments if they received grants.

Conference

REPORT -- A House-Senate conference committee July 18 filed a report (H Rept 2773) which followed the House version of the bill except for recommending that the grant program begin in fiscal 1957 and continue through fiscal 1959.

ACTION -- The House July 19 and the Senate July 20 agreed to the conference report by voice votes without debate.

In HR 12350 -- PL 855, Congress appropriated the full $30 million for the program in fiscal 1957.

SCHOOL MILK, BRUCELLOSIS

HR 8320 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 1696) Jan. 30, 1956.

- Passed by the House, amended, Feb. 1, by voice vote.
- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 1471) Feb. 6.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, Feb. 8, by voice vote.
- Conference report (H Rept 1898), with Senate amendments eliminated, agreed to by voice vote of the Senate March 15. (For roll-call vote, see p. 157.) Report rejected by the House March 21, by a 195-215 roll-call vote. Senate amendments agreed to by the House, March 21, by a 406-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 192)

P.L. 465 -- Signed into law April 2.

HR 8320 extended for two years, and authorized more money for, the school milk and brucellosis eradication programs. At one point the bill was involved in maneuvers over the omnibus farm bill later vetoed by the President. After a two-year extension of the program was added to the Senate's farm bill (S 3183) March 14, Democrats sought to limit the effect of HR 8320 to the remaining three months of fiscal 1956. Republicans said the programs had become a "political football" and that Democrats hoped to use the two-year provisions for bargaining purposes during omnibus farm bill conferences.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, HR 8320:

Amended the Agricultural Acts of 1949 and 1954 to extend the school milk and brucellosis eradication programs through June 30, 1958.

Increased from $50 million to $60 million the authorization for the school milk program in fiscal 1956.

Increased to $75 million the amount of Commodity Credit Corp. funds available for the milk program after fiscal 1956.

Increased from $15 million to $17 million the authorization for the brucellosis eradication program in fiscal 1956.

Increased to $20 million the CCC funds available for the program after fiscal 1956.

Extended the milk program to child care centers, nursery schools, settlement houses, summer camps and similar non-profit institutions for under-privileged children.

Extended for two additional years (from Dec. 31, 1956) authority for disposal of surplus dairy products through the Veterans Administration and armed services.

When it was discovered that some non-profit camps, such as Boy Scout and 4-H Club camps, were not eligible for the program, Congress passed another bill (HR 11375 -- PL 752) remedying that error. HR 11375 was passed by the House July 2, by the Senate July 16, and signed into law July 20.

Background

Funds for the school milk and brucellosis eradication programs were authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1954 (PL 690). (1954 Almanac, p. 101) The Act authorized the Commodity Credit Corp. to spend up to $50 million annually from Sept. 1, 1954, through June 30, 1956, to supply school milk. It also authorized expenditure of up to $15 million annually for two years to expand the brucellosis eradication program. HR 8320 was introduced as an emergency measure to carry the programs through the 1956 school year because funds were running out.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture, Dairy Products Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 12 -- Representatives of the Department of Agriculture's Marketing Service testified during a closed hearing.

Jan. 24 -- Deputy Administrator Roy W. Lennartson of the Agriculture Marketing Service and M. R. Clarkson, deputy administrator of agricultural research, Department of Agriculture, testified at an open hearing.

ACTION -- The Committee Jan. 30 reported HR 8320 (H Rept 1696), with the necessary increases in funds to carry the programs through fiscal 1956.

Floor Action

The House Feb. 1 passed HR 8320 by voice vote, amended.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 8320:

Increased the authorized use of Commodity Credit Corp. funds in fiscal 1956 for the school milk program from $50 million to $60 million for the current school year.

Authorized an increase from $15 million to $17 million in federal funds available for the brucellosis eradication program for fiscal 1956.

DEBATE -- Feb. 1 -- Several Congressmen said the school milk program had expanded so rapidly additional funds were needed immediately to prevent its disruption.

Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- More than 62,000 children currently were participating in the program, representing a 50 percent increase within a year, with milk distribution in the 1956 school year to total almost 1 billion half pints.

Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.) -- The lack of sufficient funds had "tended to create uncertainties in the minds of both school and dairy people in some states."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- Feb. 6 reported HR 8320 (S Rept 1471) with amendments extending the programs for two years and making certain non-profit institutions eligible for school milk funds.

Floor Action

The Senate Feb. 8 passed HR 8320 by voice vote, with committee amendments. There was no debate.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, provisions of HR 8320 were those of the final version (above).

Conference

In a conference report (H Rept 1898) filed March 19 the House version dealing only with fiscal 1956 was recommended over Republican conferees' protests.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate March 15 agreed to the conference report by voice vote. A motion by Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) to recommit the report and insist on Senate amendments extending the programs two years was rejected by a 46-48 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 157)

DEBATE -- Allen J. Ellender (D La.) -- Was "surprised and disappointed" that two GOP House conferees did not sign the report on "their own bill." Failure to adopt the report might bring about a shutdown of the programs.

Hickenlooper -- Was "at an utter loss to know why all this monkey business has been going on" regarding the program's continuance for two years.

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- Apparently "a good many" House members regretted asking for a conference since they really wanted a two-year extension.

HOUSE ACTION

The House March 21 first rejected the report by a 195-215 roll-call vote; then agreed to the Senate amendments extending the programs through fiscal 1958 by a 406-0 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 192)

DEBATE -- Congressmen said the bill had become a "political football." Republicans said Democrats wanted to use the two-year extension provisions for bargaining purposes during conferences on the omnibus farm bill (HR 12).

Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- Only a one-year extension was necessary and the appropriate Congressional committees should consider any long-term recommendations.

Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) -- If provisions of HR 8320 were included in the farm bill, "one need not be a prophet to anticipate the great pressures which will be exercised in support of or in opposition to some of the provisions in the farm bill."

CAMPAIGN SPENDING

Two proposals to revise existing campaign contribution and spending laws were under Senate consideration in 1956, but neither received floor action -- reportedly because Senators could not agree on regulation of primary campaigns, inclusion of intra-state political committees and use of labor union political funds. There was an undercurrent of opinion in Congress that the problem should be put off until 1957, when new hearings could be held and new bills written and debated in a "non-political atmosphere."

During the fall election campaign, the Senate Privileges and Elections Subcommittee held hearings on campaign contributions by political committees and other groups interested in the 1956 election. (See p. 702)

Background

REFERENCE -- "Campaign Spending" (1955 Almanac, p. 375, 722)

Sen. Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D Mo.) and three other Senators Jan. 21, 1955, introduced a bill (S 636) to repeal the Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925 and certain portions of the Act to Prevent Pernicious Political Activities of 1939, as amended. S 636 was reported (S Rept 624) by the Rules and Administration Committee June 22, 1955, amended. No floor action was taken on the bill. (1955 Almanac, p. 375)

As an outgrowth of the disclosure by Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) of a proposed campaign contribution during debate on the natural gas bill (see p. 469) Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) and Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) Feb. 28, 1956, introduced S 3308, a bill having essentially the same purpose as S 636, but also providing that political contributions of up to $100 be tax deductible. The bill also made certain provisions regarding political broadcasts, easing existing regulations on time for Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates. Eighty-three other Senators ultimately became co-sponsors of S 3308.

Proposed Revisions

Following is a comparison of existing law with the two proposals to change the law:

DEFINITIONS

Law -- Defines terms including candidate, political committee, contribution, expenditure. The term "political committee" includes any group in two or more states accepting contributions or making expenditures for the purpose of influencing an election.

S 636 -- Would include same terms, redefining some of them. The term "candidate" would be extended to mean an individual on whose behalf contributions were received or expenditures made in support of his candidacy.

"Political committee" would be extended to include any group accepting contributions or making expenditures totaling more than $100 in any calendar year for the purpose of influencing an election. This would include all committees active in campaigns for federal office.

The term "election" would be extended from its meaning of a general or special election to include a primary election (including a preferential primary), and a convention of a political party or caucus held for the purpose of nominating candidates.

S 3308 -- Would define the same terms in a manner similar to that of existing law, but would not include any formal definition of "election." "Political committee" would include all committees active in campaigns for federal office, and otherwise as in S 636. No mention is made of primary elections.

POLITICAL COMMITTEES

Law -- No contribution shall be accepted or expenditure made by or on behalf of a political committee for purposes of influencing an election until the chairman and treasurer of the committee have been chosen.

S 636 -- Would include the above and in addition state: "No person other than the chairman or the treasurer shall make an expenditure for or on behalf of" the committee.

S 3308 -- No comparable provision.

Law -- The treasurer of a political committee must keep receipts of expenditures exceeding $10 for at least two years.

S 636 -- The treasurer of a political committee would keep receipts of expenditures exceeding $100 for at least three years.

S 3308 -- As in existing law, substituting $100 for $10 minimum for receipts to be kept.

Law -- The treasurer of a political committee must file with the Clerk of the House of Representatives on prescribed dates a statement containing names and addresses of contributors of $100 or more, expenditures of $10 or more and totals.

S 636 -- The same as existing law, substituting $100 for $10 expenditures to be reported. In addition, it would provide for each item of expenditure to be described in sufficient detail to accurately identify it.

S 3308 -- Provisions the same as in S 636.

Law -- No political committee shall receive contributions or make expenditures of more than $3 million during a calendar year.

S 636 -- No political committee could receive contributions or make expenditures in amounts greater than that obtained by multiplying 20 cents by the total votes cast for all candidates for President in any one of the last three elections.

S 3308 -- Provisions the same as in S 636.

CANDIDATES

Law -- No comparable provision.

S 636 -- No contributions could be accepted or expenditures made by or for a political committee to support a candidate until the candidate or a representative designated by him has authorized the committee to support him. The authorization must be in writing and filed with the Clerk of the House or the Secretary of the Senate. (Candidates for nomination for President or Vice President would be exempt to allow for "drafts" of Presidential candidates. This also would not apply to the political committees of political parties recognized by law.)

S 3308 -- Provision similar to that of S 636.

Law -- No comparable provision.

S 636 -- A candidate could withdraw his authorization by notifying the Clerk or Secretary. On receipt of such notice by the committee treasurer, the committee would be prohibited from further contributions or expenditures for the candidate unless a new authorization was filed.

S 3308 -- Provision the same as in S 636.

SPENDING LIMITS

Law -- The spending limit for a Senatorial candidate is $10,000; for a candidate for Representative, Delegate or Resident Commissioner, $2,500; or the amount equal to that obtained by multiplying three cents by the total votes cast at the last general election for all candidates for the particular office. The total limit cannot be more than $25,000 for Senate candidates or $5,000 for House candidates.

S 636 -- Would change the spending limit for a Senate candidate to $50,000, include a candidate for Representative-at-large in that category; for a House candidate the spending limit would be $12,500; in an election other than a caucus or nominating convention, the spending limit would be obtained by multiplying ten cents by the total votes cast in the last primary or general election for all candidates for the particular office.

S 3308 -- Would provide a limit of $75,000 or an amount equal to that obtained by multiplying 20 cents by the total votes cast in any state election of the preceding four years, whichever was greater, for a Senate candidate or Representative-at-large; a House candidate would have a limit of $15,000 or an amount equal to that obtained by multiplying 20 cents by the total votes cast in any election held in the area in the preceding four years for all candidates for the particular office, whichever was greater.

REPORTING

Law -- No comparable provision.

S 636 -- The Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate would develop uniform reporting methods; make statements filed available to the public; ascertain, where practicable, any failing to file statements where required, and correct defective statements; provide for periodic publication of compilations of names and addresses of contributors of $500 or more, and expenditures.

S 3308 -- Provision as in S 636.

Law -- No comparable provision.

S 636 -- The Clerk and the Secretary would transmit copies of these summaries and notices of defective statements to the House Administration Committee and Senate Rules and Administration Committee.

S 3308 -- Provision the same as in S 636 except that the committees were unspecified.

Law -- A statement required to be filed by a candidate or political committee or other person with the Clerk or the Secretary must be notarized; must be sent by registered mail to the Clerk or Secretary; and shall be preserved by the officer with whom it is filed for two years.

S 636 -- Provisions the same except that the period of preservation of statements would be 10 years.

S 3308 -- No comparable provision.

INDIVIDUAL CONTRIBUTIONS

Law -- An individual may not contribute more than a total of $5,000 to any one candidate or political committee.

S 636 -- An individual could not contribute more than $10,000 to any or all candidates or political committees.

S 3308 -- "Every individual who makes contributions and/or expenditures...aggregating more than $5,000 within a calendar year for the purpose of influencing (an) election...shall file a...statement showing all such contributions and/or expenditures, described in sufficient detail to accurately identify them...."

REVISED BILL

After S 3308 was introduced, the Senate Democratic leadership began making revisions in the original version. When Congress adjourned the latest draft had nine substantive changes from the original.

These changes eliminated the tax deduction feature of the original bill; boosted the fine for one election law infraction from $1,000 to $5,000; set an absolute, $10,000-a-year limit on individual campaign contributions; exempted intra-state political committees that spent less than $500 a year from federal jurisdiction; and suspended for one year state laws more restrictive than the proposed law.

Control of Primaries

One of the most controversial issues involved in election reform proposals was the question of placing primary elections for federal office under federal regulation.

The Federal Corrupt Practices Act -- Limits expenditures and requires reporting of contributions and spending in elections for federal office. It says: "The term 'election' includes a general or special election but does not include a primary election or convention of a political party."

S 636 -- "The term 'election' includes a general or special election and includes a primary election (including a preferential primary) and a convention of a political party or a caucus held for the purpose of nominating candidates."

S 3308 -- Excluded primaries, used the same definition of 'election' as the existing law, but added: "For the purpose of further informing the Congress and public, every candidate for nomination or election to the Senate or the House of Representatives shall file with the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House, respectively, within 30 days following an election, a certified true copy of any statement or statements of campaign contributions and expenditures required to be filed by him in his state...and the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate and the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, respectively, shall determine only that such statements are in fact true copies of the reports filed in the particular states."

PRO AND CON

The arguments for direct federal regulation of primaries:

The majority report of the Senate Rules and Administration Privileges and Elections Subcommittee, adopted by the full Committee, said: "The constitutionality as well as the desirability of defining elections so as to include primaries and other nominating devices for selecting candidates to elective federal offices was questioned during the course of the hearings. The Subcommittee feels, however, that such a definition is essential, and that it is both constitutional and most necessary....

"The extension of federal law to include primaries and conventions of political parties is constitutional in view of the fact that such was the law from 1911 (Public Law 32, 62nd Congress, 1st Session) until the Supreme Court in Newberry v. United States (1921) asserted that primary elections were within the exclusive jurisdiction of the several states. However, in 1941, in United States v. Classic, the Supreme Court asserted that Congress did have the authority to regulate primary elections to nominate candidates for election to Congress. Furthermore in 1947, (the)...Labor-Management Relations Act (18 USC 610)...provided that no labor union, corporation, or national bank could make any expenditure 'in connection with any primary election or political convention or caucus.' Therefore, the extension of federal laws so as to include primary elections, conventions or caucuses... is not an innovation.

"In addition the Subcommittee believes that the extension of federal law so as to include primaries and other nominating devices...is a desirable provision, since in approximately one-third of the states success in the primary is tantamount to success in the final election. Thus, the exemption from federal law of primaries, conventions and caucuses results in an inaccurate and distorted accounting of campaign practices, and places an unfair burden on those candidates who do encounter major opposition in the final election. Also, money spent in a primary election may frequently affect the result of the final election."

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT VIEWS

Testimony of Assistant Attorney General Warren Olney III, in charge of criminal division, Department of Justice, on S 636, May 10, 1955: "One of the most obvious defects, or loopholes, in the Federal Corrupt Practices Act...defines 'election' to include only a general or a special election and thereby omits a primary election or convention of a political party.... This failure to include primaries in the definition of that term practically destroys the effectiveness of the statute in many areas where it could be, if applicable, the most effective.

"In those states where one party is dominant... winning the party nomination is tantamount to election. In these areas...any restriction on campaign expenditures limited to the general election simply is not realistic. It is, under present law, possible for large sums of money to be spent in a primary by a candidate or his committee, which will accrue to his benefit in the general election but which under the present law are not required to be reported simply because the definition does not include these all-important preliminary contests.... I have no hesitancy in saying that in our view...the inclusion of primaries...would be a great step forward in improving the present Corrupt Practices Act."

GOP MINORITY

The arguments against direct federal regulation of primary elections:

Minority report of the Senate Rules and Administration Committee on S 636, signed by Republican Sens. William E. Jenner (Ind.), Frank A. Barrett (Wyo.), Joseph R. McCarthy (Wis.) and Carl T. Curtis (Neb.):

"S 636 would extend the jurisdiction of federal election laws and reporting thereunder to primaries, nominating conventions and the caucuses. These nominating procedures so far as Representatives in Congress and Senators are concerned vary in the several states. No detailed testimony was taken by the Committee in reference to the operation of state primary laws, or the substantial constitutional questions involved. The Committee did not go into a detailed study of how federal reporting might be applied to Presidential nominating conventions.

"The extension of federal election restrictions and reporting to primaries, caucuses and conventions merits further study, but until such study is made it should not be included in any proposal recommended by the Committee for enactment. In reference to the extension of federal election laws, and reporting to primary elections, Leonard Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said it was 'trying to cover too much ground.' Paul Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, recommended further study, saying that the Committee should 'explore the possibilities for reasonable and practical restrictions and limitations in primary elections.' " (Continued on p. 448)

State Laws on Primary Financing

State	Spending Limits: Senator	Rep.	Reports On: Contributions	Expenditures

State Summary

Following is a breakdown of basic requirements and the number of states having each:

Have some regulations: 42 states. Have none: six.

Limit amount spent in primary campaign for Senate: 30 states. No limit: 18 states.

Limit amount spent in primary campaign for House: 31 states. No limit: 17 states.

Require reports of campaign contributions by: candidates and political committees, 19 states; candidates only, three states; committees only, nine states; neither candidates nor committees, 17 states.

Require reports of spending by: candidates and political committees, 31 states; candidates only, 11 states; neither candidates nor committees, six states.

In the 18 states where the current Congressional delegation is from one party, Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia:

Limit amount spent in primary campaign for Senate and House: 11 states. No limit: seven states.

Require reports of campaign contributions by: both candidates and political committees, four states; candidates only, three states; committees only, two states; neither candidates nor committees, nine states.

Require reports of campaign expenditures by: both candidates and committees, eight states; candidates only, seven states; neither candidates nor committees, three states.

STATE CONTROL

Speech of Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R.S.D.) March 1, 1956, in support of his bill, S 3331, which was similar to the primary election coverage provisions of S 3308 quoted above:

"For some time, I have been studying proposed methods to include in some way or other the state primary elections of our political parties as we move forward to develop adequate legislation designed to prevent unwholesome influences in our elective processes. As one who abhors the current tendencies of central government throughout the world to acquire added authority and to deprive local autonomies and individual citizens of their traditional freedoms, I have looked with a jaundiced eye on legislative efforts to require by federal statute the performance of state primary elections on a standard pattern. The Tenth Amendment to our American Constitution protects our states in their rights to run their own affairs wherever authority is not specifically delegated to the federal government -- and no such authority has been delegated in the area of determining how states should conduct their primary campaigns.

"However, there is a way in which the federal government can help patrol the honesty and honor of state primary elections...by requiring each candidate and each political committee or functionary in a state primary campaign to file with the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate precisely the same record they are required to file within the state by state law.... I believe that passage of such a law as I propose will eventually stimulate states with weak or inadequate laws governing their state primaries and conventions to strengthen them, since within every state there is a great body of citizenship eager to make each state a shining light in the field of clean campaigning and honest elections."

ELECTORAL REFORM

S J Res 31 -- Reported by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 360) May 19, 1955.

- Recommitted to the Judiciary Committee by voice vote of the Senate March 27, 1956. (For roll-call votes, see p. 161)

S J Res 31 was one of several proposals to reform the method of electing the President and Vice President considered by the 84th Congress. Although dissatisfaction with the existing method was widespread, Senators failed to agree on a reform proposal, and the legislation died.

PROVISIONS -- In the form in which it was recommitted to the Judiciary Committee, S J Res 31 would have proposed an amendment to the Constitution and:

Abolished the office of elector but retained the electoral vote, equal to the number of Senators and Representatives from each state, as a counting device.

Provided that each state's electoral vote would be divided proportionally among the three top candidates within the state.

Offered an alternate method under which states could retain their electors, who would be chosen in the same manner as Senators and Representatives; the candidate with a plurality in a Congressional district would receive the vote of its one elector, and the candidate with a plurality in a state would receive the electoral votes equal to the number of its Senators and Representatives-at-large.

Made the person winning the highest number of electoral votes President, if he received at least 45 percent of the total number of electoral votes.

Provided that, if no person received 45 percent of the total, Congress, in joint session, would select the President from the three persons having the highest number of electoral votes; a plurality would be sufficient to elect.

Provided the same method for Vice Presidential election.

Made the amendment effective on Feb. 10 following its ratification.

Background

The electoral college was devised by the founding fathers as a compromise between direct election of the President by the people and selection by Congress. Every development since then has been aimed at increasing the public's influence in the matter. Current reform proposals, though differing in mechanics, have the same purpose: restoring the choice of the President more directly to the people.

Major criticisms of the electoral college:

- It permitted election of three men who trailed their opponents in the popular vote: John Quincy Adams in 1824; Rutherford B. Hayes in 1876; Benjamin Harrison in 1888.

- The unit rule, in existence since the early 1800's, gives a state's electoral vote to the candidate with a plurality of the popular vote. Critics say the unit rule has made minority party votes useless in many states, concentrated campaigns in a few pivotal states, given pressure groups within pivotal states disproportionate power, limited the choice of candidates to men from large states.

- It has permitted electors, only morally bound by the popular election results, to exercise judgment independent of the voters' decision. (However, from 1820 to 1952, only five of the 12,463 electoral votes were cast contrary to instruction.)

- The rule which requires the House of Representatives, voting by states, to choose a President from among the top three candidates if none has received a majority of the electoral vote runs contrary to the principle of popular choice, could result in a deadlock.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

In 1949, then Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge (R Mass., 1937-44, 1947-53) and then Rep. Ed Gossett (D Texas, 1939-51) introduced companion measures (S J Res 2 and H J Res 2) proposing that the electoral college be abolished. Each state's electoral vote would be divided among the candidates for President in proportion to their share of the popular vote. The Lodge-Gossett amendment was reported favorably by both Senate and House Judiciary Committees.

On Feb. 1, 1950, the Senate took up the measure and, after rejecting four amendments on roll-call votes and accepting one to make 40 percent of the electoral vote the minimum necessary to elect a candidate, approved the resolution by a 64-27 roll-call vote. In the House, H J Res 2 was bottled up in the Rules Committee, and a motion to suspend the rules and bring the motion to the floor was rejected in July, 1950, on a 134-210 roll call. So the Lodge-Gossett amendment died in the 81st Congress. (1950 Almanac, p. 388)

In July, 1951, the Senate and House Judiciary Committees reported companion measures (S J Res 52 and H J Res 19) similar to the Lodge-Gossett proposal. However, no further action was taken by the 82nd Congress. In 1953, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee held hearings on eight proposals relating to electoral reform, but no measure was reported.

Most of these proposals were re-introduced at the beginning of the 84th Congress, and seven were the subject of hearings in March and April, 1955, before the Senate Judiciary, Constitutional Amendments Subcommittee. The Committee May 19, 1955, reported a measure similar to the Lodge-Gossett plan (S J Res 31 -- S Rept 360).

S J Res 31 and two other proposals were the basis for floor consideration of electoral reform in 1956:

THE PROPORTIONAL METHOD

S J Res 31, as it was reported by the Judiciary Committee, embodied the basic features of the Lodge-Gossett plan. It had as its chief sponsors Sens. Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) and Price Daniel (D Texas).

PROVISIONS -- S J Res 31 would abolish the office of elector but retain the electoral vote, equal to the number of Senators and Representatives from each state, as a counting device. Each candidate would receive the same proportion of the electoral vote as his share of the state's popular vote with fractional votes carried to three decimals. High man would win. If no candidate received 40 percent of the electoral vote, the new Senators and Representatives -- sitting jointly and voting as individuals -- would pick the President from the two candidates having the largest electoral vote. A majority of the combined votes of the House and Senate would be needed to elect.

THE DISTRICT PLAN

This plan, embodied in S J Res 3, was known as the Mundt-Coudert proposal for its principal sponsors, Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) and Rep. Frederic R. Coudert Jr. (R N.Y.).

PROVISIONS -- S J Res 3 would preserve the office of elector but provide that electors be chosen in the same manner as Representatives and Senators. The Presidential candidate with a plurality in a Congressional district would receive the vote of its one elector. The Presidential candidate with a plurality in a state would receive the electoral votes equal to the number of its Senators and Representatives-at-large. High man would win, but if no candidate received a majority of the electoral vote, the new Senators and Representatives -- sitting jointly and voting as individuals -- would choose the President from the three candidates having the largest electoral vote. A plurality on the first roll call would be sufficient to elect.

DIRECT ELECTION METHOD

Proposals for direct popular election of the President were introduced in 1955 by Sen. William Langer (R N.D.) (S J Res 10) and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) (S J Res 53). Langer's proposal included provisions for a national Presidential primary.

PROVISIONS -- Both plans would abolish the electoral college, select the President directly by popular votes. They differed in several minor respects. Under Langer's plan, high man would win but if two candidates received the same number of popular votes, the House would choose the President, and the Senate the Vice President from the two candidates for each office who tied. Voting in the House would be by state, with each state having one vote. Voting in the Senate would be by individual, with a majority necessary in each case.

LEADING ISSUES

Questions have been raised about each of the three major plans for electoral reform. Major arguments:

Direct --Advocates claim nothing short of direct popular election would meet the requirements of democracy. Opponents raise two objections: Direct election would disturb the balance of power -- essential to the federal system -- between the states and the national government, and between large and small states; the system would cost the small states so much influence it could never be ratified by three-fourths of the state legislatures.

Proportional -- Opponents claimed it would favor creation of many small parties and might introduce the "dangerous doctrine" of proportional representation into American politics. Backers replied it would weaken the influence of organized minorities in pivotal states because their influence would be measured by their numbers or the merits of their case rather than by their bargaining power. They claimed there was no similarity between this method of choosing a single executive and the proportional representation method of electing an assembly, which would increase the representation of minority groups.

District -- Proponents claimed this would reconcile the methods by which Congress and the President were elected and give both the same constituency. Opponents claimed it would concentrate campaigns in marginal Congressional districts, leave minority voters still effectively disenfranchised. They also claimed gerrymandering of Congressional districts would work against an equality of influence for each Presidential voter. Some backers have proposed Congress pass an anti-gerrymander law similar to that repealed in 1932. A version of the Mundt-Coudert plan introduced in 1955 by Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) (S J Res 59) contained an anti-gerrymander clause.

OTHER PLANS

Two other proposals for electoral college reform were brought forward after the Constitutional Amendments Subcommittee concluded its hearings:

- S J Res 116, Sen. Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) -- Would retain the electoral college; specifically preserve the independence of individual electors; retain the existing voting system if the election was thrown into the House; permit each state to choose three times as many electors as it had electoral votes, with each elector casting the proportion of the state's electoral vote equal to his share of the total popular vote for all successful candidates for elector.

The method would be similar to the proportional method in guaranteeing to each of the three leading candidates in a state a share of the electoral vote equal to his share of the popular vote. But it would, generally, deny electoral votes to all candidates but the top three in a state. This method of counting votes and the retention of the existing method of voting in the House would strengthen the influence of any third party movement.

• S J Res 152 by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Would abolish the office of elector but retain the electoral vote as a counting device; give the candidate two electoral votes for each state in which he received a plurality; divide the remaining 435 electoral votes according to the proportion of the total national popular vote received by each candidate, with fractions carried to three figures. High man would win. In case of a tie the House would choose from those involved in the tie, with each Representative having one vote and a majority necessary to elect. The Senate would choose the Vice President by the same method.

POLITICAL CONSEQUENCES

Probable political consequences of the three leading reform proposals were analyzed for the Constitutional Amendments Subcommittee by Ralph M. Goldman, Brookings Institution political scientist. His comments:

Direct -- Would increase electoral power of about 17 large states at the expense of 31 smaller states; emphasize importance of national magazines, television and radio in campaigns; make the major parties more national and more centralized; force minority pressure groups, factions within the parties and third party movements to operate on a national scale rather than in concentrated geographical areas.

Proportional -- Would leave the smaller states over-represented in the electoral vote; give the Democratic party the advantage until a real Republican organization developed in all the southern states; reverse the existing pattern of Presidential campaigns, with each party concentrating on building up its vote total in states where it has an assured majority rather than fighting for a small advantage in the large (and relatively underrepresented) marginal states; reduce the bargaining power of minority pressure groups and minor parties in the large, pivotal states and tend to force them into regional groupings, like the States Rights party of 1948.

District -- Would favor rural areas over urban, because rural areas are relatively over-represented in Congress; focus party organization on the district, rather than the county, state or nation; concentrate Presidential campaigns in about 150 doubtful Congressional districts, rather than a dozen doubtful states; minimize the influence of minority pressure groups and parties by isolating them in individual districts; might perpetuate the one-party district and offer added temptation to gerrymandering.

Floor Action

The Senate March 27 approved, by voice vote, a motion by Sens. Price Daniel (D Texas) and John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) to recommit S J Res 31 to the Judiciary Committee. The action came after four substitute amendments had been rejected and a fifth -- a compromise plan sponsored by Daniel -- won only 48-37 approval, enough to carry as a substitute, but not enough for final passage. (A two-thirds favorable vote is required for amendments to the Constitution.) Daniel moved to recommit rather than face defeat on the vote for final passage. (For roll-call votes, see chart, p. 161)

The Daniel substitute was a compromise between the proportional and district plans. The Committee-approved version of S J Res 31, the proportional plan, never came to a vote. A proposal by Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) for election of the President by direct popular vote lost on a 17-66 roll call.

PROVISIONS -- See p. 448.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Daniel, as modified -- Divide each state's electoral vote according to the proportion of the popular vote received by the three leading candidates, unless the state legislature voted to choose Presidential electors in the same manner as the state chooses Senators and Representatives; March 27. Roll-call vote, 48-37.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Grant two electoral votes to the candidate with a plurality in each state and divide the remaining 435 electoral votes according to the proportion of the national popular vote received by each candidate; March 27. Voice vote.

William Langer (R N.D.) -- Nominate Presidential candidates by national primary election and choose President by direct popular vote; March 27. Roll call, 13-69.

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Elect President by direct popular vote; March 27. Roll call, 17-66.

Clifford P. Case (R N.J.) -- Make the electoral vote of each state depend on the percentage of its eligible voters who actually vote; March 27. Roll call, 20-66.

OBJECTIONS RAISED

DEBATE -- March 22 -- Kennedy -- "Lumping together of two contradictory, incompatible schemes for counting electoral votes (enables) the party in control of each state legislature to select every four years which device will most benefit their party."

Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) -- The proposed change would "restore the balance of voting power between rural and urban areas," encourage a nationwide, two-party system and reduce the influence of pressure groups and big city political machines.

Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) -- Endorsed national Presidential primaries and direct popular election of the President. "Qualified women" in both parties should enter the primaries for President and Vice President.

March 23 -- John C. Stennis (D Miss.) -- The existing system "plays directly into the hands of pressure groups...organized for ulterior motives (which) are the greatest threat to our form of government today.... Political and campaign activity is being too heavily concentrated in so-called key states. National policy is being planned and implemented to attract favorable local reaction in a handful of states."

March 26 -- H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- The Daniel substitute "compounds the problems" of Presidential elections. "Any system for the election of the President should be uniform throughout the country."

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- The Daniel substitute is "a two-headed monstrosity (with) a common denominator in that both would increase the power of the lightly populated areas of the country at the expense of the heavily populated areas." It would increase the power of the one-party states and strengthen the right wing of both parties.

March 27 -- Kennedy -- "Two contradictory amendments have been offered and joined together in order to get two-thirds of the votes. The result will be that most of the state legislatures in the various states, controlled by one party or the other, will accept the (district) plan... with all of the gerrymandering it introduces...."

FLOOD INSURANCE

S 3732 -- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 1864) April 26.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a roll-call vote of 61-7, May 10. (See page 165)
- Reported with amendments by the House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 2746) July 17.
- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote July 25.
- Conference report (H Rept 2959) agreed to by the Senate and House July 27, by voice votes.

P.L. 1016 -- Signed into law Aug. 7.

As requested by President Eisenhower, Congress in 1956 passed an experimental $5 billion to $ 7.5 billion federal flood insurance and loan contract program.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, S 3732, the Federal Flood Insurance Act of 1956:

Authorized direct federal flood insurance for losses to private property or that of state and local governments in the United States, territories, possessions and Puerto Rico.

Authorized a loan contract program under which potential flood victims could, by payment of a fee, guarantee themselves either a direct federal loan or a federally guaranteed loan to cover flood damage.

Defined "flood" to include floods, tidal waves, deluges, the water components of hurricanes and surface landslides caused by excessive moisture .

Limited the coverage under the insurance and loan contract programs, separately, to $250,000 per person and $10,000 per house.

Relieved the government of liability for the first $500 loss under loan contracts and the first $100 plus 5 percent of the remainder under the insurance program.

Limited federal liability under the loan program to $2 billion, unless the President raised it to $2.5 billion. Limited federal liability under the insurance and reinsurance programs to $3 billion, unless the President raised it to $5 billion, plus net fees collected.

Provided that rates of flood loans should not exceed 4 percent and the cost of loan contracts be fixed "at the lowest practicable amount."

Directed that estimated rates for flood insurance be computed on a schedule sufficient to meet all probable claims, with insurees to be classified by degree of risk and other criteria, but permitted the actual premium charged to be as low as 60 percent of the computed rate. The difference between the computed rate and the actual premium was to be made up by government payments, with the states contributing half the amount of this subsidy after June 30, 1959.

Placed responsibility for the program with the Housing and Home Finance Administrator and authorized him to appoint a commissioner to assist him in carrying it out.

REINSURANCE AUTHORIZED

Authorized the Administrator to encourage private flood insurance programs by offering suitable government reinsurance contracts, without subsidy.

Prohibited issuance of federal insurance or loan contracts where suitable private insurance or loans are available.

Required local and state governments to have flood zoning laws in effect by June 30, 1958, to qualify for the program and prohibited violators of such laws from obtaining federal insurance or loan contracts.

Authorized borrowing of $500 million from the Treasury for the insurance and loan fund.

Set up a 3-to 15-member advisory board of private insurance experts to advise on the program.

Permitted a dissatisfied claimant to sue in the federal courts.

Required periodic studies and reports on the program and directed the Administrator, in his annual report for 1961, to recommend whether or not the federal government should continue financial support of the program.

Background

Floods have been a regular feature of American life, taking their toll in lives and property each year. In 1955, 237 lives were lost and the property damage was estimated at $1.2 billion. The federal government since 1950 assisted flood victims under provisions of Public Law 875 (81st Congress), administered by the Federal Civil Defense Administration. Under that act, the federal government gives emergency assistance to the states and local governments but cannot make direct cash grants to affected families or businesses or permanently restore damaged private property.

Private insurance companies have not been able to provide low cost flood insurance. In its May, 1952, Report on Floods and Flood Damage, the Insurance Executives Association said:

"Because of the virtual certainty of the loss, its catastrophic nature, and the impossibility of making this line of (flood) insurance self-supporting due to refusal of the public to purchase such insurance at the rates which would have to be charged to pay annual losses, companies generally could not prudently engage in this field of underwriting."

President Truman in 1951 and 1952 and President Eisenhower in 1956 asked Congress to enact flood insurance legislation. Mr. Eisenhower in his State of the Union message Jan. 5 said "an experimental program of flood damage indemnities should be undertaken."

In his Jan. 24 Economic Report, the President called for accelerated work on "practical flood control projects," federal reinsurance for private flood insurance and "a joint federal-state program for indemnifying flood victims on losses to real property, business inventories, and household effects.... The necessary costs can be met partly by premiums paid by private citizens desiring flood protection, and partly by federal and state contributions. As experience under the proposed program accumulates, private carriers may be able to offer policies at costs which will render unnecessary the continued operation of a government-supported indemnity plan."

Congressional support for the measure grew after disastrous floods struck New England and California in 1955. A number of bills prepared by individual Senators led to the final version enacted.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- Oct. 31 - Dec. 19, 1955, outside of Washington; Feb. 16, 17, 21, 23 and 27, 1956,on three bills (S 2768, 2862, 3137) to provide insurance against natural disasters.

TESTIMONY -- Oct. 31 -- Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) proposed a $12 billion federal disaster insurance program covering loss from floods, smog, drought and volcanoes, as well as atomic or germ warfare. It would be financed by a Treasury loan, administered by the Federal Civil Defense Administration.

Roger W. Jones, assistant director of the Budget Bureau, said the Administration program, when completed, would meet six criteria: it would be experimental; there would be a "modest limit" on the amount of insurance issued; there would be "wide authority" to set premium rates; there would be a limit to the insurance any firm or individual could take out; the insurance would be applied with some flat amount deductible, as in auto collision insurance; private insurance firms would be used as agents.

Nov. 3 -- New York Gov. Averell Harriman (D) said a system of nationwide disaster insurance was needed because private insurance "companies have not so far been able to provide the needed protection."

New York State Housing Commissioner Joseph P. McMurray said the government should provide disaster insurance at rates people could afford to pay. He said the existing maximum of $7,000 for Federal Housing Administration disaster loans "is too low to be practical" and should be raised to $10,000 or $12,000.

Nov. 9 -- William Belanger of the CIO suggested "compulsory and universal" disaster insurance financed by permitting tax exemptions on premiums.

Dec. 19 -- North Carolina Gov. Luther H. Hodges (D) said he did not believe state and local governments could assume responsibility for flood control.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.) called disaster insurance a nationwide problem requiring "a nationwide approach." Sen. W. Kerr Scott (D N.C.) said he felt "very strongly" that private companies should devise an insurance plan based on cooperation of state and federal governments.

1956 HEARINGS

Feb. 17 -- George D. Riley, AFL-CIO legislative representative, said "a certain degree of federal subsidy will be absolutely essential" to any disaster insurance program.

Feb. 21 -- Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) said victims of earthquakes should be included in any disaster insurance program.

Feb. 23 -- Joseph L. Miller, Northern Textile Assn., said any flood insurance program should have realistic premiums. He said premiums amounting to 30 percent of the amount of coverage would be too high.

Feb. 27 -- H. Clinton Owen Jr., representing Rhode Island Gov. Dennis J. Roberts (D), said that "to compel the states to share equally with the federal government the costs of flood insurance would penalize the states for failure of the federal government to meet its existing responsibilities for preventive flood control."

Leffert Holz, representing N.Y. Gov. Harriman, said any flood insurance program should be "nationwide," with "varied and low enough" rates to make it available to small property owners. Holz said the program should use the facilities of, but not compete with, private insurance companies.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee April 26 reported a clean bill (S 3732 -- S Rept 1864) which was a compromise between versions backed by Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) and Sen. Prescott Bush (R Conn.).

The Committee version differed from the final law in these respects: It established a Federal Flood Insurance Administration within the Housing and Home Finance Agency; required no contributions by the states to the insurance subsidy fund; included no loan contract program.

Floor Action

The Senate May 10 passed an amended S 3732 by a 61-7 roll-call vote. It accepted an amendment to require state payments to the insurance subsidy fund by a 39-31 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 165)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Require states to pay half the difference between computed rates and actual premiums into the federal flood insurance fund; May 10. Roll-call vote, 39-31.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- Extend insurance to cover tornadoes, winds and cyclones as well as floods; May 10. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- May 10 -- Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- "This is avowedly a pilot program designed to gain experience in this field but at the same time it is designed to provide some protection...."

Knowland -- "I hope such experience will be gained as will encourage private industry to pick up the burden once it learns just what it will be."

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 23-26, Feb. 6-10, 1956,on various proposals for government-backed flood and disaster insurance.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 23 -- Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson said flood disaster insurance, even under a government-backed program, might be prohibitively expensive. He said Congress should consider some form of "package insurance" covering all natural disasters which would spread the risk. He said the private insurance industry "must accept the challenge" to provide inexpensive disaster insurance.

Jan. 24 -- Maj. Gen. E. C. Itschner, assistant chief of engineers for civil works in the Defense Department, and Dr. Helmut E. Landsberg of the Weather Bureau, submitted data on the frequency of floods and other natural disasters.

Jan. 25 -- Frank Meistrell, Federal Housing Administration deputy administrator, said disaster insurance should be tried on a small scale first to test its feasibility.

Jan. 26 -- Kenneth L. Scott, Agricultural Credit Service director, described the government crop insurance program and Walter B. Langbein, Interior Department hydraulic engineer, testified about the technical problems of floods and their prevention.

Feb. 6 -- Small Business Administrator Wendell B. Barnes said even if Congress established a disaster insurance program there would still be a need "for a disaster loan program of the type now conducted" by SBA. Loans would be required for persons who did not participate in the insurance program and for others suffering damage of a type not covered by the insurance, he said.

Feb. 7 -- President Raymond J. Fitzpatrick of the Waterbury, Conn., Board of Aldermen urged federal sponsorship of an insurance program which would give protection to municipal governments along lines proposed by the American Municipal Assn.

Joseph L. Miller testified in favor of both federal flood insurance and flood control in behalf of the Northern Textile Assn. and the Quinebauh-French River Manufacturers Assn.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE DISSENTS

Chase M. Smith, speaking for the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., said the Administration's proposal for federal participation in a national flood and disaster insurance program would not work because flood risks are not insurable. Smith said: "Insurance cannot be successful where the only property insured is virtually certain to become a loss."

Feb. 9 -- George D. Riley of the AFL-CIO favored a government disaster insurance program, but said the federal government "must be prepared to pay at least one-half of what would be considered the normal premium for this type of insurance" in addition to administrative costs. He said the program should be as broad as possible in its coverage of various types of risks and should include floods, tidal waves, water damage and hurricanes. He saw "no need" for states to share in the program.

John W. Edelman of the Textile Workers Union of America (AFL-CIO) also favored government-backed disaster insurance.

Feb. 10 -- Ellsworth Bunker, American Red Cross president, said it was vital to extend direct loans to distressed persons but did not offer recommendations for disaster insurance.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee July 17 reported S 3732 with a substitute text (H Rept 2746).

It differed from the Senate version in these respects: It gave the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, rather than an independent flood insurance commissioner, authority to run the program; it gave him discretionary authority to offer insurance at special reduced rates to homeowners who, as a group, could not afford to pay the regular premium; it added a loan contract program; it eliminated the requirement of state contributions to the insurance subsidy fund.

Floor Action

The House July 25 passed, by voice vote, an amended version of S 3732 after rejecting, by voice vote, a motion by Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) to recommit the bill. On an 82-58 standing vote, it accepted an amendment requiring state contributions to the insurance subsidy fund.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Martin Dies (D Texas) -- Require states to pay half the difference between the computed rates and the actual premiums to the insurance fund; July 25. Standing vote, 82-58.

Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) -- Keep charges for the flood loan contract to "the lowest possible amount;" July 25. Voice vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) -- Broaden the program to include the after-effects of mine flooding; July 25. Voice vote.

Robert Hale (R Maine) -- Broaden the program to include natural disasters, rather than "recurring natural disasters;" July 25. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- July 25 -- Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) -- "This bill is an experimental plan which may or may not work; but let us put something into effect; let us try it, let us constantly survey it and review it and then improve on it after we have had a year or two of experience."

Dies -- "It seems to me the time has come when we must say to the states and their governors, 'Are you willing to shoulder your responsibilities?' ....The states are in far better financial condition than the federal government."

Brent Spence (D Ky.) -- "If you make the states pay half of the damage and the loss, in many states there will be no insurance."

Edward P. Boland (D Mass.) -- "In the face of Congressional adjournment and the Senate's position on this matter, it seems to me elementary that we will not get a flood insurance bill at all if this (Dies) amendment is not written into the bill."

Conference

REPORT -- House and Senate conferees July 27 recommended (H Rept 2959) acceptance of the House version of S 3732, with deletion of the discretionary authority of the administrator to lower the premium rate below 60 percent of the computed fee for homeowners.

ACTION -- The Senate and House accepted the conference report July 27 by voice votes.

PRESIDENT'S COMMENTS

In signing the bill into Public Law 1016 Aug. 7, President Eisenhower called it "admittedly experimental" and expressed hope it would open the way for private insurance companies to enter the flood insurance field. He noted that protection against loss "from virtually every other type of natural disaster is already obtainable at practical cost."

NAVY SHIPS

HR 7993 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 1665) Jan. 24, 1956.
- Passed by the House, amended, by a 360-3 roll-call vote Feb. 1. (See p. 186)
- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 1790) April 19.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote April 26.
- House agreed to Senate amendments by voice vote May 7.

P.L. 523 -- Signed into law May 14.

In enacting HR 7993, Congress authorized construction of 2,800 tons of Navy escort vessels in fiscal 1957 at an estimated cost of $23.6 million. The House originally authorized a $1.4 billion Navy shipbuilding program, although there was sufficient unobligated tonnage available from other shipbuilding authorization acts to support all but the escort vessel construction. The House Armed Services Committee said the "real and fundamental purpose" of presenting the bill was to review the shipbuilding program.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 7993:

Authorized the construction or conversion of a maximum of 2,800 tons of Navy escort vessels.

Authorized the appropriation of necessary funds for the program.

BACKGROUND -- The House in 1955 also passed an authorization bill (HR 4393) for Navy shipbuilding in order to review the program. The Senate took no action on the measure, but in the Department of Defense Appropriation Act for fiscal 1956 (PL 157), Congress appropriated $1,387,634,000 for the Navy's program. (1955 Almanac, pp. 219,344)

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- Held Jan. 18 and 19.

ACTION -- The Committee reported HR 7993 Jan. 24 (H Rept 1665).

Floor Action

The House Feb. 1 passed HR 7993 by a roll-call vote of 360-3. One Representative voted "present." Dissenting votes were cast by Shepard J. Crumpacker (R Ind.), W.J. Bryan Dorn (D S.C.) and Fred Marshall (D Minn.). (For voting, see chart p. 186)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 7993 authorized:

$1 billion for 22 combat vessels: one aircraft carrier of the Forrestal class, one nuclear-powered light cruiser, four guided missile frigates, eight guided missile destroyers, six nuclear-powered submarines, two destroyer escorts.

$22 million for an ammunition ship.

$20 million for landing and service craft.

$306 million for converting four aircraft carriers, five light cruisers, one submarine, one landing craft carrier, one transport, one seaplane tender and six escort ships.

$22 million for a nuclear reactor to power an aircraft carrier.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Shepard J. Crumpacker (R Ind.) -- Delete authorization for constructing aircraft carrier; Feb. 1. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- "This bill... represents the transition of our Navy from conventional power to nuclear power. It also represents the transition from conventional weapons to guided missiles."

Crumpacker -- "I cannot see any justification for authorizing another carrier of this (Forrestal) type at this time. Let us wait awhile until we have had some experience with those already authorized...."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- March 22.

ACTION -- HR 7993 was reported, amended, April 19 (S Rept 1790).

Floor Action

The Senate April 26 passed HR 7993, with committee amendments, by voice vote and without debate.

PROVISIONS -- As passed and sent back to the House, HR 7993:

Authorized the construction or conversion of a maximum of 2,800 tons of Navy escort vessels.

Authorized the appropriation of necessary funds for the program, estimated at $23.6 million.

HOUSE ACTION

The House May 7 agreed, by voice vote, to the Senate's amendments and sent the bill to the President.

DEPENDENTS' MEDICAL CARE

HR 9429 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee Feb. 22, 1956 (H Rept 1805).
- Passed by the House by voice vote March 2.
- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee, with amendments, April 30 (S Rept 1878).
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, by voice vote May 14.
- Conference report (H Rept 2195) agreed to by voice votes in the Senate May 23, in the House May 24.

P.L. 569 -- Signed into law June 7.

The Dependents' Medical Care Act of 1956 provided an expanded and uniform program of medical care for dependents of members of the United States uniformed services. The principal new feature of the bill directed the Secretary of Defense to establish a health insurance or medical service plan permitting medical care in either service or civilian hospitals for spouses and children of active duty personnel. The annual cost of such a plan was estimated to be between $50 million and $56 million.

Passage of the bill was recommended by President Eisenhower as one of several major legislative proposals designed to improve military career incentives.

PROVISIONS -- The Dependents' Medical Care Act of 1956:

Defined dependents' legal entitlement to medical care on a uniform basis throughout the U.S. uniformed services, including the Coast Guard and Public Health Service.

Defined eligible dependents as wives, unmarried children under 21, disabled children over 21 incapable of self-support, children under 23 who are full-time students, children and unremarried widows of deceased personnel, and parents and parents-in-law who lived with and received over half their support from a member or retired member of the uniformed services.

Authorized medical care for eligible dependents of active and retired members of the services in facilities under the jurisdiction of the services, subject to the availability of space and facilities, and the capabilities of the medical staff.

Directed that medical facilities of any of the services be available to all eligible dependents, regardless of the service affiliation of the dependent's sponsor.

Permitted uniform minimal charges for outpatient care in service facilities, limited to amounts necessary to restrain excessive demands for care.

Directed the Secretary of Defense to establish uniform "fair charges" for inpatient medical care of dependents in service facilities (currently $1.75 per day).

Limited medical care given dependents in service facilities to diagnosis, treatment of acute medical and surgical conditions, treatment of contagious diseases, immunization, and maternity and infant care, except in specified cases.

Required the Secretary to enter into a medical service insurance or health plan that would provide minimum benefits for wives and children of active-duty personnel at no premium cost to the service member.

Permitted wives and children, under such a plan, to choose medical care in either service or civilian facilities, subject to certain limitations.

Permitted medical and dental care in any service facility for retired service members, subject to the availability of space and facilities, and the capabilities of the medical staff.

Required that medical and dental care in any service facility be furnished to all active members of the uniformed services.

Made the provisions of the bill effective six months after enactment.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Armed Forces Pay." (1955 Almanac, p. 331)

Historically, dependents of members of the uniformed services had been provided medical care through the use of medical facilities under the jurisdiction of the services. However, prior to enactment of HR 9429, the statutory basis for dependent medical care was fragmentary, resulting in some disparity in the types of care provided and the categories of dependents who were eligible to receive this care. In addition, an estimated 40 percent of service dependents did not have access to service medical facilities and were required to pay for care received from civilian medical sources. This was due to a combination of factors, such as overcrowded service facilities, residence in areas where no service facilities were located, and an overall shortage of physicians serving on active duty.

Legislation to improve dependents' medical care was requested by President Eisenhower in 1954, and again in 1955, as part of a program to make military careers more attractive. (1955 Almanac, p. 331) Congress failed to act on a medical care bill and the President renewed his request in 1956.

6-POINT INCENTIVE PROGRAM

In an April 9, 1956, letter to Congressional leaders, Mr. Eisenhower urged Congress to enact military career incentive legislation outlined by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson in an attached letter. Mr. Wilson's letter listed the medical care bill and five other measures:

Improved servicemen's and veterans' survivor benefits. (See p. 566)

Extension, on a permanent basis, of authority for Army and Air Force commissioned officers to retire in currently held temporary grades.

An increase in the statutory ceilings for regular officers in the Army and Air Force to approximately 50 percent of their planned total officer strength.

Improved career inducements for medical and dental officers and nurses.

Reduced rents for servicemen occupying substandard government quarters.

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- By Subcommittee No. 2, Jan. 23-31, Feb. 1, 6, 7 on a bill (HR 7994) to provide a uniform and improved program of medical care for military dependents.

ACTION -- The full Committee Feb. 22 reported a clean bill (HR 9429 -- H Rept 1805), which included the major provisions of the final version of the bill plus one additional feature. As reported to the House, the bill would have authorized the Secretary of Defense, at his discretion, to provide a program of benefits -- permitting medical care in civilian facilities -- for retired personnel and their dependents.

Floor Action

The House passed HR 9429 March 2 by voice vote and without amendment.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) -- Delete the word "lawful" in defining a wife as a dependent; March 2. Voice vote.

Hoffman -- Delete from definition as dependents children over 21 attending college full time and parents-in-law dependent on a serviceman for more than one-half of their support; March 2. Voice.

DEBATE -- March 2 -- There was no opposition to the bill.

Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- "Today it is estimated that only about 60 percent of the dependents of our servicemen have medical care available to them in military facilities. The remaining 40 percent must shift for themselves." Under the bill, "the medical facilities of the uniformed services would continue the present practice of providing medical care to dependents.... In addition, and this is the important new feature of the bill, provision is also made for supplementing and augmenting this program through the use of civilian medical facilities."

Paul J. Kilday (D Texas) -- "...medical care for dependents of military personnel of our services is traditional...(but) at the present time the medical care made available is not uniform.... This bill places (all of the uniformed services)...on the same footing."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- April 12 and 13 on HR 9429.

ACTION -- Reported HR 9429 with amendments April 30 (S Rept 1878). The major changes made by the Committee:

Deleted the House provision permitting the Secretary of Defense to provide medical care in civilian facilities for retired personnel and their dependents.

Eliminated parents from the definition of eligible dependents.

Floor Action

The Senate passed HR 9429 May 14 by voice vote with committee amendments.

DEBATE -- May 14 -- There was no opposition to the bill.

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- The bill would "make a definite contribution toward stimulating both enlistments and recruitments in our armed services, and toward reducing the number of resignations from the service, which have in past months given us much concern."

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- The provision authorizing medical care for dependents in civilian facilities "is almost revolutionary...one of the most unusual experiments to be conducted by the government which has ever come to my attention.... It is, in effect, the government undertaking to apply something similar to the Blue Cross" to the dependents of servicemen.

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- "It is my opinion that within the bill there is the framework of what could lead to the socializing of the great medical profession.... I do not believe it is intended to, or, if soundly administered, will lead to that...."

Conference

REPORT -- Senate-House conferees May 22 reported a compromise version of HR 9429 (H Rept 2195). They agreed to include in the definition of eligible dependents, parents and parents-in-law who live with and receive more than half their support from an active or retired service member. The Senate amendment, which excluded parents and parents-in-law, would have eliminated an existing benefit for a "large number" of such dependents, the report said.

The conferees upheld Senate action by eliminating a provision in the House version that would have permitted the Secretary of Defense to provide medical care in civilian facilities for retired personnel and their dependents. Such a program could not be started until experience had been gained through operation of the new plan providing civilian medical care for spouses and children of active-duty personnel, the report said.

ACTION -- The Senate May 23 and the House May 24 agreed to the conference report on HR 9429 by voice votes, without debate.

LONGSHOREMEN'S BENEFITS

S 2280 -- Reported by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 853) July 13, 1955.
• Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 18.
HR 10765 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 2067) April 26, 1956.
S 2280 -- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote July 13, 1956.
• House amendment agreed to by the Senate, by voice vote, July 17.
P.L. 803 -- Signed into law July 26.

Congress July 17 sent to the President a bill (S 2280) increasing disability benefits under the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act. In addition to longshoremen, harbor workers and others employed on the navigable waters of the United States, the law applies to all privately employed workers in the District of Columbia, U.S. citizens employed on government contracts outside the U.S. and to workers on the offshore "continental shelf."

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, S 2280:

Increased the maximum level of weekly compensation payable to injured workers or their beneficiaries from $35 to $54; raised the minimum weekly compensation from $12 to $18.

Reduced the waiting period after which compensation becomes payable from seven to three days.

Increased the maximum compensation payable for all injuries other than total disability or death from $10,000 and $11,000 to $17,280.

Increased the number of weeks of scheduled compensation when the disability consists of an anatomical loss. (For example, S 2280 provided for 312 weeks' compensation for loss of an arm; existing law, 280 weeks.)

Increased rehabilitation benefits.

Background

President Eisenhower proposed increased benefits under the Act in his 1955 and 1956 State of the Union messages. (For text of the 1956 message, see p. 45)

The Longshoremen's Act, first passed in 1927, provided that employees, in return for statutory compensation, would give up their rights to go to court. Congress in 1928 made private D.C. employees eligible for benefits under the Longshoremen's Act. Congress last increased benefits under the Act in 1948. (1948 Almanac, p. 153)

S 2280 was reported (S Rept 853) July 13, 1955, by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee and passed by voice vote of the Senate July 18, 1955.

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor.

HEARINGS -- March 12, 13, 14 and 26, 1956, on legislation to amend the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act of 1927.

ACTION -- The Committee April 26 reported a bill (HR 10765 -- H Rept 2067) to amend the Act.

Floor Action

The House passed HR 10765 by voice vote July 13 and then substituted its text for that of S 2280. The Senate version had set the upper limit for weekly benefits at $50.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Howard W. Smith (D Va.) -- Exclude District of Columbia workers from the provisions of the bill; July 13. Standing vote, 62-116.

DEBATE -- July 13 -- Proponents said the bill would become a model workmen's compensation law. Members of the House District of Columbia Committee said legislation affecting D.C. workers should originate in the District Committee. Opponents of the bill said it would raise compensation in the District above that provided by the states.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 17 agreed without debate to House amendments to S 2280.

FARM GAS EXEMPTION

HR 8780 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 1684) Jan. 26, 1956.
- Passed by the House Jan. 31 on a 387-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 186)
- Reported by the Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 1609) March 2.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote March 6.
- Conference report (H Rept 1957) agreed to by voice votes of the Senate March 27 and House March 28.

P.L. 466 -- Signed into law April 2.

Congress in 1956 gave farmers an estimated $60 million in annual tax relief by exempting them from the two-cents-a-gallon federal excise tax on gasoline and special fuels used on the farm.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 8780:

Provided annual refunds, payable by the federal government directly to farmers, of the federal excise tax (currently two cents a gallon) on gasoline used "on a farm for farming purposes."

Provided a similar exemption from the federal excise tax on diesel fuel and special motor fuels used on a farm for farming purposes.

Provided that if gasoline or special fuels were used on a farm by a custom operator or other independent contractor, the owner, tenant or operator of the farm would be treated as the user and would be entitled to the tax refund.

Made the exemptions effective Jan. 1, 1956.

Provided a civil penalty for excessive claims for refunds on gasoline.

BACKGROUND -- President Eisenhower Jan. 9 asked Congress to pass legislation to relieve the farmer of the federal excise tax on gasoline used on the farm. The request was one point of his nine-point 1956 farm program. (See p. 52)

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 17, 18, in closed session, on various bills to relieve farmers from the federal excise tax on gasoline.

ACTION -- The Committee Jan. 26 reported (H Rept 1684) a clean bill (HR 8780) to relieve farmers from federal excise taxes on gasoline and special fuels used "on the farm for farming purposes."

Floor Action

The House Jan. 31 suspended the rules and passed HR 8780 by a 387-0 roll-call vote, without amendment. (For voting, see chart p. 186)

DEBATE -- Jan. 30 -- No opposition to the bill was expressed. Some Representatives said the bill would provide only a small amount of relief to farmers caught in a "severe" price-cost squeeze.

Frank M. Karsten (D Mo.) -- "The average weekly tax relief that the individual American farmer would realize from this measure is in the neighborhood of 23 cents."

Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- "I do not consider this to be a tax reduction measure, but an act of simple equity designed to correct a long-standing injustice against the American farmer."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

ACTION -- March 2 reported HR 8780 with amendments (S Rept 1609), one of which excluded from tax-exemption benefits custom operators or other independent contractors performing services on a farm. The amendment reduced the estimated annual revenue loss under the bill from $60 million to $59 million.

Floor Action

The Senate March 6 passed HR 8780 by voice vote, with Committee amendments.

DEBATE -- March 6 -- There was no opposition to the bill.

Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- The Finance Committee eliminated custom operators and independent contractors from the benefits of the bill. "However, where farmers perform similar services for their neighbors, (gas tax) refunds may be claimed" if the operations for neighbors were less than one-half the total operations of the farmer.

Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- "Farmers need whatever help we can possibly give them." For some years "the states have been helping the farmers in this manner. The federal tax, up until recent years, was not so high as the state taxes (and) did not amount to so much, but in recent years the federal tax has increased, and this bill will help to a very large extent."

Francis Case (R S.D.), Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- Expressed pleasure that the President and Congress recognized the need for farmers' tax relief.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee March 27 filed a conference report (H Rept 1957) on HR 8780. Under the conference agreement, if gasoline and special fuels were used on a farm by a custom operator or independent contractor, the owner, tenant or operator of the farm would be treated as the user and would be entitled to the tax refund.

ACTION -- The Senate March 27 and the House March 28 agreed to the conference report by voice votes, thus clearing the bill for the White House.

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

HR 627 -- Reported, amended, by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 2187) May 21, 1956.

• Passed by the House, amended, by a 279-126 roll-call vote July 23. (See p. 222)

A bill (HR 627) "to provide means of further securing and protecting the civil rights of persons within the jurisdiction of the United States" was passed by the House but received no Senate action in 1956.

Southern Congressmen, strongly opposed to civil rights legislation, said HR 627 would impose on states' rights. The measure was bottled up in House committees until the closing days of Congress, when it was passed by the House and sent to the Senate. There, parliamentary maneuvers prevented the bill from reaching the floor.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 627 would have:

Set up a six-man bipartisan Commission on Civil Rights in the executive branch of the government, with subpena power, and directed it to follow a specified set of rules of fair procedure.

Authorized the Commission to investigate allegations of discrimination due to color, race, religion, national origin or sex, and illegal voting; study information concerning denial of equal protection of the laws under the Constitution; appraise the laws and policies of the government with respect to equal protection of the laws under the Constitution; investigate regarding persons voting illegally in the United States.

Required that allegations to be investigated by the Commission be in writing and that Commission subcommittees have at least two members, neither of which should belong to the same political party.

Created a new post of Assistant Attorney General in charge of a Civil Rights Division in the Department of Justice.

Authorized the Attorney General to institute civil action or other proper proceeding in U.S. district courts whenever persons have engaged or are about to engage in any acts of civil rights offenses.

Strengthened existing civil rights statutes, in particular those covering voting rights, and provided civil remedies against conspiracies which deprive citizens of civil rights.

Background

Civil rights planks were included in both the Democratic and Republican party platforms in 1944, 1948, 1952 and 1956. (For 1956 platforms, see Political section)

Disputes over the issue were hottest in 1948, when President Harry S. Truman twice urged Congress to enact civil rights programs. Some civil rights bills were passed by the House, but a Senate filibuster in July and August prevented any measures from becoming law. (1948 Almanac, p. 272)

Ill-feeling generated by the debate was carried into the 1948 Democratic National Convention. A strong civil rights plank was finally adopted, which led to the walkout of some Southerners and formation of the Dixiecrat party.

In 1952, some southern Democrats deserted the party to back the candidacy of Dwight D. Eisenhower. The GOP platform plank in 1952 left civil rights as the "primary responsibility of each state," a stand Southerners advocate.

President Eisenhower in his 1954 State of the Union message said "segregation in the armed forces and other federal activities is on the way out." In his 1953 State of the Union message, he said: "Much of the answer (to civil rights problems) lies in the power of fact, fully publicized; of persuasion, honestly pressed; and of conscience, justly aroused."

President Eisenhower spoke in his 1955 State of the Union Message of "historic progress in eliminating... demeaning practices based on race or color." But civil rights measures made virtually no progress in Congress in 1955.

A Congressional Quarterly tabulation showed:

Lawmakers during the first session of the 84th Congress introduced 111 measures (including many duplications) affecting civil rights.

Only one measure -- a non-controversial bill to permit federal employment of Mongolians -- was passed by the House; the Senate acted on no civil rights legislation.

House committees and subcommittees held hearings on 52 civil rights measures; Senate committees held none.

At the first session's end, 109 measures were pending in committees. These measures fell into 13 broad categories: omnibus bills; civil rights agencies; lynching; political participation; involuntary servitude; civil rights statutes; aliens; group libel; states rights; poll tax; employment; transportation; and federal funds.

BATTLES IN HOUSE

The House was the scene of most of the first session's civil rights controversy. Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D N.Y.) offered amendments to ban racial segregation in public housing, public schools, and the National Guard. All were rejected. President Eisenhower, referring to Powell's amendments, twice told news conferences that he opposed "extraneous" anti-segregation riders on major legislation.

Powell's strongest bid against racial discrimination was a plan to end the segregation which is customary in National Guard units of 21 states. During consideration of one version of the armed forces reserve bill (HR 5297), the House May 18 agreed, by a 126-87 standing vote, to a Powell amendment that would have prevented enlistments in or personnel transfers to segregated Guard units. (1955 Almanac, p. 338)

Because final passage of the reserve bill was jeopardized by the Powell amendment, the House dropped HR 5297, eventually passed another bill (HR 7000 -- PL 305), which did not mention the National Guard. The House July 1 rejected, by a 105-156 standing vote, a Powell amendment to HR 7000. That amendment would have denied draft immunity to young National Guard volunteers if they joined segregated Guard units.

In 1955 Powell also failed in an effort to attach an anti-segregation rider to a bill (HR 7535) to provide federal aid for school construction. The House Education and Labor Committee July 20 rejected, 10-17, a Powell amendment that would require school integration. (1955 Almanac, p. 265) (When the bill came to the House floor in 1956, Powell won approval of an anti-segregation amendment by a 225-192 roll-call vote. It was partially responsible for defeat of the bill. See p. 411)

Before passing the 1955 housing bill (S 2126 -- PL 345), the House rejected, by 113-168 standing and 112-158 teller votes, a Powell anti-discrimination amendment. (1955 Almanac, p. 253)

President Eisenhower, in his 1956 State of the Union message, recommended creation by Congress of a bipartisan Commission on Civil Rights to investigate charges that "in some localities...Negro citizens are being deprived of their right to vote and are likewise being subjected to unwarranted economic pressure." He also said:

"We are proud of the progress our people have made in the field of civil rights. In executive branch operations throughout the nation, elimination of discrimination and segregation is all but completed. Progress is also being made among contractors engaged in furnishing government services and requirements. Every citizen now has the opportunity to fit himself for and to hold a position of responsibility in the service of his country. In the District of Columbia, through the voluntary cooperation of the people, discrimination and segregation are disappearing from hotels, theaters, restaurants and other facilities....

"The stature of our leadership in the free world has increased through the past three years because we have made more progress than ever before in a similar period to assure our citizens equality in justice, in opportunity and in civil rights. We must expand this effort on every front. We must strive to have every person judged and measured by what he is, rather than by his color, race or religion. There will soon be recommended to the Congress a program further to advance the efforts of the government, within the area of federal responsibility, to accomplish these objectives."

The President March 14 said he asked Congress to authorize a civil rights commission "because then they can subpena witnesses and bring people in and compel them to testify." The Supreme Court's anti-segregation "decision was made...in 1954, and we are getting along now to where some real investigative body ought to be watching it and look at it all the time."

Mr. Eisenhower March 31 said he would consider calling special conferences to deal with racial relations problems if Congress failed to adopt his proposal for a bipartisan commission to study the issue.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. April 9 sent to Congress a draft of a proposed civil rights program that called for:

A six-member bipartisan commission to investigate individual civil rights grievances.

A civil rights division in the Department of Justice.

Broader statutes to permit federal prosecution of individuals intimidating voters in an election for federal office.

Authority for the Attorney General to bring civil injunction proceedings in behalf of aggrieved individuals.

Authority for individuals to take civil rights grievances directly to a federal court.

Authority for the Attorney General to bring civil suits against civil rights conspiracies, such as attempted jury or witness intimidation.

House

Reps. Adam C. Powell Jr. (D N.Y.) and Hugh Scott (R Pa.) Feb. 21 announced that a group of House Members had decided to do "everything possible" to bring "right to vote" legislation before the House.

A six-man committee was set up and directed to report within two weeks on what the Justice Department and the House Judiciary Committee planned in civil rights legislation for the session. Powell said the group's "solid strength" stood at 201 Members.

Besides Scott, others on the committee were Reps. Edna F. Kelly (D N.Y.), Charles B. Brownson (R Ind.), Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.), Thomas M. Pelly (R Wash.) and Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.)

Powell said the group wanted "right to vote" legislation which would include abolition of the poll tax, protection at the polls and expansion of the Justice Department's powers to act against voting interference.

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary, Claims Subcommittee.

ACTION -- March 21 -- Ordered reported to the full Committee two bills (HR 627, HR 259) dealing with anti-lynching and civil rights.

HR 259 would make it illegal for two or more persons to commit or attempt to commit violence upon any person because of his race, color, religion or national origin. Punishment would be a fine of $1,000 and one year in prison if there was no death or maiming. It would be up to a $10,000 fine and 20 years in prison if there were death or maiming.

HR 627, as introduced by Rep. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), would establish a commission on civil rights; create an additional Assistant Attorney General in charge of a Civil Rights Division in the Department of Justice; create a Joint Congressional Committee on Civil Rights; amend and supplement existing criminal statutes on civil rights; amend and supplement existing statutes protecting voting rights; and prohibit discrimination and segregation in interstate transportation.

The full Judiciary Committee April 10 held a closed session at which Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. described the Administration's proposals, which were transmitted to the House and Senate by letter April 9.

Brownell said civil proceedings, such as the use of injunctions, "may often be far more effective in the long run than harsh criminal proceedings to punish after the event."

Bills to carry out the first two Administration requests were submitted in both houses: in the House, HR 10339, 10340, 10348, 10349, 10378, 10379; in the Senate, S 3604 and S 3605, each with 18 co-sponsors.

Committee Chairman Celler said the Administration's program did not go far enough. "It's like using a bean shooter when you should use a gun," he said. Ranking Republican Member Kenneth B. Keating (N.Y.) said that if the proposals were too sweeping "the results will be the same as they have been year after year -- we won't get to first base."

The Committee April 17 re-referred, by a 14-13 vote, the Administration draft bill and HR 627 to the Subcommittee for further study. The Committee also tabled HR 259, the anti-lynching bill.

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Claims Subcommittee.

ACTION -- April 18 ordered favorably reported to the full Committee HR 627. The Subcommittee amended the bill by substituting the language of Administration civil rights proposals, but left intact the additional provisions of the Celler bill. These provisions would establish severe penalties for segregation or discrimination in interstate travel, broaden criminal civil rights statutes and set up a joint Congressional committee on civil rights.

Rep. Keating April 18 said the Subcommittee action was "waste motion." He added: "These other provisions may be desirable, and I could support some of them. But their inclusion means the death of the bill. What we need is some legislation."

BILL REPORTED

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary.

ACTION -- April 25 ordered HR 627 favorably reported with the deletion of all but the Administration's provisions.

The action came on the Committee's third attempt to report a civil rights bill. It met April 24 but adjourned, without voting, after four quorum calls demanded by Southerners on the House floor called its members away from the Committee room.

The Committee May 21 reported HR 627 (H Rept 2187). It included the provisions urged by Brownell and omitted two principal provisions of the original bill: creation of a Joint Congressional Committee on Civil Rights and prohibition against discrimination and segregation in interstate transportation. The original bill did not give the Civil Rights Commission subpena power.

As reported, the bill provided for:

A six-man bipartisan Commission on Civil Rights in the executive branch of the government, with subpena power.

An additional Assistant Attorney General in charge of a Civil Rights Division in the Department of Justice.

A supplement to 42 U.S.C., Sec. 1985, providing civil remedies against conspiracies which deprive of civil rights.

Provision for civil action by the Attorney General to protect the right to vote.

A minority of seven southern Representatives -- E.L. Forrester (D Ga.), Woodrow W. Jones (D N.C.), Robert T. Ashmore (D S.C.), James B. Frazier (D Tenn.), William M. Tuck (D Va.), Edwin E. Willis (D La.), Richard Poff (R Va.) -- said: The bill would "bring new and novel principles which, when fully appraised, are absolutely shocking.... (It) would be a Frankenstein and a constant threat to any state or local government.... To empower the Attorney General in the name of the U.S. to institute civil actions...before state remedies have been exhausted would devastate the principles of states' rights."

RULES COMMITTEE DELAY

After approval by the Judiciary Committee, HR 627 went to the House Rules Committee for action that would clear it for debate on the floor. Committee Chairman Howard W. Smith (D Va.) delayed calling hearings on the bill until June 14, when a majority of the Committee requested hearings and won out, on an 8-3 vote.

Rep. James Roosevelt (D Calif.) June 5 filed a discharge petition to take the civil rights bill out of control of the Rules Committee and bring it to the floor. "We will do everything we can," he said, to obtain the 218 signatures required. The discharge petition had been signed by 141 Representatives as of June 14, according to Roosevelt's office.

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. (Mass.) June 13 said the bill would be granted a rule if two Democratic Rules Committee members would vote for it. Martin said the four Republicans on the Committee favored the bill. Once the bill got to the House, Martin said, "of course it will pass."

House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.) June 14 said he was "very glad" to hear the Republican members of the Rules Committee favored HR 627 and that two GOP Committee votes would be enough to clear it for a House vote.

The Rules Committee June 20 began hearings on a rule for debate of HR 627. On June 21 Chairman Smith ended the hearings abruptly when Rep. William M. Colmer (D Miss.) raised the point of order that a committee quorum was not present. Rep. Edwin E. Willis (D La.) was speaking at the time against HR 627. Smith counted five members present instead of the necessary seven and adjourned the hearing. He said further hearings were subject to his call and added, "I'm not interested in calling a meeting."

Five supporters of the legislation moved to require the calling of a special meeting by formally requesting one. Reps. Ray J. Madden (D Ind.), James J. Delaney (D N.Y.), Richard Bolling (D Mo.), Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio) and Harris Ellsworth (R Ore.) made the formal request, which, if rejected by the Chairman, could be granted by a majority vote of the Committee after a wait of nine days.

The Rules Committee June 27 voted 8 to 3 to grant an open rule on HR 627. Voting for the rule were Reps. Madden, Delaney, Bolling, Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. (D Mass.), Leo E. Allen (R Ill.), Brown, Ellsworth and Henry J. Latham (R N.Y.).

Opposed were Chairman Smith, Colmer and James W. Trimble (D Ark.).

Floor Action

The House July 23 passed HR 627 by a roll-call vote of 279-126. A motion to recommit the bill was rejected by a roll-call vote of 131-275. (See p. 222)

On July 16 the House began consideration of HR 627. After two days of debate, the House July 19 began voting on amendments to the bill. Progress was slow because of parliamentary tactics used by opponents to delay the final vote.

Rep. William M. Tuck (D Va.) July 13 presented a resolution signed by 83 southern Representatives urging defeat of HR 627. (See p. 462)

Howard W. Smith (D Va.) July 19 moved to table the motion of John W. McCormack (D Mass.) that further proceedings after a quorum call of the House be dispensed with. (Technically, "further proceedings" include an order of arrest for absent members. Normally, the House routinely adopts a motion to dispense with further proceedings.) Smith's motion to table was rejected by a 104-290 roll-call vote, and the House resumed debate on HR 627.

William E. Miller (R N.Y.) July 19 offered a preferential motion to strike out the enacting clause of the bill.

If adopted, it would have killed the bill. The motion was rejected on a teller vote, 91-140. Miller was a member of the Judiciary Committee that favorably reported the bill.

PROVISIONS -- For provisions of HR 627 as passed by the House, see p. 458.

James B. Frazier Jr. (D Tenn.) -- Delete provision for an additional Assistant Attorney General; July 20. Standing, 49-89.

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Strike the appropriation authorization from the bill; July 20. Standing, 59-90.

Woodrow W. Jones (D N.C.) -- Delete the Commission's power of subpena; July 20. Voice.

Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- Insert provision authorizing private individuals to institute proceedings in such cases where they believe the Attorney General or other federal representative has engaged or is about to engage in acts authorized by the bill; July 20. Standing, 65-89.

John Bell Williams (D Miss.) -- Remove anticipatory language regarding discriminatory acts or practices; July 20. Standing, 51-71.

Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- Delete provision to pay expenses incurred by Commission voluntary personnel; July 20. Standing, 52-80.

L.H. Fountain (D N.C.) -- Bar investigations of allegations by Communists or other disloyal persons; July 20. Standing, 58-82.

W.J. Bryan Dorn (D S.C.) -- Exempt federal laws dealing with Indians and Indian territories from provisions of the bill; July 20. Standing, 59-67; teller, 66-81.

"GESTAPO" CHARGED

DEBATE -- July 16 -- Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- "Discrimination...is something which every man has a right to practice.... The (proposed) Commission...would be nothing short of a Gestapo,...(and) constantly...under the pressure of every organized presure group in our land."

Frank E. Smith (D Miss.) -- "No section of America has been singled out with such clarity as...the South in this piece of political catch-all.... The bill is an uncalled for abdication of our real civil liberties to political expediency."

Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) -- The bill "will materially strengthen our body of laws to protect civil rights without resort to anything which could fairly be called repressive, unfair or vindictive."

Ray J. Madden (D Ind.) -- Enactment "will be a great step forward in our fight against...the Communist tyranny."

Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) -- "We can no longer accept the moth-eaten argument of 'separate but equal.' The innermost demand of the Negro people is recognition of equal human dignity."

July 17 -- Bruce Alger (R Texas) -- "...once you yield to the federal government the right to tamper with state law pertaining to voting, you have already lost your freedom, no matter what the phrasing."

Laurence Curtis (R Mass.) -- "The main purpose of this (bill) is to protect one of the most fundamental rights of American citizens, the right to vote."

July 19 -- Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- "This is a bill to perpetuate McCarthyism,...to establish a Gestapo with snoopers, going into all the homes of this country."

James P. Richards (D S.C.) -- "...so far as race problems of the South are concerned there is more real love...respect...desire to help...the...colored race than you will find anywhere else in the country."

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- This bill "gives the right of self-determination...to many people...now disenfranchised for no other reason than their race."

William E. Miller (R N.Y.) -- Despite having sponsored the bill and voted for it in Committee, after hearing the debate, "I must in good conscience state...this legislation in its present form will destroy more civil liberties and civil rights than it will ever protect."

Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R Mass.) -- Opposed Miller's motion to strike the enacting clause. "I want to tell the Republicans in this House if they follow the southern democracy in the defeat of this bill, they will seriously regret it. ...This bill has been jockeyed into the position where the one group who will be blamed for (its) defeat, if it is defeated, particularly upon this motion, is the

83 SOUTHERN REPRESENTATIVES ISSUE CIVIL RIGHTS MANIFESTO

Following is the text of a manifesto against civil rights legislation signed by 83 Representatives and submitted July 13 by Rep. William M. Tuck (D Va.). (For the March 12 manifesto against school integration, see p. 416)

WHEREAS, under the guise of pious language the civil rights bill, HR 627, proposes to establish a Commission on Civil Rights, and to provide for an additional Assistant Attorney General, and further purports to strengthen the Civil Rights statutes and protect the right to vote; and

WHEREAS, the truth is that these combined proposals if enacted into law would constitute a flagrant violation of States' rights; would result in further concentration of power in the Federal Government and vest unprecedented powers in the hands of the Attorney General, and would intrude the authority of the Federal Government into matters which under our Constitution are expressly reserved to the States and the people.

Now, therefore, be it resolved that we, the undersigned Members of the United States House of Representatives, conscious of the grave and far-reaching consequence involved in it, hereby pledge our unqualified opposition to this iniquitous legislation and, confident of the soundness of our position, express the following cogent reasons that impel us to take this united stand.

The bill authorizes the Commission, with the aid of paid investigators and "voluntary" pressure groups and professional informers, to launch a sweeping "investigation of allegations" which might lead them to believe that "unwarranted economic pressure" is supposedly being exerted by private individuals over others, because of their religion as well as their race. In addition, and wholly unrelated to race or religion, the Commission is directed to "study and collect information concerning economic, social and legal developments" and "to appraise the laws and policies of the Federal Government" in the entire field of so-called civil liberties. The term "civil rights" itself is not defined; and what would constitute unwarranted pressure, economic, social and legal developments, and the scope of the appraisal and investigation, are left to the whim of the Commission. And through the power of subpena the Commission could compel any person to testify and open his books to public inspection.

The proposed additional Assistant Attorney General would be in charge of a special Civil Rights Division to be created and which would be manned by a vast horde of lawyers and investigators. A politically minded Attorney General could subject the government of States, counties, towns and localities and the officials of the citizens of the same to insults, intimidation and terror, against which there would be no redress.

Armed with the power which this legislation would expressly confer, the Attorney General, even without the consent of the plaintiffs, could file purely private law suits by and for private citizens against their neighbors. In no case would it be necessary to prove the commission of any overt act, and under the bill the Attorney General could obtain on a simple allegation that the defendant "is about to engage in an attempt" to do something that the lawyers in the Civil Rights Division conceive to be objectionable. All actions would be filed in the Federal Court and tried without a jury, and Congress, for the first time in history, would specifically permit the Attorney General to bypass State law and ignore available local remedy. This device to concentrate more power in the Federal Government and to flout State's rights is an insult to all liberty loving American citizens.

Under the Constitution the states are the sole judges of the qualifications of voters and throughout the long history of the United States the manner in which our elections are held has been a time-honored function of the States. The broad language of the bill would open practically the entire field of elections, including state primaries, to Federal intervention. The intrusion of the Federal Government into this field has not heretofore been permitted or even considered, except in precise instances clearly defined by the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments. If additional powers in matters of elections are deemed to be necessary to be vested in the Federal Government, then Congress should attack the problem squarely by proposing an amendment to the Constitution.

No one has the wildest idea of the purpose for which the extraordinary powers created by this legislation will be employed and to grant them by such vague language as is contained in the bill approaches recklessness.

The people in the United States who entertain notions that the so-called racial issue is paramount in the sum total coverage of these proposals are due for a rude awakening when their own real civil rights will be invaded if this legislation should be adopted. Our real civil rights spring from the Bill of Rights, which, among other things, provides that all matters not prohibited to the States nor delegated to the Federal Government are reserved to the States or the people.

It is an unfortunate fact, however, that this bill will add further fuel and flame to discord engendered by certain agitators and if adopted could only result in deterioration of the goodwill and the harmonious relations existing between the races and grievous injury to the steady progress and advancement of the very people whom the proponents profess to assist.

Be it, therefore, further resolved that we invite and urge every member of like mind in the House of Representatives and in the Senate, where the rules of procedure are more flexible, to join with us in the employment of every available legal and parliamentary weapon to defeat this sinister and iniquitous proposal.

The Civil Rights Manifesto was signed by the following 83 Representatives, all of whom are Democrats unless otherwise indicated:

ALABAMA -- Frank W. Boykin, George M. Grant, George W. Andrews, Kenneth A. Roberts, Albert Rains, Armistead I. Selden Jr., Carl Elliott, Robert E. Jones, George Huddleston Jr.

ARKANSAS -- E.C. Gathings, Wilbur D. Mills, James W. Trimble, Oren Harris, Brooks Hays, W.F. Norrell.

FLORIDA -- William C. Cramer (R), Charles E. Bennett, Robert L.F. Sikes, A.S. Herlong Jr., Paul G. Rogers, James A. Haley, D.R. Matthews.

GEORGIA -- Prince H. Preston, John L. Pilcher, E.L. Forrester, John James Flynt Jr., James C. Davis, Carl Vinson, Henderson Lanham, Iris F. Blitch, Phil M. Landrum, Paul Brown.

LOUISIANA -- F. Edward Hebert, Hale Boggs, Edwin E. Willis, Overton Brooks, Otto E. Passman, James H. Morrison, T. Ashton Thompson, George S. Long.

MISSISSIPPI -- Thomas G. Abernethy, Jamie L. Whitten, Frank E. Smith, John Bell Williams, Arthur Winstead, William H. Colmer.

NORTH CAROLINA -- Herbert C. Bonner, L.H. Fountain, Graham A. Barden, F. Ertel Carlyle, Hugh Q. Alexander, Woodrow W. Jones, George A. Shuford.

TENNESSEE -- James B. Frazier Jr., Joe L. Evins, J. Percy Priest, Ross Bass, Tom Murray, Jere Cooper, Clifford Davis.

Republican party. I just want to point out to the Republicans not to fall into this trap."

FOREIGN OPINION CITED

July 20 -- John F. Shelley (D Calif.) -- "The fact that a few States in the country fail to subscribe to the tenets of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence makes a mockery of our position abroad. Our diplomats are embarrassed almost daily by reports of harassment of colored citizens or visitors to this country. This situation is causing our message of freedom, equality... and liberty to ring hollow in the ears of the world."

John J. Riley (D S.C.) -- The bill "if enacted into law would change our form of government (and) put police and dictatorial powers into the hands of a very small group with no redress for those who are accused."

Usher L. Burdick (R N.D.) -- "...this act is a futile effort if not a purely political one.... There is a vast difference between equality before the law and social equality," which cannot be enforced.

Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) -- Defended the authority proposed for the Attorney General. The words "about to engage" are "used repeatedly (in federal statutes) when injunctive relief is sought." It would be "foolish" to provide only that the Attorney General could sue for damages after a crime had been committed. "He should be able to step in in advance to prevent the harm from being done."

Senate

The Senate Judiciary's Constitutional Rights Subcommittee March 2 ordered reported to the full Committee four civil rights bills: S 900, to provide stiff penalties for lynching; S 902, to establish new civil rights machinery in the Attorney General's office; S 903, to protect voting rights of all citizens in federal elections; HR 5205, to extend protection against bodily attack to all members of the armed forces. Chairman of the Judiciary Committee was Sen. James O. Eastland (D Miss.).

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

HEARINGS -- On civil rights legislation May 16 - July 6, intermittently.

TESTIMONY -- May 16 -- Attorney General Brownell described the Administration's legislative proposals and endorsed these bills: S 3605, to set up a civil rights commission; S 3604, to create a new civil rights division in the Justice Department; and S 3718 and S 3717, to protect voting rights.

He said he had a "grave doubt" about extending criminal law "into the extraordinarily sensitive and delicate area of civil rights" and therefore would not endorse any legislation so designed. "We are convinced that the proper approach to this most sensitive field would be through civil remedies and procedures," he said.

May 25 -- Ex-Rep. Andrew J. Biemiller (D Wis. -- 1945-47, 1949-51), legislative representative of the AFL-CIO, said the Administration proposals on civil rights were "not only belated but rather inadequate." He said the Federation supported them, however, as a "step in the right direction."

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, said the Committee should report out a bill identical to HR 627 in order to get action before the end of the session. Other proponents of the bill were David H. Scull Jr., Friends Committee on National Legislation, and Patrick M. Malin, American Civil Liberties Union.

June 1 -- North Carolina Attorney General William B. Rodman Jr. said: "We feel very, very keenly that this legislation is a totally unjustified reflection on our area.... It is impossible to legislate friendship, and where legislation seeks to force on people social, economic or religious views, disastrous results are certain to ensue." He said it was "beyond the power of Congress to pass the laws here proposed." He also criticized President Eisenhower's proposal to create a civil rights commission. Such a commission would, he said, "seek to enforce and impose its views on civil rights and social relations on the citizens of the state, contrary to any constitutional authority to do so."

SOUTHERN OFFICIALS TESTIFY

June 12 -- Tennessee Attorney General George F. McCanless said civil rights legislation was "an unwarranted invasion of the sovereignty" of the states. The legislation "is not needed, much of it is unconstitutional; it reflects discredit upon the governments of our states... and it will impair and will not improve the conditions it professes to correct," he said.

June 25 -- Attorney General Joseph T. Patterson of Mississippi said it was unfair to regard the Emmett Till case as typical of the people of his state. (Till, a Negro boy, was killed after allegedly making a "wolf whistle" at a white woman. Two white men were tried for murder but acquitted.) Patterson said the case was "an unfortunate occurrence that could happen in any state." He said proposed civil rights legislation was "wholly unnecessary."

Attorney John J. Wicker of Richmond, Va., a former State Senator and temporary chairman of the 1945 Constitutional Convention of Virginia, said regardless of "high and noble and honest" motives and intentions of the legislation's sponsors, "the results and effects... would be seriously and irreparably damaging to the constitutional rights of the states and of their governments and of many of their officials and citizens."

June 26 -- Rep. James C. Davis (D Ga.) said the bills would "only result in raining chaos, bitterness and turmoil down upon areas which now enjoy harmony and unity." Rep. John Bell Williams (D Miss.) said friendly Negro-white relations had been virtually destroyed in the South "by outsiders who come in for the express purpose of creating discord."

Attorney General John Ben Shepperd of Texas, in a letter to Chairman Eastland, said enactment of the bills "would be the largest single stride ever made toward an absolute federal police state." He said the proposals were "purely vote-buying gimmicks."

July 6 -- Tyre Taylor of Nashville, Tenn., Southern States Industrial Council general counsel, said civil rights legislation generally was aimed at the southern states. "Why," he asked, "is it that some Northerners...seem to hate the South and to be determined to destroy its civilization and way of life?" He suggested that the reason might be "resentment of the South's conservatism and a knowledge on the part of the northern so-called 'liberals' that on this the South is eternally right and will be proved so by history."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- July 12 -- Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) urged the Committee not to prolong its hearings. He said the Administration "bears a considerable share of the responsibility for the delay" in enacting civil rights legislation by failing to submit its recommendations until April, 1956. "The Administration wanted to get the credit for making these recommendations without running the danger of having the legislation enacted," he charged.

SENATE PIGEON-HOLE

After House passage, HR 627 was received by the Senate July 23 and referred to the Judiciary Committee which failed to take any action on it.

Sens. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D Mo.) July 24 led an unsuccessful attempt to bring the bill out of committee to the Senate floor for consideration. They asked unanimous consent to submit resolutions to discharge the bill from the Judiciary Committee, but objections were heard. (Under parliamentary rules, a discharge resolution must await action until the beginning of a "legislative day." Since July 16 the Senate had recessed instead of adjourning each evening, thereby holding to a single legislative day. A resolution or bill can be introduced in the Senate after a recess only by unanimous consent.)

Douglas subsequently offered a motion that the Senate adjourn, to reconvene five minutes later. This motion was defeated on a roll-call vote of 6-76. (See p. 183)

FUTURE ACTION

Sen. Clifford P. Case (R N.J.) July 27 asked for action on civil rights legislation during the first session of the next Congress. Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) reviewed the difficulties entailed in bringing up civil rights legislation at the end of a Congress, as was HR 627, and called for action on a civil rights measure within a maximum of three months following the opening of the 85th Congress.

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) said as Majority Leader he would take prompt action to bring proposed legislation to the attention of the Democratic Policy Committee. That committee, he said, would decide whether or not to schedule such legislation for consideration on the Senate floor.

Group Stands

Representatives of 50 organizations March 4 met in Washington to press for federal civil rights legislation in 1956. The three-day assembly was sponsored by the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights of which Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was chairman. Delegates visited their Senators and Representatives "to impress upon (them) the necessity of reporting out of committee and passing civil rights bills."

Among the organizations represented were:

American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, plus affiliated unions
American Jewish Congress
American Veterans Committee
Americans for Democratic Action
American Civil Liberties Union
NAACP
National Bar Association
National Community Relations Advisory Council
National Council of Negro Women
National Newspaper Publishers Association
Young Women's Christian Association.

The NAACP held its 47th annual convention at San Francisco June 26-July 1, and adopted resolutions requesting:

Fair employment practices legislation.

A bipartisan commission on civil rights.

Prohibition of racial discrimination in any federally aided housing, schools or health services.

Establishment of a civil rights division in the Department of Justice.

"Careful consideration" to non-violent resistance "for possible inclusion in our expanding action program for civil rights."

Coalition with "responsible trade unions for measures we favor;" in turn, NAACP would support "measures supported by organized labor" consistent with NAACP policy and program.

Americans for Democratic Action March 15 urged a five-point program of civil rights action on President Eisenhower. Joseph L. Rauh Jr., national ADA chairman, proposed:

A White House conference of state governors to obtain their pledge to "maintain law and guarantee constitutional rights."

A White House conference of "responsible leaders of Negro and white communities" to "rebuild bridges of communication."

"Whatever steps are necessary to secure the right to vote."

Amendments to strengthen the federal civil rights laws.

POSTAL RATES

HR 11380 -- Reported by the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee (H Rept 2237) May 29.

- Passed by the House July 6, by a 217-166 roll-call vote. (See p. 216)

The Administration's efforts to put the Post Office on a sound business footing met with defeat when the Senate failed to go beyond the hearing stage on a House-passed bill providing for a $430 million annual increase in postal rates. House passage followed several months of hearings and delays by Democratic leaders.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Postal Rates." (See CQ Almanacs: 1953, p. 362; 1954, p. 385; 1955, p. 360)

President Eisenhower, in his Jan. 5 State of the Union message, said the Post Office Department faced an annual deficit of one-half billion dollars. He urged "study and action" on postal problems by Congress. On Feb. 1 he asked Congress to increase rates to provide approximately $406.5 million more annually.

He proposed that first-class rates be raised from three to four cents an ounce and air mail rates from six to seven cents an ounce. He also proposed two successive annual increases of about 15 percent for second-class mail, plus an average 30 percent increase for third-class mail. At a Feb. 8 press conference, the President said "self-respect demands a raise in postal rates," since this was "the one country in the world that doesn't balance its budget in its postal service or come close to doing it."

Requests for an increase in postal rates had been under unenthusiastic consideration by Congress since 1953. Legislation reached the hearing stage in 1953; went as far as the House floor in 1954 but was returned to the Rules Committee; and got no action in 1955.

Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield, in his Jan. 30, 1956, recommendations to Congress, said the Post Office Department's yearly deficit averaged almost $500 million, that costs in the past ten years exceeded revenues by about $5 billion. "We are losing money in these huge amounts because we are still charging 1932 rates but paying 1956 costs," Summerfield said.

He estimated the proposed increases in rates would yield: for first-class mail, $295 million a year in new revenue; for air mail, $16 million more a year; for second-class mail, $17 million more each year; for third-class mail, $77 million more a year.

Summerfield also sought approximately $780 million over a five-year period to modernize and maintain postal buildings.

House

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

HEARINGS -- March 13 - April 26 on HR 9228, to readjust postal rates.

TESTIMONY -- March 13 -- Postmaster General Summerfield said the Post Office deficit for fiscal 1957 was estimated at $470 million. Since 1932, postal costs had increased 107 percent, Summerfield said, while letter rates remained unchanged, second-class mail rates increased only 3 percent and third-class rates rose only 38 percent. Proposed increased letter rates would be derived 75 percent from business users and 25 percent from individuals, he said. Summerfield proposed establishment of a permanent rate-making commission, under control of Congress, to "develop and maintain equitable and reasonable postal rates."

Deputy Postmaster General Maurice H. Stans said a Post Office committee on cost allocation recommended in January, 1954, that second and third-class mail should bear half and three-fourths of their expenses, respectively, and the remainder of their costs, along with any special services costs, should be assigned to first-class and air mail rates because they are preferred services. These "differential pricing" formulas gave scientific support to the Department's proposals, Stans said.

March 14 -- Two newspaper publishers, Palmer Hoyt of the Denver Post and Preston Wolfe of the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch and the Ohio State Journal, said rate increases were justified even though they would mean added costs to them.

John S. Coleman, president of the Burroughs Corp., Detroit, Mich., said "business can afford to pay the reasonable increases proposed...."

Postmaster John F. Fixa of San Francisco, Calif., president of the National Assn. of Postmasters of the United States, said the proposed increase would cost the average family 10 or 12 cents a month. He said he was confident the increase would be "willingly" accepted.

March 15 -- Postmaster Bernard F. Dickmann of St. Louis, Mo., said the Post Office deficit was "a national disgrace" and affected the morale of department employees who worked "under conditions that are 20 years, at least, behind the times."

NEWSPAPERS FOR HIGHER RATES

March 16 -- Peyton R. Evans, executive secretary of the Washington (D.C.) Publishers Assn., said Washington newspapers "wish no subsidy" and support the proposed increases. The increases would cost the papers approximately $36,000 a year, Evans said.

Higher postal rates were also backed by spokesmen for the following newspapers: the Los Angeles (Calif.) Times, the Birmingham (Ala.) News, the Pascagoula (Miss.) Chronical Star, the Flint (Mich.) Journal and the Pontiac (Mich.) Press.

John C. Allen, general traffic manager of Sears Roebuck and Co., said his company favored the increases but "we have been concerned...with a tendency to recover additional revenues and rates primarily from fourth class mail."

Committee Chairman Tom Murray (D Tenn.) March 19 said support for the proposed increases was greater than had been anticipated, that opinion polls indicated the public was not opposed to higher rates.

March 20, 21 -- Five small business firms' spokesmen said proposed increases would mean hardship to them.

March 22 -- Publishers of children's and specialized business magazines said increased postage would hurt their enterprises.

Arthur Z. Gray, president of Street & Smith Publications, said HR 9228 would "unjustly burden" the company's operations, and that the Post Office Department should not be required to pay its own way "any more than any other governmental department."

OPPOSITION VOICED

J.M. George, general counsel for the National Association of Direct Selling Companies, Winona, Minn., opposed HR 9228, said postal services "must be paid for from general revenue," and that a "studied effort is being made to prejudice members of the Congress against third class mail."

March 23 -- O.R. Strackbein, legislative representative of International Allied Printing Trades Assn., said rate increases would injure the printing trade and that there was no connection between postal rates and efficiency of the postal operation.

Bernard E. Esters, legislative chairman of the National Editorial Assn., said the public service function of small town publishers should be "realistically appraised when consideration is being given to imposing the greater hardships" of increased rates. The opinion of NEA membership on HR 9228 "varies all the way from emphatic objections to any increases whatsoever to a willingness to accept nominal increases," Esters said.

March 27 -- A.L. Cole, general business manager of Reader's Digest Assn., said proposed rate increases would mean an additional $2 million yearly in the company's postage bill. He said higher rates would necessitate increases in the price of either the firm's magazine, advertising, or books -- or all three. Congress should "insist on continued efforts to reduce the costs of operating the postal establishment," Cole said.

Vice President E.T. Meredith of the Meredith Publishing Co., publishers of "Better Homes and Gardens" and "Successful Farming," said publishers "must have an opportunity to assimilate rising costs gradually over a long period of time." Higher postal rates would reduce circulation and minimize magazines' "tremendous contribution to our prosperous economy," Meredith said.

April 10 -- Robert E. MacNeal, president of the Curtis Publishing Co., said he felt it was possible to justify increases in some mail classes without altering the postal policy of public service.

April 11 -- Edward D. Becker, publisher of the Pittsburgh, Pa., Sun-Telegraph and representative of 15 Hearst newspapers: "We simply would not pay excessively high rates.... We might drop mail subscriptions almost entirely, we might use truck and carrier delivery to a greater degree...."

Herbert R. Mayes, editor of "Good Housekeeping" magazine, opposed any increase in postal rates.

Joseph A. Duffy, executive secretary of the American Booksellers Assn., said the average bookseller "just about makes the grade on a 3 percent average profit, before taxes." Booksellers would be willing to support increased first and third-class rates, Duffy said, but they wanted the book rate increase struck out.

NO POLITICAL HANDICAP

April 12 -- Ex-Postmaster General James A. Farley said he did not think there would be any "political repercussions" from raising rates in an election year. Farley, who was Postmaster General from 1932-40, said there had not been "a commensurate increase in rates" to offset increased post office costs since 1946.

April 13 -- Editor-in-Chief Walker Stone of the Scripps-Howard newspapers said "we're quite willing to pay our share" of the costs of sending newspapers through the mail.

April 17 -- Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey said failure to increase postal rates "would, to all practical purposes, eliminate the very thin $400 million surplus that the President's January budget envisioned for fiscal 1957." He said suggestions that any substantial part of increased rates would be offset by reduced corporate income tax receipts was "not realistic." Postal rates should be considered a "user tax", he said, "in the same manner as toll highways."

April 18 -- Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks said business "not only should but can" absorb the costs of higher postal rates. "I think it fair to say that business generally favors the increase," he said.

April 19 -- Former Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson said rates of magazines, newspapers and other publications should be raised as much as 70 percent before ordinary letter rates were hiked.

April 24 -- Deputy Postmaster General Stans said it was a "persistent fallacy" that first-class mail paid for itself. "Even after the proposed increase of one cent per ounce there will still be a loss, in terms of a proper recognition of total costs to the government for its delivery," Stans said. He said representatives of the magazine industry had created "some confusion" by citing net profits as proof they could not meet increased postage rates. "If American business had attempted to meet its postwar increases in costs out of net profits there would probably not be a single solvent company... today," he said.

April 25 -- Summerfield said "at four cents an ounce, first-class letter mail will be one of the best buys in our economy." He added that charging first-class mail users "anything less than five cents still leaves a part of the actual costs charged to the taxpayers." Proposals for a rate differential between local and non-local first-class mail would be "discriminatory, costly, and extremely difficult to administer."

April 26 -- Summerfield appeared before the Committee to answer questions.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- The Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., at its annual convention April 30-May 2, favored increased postal rates to put the Post Office Department on a "non-profit, self-supporting basis."

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee May 29 reported a clean bill (HR 11380 -- H Rept 2237) to readjust postal rates. Minority views by eight Democrats opposed to higher first-class and airmail rates were reported (H Rept 2237, Part 2) June 8.

The majority report said the postal service "should be operated in a businesslike manner but not as a commercial enterprise conducted for profit." There was immediate need, the report said, "for a clear and affirmative declaration of Congressional policy" on the creation and maintenance of "a sound and equitable postal-rate structure." The minority report said no action should be taken to increase rates until Congress had implemented a postal rate policy.

The House Rules Committee June 7 cleared the bill for debate on the floor.

Floor Action

House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.) June 14 said he had "deliberately refrained from programming" the bill for floor action and that he would "regret very much if any Democratic members of the Committee on Rules would undertake to force the leadership to do it.... If it is going to come, I hope it will come from the Republican side."

Rep. Elford A. Cederberg (R Mich.) said he regretted that "the Majority Leader is going to make this a political issue." He named Democratic proponents of the postal bill, including former Postmasters General Farley and Donaldson, said any one of them "has forgotten more about the Post Office Department than the Majority Leader will ever know."

The bill was called up for consideration July 6 by a Democrat -- Post Office Committee Chairman Murray -- after the Republicans had forced the issue. The House passed HR 11380 by a 217-166 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 216)

Murray defended the bill against the attack of fellow Democrats who termed it an Administration measure aimed at forcing the "little fellow" to make up the deficit through raising the price of first-class stamps from 3 cents to 4 cents.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, the Postal Rate Increase Act of 1956:

Raised first-class mail rates from 3 cents to 4 cents an ounce; domestic air mail from 6 cents to 7 cents an ounce.

Set a varying scale of increases for advertising in second-class mail, scheduled to reach, in five years, 120 percent more than current rates for mail sent long distances; raised second-class reading matter (5 percent advertising or less) from 1.95 cents a pound to 2.5 cents a pound over five years, a 27 percent hike; increased third-class mail, by categories, up to 50 percent over current rates, books from 8 cents to 10 cents for the first pound.

Assigned lower rates to some fourth-class mail.

Excluded newspapers of 5,000 circulation or less from second-class rate hikes.

Declared it the policy of Congress that the Post Office be operated in a businesslike manner but not necessarily at a profit.

Directed the Postmaster General to review the postal rate structure every two years.

Made the legislation effective Jan. 1, 1957.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

William M. Colmer (D Miss.) -- Exempt newspapers of 5,000 circulation or less from second-class postage hikes; July 6. Voice vote.

Tom Murray (D Tenn.) -- Change enactment date from July 1, 1956, to Jan. 1, 1957; July 6. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

John E. Moss (D Calif.) -- Delete hike for first-class mail; June 6. Teller vote, 114-182.

Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- Make a 30 percent increase in second-class mail rates over a three-year period; July 6. Voice.

W.R. Poage (D Texas) -- Exempt farm magazines from second-class postage increases; July 6. Voice.

George M. Rhodes (D Pa.) -- Delete air mail hikes; July 6. Voice.

Paul C. Jones (D Mo.) -- Limit the use of the Members' frank on Congressional Record reprints to the Member's District; July 6. Standing, 104-110; teller, 81-162.

Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.) -- Exempt first 20,000 copies of a magazine from second-class rate increases; July 6. Voice.

Rhodes -- Delete book and educational film rate increases; July 6. Voice.

Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio) -- Design new 4 cent stamp to bear an elephant with a dollar sign on its side; July 6. Teller, 3-9.

DEBATE -- July 2 -- Ray J. Madden (D Ind.) -- "The increase urged by the Postmaster General is nothing more than a tax on the little fellow."

July 6 -- Rhodes -- "Before any thought is given to a boost in first class rates, substantial adjustment should be made in other classes of mail, particularly second class, where the major portion of the deficit occurs."

Charles S. Gubser (R Calif.) -- "Let us stop the national disgrace of being the only free country in the world that is showing a deficit in its Post Office Department."

T. James Tumulty (D N.J.) -- "It is a sales tax.... I might call it (the hike for first-class mail) the Stamp Act of 1956 or, better still,...the Summerfield Raid on the Piggy Banks of America."

PUBLIC OPINION SURVEY

The House Government Operations Committee July 25 released a study, " Public Opinion Survey to Influence Postal Rate Legislation." The report stemmed from an inquiry by the Committee's Executive and Legislative Reorganization Subcommittee into a Dec. 21, 1953, contract between the Post Office Department and the Wengel Service Corp. of Princeton, N.J. The firm was to sound out public opinion on postal rates and service. The report said the contractor interviewed 2,067 persons between Dec. 12 and 23, 1953, and was paid $11,653.

The report concluded: the job done by Wengel was not necessary; the job was done "for the purpose of influencing the Congress in the matter of postal rate increases; there has been an increase in the taking of public opinion polls by the agencies despite the lack of Congressional authorization." The report recommended a study to determine if legislation were needed to curb outside contracts for such purposes as polls.

A minority report signed by Reps. Cecil M. Harden (Ind.), Clarence J. Brown (Ohio), Clare E. Hoffman (Mich.) and Charles Raper Jonas (N.C.), Republican members of the Subcommittee, said there was nothing illegal about the contracting for the poll, adding: "The Post Office Department cannot be oblivious to public opinion either in its financial policies or its operating policies."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service, Special Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- July 17 - 25 on HR 11380, to increase postal rates.

TESTIMONY -- July 17 -- Summerfield said if postage rates were not raised, the postal deficit in 1957 would be half a billion dollars whereas boosting rates about $430 million would "contribute to tax relief or debt reduction." He said opponents of the bill "have deliberately confused the issue."

July 19 -- Sen. A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) said the bill was major legislation requested by President Eisenhower and that the full Senate should be given a chance to vote on it. He urged that the measure not be killed in Committee.

William C. Doherty, president of the National Assn. of Letter Carriers (AFL-CIO), said "if increased postage rates are the only means to improve the postal service, install modern equipment and remedy poor working conditions," he would support the legislation.

(Summerfield July 19 offered a compromise on the disputed magazine rate increase in a letter to Sen. Frank Carlson (R Kan.), senior Republican on the Committee. Summerfield said he would settle for two annual 15 percent increases in rates for second-class mail, magazines, and newspapers. The compromise would cut the total anticipated rate increase revenue from about $430 million to $400 million.)

POSTAL WORKERS SUPPORT BILL

July 20 -- John Fixa, president of the National Assn. of Postmasters, Daniel Jaspan, National Assn. of Postal Supervisors; and Ross A. Messer, National Assn. of Post Office and General Services Maintenance Employees, favored the bill. These witnesses opposed it: Theodore J. Gloisten of American Home Magazine; Robert E. McNeal of the Curtis Publishing Co.; Mrs. Dennis Jackson of Consumers Conference of Cincinnati; Frank E. Daniels of the Raleigh News and Observer; Charles E. Sweet of Capper Publications; Godfrey Hammond of Popular Science Monthly and Outdoor Life; and M.A. Williamson of American Metal Market.

July 23 -- David W. Brumbaugh, Time Inc. vice president, questioned the Post Office Department's estimate that it loses $86,600,000 a year on Life Magazine alone. J.M. George, president of the National Assn. of Direct Selling Co.'s of Winona, Minn., said increases already made in third-class mail had forced many small businesses to close.

July 25 -- Ivan Veit, director of promotion and research for the New York Times, said second-class mail raises proposed would more than double the paper's current mail expenses.

ACTION -- The Committee July 26 adjourned hearings without taking any action on HR 11380. Chairman Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) said the five-member Special Subcommittee could not complete hearings in time for Senate action. Congress adjourned July 27.

SAFETY DEVICES ON SHIPS

HR 4090 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 1618) Aug. 1, 1955.

- Passed by the House June 13, 1956, by voice vote. (For roll-call vote, see p. 208)
- Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 2652) July 19.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, July 23 by voice vote.
- House agreed to Senate amendments July 25 by voice vote.

P.L. 947 -- Signed into law August 3, 1956.

The bill, as amended and enacted, authorized a joint study to determine the need for installing additional electronic safety devices on certain cargo ships. Proponents of the bill said installation of the devices would increase maritime safety. Opponents said one of the devices, the radio-telegraph call selector, was unreliable and installation costs excessive.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 4090:

Authorized a joint study by the Federal Communications Commission, Coast Guard and Federal Maritime Administration to determine the need for installing automatic radio-telegraph call selectors and other safety devices on cargo ships carrying less than two radio operators.

Required a report of the study findings and recommendations for necessary legislation by March 1, 1957.

Background

The Communications Act of 1934 requires that United States cargo ships carrying only one radio operator must install an autoalarm system. The autoalarm system alerts the radio operator to an emergency so that he may listen for a distress message. It was pointed out in testimony before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Subcommittee that approximately 97 percent of U.S. flag ships are cargo vessels with only one radio operator.

As introduced, HR 4090 would have required such ships to install a radio-telegraph call selector that could receive and reply to "S O S" and other international safety signals. Similiar legislation was reported to the House in the 83rd Congress (HR 6004 -- H Rept 1906).

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Transportation and Communications Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March, May and June, 1955, on a bill (HR 4090) to require the installation of an automatic radio-telegraph call selector on cargo ships.

ACTION -- The Committee Aug. 1, 1955, reported HR 4090 (H Rept 1618).

Floor Action

The House on June 13, 1956 passed the bill by voice vote. A motion to recommit it was defeated by a 151-228 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 208)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 4090:

Required United States cargo vessels of 1,600 gross tons or more to carry either two radio operators or an automatic radio-telegraph call selector capable of simultaneously receiving and answering five Morse code signals.

Specified that the Act would not take effect until the Federal Communications Commission determined that such a call selector was available and could be installed at reasonable cost, and that patents for it were available for license at a reasonable royalty.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Thomas M. Pelly (R Wash.) -- Specify that the act would not take effect until an international convention required installation of an automatic call selector; June 12. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- June 12 -- Congressmen disagreed on whether a practical call selector existed and actually would enhance the safety of a ship.

Pelly -- "I urge my colleagues to act on the merit of the bill and not on the merit of its author (Majority Leader John W. McCormack -- D Mass.) and his worthy motives." Pelly said the bill was "special interest legislation" for "the one family which owns the patents" on an automatic call selector. FCC tests on the selector showed it was inefficient, and most seamen and shipowners were opposed to the bill.

McCormack -- "Every piece of legislation on the statute books for safety at sea has been brought about as a result of Congressional action and against the bitter opposition of the steamship association."

J. Percy Priest (D Tenn.) -- Auto alarms, currently required on ships with less than two radio operators, receive only distress messages. The call selector "would supplement the autoalarm by alerting the ship radio operator during situations which, although not of a distress nature, do involve maritime safety."

Craig Hosmer (R Calif.) -- Enactment of the bill would "compel the use of a piece of equipment that today cannot pass the (FCC) tests" and might endanger seamen's lives.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARING -- June 28.

ACTION -- July 19 reported an amended bill (HR 4090 -- S Rept 2652) striking out the text of the House version and providing for a joint study of the need for installing certain safety devices on cargo ships.

Floor Action

The Senate July 23 passed by voice vote, without debate, the amended version of HR 4090.

PROVISIONS -- See those of the final version, above.

The House July 25 concurred by voice vote in the Senate amendments.

NATURAL GAS BILL VETOED, CAMPAIGN GIFT AIRED

HR 6645 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 992) June 28, 1955.

- Passed by the House, amended, on a 209-203 roll-call vote July 28. (1955 Almanac, p. 454)

S 1853 -- Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 1219) July 28.

HR 6645 -- Passed by the Senate, on a 53-38 roll-call vote, Feb. 6, 1956. (See p. 151)

- Vetoed by the President Feb. 17.

President Eisenhower in 1956 vetoed a bill (HR 6645) to exempt independent producers of natural gas from federal utility-rate control despite his support of the measure's "basic objectives." What decided his action, the President made clear, was an "arrogant" effort by agents of a natural gas producer to win favorable Senate votes for the bill by proffering campaign contributions.

Three days before the Senate voted to pass the bill, Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) stunned his colleagues by announcing that he would vote against the bill because of a $2,500 campaign contribution offered to him by a lawyer "interested in passage" of the bill. Immediately after passing the bill, the Senate set up a Select Committee headed by Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) to investigate details of the contribution that Case had rejected. Hearings focused on activities of two agents of the Superior Oil Co. of California.

In a report April 7, the Committee concluded that the contribution proffered to Case "was for the purpose of influencing the Senator's vote," though not an attempt to bribe him. The Committee recommended revision of laws dealing with campaign contributions and clarification of the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act -- both subjects that the Senate assigned to another Special Committee Feb. 22. (See p. 743)

VETOED PROVISIONS

The purpose of the natural gas bill was to nullify a 1954 Supreme Court decision which in effect ruled that independent producers who sold natural gas to pipeline companies were subject to federal regulation under the Natural Gas Act of 1938.

Supporters of the bill said utility-rate regulation was unsuited to the "high risk" industry and would discourage development of new gas reserves and the interstate sale of gas. Opponents contended the bill's indirect price regulations would fail to protect "captive" consumers and would bring huge "windfalls" to the already profitable oil and gas industry.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by House and Senate, HR 6645:

Exempted independent producers from federal utility regulation.

Empowered the Federal Power Commission to determine a "reasonable market price" for gas contracts after considering the competition involved, the supply situation and provisions relating to existing and future prices.

Authorized FPC to disregard field prices above the reasonable market price as grounds for rate increases that would be passed on to consumers.

Empowered FPC to determine the reasonable market price for new or renegotiated contracts between producers and natural gas companies (pipeliners).

Required producers to fulfill existing contracts without resorting to price boosts authorized in most kinds of "escalator clause."

Forbade producers to cancel contracts if their customers refused to pay more than the FPC-established market price.

Permitted FPC to suspend, for five months, rate increases on gas sold for industrial use (a provision already in effect for commercial and domestic gas users).

Background

REFERENCE -- "Natural Gas" (1955 Almanac, pp. 454-60).

The natural gas industry is divided into three distinct segments:

Producers -- Drill and gather natural gas in the field, often in conjunction with oil. Independent producers are those free of any ties with transmission companies. According to the General Gas Committee, there are about 8,000 independent producers. In 1954, the Federal Power Commission listed 5,557 independent producers selling in interstate commerce.

Pipeliners -- Engage in the interstate transportation of natural gas. Some of these companies also control production facilities.

Distributors -- Local utilities (estimated at more than 1,000) which buy gas from pipeliners at the city gate and re-sell it to the ultimate industrial, residential or commercial consumer.

PARTIAL REGULATION

Distributors of natural gas, operating as monopolies, long have been subject to local public utility regulation. Pipeliners were placed under federal utility regulation by the Natural Gas Act of 1938. Independent producers generally were held exempt from such regulation by the FPC.

To make this exemption explicit, Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) and Rep. Oren Harris (D Ark.) introduced identical bills in 1949. The House passed the Harris bill in 1949 by a vote of 183-131 (D 93-97; R 90-34); the Senate passed the Kerr bill in 1950 by a vote of 44-38 (D 28-16; R 16-22). However, President Harry S. Truman vetoed the bill.

In 1954, the Supreme Court held, in the Phillips Petroleum case, all sales of natural gas in interstate commerce for resale subject to FPC regulation under terms of the Natural Gas Act. This ruling, in effect, made all independent producers who sold gas to pipeliners for resale in other states subject to federal regulation.

The Phillips decision prompted Rep. Harris to introduce a revised version of his 1949 bill. The House passed HR 6645 July 28, 1955, by a 209-203 roll-call vote (D 86-136; R 123-67). (1955 Almanac, p. 162)

A comparable bill (S 1853), introduced by Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.), was reported by the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee July 28, 1955. The legislation was commonly called the Harris-Fulbright bill.

STAKES INVOLVED

According to the American Gas Association, natural gas in 1954 met 25 percent of total United States energy needs, up from 11.3 percent in 1940. Revenues from utility sales of natural gas totaled $2.6 billion, including $1.4 billion from residential users, $767 million from industrial users and $304 million from commercial users. Known reserves of 211 trillion cubic feet were worth (at the average wellhead price of about 10 cents a thousand cubic feet) more than $21 billion. Texas held one-half the reserves and accounted for one-half of 1954 net production of 9.5 trillion cubic feet. Another five states -- Louisiana, New Mexico, Kansas, Oklahoma and California -- held approximately 40 percent of the reserves, accounted for 40 percent of production.

Senate

Senate debate on the Fulbright bill (S 1853), which was high on the legislative list of Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas), began Jan. 16, 1956.

After adopting two minor amendments that made the text of S 1853 conform exactly to that of the House-passed bill, the Senate Feb. 6 passed HR 6645 by a 53-38 roll-call vote (D 22-24; R 31-14) and sent the bill to the President. (For voting, see charts p. 150, 151)

Final consideration of the bill was overshadowed by the Feb. 3 announcement of Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) that he had rejected a $2,500 campaign contribution from a lawyer interested in passage of the bill. (See story on investigation, below)

Six amendments to the bill were rejected, four of them on roll calls. Acceptance of any of them would have sent the bill back to the House for reconsideration. A recommittal motion -- urged by Senators who said the Case issue should be settled before final action was taken on the bill -- was defeated on a 30-64 roll call.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- Delete from S 1853 the definition of interstate commerce, which included commerce between a foreign country and a state; Feb. 6. Voice vote.

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- Delete a section of existing law that prevented the FPC from suspending rate increases on gas sold for industrial use; Feb. 6. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

John O. Pastore (D R.I.) -- Provide that the FPC, in determining the reasonable market price, consider the protection of consumer interests; Feb. 6. Roll-call vote, 40-53.

Charles E. Potter (R Mich.) -- Substitute "fair and equitable" for "reasonable market" price and add new criteria for determining such a price; Feb. 6. Roll call, 33-59.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Prohibit certain types of "escalation clauses" in contracts for purchase of natural gas; Feb. 6. Roll call, 33-59.

Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) -- Prohibit natural gas imports that would result in unemployment or injure competing fuel industries; Feb. 6. Voice.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- (substitute for the bill) Exempt from FPC utility-rate regulation independent producers who sell annually less than two billion cubic feet of natural gas in interstate commerce; Feb. 6. Roll call, 35-58.

Pastore -- Provide that pipeline companies need not pay more than the reasonable market price under contracts made after enactment of the bill; Feb. 6. Voice.

DEMOCRATS DIFFER

DEBATE -- Jan. 16 -- A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- "This bill will protect not only the present but future supplies of gas, and will at the same time through its regulatory provisions prevent unjustifiable increases in consumer prices for their gas."

Douglas -- Of 5,000 natural gas producers, "all but 200...sell less than two billion cubic feet of gas a year. One hundred and ninety-seven big producers sell 90 percent of the gas; all the others sell only 10 percent. That is the real issue."

Jan. 17 -- J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Under the 1954 decision in the Phillips case, "for the first time in our nation's peacetime history, a highly competitive segment of our economy has been wrenched from the free enterprise system and converted into a public utility under the direct domination of the federal government."

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- "Increasing federal bureaucratic interference with the price mechanism of the market place will eventually bring on the totalitarian economy and state.... If the federal government can regulate the price of gas at the wellhead, it can regulate the price of any other fuel, of any agricultural or manufactured commodity."

Jan. 18 -- Pastore -- "This bill falls short of properly and adequately protecting the 26 million Americans who are consumers of natural gas...and who will find themselves at the mercy of the suppliers of their gas" unless protected by law.

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- Congress must choose between two types of regulation on natural gas: one based on the reasonable market price, the other the utility-rate type "whereby a producer would be allowed 6 percent on his depreciated cost."

Potter -- Determination of "reasonable market price" will not preclude "the escalation clauses which have brought about the constant rise in the cost of gas."

CONSUMER PROTECTED?

Jan. 19 -- Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- Areas without natural gas must depend on pipelines running from other states which cannot be regulated by the consuming state. Overturn of the Supreme Court decision upholding federal regulation would throw the consumer "on the mercy" of the gas producer.

Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) -- "I have been unable to find...one instance when the federal government came into the picture that the ultimate cost to the consumer did not increase." If consumers were suffering from high gas prices, it was due to "poor regulations within the cities."

Jan. 20 -- Douglas began a four-day speech in opposition to the bill. While S 1853's proponents claim it "was intended to protect the consumer...in the back rooms word is being circulated that the bill will allow gas prices to go up very greatly.... Because the gas industry is non-competitive, regulation is necessary to protect the public interest."

Jan. 23 -- Douglas -- The producers "already have tremendous inducements and incentives to drill for gas and oil.... They do not need increased income of from $600 to $900 million a year by way of increased prices at the wellhead, and they most certainly do not deserve from $12.5 billion to $30 billion in windfall profits for the increased value of their reserves which would follow if this bill is passed."

Jan. 24 -- Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- "Unless this bill is passed, all non-producing areas will sooner or later experience serious shortages of natural gas." S 1853 "restores competitive and risk-taking conditions at the field level." The consumer will be protected both by competition among producers and by the authority given the Federal Power Commission.

HIGHER PRICES CERTAIN

Jan. 25 -- John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) -- "Enactment of the bill is certain to result in higher prices. No one disputes this." Adoption of Douglas' substitute exempting all but the largest producers from FPC regulation would meet the claim that regulation would seriously burden the small producer.

Jan. 26 -- Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Considering how much the big oil companies stand to gain from enactment of S 1853, "the only wonder is...that they have not spent more than the $1.5 million which it is reported they have put into a public relations campaign to sell this legislation to the unsuspecting public."

Jan. 27 -- Prescott Bush (R Conn.) -- Announced the failure of his efforts to reach "a workable compromise" with the bill's supporters that would give "adequate protection" to consumers against "unjustifiable increases" in natural gas prices.

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- "This bill is not going to stimulate the exploration of new (gas) wells so much as it will stimulate the profits on those wells and those reserves now in existence." A five-cent increase in the cost of gas at the wellhead will cost consumers $300 million a year.

NEED FOR MORE GAS

Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) -- "We in Maine have no natural gas at the present time and our people would like to have it.... I am definitely convinced, after talking with persons in all phases of the business, that if utility regulation (of gas producers) is continued...we will not get a supply at any price."

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- The "major fallacy" of the bill's opponents is in failing to realize that if it is defeated, producers will sell their gas within their state at higher prices than they could get under federal utility-rate regulation. Already, producers "are withholding their new reserves from interstate commerce...nine out of 16 major pipelines already are unable to acquire sufficient additional gas to replace the supplies that are depleted."

Jan. 30 -- Ralph E. Flanders (R Vt.) -- "We (in Vermont) want gas and feel sure that we have a better chance of getting it if the pipelines are full than if new production is slowed down or diverted to intrastate uses, as may be expected from full...federal control."

Jan. 31 -- Pat McNamara (D Mich), George D. Aiken (R Vt.), Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D Mo.), Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- Spoke against the bill, arguing that consumers cannot be protected "by regulating one or two parts of a monopolistic system and leaving the other parts unregulated" (Hennings).

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) -- Supported the bill on grounds that "free and unregulated competition in the production of natural gas would inevitably redound to the consumer's benefit" (Saltonstall).

Feb. 1 -- William A. Purtell (R Conn.) -- Denied that the natural gas industry is "free enterprise as we Americans know it" and said the bill's regulatory provisions would tell the Federal Power Commission to "put the stamp of approval upon what the producers of gas have already determined shall be the price."

Feb. 2 -- Alexander Wiley (R Wis.) -- Charged the bill was contrary to the consumer's interest.

CASE CONTRIBUTION

Feb. 3 -- Francis Case (R S.D.) -- Announced that he would vote against the bill because a recent incident convinced him "there are some inordinate profits in sight for the owners of gas reserves" if the bill was passed. An out-of-state lawyer, "interested in passage" of the bill, who had learned that Case was favorably inclined to the bill, later left a $2,500 cash campaign contribution with a friend of Case in South Dakota. "That would be the largest single contribution I could remember for any campaign of mine." Case ordered the contribution returned. "I object (to) doing something so valuable to those interested in natural gas that they advance huge sums of money as a down payment, so to speak, on the profits they expect to harvest."

(The lawyer later was named as John M. Neff of Lexington, Neb., and a special committee was set up to investigate the contribution incident. See below.)

Fulbright, Monroney -- Demanded that Case give the name of the lawyer involved in what Fulbright said, and Case denied charging, was an alleged attempt to "bribe" the South Dakotan. They expressed concern that the situation might "deprive the bill of the votes of Senators who had already determined on the facts to support" the bill (Monroney).

Feb. 6 -- Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- The issue raised by Case should be separated from consideration of the bill itself. "I intend to base my vote in favor of the natural gas bill on its merits."

George H. Bender (R Ohio) -- If the bill were amended to direct the FPC to consider the consumer interest in determining a reasonable price, "my constitutents will be protected and I will support...the bill."

Fulbright -- Protection of consumer interests "is essentially the object of the FPC" and the amendment is not needed.

SOURCE OF GIFT

After passage of HR 6645, the Senate set up a Select Committee which, from testimony Feb. 11 and 13, learned that the money offered Case came indirectly from the president of the Superior Oil Company of California. On Feb. 14 a federal grand jury began an inquiry into the incident.

Veto of Bill

President Eisenhower Feb. 17 vetoed the natural gas bill (HR 6645). In an obvious allusion to the $2,500 offered Sen. Case, Mr. Eisenhower said, "Since the passage of this bill, a body of evidence has accumulated indicating that private persons, apparently representing only a very small segment of a great and vital industry, have been seeking to further their own interests by highly questionable activities.

"These include efforts that I deem to be so arrogant and so much in defiance of acceptable standards of propriety as to risk creating doubt among the American people concerning the integrity of governmental processes."

Noting that investigations of the situation could not be completed within the 10-day period he had to act on the bill, the President said that to approve the bill before "the activities in question have been fully investigated by the Congress and the Department of Justice" might "create long-term apprehension in the minds of the American people."

But he added that "legislation conforming to the basic objectives of HR 6665 is needed" because current FPC regulation would "discourage individual initiative and incentive to explore for and develop new sources of supply." Mr. Eisenhower proposed that new legislation "include specific language protecting consumers in their right to fair prices."

Campaign Gift Probe

The Senate Feb. 7 adopted, by a 90-0 roll-call vote, a resolution (S Res 205) setting up a Select Committee to investigate a campaign contribution to Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) from a lawyer interested in passage of the natural gas bill. (For voting, see chart p. 151)

An attempt by Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D Mo.) to broaden the study to include "political contributions or other expenditures to influence the vote of any Senator" was sidetracked.

PROVISIONS -- S Res 205 authorized a bipartisan, four-member Select Committee to:

"Investigate the circumstances involving an alleged improper attempt through political contributions to influence the vote of" Case on the natural gas bill (HR 6645).

Report its findings and recommendations by March 1.

Spend up to $10,000, use subpenas if necessary and take testimony orally or by deposition.

MEMBERSHIP -- Sens. Walter F. George (D Ga.), Carl Hayden (D Ariz.), Styles Bridges (R N.H.) and Edward J. Thye (R Minn.), who had divided evenly, pro and con on the gas bill, were named to the Committee. The first three ranked highest in party seniority; Thye ranked 14th among GOP Senators.

DEBATE -- Feb. 6 -- Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- "If any effort has been made to subvert the conduct of the Senate's business, that effort should be condemned with the fullest force of the Senate's authority." But for the Senate to postpone consideration of the gas bill because of the Case incident would be to "prostrate itself before phantoms."

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Agreed with Johnson's views.

Contributor Once State Lobbyist

John M. Neff, the Nebraska lawyer who made a "no strings attached" campaign contribution to Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.), registered in 1955 in Lincoln, Neb., as a lobbyist representing the Superior Oil Co., of California and Texas. He was listed as opposed to a bill under consideration by the state legislature, to set up a commission to regulate the state's oil and natural gas industry. The bill was turned down by the legislature in March, 1955.

According to state records, the company paid Neff $532.94 in February, 1955, and $858.81 in March. Neff spent $448.75 in those months.

A Republican and city attorney of Lexington, Neb., Neff was not registered under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act.

Nebraska's Sens. Roman L. Hruska (R) and Carl T. Curtis (R) Feb. 6 said Neff asked them late in 1955 to vote for the natural gas bill. "There was nothing untoward in the slightest in any of his suggestions or discussion of the bill," Hruska said.

Hennings -- The Senate should investigate "all the facts about money spent on both sides of this (gas) issue" and the role of the "giant oil companies" backing the bill. In view of "the undue influence which concentrated wealth in the hands of a few people...can have on federal elections -- undue influence which is altogether legal under the present obsolete laws" -- Congress should pass S 636, which would revise campaign spending laws. (1955 Almanac, p. 375)

William Langer (R N.D.) -- Saw no need for the Select Committee, argued that Hennings' Privileges and Elections Subcommittee of the Rules Committee had jurisdiction over the Case incident.

Case -- Read a telegram from John M. Neff, Lexington, Neb., lawyer, who said he had made the $2,500 campaign contribution in behalf of "Midwest Republican policies" and "without any strings attached." Neff said he was "interested" in passage of the gas bill but was "incensed" that Case made "inferences that it was some kind of a shady deal."

Committee Action

The Select Committee met Feb. 7, elected George Chairman, conferred with Case, scheduled public hearings for Feb. 10 and issued subpenas for:

Neff.

E.J. Kahler, business manager of the Sioux Falls Argus-Leader, to whom Neff gave the contribution for Case's expected re-election campaign.

John Griffin, Sioux Falls druggist, authorized to receive Case's campaign funds and who received the Neff gift from Kahler.

Three members of Case's staff: Miss Opal Van Horn, legislative clerk, who Case said talked to Neff in December about the Senator's views on the gas bill; Miss May Aaberg, secretary; and Mrs. Mabel O. Connell, receptionist.

On Feb. 8 the Committee appointed Charles W. Steadman, Cleveland lawyer, as chief counsel.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Feb. 7 -- The Senate Elections Subcommittee asked Case to testify. He declined at the request of Sen. George who, in a letter, cited a ruling by Vice President Richard M. Nixon that the Select Committee had exclusive jurisdiction over the contribution incident.

Feb. 8 -- Elections Subcommittee Chairman Hennings announced his group would defer its "broad inquiry into campaign contributions and other expenditures" until the Select Committee concluded its work. He also said he would resign from the Subcommittee "shortly" -- before filing for re-election to the Senate.

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Select Committee to investigate "an alleged improper attempt through political contributions to influence the vote of" Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) on the natural gas bill (HR 6645).

HELD HEARINGS -- Feb. 10-March 5 on the $2,500 campaign contribution reported by Case to the Senate Feb. 3.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 10 -- Case gave this chronological account of the incident:

- Jan. 25: Ernest J. Kahler, business manager of the Sioux Falls (S.D.) Argus-Leader, told Case John M. Neff, whom Case did not know, had left $2,500 in $100 bills as a campaign contribution for the Senator.
- Jan. 30: Case's legislative clerk, Miss Opal Van Horn, said Neff had called at the office earlier in January and talked to her about Case's views on the natural gas bill.
- Jan. 31: Case learned from Sen. Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.) that Neff was a lawyer. "I didn't want anything to do with the money," Case told the Committee, said he thought Neff might be acting for a client.
- Feb. 2: Case's staff, searching the files, found a Dec. 7, 1955, letter from Kahler mentioning Neff's interest in Case's position on the gas bill.
- Feb. 3: Case told the Senate of the episode and said he would vote against the bill.

WAITED FOR EVIDENCE

Questioned by Committee Counsel Charles W. Steadman about the timing of his speech, Case said he spoke out as soon as he had "black-and-white evidence...confirming Mr. Neff's interest in the bill." He said it was up to the Committee to decide whether the contribution was "improper." He did not consider it a bribe, he added, because "there was nothing promised."

Steadman read copies of Dec. 22, 1955, and Jan. 4 letters from Kahler to Neff in which Kahler indicated Case was favorable, but not committed, to the gas bill.

Feb. 11 -- Kahler and members of Case's Washington staff -- Miss Van Horn, Mrs. Mabel O. Connell and Miss May Aaberg -- told of their parts in the incident. Kahler, who said Neff gave him the money Jan. 16, said he forgot to tell Case about it until Jan. 25.

John E. Griffin of Sioux Falls, in charge of Case's campaign funds in the eastern part of South Dakota, told of receiving the $2,500 from Kahler and of Case's instructions to return it to the donor, if possible. He turned the money over to the Committee.

NEFF NAMES SOURCE

Neff testified he received the $2,500 from Elmer Patman, an Austin, Texas, lawyer for the Superior Oil Co., after visiting Case's Washington office Jan. 12. Neff said he told Patman of the visit, said he wanted to contribute to Case's campaign, and Patman agreed, emphasizing there were "no strings" to it.

Patman told him the money was from the personal funds of Howard B. Keck, Superior Oil president, a producer of gas and oil, Neff said. Asked whether he would have made the gift if he had known Case would oppose the natural gas bill, Neff replied neither he nor Patman "would have been as interested" in contributing.

Neff denied his trips to Washington and Sioux Falls in which he asked about Case's views on the bill were made on behalf of the oil company. But he said the company paid his expenses for the trips. Neff said that since October, 1955, the company had employed him at $12,000 a year, plus expenses, to represent it in Nebraska.

Patman confirmed Neff's account and said for some eight years he had received from $4,000-$6,000 annually from Keck to spend for campaign contributions and political dinners. He said Neff was not hired for work in connection with the natural gas bill, adding he and Keck hoped for its passage.

Keck said he first learned of the Case contribution after the Feb. 3 Senate speech. He said the money came from his personal funds, was not "tied up with any legislation," and he did not consider $2,500 a "substantial" campaign contribution.

Feb. 13 -- Sheriff Paul Whaley of Dawson County, Neb., who accompanied Neff to Sioux Falls Nov. 2, 1955, when Case's position on the gas bill was discussed with Kahler, said he did not know then that Neff was employed by Superior Oil.

Neff reiterated that his trips to Sioux Falls were his own idea, though he thought the oil company "was interested" in any Senator's position on the bill. Asked if he had contributed to any other Senator since his employment by the company, Neff said he had not given to the "personal campaign fund" of any but Case.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- A federal grand jury Feb. 14 began an inquiry into the campaign contribution and subpenaed Neff, Patman and Whaley. The Justice Department assigned Assistant Attorney General Warren Olney III and William A. Paisley, chief trial officer of the Criminal Division, to present evidence.

Route of $2,500

Howard B. Keck -- President of Superior Oil Co., Los Angeles, gave the money to

Elmer Patman -- Austin, Texas, lawyer for Superior Oil, who gave the money to

John M. Neff -- Another lawyer for Superior Oil who gave the money to

Ernest J. Kahler -- Sioux Falls (S.D.) Argus-Leader business manager who gave the money to

John E. Griffin -- Campaign fund manager for Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) who, after Case's Senate speech disclosing the contribution, turned the $2,500 over to the Senate Select Committee investigating the incident.

Gifts to Both Parties

While John M. Neff, lawyer employed by the Superior Oil Co. of California, was contributing $2,500 each to Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) and the Republican State Central Committee of Nebraska, associates also employed by the oil and gas firm were contributing to the Democratic party.

House records reported by Congressional Quarterly showed two gifts of $1,000 to the Democratic National Committee in 1955, one by Elmer Patman, Austin, Texas, lawyer for Superior Oil, and the other by Monroe Butler of Los Angeles, Calif., registered lobbyist for the company. (See p. 705)

Butler registered under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act on June 30, 1955, listing Superior Oil Co. as his employer. (1955 Almanac, p. 695) He filed a $2,435 spending report for the third quarter of 1955.

U.S. ATTORNEY QUESTIONED

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 20 -- Donald R. Ross, who resigned Feb. 17 as U.S. Attorney in Omaha, Neb., told about his connections with Neff. Ross said:

Neff, "an old friend," about Oct. 15, 1955, told him he had been hired by Superior Oil "to help represent" the company "in regard to the natural gas bill" and to "contact the two Nebraska Senators and ascertain their feelings toward" the bill. Neff also said, according to Ross, that his employers wanted to make campaign contributions of $5,000 to the two Republican Senators (Roman L. Hruska and Carl T. Curtis).

Ross said he told Neff not to mention campaign money in talking to the Senators, and Neff agreed. Ross then contacted Hruska and Curtis. Later, Neff talked to them in behalf of the gas bill. About Nov. 1, Ross said he learned that Neff had given $2,500 to the Nebraska Republican State Committee. In January, Neff told him he wanted to give another $2,500 to the Committee but Ross dissuaded him.

Neff asked him in October, Ross said, to help him in his work for Superior Oil but Ross said he could not accept outside employment. About two weeks later, he said, Neff sent him five savings and loan passbooks, each made out for $100 in the names of Ross' five children. Ross had Neff cancel the accounts, he testified.

Ross said he resigned as U.S. Attorney after Justice Department officials told him he had done nothing illegal but had "made a mistake of judgment" that might reflect on the Department.

COMMITTEE'S LIFE EXTENDED

On Feb. 21, and again March 9, the Senate extended the time for the Committee's report and gave it an additional $10,000 for expenses.

NEBRASKA GIFT DESCRIBED

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 28 -- Chairman Joseph Wishart of the Nebraska Republican State Finance Committee said Neff, on Oct. 28 in Washington, D.C., gave him a $2,500 cash contribution, saying the persons providing the money wanted to contribute in states where the people were not unfriendly to the oil industry. When Wishart said state law prohibited gifts of more than $1,000 from an individual, as well as any contributions from corporations, Neff said the $2,500 came from four, five or six persons, Wishart testified. Neff denied telling Wishart the money came from several people.

In addition to inquiring about the views of Nebraska's Senators and Case toward the gas bill, Neff said he went to Montana in December and also telephoned to Wyoming to ask the positions of Senators of those states. He said he visited Iowa GOP National Committeeman Robert K. Goodwin in Des Moines Nov. 4 in an attempt to ascertain the gas bill views of Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa). He denied offering Hickenlooper a campaign contribution, said he saw Goodwin only once and telephoned him once.

Neff said he received $7,500 from Elmer Patman, Superior Oil Co. attorney, for campaign contributions and kept $2,500 after he was dissuaded from making a second gift to the Nebraska GOP. He said he had received $5,000 in salary and $1,260 in expenses from Superior Oil since Oct. 1, 1955, but agreed he had done no legal work for the company. He added, "I never asked any Senator to vote for the bill" and never "tried to influence any Senator directly or indirectly."

Patman said he could not explain why he wrote, on three vouchers for Neff's salary and expenses, "Natural Gas Act." He said he did not hire Neff to lobby for the bill, asked him to find out the views of only the Nebraska Senators. Patman said he made several trips to find out why there was opposition to the gas bill in northeastern states.

Neff's law partner, Paul J. Gerdes, said he went with Neff to see Goodwin in Des Moines. He said he did not recall any mention of a campaign contribution during the talk with Goodwin.

TESTIMONY CONTRADICTED

Feb. 29 -- Goodwin, an ex-Rep. (R Iowa, 1940-41), said Neff visited his office early in November, 1955, and again late that month or in December. On the first visit, Neff and Gerdes "said they had $2,500...to contribute to Sen. Hickenlooper's campaign," Goodwin swore. The second time, Neff "offered to leave $1,000" with him, Goodwin said, "pending the time when he could see Sen. Hickenlooper." Goodwin said he turned down both offers, which, he added, "seemed like a down payment on a purchase."

Neff said Goodwin was "wrong" in saying contributions to Hickenlooper were discussed. He also insisted he made only one visit to Des Moines.

Chairman Walter F. George (D Ga.) said the conflicting testimony would be sent to the Justice Department.

Goodwin gave the Committee a list, dated Oct. 19, 1955, which tabulated all Senators as for the gas bill, against it, or doubtful. Neff left it, "apparently inadvertently," after his first visit, Goodwin said. Neff said he did not remember where he got the list but thought it may have been part of some papers he got from Patman. Asked about checkmarks next to the names of 10 (out of 15) "doubtful" Senators (including Case), Neff said he did not make the marks.

Howard B. Keck, Superior Oil president, produced records showing he gave Patman, for political expenses, $9,000 in 1954 and $8,500 in 1955, plus $3,000 Feb. 8 to pay expenses and legal fees in connection with the Committee's investigation.

March 2 -- Ivan D. Evans of Broken Bow, Neb., Neff's lawyer, offered three affidavits challenging the accuracy of the Feb. 29 testimony of Goodwin.

HICKENLOOPER VOTE SOUGHT

March 5 -- Wendell T. Edson, Storm Lake, Iowa, testified that Neff told him a $2,500 campaign contribution would be available for Hickenlooper if the Senator voted for the natural gas bill.

Edson testified Neff told him "his client was sufficiently interested (in the gas bill) that it would contribute $2,500 to Sen. Hickenlooper's campaign funds or any Republican campaign funds in Iowa if Sen. Hickenlooper voted for the bill." Edson said the "inference I got was that he meant if they understood Sen. Hickenlooper would vote for the bill."

Neff testified he did discuss with Edson a possible contribution to Hickenlooper but said "I did not put it that way" when asked whether the contribution was conditional on Hickenlooper voting for the bill.

Edson testified he never told Hickenlooper of the offer.

Sen. George (D Ga.) then adjourned the Committee's hearings.

PATMAN VISIT TO BRIDGES

Sen. Bridges, a member of the Select Committee, said March 7 Elmer Patman had visited him in Concord, N.H., in "October or November", 1955. "I talked to him once, as chairman of the (Republican) Policy Committee, as to how early the hearings would be held" on the natural gas bill, Bridges said.

Expense accounts Patman gave to the Select Committee listed trips to Concord in October and November.

The Nebraska Republican Finance and Budget Committee March 18 decided to return to Neff the $2,500 contribution which figured in Feb. 28 testimony.

Report Released

On April 7 the Select Committee filed its report (S Rept 1724) on the contribution incident.

The report said examination of the case emphasized the need for "substantial clarification" of the language of the 1946 Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act, because it was "too vague and loosely defined. Had the Act been clear, the course of events...might never have happened."

The report recommended that:

Congress make "a thorough and complete study" of the Lobbying Act and also re-evaluate the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

Congress consider the advisability of amending the election laws to require that every candidate for federal office designate a fiscal agent officially authorized to solicit and accept campaign contributions and make this information a matter of public record; that every person, political committee or organization making more than $5,000 in campaign contributions in any one year be required to file a detailed accounting with the Secretary of the Senate.

The Justice Department examine the transcript of the hearings to determine if any federal statutes had been violated, and whether there had been any perjury.

NOT A BRIBE

The Committee said "the objective of the individuals who initiated and carried out this chain of events was to influence by political contribution the vote of a Member of the United States Senate."

The report said "there was neither a bribe nor an attempt to bribe," but that "this is a case of irresponsibility run riot."

The report "severely censured" Patman and Neff "for their failure to act a responsible citizens," adding Keck showed "a remarkable laxity in the supervision and direction" of the two lawyers' activities.

In four months Neff "covered five states and sought out the attitude of 10 United States Senators concerning a single piece of legislation. A sum totaling $10,000 was at least considered and spoken of by Mr. Neff as contributions and $5,000 of this was actually contributed. He exercised incredibly poor judgment."

The report said there was no intention by the investigation "to cast any reflection upon Sen. Case." It also absolved Ross as "merely a victim of an environment created by Mr. Neff."

KECK CRITICIZED

The report said Patman had been given "almost appalling latitude" by Keck in the handling of funds. Distribution of the funds by others did not relieve Keck of "a responsibility to take such steps as will reasonably assure the propriety of its use rather than permitting his resources to drift with uncertainty." Keck's testimony disclosed that Patman was given from $5,000 to $6,000 a year of his personal funds from 1947 or 1948, the report noted. In 1954, Patman received $9,000 and in 1955, either $8,500 or $9,500 from Keck, testimony showed.

The report traced the activity of Patman and Neff in connection with the natural gas bill, concluding that it could "only be characterized as galloping irresponsibility."

"Whatever the long-term purpose of Mr. Neff's employment might have been," the report said, "it is indelibly clear that the immediate objective was concentrated activity on the natural gas bill and such activity was ratified and condoned by Mr. Patman, whether or not all of it was directly ordered by him. In utter disregard of his legal knowledge and training, Mr. Neff acted with consummate indiscretion in making his promiscuous contacts."

CASE CONTRIBUTION

The report said evidence showed that the $2,500 contribution which Neff attempted to make to Sen. Case's campaign fund "was not conditioned upon the Senator's agreeing to vote for the natural gas bill. It is possible to conclude that the contribution was in the nature of a reward to Senator Case for his supposed intent to vote in favor of the legislation. Or perhaps a kind of insurance to the donor that Sen. Case would continue to think and act favorably, the contribution being the premium on the policy.... While Mr. Neff succeeded in not violating any law here, he appears to have had every intention to do so," the report said.

"The circumstances here partake of a meaning making almost inexorable the conclusion that the paramount motivation for this contribution was interest in the natural gas bill as contrasted with aiding Senator Case's campaign," the report said. "It thus follows that the offer of the contribution was for the purpose of influencing the Senator's vote."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- April 9 -- Chairman John L. McClellan (D Ark.) of a special bipartisan committee to search out improper attempts to influence legislation said S Rept 1724 would be combed for "any loose ends" that would be useful in a broader inquiry. McClellan said his group also would make a thorough study of lobby laws and campaign spending.

Pressure activities for and against the natural gas bill began in the 1955 session of Congress (1955 Almanac, p. 459-60) and continued to build up steam in early 1956.

Favoring the bill were the General Gas Committee, Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee and Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, representing oil and gas interests. These groups took the lead in the Washington fight with other oil and gas groups confining their activities to getting action from members. Less active in the publicity field were the Independent Natural Gas Association of America and the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

A late entry in the fight was the Joint Committee of Consumers and Small Gas Producers.

Opposing the bill were such groups as the Council of Local Gas Companies, Mayors' Committee on Natural Gas, National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, the National Farmers Union and the United Auto Workers (AFL-CIO).

Profiles of leading pressure groups that took part in the natural gas controversy:

For the Gas Bill

• GENERAL GAS COMMITTEE -- Formed by individual oil men in October, 1954, to work for a "continuing consumer supply of natural gas by keeping the production of this commodity on a free and competitive basis." The Committee, which claimed 1,500 members, was headed by Maston Nixon, president, Southern Minerals Corp., Corpus Christi, Texas. Charles E. Simons, executive vice president, Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, Dallas, served as executive secretary. A Publicity Subcommittee was chaired by Frank Rogers, legislative representative of Mid-Continent.

• JOINT COMMITTEE OF CONSUMERS AND SMALL GAS PRODUCERS -- Mayor Alex M. Clark of Indianapolis Jan. 1, after completing his term as mayor, became chairman of the Joint Committee of Consumers and Small Gas Producers. The Committee said it would "investigate and make public the full facts behind the beclouding propaganda which has thoroughly confused consumers." Clark named 11 other members of the Committee, 10 of whom were mayors. He said he received "written pledges of support from more than 500 mayors, small producers and consumers from more than 30 states." Assisting Clark as secretary-treasurer was P.K. Ward, former corporation counsel of Indianapolis.

• NATURAL GAS AND OIL RESOURCES COMMITTEE -- Claiming 1,500 individuals and companies as members, NGORC was organized in October, 1954, to do general educational and informational work on natural gas. The Committee operated with an executive committee of seven headed by L.F. McCollum, president, Continental Oil Co. of Houston. Acting as treasurer was J.C. Donnell II, president, Ohio Oil Co., Findlay, Ohio. Much of the work for the Committee was done by a New York public relations firm, Hill and Knowlton.

• TEXAS INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS & ROYALTY OWNERS ASSOCIATION -- TIPRO, with offices in Austin, Texas, was founded in 1946 as a trade association of oil and gas producers and royalty owners. The Association claimed 4500 members in 1955, was headed by A.P. King Jr. of Houston.

Against the Bill

• COUNCIL OF LOCAL GAS COMPANIES -- Gas distribution company executives Nov. 25, 1955, announced the formation of the Council of Local Gas Companies to fight the Harris-Fulbright bill (S 1853). The Council claimed a membership of 60 gas distributors serving 10 million of the 25 million natural gas consumers in the United States. John E. Heyke, president of the Brooklyn Union Gas Co., headed the Council. He appointed Charles H. Frazier, executive engineer, Philadelphia Gas Works, and W.E. Himsworth, vice president, Brooklyn Union, to conduct Washington operations.

• MAYORS' COMMITTEE ON NATURAL GAS -- Originally formed in 1955 by Mayor Robert Wagner of New York, Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh and then-Mayor Joseph S. Clark Jr. of Philadelphia, who was chairman in 1955. Wagner later became chairman with an executive committee of Lawrence; Mayor Ben West of Nashville; Richardson Dilworth, new mayor of Philadelphia; and Mayor Frank P. Zeidler of Milwaukee. Operations of the committee were under Harvey Levin, a Philadelphia lawyer, and William R. Peer, executive assistant to Wagner in New York. Levin Jan. 11 said the Committee had 263 mayors or city chief executives supporting its cause.

• NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF MUNICIPAL LAW OFFICERS -- An association claiming to represent 960 municipalities was formed to provide information to city attorneys on problems relating to local government. Dion R. Holm, San Francisco city attorney, was president and James H. Lee, assistant corporation counsel for public utilities, Detroit, was chairman of NIMLO's Committee on Gas, Electric and Telephone Rates. Backing a convention resolution, NIMLO entered the natural gas controversy early in 1955. It organized testimony for municipalities appearing before Congressional committees and played an important part in forming a group of "representatives of consumers" headed by Sen. Alexander Wiley (R Wis.) which visited President Eisenhower March 18 for the purpose of "opposing destruction of consumer protections under the Natural Gas Act."

CHARGES, COUNTER-CHARGES

Charges of propaganda and pressure tactics featured the publicity battle waged by organizations on both sides of the gas issue. Samples of the publicity barrage:

On Jan. 9, 1956, the General Gas Committee released a statement by its president, Maston Nixon, in which he said the Council of Local Gas Companies was an "unrepresentative group of high cost utilities." He said this "lobbying group" claimed "only about 50 members among a total of more than 1,000 distributing companies in the nation." Nixon called on the Council to "answer with facts" what he called "an anti-consumer document of distortions" circulated by the group. In a letter written to "several hundred" members of the GGC Nixon said, "Faced with an attack so replete with dangerously specious arguments and plain falsification of the record by this selfish group I must appeal to the more than 8,000 independent natural gas producers of the nation to strike back at this propaganda campaign of the gas utility lobby."

In a Jan. 5, 1956, letter to all Senators, Robert Wagner said it was the purpose of the Mayors' Committee "on behalf of the unorganized gas consumers in our cities and towns, and without the means or the intention to engage in a propaganda barrage, to keep you informed of the vast consumer stake in this (Fulbright) bill which will, if it becomes law, have the practical effect of destroying the basis for fair and effective regulation of the householder's monthly gas bill."

Wagner Jan. 13 said: "The (natural gas) industry is admittedly spending at least $1.5 million in its fight to eliminate federal regulation."

Mayor Alex Clark of the Joint Committee of Consumers and Small Gas Producers on Dec. 28, 1955, charged that "certain big eastern utilities have amassed many, many millions of dollars from the pocketbooks of their several million natural gas consumers by failing to give them proper rate reductions for heating their homes, cooking their meals and operating their businesses...My primary interest is to represent those whose voices have not heretofore been heard.

"GREAT GAS ROBBERY" CHARGED

The United Automobile, Aircraft, and Agricultural Implement Workers of America (AFL-CIO) Jan. 30, in full-page newspaper advertisements, said "you have just this week to stop the great gas robbery." Urging that wires, postcards and letters be sent to Senators, the ad said "unless enough Senators can be persuaded to stand their ground now against the huge, rich oil lobby, American consumers are going to have to pay almost a billion dollars a year more for gas."

The TIPRO Reporter, organ of the Texas Independent Producers, in its final issue of 1955 said John E. Heyke of Brooklyn Union is "acting chairman of the nationwide campaign (against S 1853), which reportedly has already raised a $100,000 war chest. Also on the team are large labor organizations, particularly the CIO, which among other things already are distributing motion pictures, featuring panel-type talks by Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and Representatives Leonor K. Sullivan (D Mo.) and Torbert H. Macdonald (D Mass.).

"Cooperating in the national effort is the organized mayors' group" which it said was "hiring legal counsel to lobby against the Harris bill, and public relations representatives to propagandize consumers against the measure."

TIPRO praised the efforts of Alex M. Clark, who has "helped organize more than 200 of his fellow mayors the country over to support the bill."

In announcing formation of the Council of Local Gas Companies, Nov. 25, 1955, John Heyke said the group's "campaign will be carried on by local gas companies in their own communities. There will be no high pressure, expensive advertising campaigns such as used by the proponents of the bill who have already spent over a million and a half dollars for its passage. The powerful gas producers and oil interests who are pushing this legislation" misrepresented it as necessary to preserve the free enterprise system, Heyke said. Actually, it would "deliver to these producers huge windfall profits at the expense of consumers and their local suppliers."

Lobbyists Indicted

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. July 24 announced that a federal grand jury had indicted John M. Neff, Lexington, Neb.; Elmer Patman, Austin, Texas; and the Superior Oil Co., Los Angeles, Calif., on charges of conspiring to violate the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act in connection with their activities in support of the Harris-Fulbright bill (HR 6645).

Neff and Patman also were charged with "unlawfully" offering $2,500 to Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) in an attempt to influence his vote on the bill. Neff and Patman Sept. 7 pleaded innocent to both charges. On Dec. 14 they pleaded guilty to failure to register (counts 3 and 4 against them); all other charges were dropped. (See p. 802)

The Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act requires registration with the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of any person who "shall engage himself for pay or for any consideration" for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of legislation. Registrants are required to file quarterly reports of their receipts and expenditures.

SIX CHARGES

The grand jury charged:

- 1. "John M. Neff, Elmer Patman and Superior Oil Company...did unlawfully, wilfully and knowingly conspire together to commit offenses against the United States, that is, to violate Sections 261 to 270, inclusive, of Title 2, United States Code." The count said the defendants committed eight "overt acts" in the conspiracy.
- 2. Neff and Patman "did unlawfully, knowingly and wilfully offer...$2,500...to Francis Case...with intent...to influence the action, vote and decision of the said Francis Case on...a bill relating to and concerning natural gas," in violation of Section 204, Title 18, U.S. Code.
- 3. That Neff "did engage himself for pay...on behalf of Superior Oil Company," received money "to be used principally to aid...in the passage of legislation" and contacted Members of Congress, without registering under the Lobbying Act, in violation of Sections 267 and 269, Title 2, U.S. Code.
- 4. That Patman "did engage himself for pay...on behalf of Superior Oil Company," received money "to be used principally to aid...in passage of legislation" and contacted Members of Congress without registering under the Lobbying Act, in violation of Sections 267 and 269, Title 2, U.S. Code.
- 5. That Patman received the "sum of $3,000 from one Howard B. Keck...on the 23rd day of May, 1955...to be used principally to aid...in the passage of legislation" and failed to file "with the Clerk of the House of Representatives...a statement containing the information" as to such contribution as required by law, in violation of Sections 264 and 269, Title 2, U.S. Code.
- 6. That Patman received the "sum of $5,000 from one Howard B. Keck on the 9th day of November, 1955, and...$2,500 from Superior Oil Company...on the 5th day of December, 1955" and failed to file "a statement containing the information" as to such contributions as required by law, in violation of Sections 264 and 269, Title 2, U.S. Code.

The Justice Department said the penalty for conviction of conspiracy is a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment of not more than five years. Superior Oil was named a defendant only in the conspiracy count.

For conviction of giving money to a Member of Congress with intent to influence his decision, the law provides a fine of not more than three times the amount of money, or imprisonment for not more than three years, or both. For violation of the Lobbying Act, the law calls for a fine of not more than $5,000, imprisonment to a maximum of 12 years, or both.

1954 COURT DECISION

The last major prosecution under the lobby law was in 1954 when, in U.S. vs. Harriss, et. al. (347 U.S. 612), the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the law but limited its application to persons engaged in "direct communication with Members of Congress on pending or proposed federal legislation." (1954 Almanac, p. 674)

Ralph W. Moore, Washington commodity trader, had been accused of not registering as a lobbyist after taking money from Robert H. Harriss, New York cotton broker, to influence legislation. J.B. McDonald, Texas agricultural commissioner, and Tom Linder, Georgia agricultural commissioner, were accused of not reporting financial help from Moore to aid in influencing legislation. The National Farm Committee, the organization through which Moore operated, also was charged with violation of the Lobbying Act.

None of the defendants was convicted. McDonald died in the course of the proceedings and charges against Linder, Harriss and Moore were dismissed. The National Farm Committee was acquitted Nov. 2, 1955.

OTHER COURT CASES

Court cases which preceded the Supreme Court's decision in U.S. vs. Harriss:

1949 -- The U.S. District Court, Washington, D.C., April 19 dismissed an indictment against the U.S. Savings and Loan League on grounds it was "too vague and indefinite" and failed to cite actual cases of lobbying. The League was indicted March 30, 1948 for allegedly failing to file expense statements under the lobbying law.

1950 -- The U.S. District Court, Washington, D.C., April 17 acquitted ex-Rep. Roger C. Slaughter (D Mo., 1943-47) of a charge of violating the law. The government contended Slaughter, while employed by the North American Grain Assn. of New York, drew money from the group but failed to register. The trial judge held that the Act exempted persons testifying at Congressional hearings, plus those helping to prepare such testimony.

1952 -- A special federal court in Washington, D.C., March 17 declared certain key provisions of the lobby law unconstitutional. In the suit, filed Jan. 28, 1948 by the National Assn. of Manufacturers, the court ruled that Sections 303 through 307 and Section 310 were unconstitutional. The sections dealt with registration, reporting, applicability of the law and penalties. The court said:

"A criminal statute must define the crime with sufficient precision...that any person may be able to determine whether any action...is prohibited." The definitions of "lobbying" and "principal purpose" were "too indefinite and vague to constitute an ascertainable standard of guilt."

The Supreme Court Oct. 13 reversed that decision and left the lobby law in full force. The reversal was based on a technicality and left the path open for a new challenge of the law.

IMMIGRATION REVISION

HR 6888 -- Reported by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 1362) July 25, 1955.

- Passed by the House by voice vote July 30, 1955.
- Reported by Senate Judiciary (S Rept 2226) June 13, 1956.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote, July 27.

An attempt on the last day of the 1956 session to revise the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act was approved by the Senate but failed to reach the floor of the House.

A 13-point program worked out by leaders on both sides of the aisle was introduced July 27 in the Senate. Submitted as an amendment to an uncontroversial bill to admit 350 sheepherders passed earlier by the House, the provisions would have increased immigration by transferring quotas and by cancelling future "mortgages" against quotas, and ensured the entry of refugees authorized but not admitted under the Refugee Relief Act, due to expire Dec. 31, 1956.

One provision of the compromise worked out under the auspices of Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) and submitted by Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) provoked sharp opposition: the clause permitting redistribution of some 18,500 unused quota numbers among countries with quotas under 7,000. An amendment to delete the provision was defeated by standing vote and the Senate went on to approve the amendments and the amended bill by voice vote.

HOUSE FAILS TO ACT

The House, however, failed to take up the Senate-passed amendments. Despite the efforts of Rep. Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) to get the House to consider the measure, the presiding officer refused to take up the Senate amendments without Judiciary Committee approval.

Rep. Francis E. Walter (D Pa.) of the House Judiciary Committee, co-author of the 1952 McCarran-Walter Act, was reported opposed to the provision permitting redistribution of quotas.

The rejected compromise still would have fallen far short of President Eisenhower's 1956 program for revising immigration legislation. First touched on in his State of the Union message, and spelled out Feb. 8 in a special immigration message (see p. 73), the President's program was incorporated in bills introduced by Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) -- S 3167-70.

Hearings on immigration law revision were held by the Senate Judiciary Immigration and Naturalization Subcommittee late in 1955 and in April 1956 (see below) but no bill was reported until the sheepherders measure June 13. A bill (S 3570 -- S Rept 2684) to increase the number of orphans eligible for entry under the Refugee Relief Act was reported July 20 but received no action.

No hearings on revising immigration law were held in 1956 by the House.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 6888:

Pooled unused immigration quotas and re-distributed them to countries with annual quotas of less than 7,000, in proportion to those countries' share of the total quotas. (Estimated effect: 18,500 more entries a year.)

Cancelled "mortgages", or future assessments against national quotas, resulting from entries under the Displaced Persons Act of 1948. (Estimated effect: 8,000 new entries from Eastern Europe a year, and total entries of 328,000.)

Authorized use after Jan. 1, 1957, under regular immigration rules, of unused nonquota visas authorized under the Refugee Relief Act of 1953, due to expire at the end of 1956. (Estimated effect: 40,000 entries.)

Raised from 4,000 to 9,000 the limit on the number of orphans to be admitted under the Refugee Act; increased the limit on their age from 10 to 14 years and extended the eligibility for entry under that law of orphans adopted by U.S. citizens abroad to the time of their return to the U.S.

Permitted entry of 1,200 tubercular immigrants under regular immigration law where necessary to keep families together.

Authorized waiver of fingerprinting requirements on a reciprocal basis.

Waived residence requirement for naturalization of children adopted by certain U.S. citizens employed abroad.

Provided for entry on a nonquota basis of 350 skilled sheepherders and their families; cancelled the mortgages against Spain's quotas due to entries of sheepherders under 1950 and 1952 laws; and declared eligible for entry sheepherders convicted once of a petty offense.

Amended deportation law to exempt persons who entered the U.S. between 1945 and 1954 and who misrepresented their identity or place of origin to obtain U.S. visas, if the falsehood was based on fear of repatriation and not evasion of U.S. immigration law.

Amended the definition of "child" under immigration law to give an illegitimate child with mother the same status as a legitimate child.

Gave preference in allocation of quota visas to families "following to join" as well as accompanying, immigrants.

Permitted aliens admitted to the U.S. in diplomatic status, whose status had lapsed, to qualify as immigrants.

Background

REFERENCES -- McCarran - Walter Act (1952 Almanac, p. 154; 1953 Almanac, p. 241) Refugee Relief Act (1953 Almanac, p. 242)

In 1952, Congress passed the Immigration and Nationality (McCarran-Walter) Act over President Harry S. Truman's veto. The Act retained the national origins system as the basis for establishing quotas, but simplified the method of calculation by making the quota equal to one-sixth of 1 percent of those in the U.S. in 1920 attributable to a given national origin. The law also continued the exemption from quota limitation for most natives of the Western Hemisphere.

The following priorities were established for allocation of visas within each nation's quota:

First 50 percent to skilled aliens and their families.

Another 30 percent to parents of U.S. citizens.

Another 20 percent to families of aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

Unused quotas first to other preference groups, then to other qualified immigrants, with brothers, sisters, sons and daughters of U.S. citizens getting 25 percent of such visas.

Fiscal 1956 figures--Not Final

The 1952 law also tightened screening procedures concerning both immigrants and non-immigrant aliens desiring temporary admission to the U.S. The Attorney General's powers to exclude or deport aliens were expanded.

In vetoing the bill President Truman charged it "would perpetuate injustices of long standing against many other nations of the world, hamper the efforts we are making to rally the men of East and West alike to the cause of freedom and intensify the repressive and inhumane aspects of our immigration procedures."

QUOTA SYSTEM

Under the quota system in force, 77 percent of the 154,657 total is allotted to five nations, while 80 other countries share the remaining 23 percent. The five are the United Kingdom (Great Britain and Northern Ireland), 65,361; Germany, 25,814; Ireland, 17,756; Poland, 6,488; and Italy, 5,645. These quotas total 119,064. (See chart, adjoining)

Neither Great Britain nor Ireland has used up its quota in the past 25 years. In fiscal 1956, for example, Great Britain used 23,498 while Ireland used 6,515. In fact, in the 20 years between 1930 and 1949, quotas for all countries totaled 3,076,254, but quota immigrants totaled only 836,085. Of the 2,240,000 unused quotas, Great Britain alone accounted for more than one half.

Since the 1952 law continued the ban on transferring quotas from one country to another (and on carrying over unused quotas from one year to another), the practical effect has been to limit quota immigrants to a number well under the total allowed by law. However, the Displaced Persons Act did allow countries to mortgage their future quotas, up to 50 percent a year after 1954. Latvia, for example, used this privilege to send in 37,692 quota immigrants in the four years from 1949 through 1952. Yet Latvia's annual quota is only 235 (236 under the old law). The result is that Latvia's quota was reduced by half for the next 320 years, until the year 2274. Estonia's quota was similarly mortgaged until 2146, Lithuania's until 2090, Yugoslavia's until 2015, Rumania's until 2021 and Greece's until 2018. Even Poland, whose quota of 6,488 is the fourth largest, is in mortgage until the year 2000.

Another feature of the 1952 law that has been criticized is the preference system for visas to be issued within any given quota. Theoretically, half of 154,657, or more than 77,000 visas, should go to skilled aliens. Yet in the first full fiscal year (1954) following passage of the law, only 2,456 quota immigrants entered under this provision. For fiscal 1955 the figure was 3,012.

In another respect, however, the law eased restrictions by classing as non-quota immigrants all wives, husbands, and children of U.S. citizens. In 1954, for example, a total of 111,227 persons born in Europe were admitted. Of these 87,104 were quota immigrants and 24,123 non-quota. Of the latter more than 21,000 were wives, husbands, or children of U.S. citizens.

Most other non-quota immigrants entered the U.S. under the Refugee Relief Act or were so classified if they were natives of Western Hemisphere countries. A comparison of quota and non-quota entries:

Immigration 1951-1955

REFUGEE RELIEF ACT

In 1953 Congress passed the Refugee Relief Act, admitting 209,000 refugees over a three-year period without regard to the quotas of the McCarran-Walter Act, and giving immigrant status to 5,000 refugees already in the U.S. Allocations were specified for 16 classes of aliens. (1953 Almanac, p. 242) The law was amended in 1954 to permit transfers of quota numbers in certain categories as needed. (1954 Almanac, p. 283)

President Eisenhower in 1955 and again in 1956 asked that the Refugee Relief Act be substantially amended. He sought permission to transfer unused quota numbers to areas where they were needed.

Most of the unclaimed quota numbers were expected from among the 90,000 assigned to expellees and escapees living in Germany and Austria. With economic conditions good in those countries, there were not enough takers to fill the quota. But in Greece and Italy U.S. consular officials stopped taking applications in 1955 for the limited number of visas authorized under the law.

The President's program for amending the Act was contained in a message to Congress May 27, 1955. (For summary of his 10 points, see p. 99.) He repeated the request in 1956.

In the sixth semiannual report on administration of the Refugee Relief Act, issued Sept. 17, Administrator Scott McLeod said that as of June 30, 1956, 122,000 of the 209,000 visas authorized under the Act had been issued. Of that number, 102,154 persons had actually entered the U.S. by the end of the fiscal year.

McLeod pointed out that "the pattern of applications did not match the geographic pattern provided in the law." Without amendments to the law, he said, "thousands of applicants fully qualified and sponsored...in one area...are without sufficient visas...while hundreds of visas...will go unused in contiguous areas." McLeod estimated that the full number of quotas authorized would be exhausted by the time the legislation expired Dec. 31, 1956, except for three categories: escapees and German expellees residing in Germany, West Berlin and Austria; refugees of Dutch origin residing in the Netherlands; and non-Asian refugees residing in the Far East.

At the end of August refugee officials estimated that 175,000 entries would be accomplished under the Act, with about 34,000 visas going unused.

Eisenhower Proposals

President Eisenhower in his 1953 State of the Union message urged changes in the Immigration and Nationality Act, said the law "contains injustices" and "does in fact discriminate."

Congress did not act on his recommendation in 1953, and in 1954 the President dropped it. However, in his 1955 State of the Union message, he recalled his earlier request. He said certain provisions of the McCarran-Walter Act "are inequitable in some instances and discriminatory in others" and "should be corrected." Congress took no action on bills to revise the Act in 1955.

President Eisenhower in his 1956 State of the Union message Jan. 5 cited an "urgent need" for revision of U.S. immigration and nationality laws. He asked for an increase in the number of quota immigrants permitted each year, to be based on the 1950 census instead of on the 1920 census, and for authority to re-distribute unused quotas where needed. He also asked Congress to amend "without further delay" the Refugee Relief Act of 1953 to allocate visas unused by other countries to Greece and Italy and to Iron Curtain escapees.

In a special immigration message Feb. 8 the President again asked Congress to undertake a basic revision of U.S. immigration policies and, pending its enactment, to pass "interim measures to alleviate as much as possible inequities in the present quota system." (For text of the message, see p. 73)

The President recommended:

An over-all quota ceiling based on 1950, rather than 1920, census figures; this would raise the ceiling from 154,657 to about 220,000 immigrants annually.

Allocation of these additional quota numbers in proportion to actual immigration to the U.S. since the quota system was established in 1924.

Establishment of a "special pool" of 5,000 quota numbers "to be available for admission of aliens without regard to nationality or national origin."

Reallocation of unused quota numbers within a geographic area in the succeeding year.

Elimination of "mortgages" on quotas resulting from issuance of visas under special programs such as the Displaced Persons Act.

Substitution of administrative machinery for the private relief bill system of handling individual hardship cases; the President said 2,159 private immigration measures were pending at the beginning of the second session, and suggested the Attorney General be given "limited discretionary powers" to handle such cases.

Reciprocal waiving of fingerprinting requirements for aliens on temporary visits to the U.S.

Relaxation of admission requirements for aliens traveling through, but not remaining, in the U.S.

Elimination of inspection requirements for aliens admitted to the mainland from Alaska and Hawaii.

Repeal of provisions requiring aliens to specify race and ethnic classification in applying for visas.

Relief for refugees who obtained visas through falsification of identity in order to avoid forced repatriation behind the Iron Curtain.

Repeal of "inequitable provisions relating to Asian spouses and adopted children."

Waiver of proof of admission for permanent residence in the case of veterans otherwise eligible for special naturalization benefits.

Repeal of provision requiring one year's presence in the U.S. before marriage to a U.S. citizen; under existing law, if this requirement is not met, the alien spouse must leave the country to obtain a nonquota visa in order to gain permanent residence status.

Limitation of judicial appeal against deportation orders, "the only purpose of which is delay;" the President expressed concern over "the growing frequency of such cases involving as they often do the depraved and confirmed criminal."

Senate

1955 HEARINGS

COMMITTEE -- Senate Judiciary, Immigration and Naturalization Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Nov. 21 to Dec. 1, 1955, intermittently, on immigration policies.

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 21 -- Sen. John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) said the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act was the "most blatant piece of discrimination in the nation's history." He said the law's national origins quota system "permits immigration to this country by those who do not wish to do so while it denies that right to those who have both the need and the desire." Kennedy said the whole Act should be scrapped.

Spokesmen for the CIO and AFL said more immigrants should be granted entry to the United States. They said current immigration formulas discriminate against southern and eastern Europeans.

Dr. Henry J. Whiting, executive secretary of the National Lutheran Council's Welfare Division, said the current quota system set up "arbitrary limitations to immigration, creates hardship and ill-will, and allocates quotas to countries neither needing nor using them."

Sen. Clifford P. Case (R N.J.) said using 1950 as a base year for determining national quotas "would go a long way toward removing the senseless and serious discriminations against nationalities of southern and southeastern Europe."

Nov. 22 -- Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) called the law a "pyramid of unfounded fears."

Louis H. Bean, an economist, said "the growth of this country in resources, income, and wealth has been retarded by the immigration restrictions in effect over the past 30 years." He said immigration had decreased to about 200,000 a year, "compared with the more appropriate number of a million to a million and a half" needed.

Nov. 30 -- Paul G. Hoffman, former foreign aid administrator, said the McCarran-Walter Act was losing friends for the United States throughout the world. He asked that immigrants be selected by "individual quality" instead of by the national origin quota system. An American Veterans Committee spokesman supported Hoffman's stand, but Crete Anderson of the American Legion backed the national origin quota system.

Dec. 1 -- Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams (D) said national origin quotas were "repugnant...to the very essence and spirit of our national traditions." Williams asked approval of the Lehman-McNamara bill (S 1206), which would abolish the national origins quota and raise the number of immigrants by 97,000 a year.

Victor F. Wisskopf of the Federation of American Scientists said existing visa regulations for non-immigrant visitors "seriously interfere with the healthy development of American science."

1956 HEARINGS

HEARINGS -- April 13 and 25, 1956, on amending the Immigration and Nationality Act.

TESTIMONY -- April 13 -- Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. said an increase of approximately 65,000 in the annual quota fitted President Eisenhower's description of a "reasonable increase in the quota." The increase would be distributed in three ways: "...the quota for each minimum quota area would be raised from the present 100 to 200. Five thousand quota numbers would be placed in a special pool...for persons having special skills.... The balance would be distributed among the...quota countries in proportions (reflecting) the ratio that immigration to the United States from such countries between July 1, 1924, and July 1, 1955, bears to the total immigration from all quota countries. This method...will do much toward relieving the problem of oversubscribed quotas...."

Brownell said that basically the current formula of the quota system goes back to a 1790 census in an effort to establish "colonial stock." He urged Congress "to appropriate the necessary funds to fully explore this difficult quota problem with a view toward establishing a new, basic immigration policy."

April 25 -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said he fully supported as "fair and reasonable" President Eisenhower's recommendation for increasing the annual immigration quota. He said his primary concern, however, was that "whatever over-all quota is adopted by the Congress be apportioned equitably." Dulles said the current system was "offensive", because it "draws a distinction between the blood of one person and the blood of another...."

The system led to resentment, both in the United States and abroad, he said, among persons waiting but unable to reunite with their families. "The impact of this situation is felt in our relationships with friendly nations every day," he said. "It is particularly awkward and difficult to explain when, year after year, large numbers of authorized quota numbers go unused...."

Dulles said the State Department strongly supported recommendations for a special pool allotment, without regard to national origins.

He said the Refugee Relief Program was "still hampered by certain needless difficulties" but that visas were being issued at a rate of approximately 2,000 a week. "We can say with conviction that the available allotments of visas for most of the countries involved will be used before the Act expires," Dulles said.

ACTION -- The Judiciary Committee June 13 reported a bill (HR 6888 -- S Rept 2226) passed by the House July 30, 1955. It was the third of a series of bills providing for admission of Basque sheepherders. As reported by the Senate Committee, the bill omitted a provision of the House measure making eligible for visas persons convicted once of a crime classed in the U.S. as a petty offense. Other provisions corresponded to the House bill.

It provided for entry of 350 skilled sheepherders and their families on a non-quota basis, cancelled deductions made from Spain's future quotas by entries under sheepherders' bills passed in 1950 and 1952, and exempted from deportation persons who misrepresented their nationality or identity in obtaining U.S. visas because they feared repatriation to their homelands.

Floor Action

The Senate July 27, the last day of the session, passed HR 6888 by voice vote, after amending it by substituting a new text which went far beyond the scope of the original bill. The amended bill modified the Immigration and Nationality Act to provide for increased immigration through the re-distribution of unused quota numbers, and by cancelling "mortgages" or deductions against future quotas by entries under the Displaced Persons Act. The 13-point program which constituted the amended text also ensured the entry of refugees whose entry was authorized but not accomplished under the Refugee Act of 1953, due to expire at the end of 1956. (See PROVISIONS p. 479)

The Senate first rejected by a standing vote an amendment to strike the provisions to redistribute unused quotas, then went on to approve the amendments and the amended text by voice vote.

DEBATE -- July 27 -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Explained the amendments. Of the provision to cancel "mortgages", he said: "When the Displaced Persons Act was passed (in 1948) it provided that one-half the quotas of the countries affected should be mortgaged, so that the number who came in would be charged to the quota. The net result was that the Greek quota...was mortgaged up to the year 2017. The Lithuanian quota...to the year 2090. The Latvian quota...to 2274...(The amendment) simply lifts that mortgage. Its net effect would be that an additional 8,000 quota numbers would be available." Of the provision to redistribute unused quotas: "The total number involved here would be roughly 18,224.... The country which would get the largest number out of this arrangement would be Poland, with 1,285. The second would be Italy, with 1,247. The third would be Sweden, with 1,313. The Netherlands would be fourth, with 1,250."

Prescott Bush (R Conn.) -- Supported all the reforms in immigration law proposed by the President, and called the amendments "a modest but a definite step in the right direction."

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- An attempt to find agreement between various views on revising immigration law had produced the amendments.

REVISIONS ATTACKED

William E. Jenner (R Ind.) -- The amendment to pool and redistribute unused quota numbers "strikes at the very basis of the national origins quota system, our whole immigration structure.... I am reliably informed that unless (this) section...is stricken from the bill, the House will not act on the measure."

James O. Eastland (D Miss.) -- The amendments would "weaken the basic immigration law of the U.S.... (The national origins quota system) is designed not only to assure maximum assimilation of the quota immigrants... but more important...to preserve and protect our American traditions, our American institutions, our American way of life.... (To redistribute unused quotas) is to change the cultural pattern of our immigration system from northern and western Europeans to southern and eastern Europeans."

Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) -- Supported the amendments although "they are not by any stretch of the imagination major enough to be called a fulfillment...of the President's request...."

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Protested the procedure and haste under which the amendments were being considered. "The situation makes me feel that upon the broad shoulders and strong backs of 350 Basque sheepherders who would be admitted...we would be placing all of this tremendously large proposed change in the immigration laws of the nation."

Group Stands

The American Legion and the Daughters of the American Revolution went on record in 1956 in opposition to changes in the McCarran-Walter Act. In favor of revision were 12 other national organizations.

A "call to action" issued Jan. 9 by the American Legion urged its 2.7 million members to fight "the campaign to destroy the Immigration and Nationality Act." The Legion said "every Communist-front and leftist organization in the country will be part of the feverish drive to destroy this law." It urged members and posts to "send telegrams and letters to the members of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees" to preserve the Act.

At its annual convention in April, 1956, the DAR went on record opposing revision of the law.

Favoring revision were 12 national organizations with a claimed combined membership of 20 million. In a pamphlet, "The Fence," issued Feb. 10 the groups called for reassignment of unused quota numbers to such areas as Southern Europe and the Far East, where there were long waiting lists.

The 12 organizations sponsoring the pamphlet were: the American Jewish Committee, Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., Board of Peace and Social Concern of the Five Years Meeting of Friends, Brethren Service Commission, Church Peace Union, Commission on Christian Social Action of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, Council for Social Action of the Congressional Christian Churches, Council on Christian Social Progress of the American Baptist Convention, General Department of the United Church Women of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., National Council of Jewish Women, National Farmers Union and Women's Division of Christian Service of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Church.

In a post-session statement Aug. 4 Dr. Cordelia Cox, director of the Lutheran Refugee Service, said Congress' failure to amend the Refugee Relief Act had "put in jeopardy the immigration status of thousands of refugees."

BRICKER AMENDMENT

SJ Res 1 -- Reported, amended (S Rept 1716, Parts 1 and 2), by Senate Judiciary Committee March 7, 1956.

The 84th Congress failed to act on the controversial Constitutional Amendment (S J Res 1) concerning treaty provisions that Sen. John W. Bricker (R Ohio) had proposed annually since 1951. The Senate in 1956 failed to take up a new, shorter version of the amendment reported March 7 by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The amendment in different form had come within a single vote of adoption by the Senate in 1954. No action was taken by either house in 1955.

Although the President did not express outright opposition to the 1956 text, which Bricker said had his own "wholehearted support", Mr. Eisenhower repeated at an April 4 press conference his opposition to any diminution of the Presidential treaty-making power. But he again said that if it would "reassure the American people", he would not object to an amendment that "no international agreement or any treaty that was in violation of the Constitution" could have any force or effect.

The President expressed doubt as to the meaning of three words in the revised text of the amendment. Generally regarded as the key words of the new version, they are underscored in the following excerpt: "A provision of a treaty or other international agreement which conflicts with any provision of this Constitution shall not be of any force or effect."

Democratic leaders were reported in April as opposed to calling up the revised Bricker Amendment for Senate consideration unless the President specifically requested it. Opponents of the proposal said it would require many weeks' debate. The Senate in 1954 debated the amendment for nearly a month.

PROVISIONS -- As reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee, S J Res 1 read:

"A provision of a treaty or other international agreement which conflicts with any provision of this Constitution shall not be of any force or effect.

"On the question of advising and consenting to the ratification of a treaty, the vote shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against shall be entered on the journal of the Senate.

"This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states within seven years from the date of its submission."

(For comparison with earlier texts, see 1954 Almanac, p. 255.)

Bricker first introduced his proposed amendment to limit the treaty power in the 82nd Congress in 1951, but no action was taken on it. The proposal was introduced again in 1953 and was considered by the Senate in 1954. A substitute version proposed by Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) was rejected on a 60-31 roll-call vote on Feb. 26, 1954. A two-thirds vote -- 61 yeas -- was needed for adoption.

Bricker introduced S J Res 1, his sixth personal version of the amendment, in the 84th Congress on Jan. 6, 1955.

1955 HEARINGS

The Senate Judiciary Constitutional Amendments Subcommittee held hearings April 27-May 11, 1955, on the resolution.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, testifying May 2, said the amendment would make the President "unable properly to conduct foreign relations." He said 30 percent of the treaties entered into by the United States since 1789 "could not have been concluded and effectuated" under S J Res 1.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. May 5 said the proposed amendment would place "radical limitations" on the power of the U.S. and the President. He said the Supreme Court had affirmed repeatedly the supremacy of the Constitution over treaties and international agreements.

Organizations testifying in favor of the amendment included the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Bar Assn., National Assn. of Pro America, Daughters of the American Revolution, National Small Business Men's Assn., and Vigilant Women for the Bricker Amendment.

Opposed were the League of Women Voters, Minnesota Committee Against the Bricker Amendment, Friends Committee on National Legislation, New York City Bar Assn., American Veterans Committee, American Federation of Labor and Committee for the Defense of the Constitution by Preserving the Treaty Power.

RESOLUTION REPORTED

The Subcommittee May 23, 1955, by a 3-2 vote, approved the resolution. In favor were Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.), Price Daniel (D Texas) and William Langer (R N.D.). Opposed were Subcommittee Chairman Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) and Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D Mo.).

The resolution as reported to the full Judiciary Committee contained, in addition to the provision nullifying treaties and international agreements in conflict with the Constitution, a clause stating that treaties and international agreements "shall become effective as internal law in the U.S. only through legislation valid in the absence of international agreement."

Bricker said Dec. 2, 1955, he would press in 1956 for a simpler, shorter version of his amendment. It read: "No treaty or other international agreement shall of itself be law within the U.S., nor shall it enlarge the power of the Congress to enact law." Bricker said it was "worthwhile...to continue the fight" because "as long as the issue is alive the treaty-making power will be exercised only within traditional limits."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

ACTION -- March 7, 1956, reported (S Rept 1716) by an 11-2 vote, a substitute version of the Bricker Amendment (S J Res 1). Voting for the substitute were Sens. Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.), John L. McClellan (D Ark.), Price Daniel (D Texas), Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.), William Langer (R N.D.), William E. Jenner (R Ind.), Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah), Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.), Herman Welker (R Idaho), John Marshall Butler (R Md.) and James O. Eastland (D Miss.). Opposed were Sens. Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D Mo.) and Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.). Sens. Alexander Wiley (R Wis.) and Matthew M. Neely (D W.Va.) did not vote.

The key section of the substitute, sponsored by Sen. Dirksen, was:

"A provision of a treaty or other international agreement which conflicts with any provision of this Constitution shall not be of any force or effect."

The key provision of the previous version read: "A treaty or other international agreement shall become effective as internal law in the United States only through legislation valid in the absence of international agreement."

Sen. Bricker said the revised version had his "wholehearted support."

The majority stated in its report that the subject of the Bricker Amendment had been "discussed widely throughout the nation in the past several years." They said S J Res 1 had "evolved from a conscientious effort on the part of those who fear abuses of the international agreement-making authority." The Committee found that "the situation which this amendment seeks to alleviate is no less acute today than when last reviewed." The revised text, said the majority, sought to meet the "objections, some legitimate, some of undeserved currency, which have been raised in opposition to this proposal throughout the years."

A dissenting view by Sen. Kefauver that "the Constitution (was) better without" the proposed amendment was part of the report. Kefauver said it was "impossible to tell from the text of the amendment whether it is intended to mean nothing or something...."

In a minority report (S Rept 1716, Part 2) filed March 27, Sen. Hennings said the majority report "can be boiled down to...two truisms and a power play. The first truism is that treaties cannot conflict with the Constitution.... (It) needs no establishment. The second truism is that treaties can cover only subjects that properly pertain to foreign relations...this line of argument is nonsense. The power play consists of demoting the President as leader in foreign affairs.... We would be foolish to deprive our President of his historic position as the nation's leader in its relation with other countries."

Hennings said the sentence nullifying a treaty provision "which conflicts with any provision of this Constitution" might be interpreted in ways that would seriously limit the President's authority in foreign affairs.

BRICKER STATEMENT

Bricker June 28 said he had given up hope that his proposed amendment would be voted on in 1956. Bricker said supporters of his resolution were "not going to bring it up this session. Next session we'll try again. We could probably get a favorable vote in the Senate now, but I'm not going to try."

TRADE ORGANIZATION

HR 5550 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 2007) April 18, 1956.

Congress failed in 1956 to act on a bill authorizing United States participation in a proposed international organization to administer the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, an international agreement to which the U.S. had been party since 1948.

President Eisenhower requested Congressional approval of membership in the proposed Organization for Trade Cooperation in 1955, but no action was taken. He renewed his request repeatedly in 1956. Although the bill (HR 5550) was reported April 18 by the House Ways and Means Committee, no action was taken by the House.

Lined up against the bill were strong protectionist forces who urged that its approval would commit the United States to further tariff reductions. Objections were voiced that, while Congress had never had an opportunity to approve or disapprove the General Agreement, enactment of the bill would constitute approval. U.S. participation in GATT was based on the President's authority under the Reciprocal Trade Agreements program. Three times in renewing that program, Congress had specifically written into the law that its extension did not indicate approval or disapproval of GATT. (1955 Almanac, p. 289)

House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.) said July 8 it "would be useless to bring (HR 5550) up because it would be defeated." He said Republican polls showed about 2 to 1 against the bill. There also were Democratic opponents of the measure.

Background

The Organization for Trade Cooperation was a proposed international organization to administer the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade negotiated in 1947, and adhered to by the U.S. since 1948. GATT's aim was to foster trade by reciprocal tariff concessions and adherence to non-discriminatory standards. In 1956 GATT was adhered to by 35 countries representing 80 percent of the world's trade.

An international agreement embodying the constitution for OTC was drawn up March 21, 1955, in Geneva, Switzerland, at the ninth session of GATT. The organization was to come into existence when approved by nations representing 85 percent of total GATT trade. Since U.S. trade was 20.1 percent of the total, U.S. approval was necessary for OTC's establishment.

The proposed organization was to administer the trade rules of GATT, sponsor international trade negotiations and facilitate consultation on trade questions. It would study and make recommendations on international trade policy, and collect and publish information on international trade and commercial policy.

President Eisenhower submitted the OTC agreement to Congress for approval April 14, 1955. In the accompanying message the President hailed the accomplishments of GATT and warned that "failure to assume membership in the Organization for Trade Cooperation would be interpreted throughout the free world as a lack of genuine interest on the part of this country in the efforts to expand trade." The same day, Chairman Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) of the House Ways and Means Committee introduced HR 5550 to authorize U.S. membership in OTC. Congress took no action on the proposal in 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 290)

Hearings on foreign economic policy held in November, 1955 by a Joint Economic Subcommittee resulted in a report Jan. 5, 1956, urging membership in OTC as "in the interest of the U.S."

1956 REQUESTS

In his 1956 State of the Union, Budget and Economic Report messages the President again urged U.S. membership in OTC. Jan. 5, in his State of the Union message, he said OTC membership would "provide the most effective and expeditious means for removing discriminations and restrictions against American exports and in making our trade agreements truly reciprocal." He said the Organization was "admirably suited to our own interests...in working for steady expansion of trade and closer economic cooperation. Being strictly an administrative entity, the OTC cannot, of course, alter the control by Congress of the tariff, import and customs policies of the U.S." (See p. 45)

GATT REPORT

The State Department June 7 reported the "successful" conclusion of four months of negotiation with 21 nations at Geneva to reduce barriers to international trade. Tariffs reduced by bilateral agreements among the 22 countries, all parties to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, would affect about $2.5 billion of the total $77 billion annual free world trade (based on 1954 figures).

U.S. tariff reductions on imports, which took effect June 30, totaled $677 million annually. Imports affected included Scotch whisky, vermouth, foreign cars, airplanes, synthetic rubber, copper, aluminum, woven silk and linen, carpets, certain cigarette tobacco and piano accordions. Other nations' tariff concessions on U.S.

exports totaled $400 million annually. They included beer, machine tools, tobacco and tobacco products, chemical products, heavy machinery, motor vehicles, airplanes and petroleum products.

The American Tariff League July 2 said the United States "gave far more than it received" in the tariff-lowering sessions in Geneva. The League said that most of the U.S. concessions consisted of 15 percent reductions in previous rates while a large number of other nations' reductions were less than 15 percent and many were nullified by import restrictions.

The United States Council of the International Chamber of Commerce July 2 disagreed with the League's report. The Council said "reductions in U.S. tariffs in (the) negotiations were modest." The Council said a group of private citizens appointed by the President to serve as observers reported that "the interests of our country have been well served."

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- March 1-16, 1956, on a bill (HR 5550) to authorize U.S. membership in the Organization for Trade Cooperation.

TESTIMONY -- March 1 -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said refusal to participate in OTC would have "grave consequences." Economic problems have moved to the forefront in the cold war, he declared.

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson and Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay endorsed HR 5550.

March 2 -- Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks said, "Creation of the OTC would enable American industry and trade to derive additional and increased benefits from the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade .... U.S. interests are fully safeguarded."

Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey and Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell recommended U.S. membership in OTC. Mitchell: "Foreign trade provides nearly as many jobs as do the automobile, textile, chemical, apparel and basic iron and steel industries combined."

March 5 -- John C. Lynn, American Farm Bureau Federation, said "We feel strongly that OTC should concern itself with trade and not politics." He opposed U.S. membership in OTC if it became affiliated with the United Nations.

E.W. Gaumnitz, National Cheese Institute, said "The executive branch could enter into agreements with foreign countries...which would foreclose the possibility of Congressional action."

Edward W. Wootton, Wine Institute, said GATT and OTC would place "in the State Department the largest accumulation of uncontrolled and undelegated power that has ever been given to a government agency in this country in peacetime since the National Recovery Administration."

March 6 -- Dan Jones, Independent Petroleum Assn. of America, said membership in OTC would mean "a dangerous delegation of Congressional authority to an international body." GATT and OTC obligations would conflict with the national security amendment and escape clause in the Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1955.

March 7 -- Rep. Cleveland M. Bailey (D W.Va.) said that if HR 5550 were passed, the House Ways and Means Committee "may as well disband as a committee that considers tariff and trade legislation.... The State Department will be in charge and...all of Congress will be on the sidelines."

SUPPORTERS TESTIFY

March 8 -- Richard N. Gardner submitted a New York Bar Assn. report stating the President had "the necessary authority to agree to U.S. adherence to...GATT under...the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act" and there was "no constitutional impediment to Congressional enactment of HR 5550."

Mrs. Oscar M. Ruebhausen of the U.S. League of Women Voters said OTC "would bring more efficiency into the operation of GATT.... The vast potential market for U.S. sales abroad is just beginning to be appreciated."

Eugene S. Gregg, U.S. Council of the International Chamber of Commerce, said "GATT is the most important agreement ever concluded for dealing with barriers to international trade."

March 9 -- Lloyd C. Halvorson of the National Grange said, "Farmers have a very direct financial interest in keeping down...barriers to trade and in expanding markets. In fiscal 1955 our country exported $3,143 million worth of farm products and imported only $1,515 million worth of supplementary farm products." He said he favored revision of HR 5550 or clarification elsewhere to state that the U.S. would be free as an OTC member to use the peril point and escape clause provisions of reciprocal trade law.

Rep. John James Flynt Jr. (D Ga.) said "the implications and potentialities of HR 5550 are frightening." By providing machinery for imposing "compensatory" penalties against quotas and other restrictions, "it invites and provides machinery for concerted international retaliation."

INDUSTRIES PROTEST

March 12 -- Karl H. Helfrich, American Tariff League president, said "HR 5550 should be rejected in its entirety (and) GATT should be replaced by an appropriate agency of the United Nations, for the purpose of serving as a consulting and advisory body" on trade matters.

W. Lunsford Long, president of the Tungsten Institute, said, "We must put an end to this continuing sacrifice of our living industries to the brutal gods of the foreign market places.... The tariff on manganese has been cut in half twice...and now amounts only to a nuisance tax...."

Clyde L. Flynn Jr. of the Independent Fluorspar Producers of America said that as a result of a tariff concession on fluorspar negotiated in 1951 under GATT, "the condition of the (fluorspar) industry has worsened steadily.... Over half of our mines and mills are closed, our miners unemployed, our equipment and machinery deteriorating, a vital domestic industry is being destroyed by imports."

Howard Petersen of the Committee for Economic Development said that "the U.S. has much to gain by strengthening GATT" through joining OTC.

Morris S. Rosenthal, president of the National Council of American Importers, said under GATT "there have been about 25 cases where the United States has succeeded in obtaining a lessening of restrictions against our exports." He said U.S. participation in OTC was a "must."

Mrs. A. Paul Hartz of the General Federation of Women's Clubs said U.S. membership in the OTC would mean "better housekeeping practices in our international reciprocal trade agreements."

AFL-CIO ENDORSES BILL

March 13 -- Stanley H. Ruttenberg of the AFL-CIO said the Federation "wholeheartedly supports" U.S. membership in OTC. "...Restrictions...against our goods shipped abroad are substantially greater than those which we have placed against the goods of other nations coming into this country. Therefore...we will derive a far more than compensating advantage in the opportunity to secure a review of the restrictive measures of other nations against us." He said, "The AFL-CIO firmly believes that the failure to establish and maintain at least minimum labor standards in an exporting country should be considered a valid cause for withdrawal of U.S. tariff concessions."

Joseph M. Wells of the U.S. Potters Assn. said HR 5550 was "an obvious effort on the part of the Department of State to obtain an additional grant of power...to more completely control...foreign commerce (in) violation of the Constitution." From 1947-1954, he said, total shipments for the 23 companies in his Association dropped 34 percent, man hours of work 38 percent and earnings after taxes from over $4 million to a loss of over $1 million. "With the picture before them of a dying industry," he said, U.S. representatives negotiated duty reductions in 11 categories of Japanese tableware.

March 14 -- Philip K. Hills, Chrysler Corp. vice president, said GATT "has produced a very considerable number of concrete advantages which have made it easier for my own company to do business abroad.... The automobile industry...has a very vital stake in this issue.... We need raw material imports (and)...foreign markets.... Both Germany and England are outperforming us in the international market. We welcome free competition abroad...but without...GATT free competition might be less and less available to us."

Sidney C. Moody of the Synthetic Organic Chemical Manufacturers Assn. of the U.S. opposed HR 5550, said that import quotas, outlawed by GATT, "may be the only really effective long-term means of curbing serious injury in some areas of our domestic production."

March 15 -- J. Spencer Love, Burlington Industries board chairman, said "the net result under GATT has been the contraction of U.S. textile export markets and the opening of our domestic market to a full-scale attack by overseas industries operating western-type machinery at Oriental wage levels."

B. A. Rittersporn Jr. of the Committee on Foreign Trade Education said GATT "has made the greatest single contribution to the conduct of trade upon capitalistic principles." Under GATT liberalizations of Western European import controls, U.S. exports to those countries increased from 9.4 percent of the Western European market in 1953 to 11.6 percent in 1955, "a percentage increase worth hundreds of millions of dollars."

PRO AND CON VIEWS

March 16 -- George L. Bell, president of the Committee for a National Trade Policy: "The Committee favors a U.S. trade policy based on the broad national interest, rather than on particular and special interests of individual groups, areas, or industries...." Defeat of HR 5550 would "be interpreted by the rest of the free world as a definite swing away from the policy of cooperation...toward...less cooperation, less stability and less concern for the welfare of our allies."

Sidney A. Swensrud, Gulf Oil Corp. board chairman: "...GATT has served our country well. The evidence... is in the trade figures themselves.... An increasing number of businessmen...are coming to understand that foreign trade must be a two-way proposition -- that we cannot export without importing. However, in other countries...manufacturers...do not usually welcome competition from abroad.... The essential thing...is to work out trading arrangements which will give the greatest overall advantage to each nation."

Prof. Olin Glenn Saxon of Yale University: HR 5550, if enacted into law, would have "grave consequences to many domestic industries and...agriculture.... The overall public interest, and even our national security, demands its defeat.... Congressional approval of HR 5550 will constitute a doubtful double delegation of Congressional authority to regulate international trade. The line of delegation will run from Congress to the President... and then to OTC, over which Congress...will lose control as soon as OTC is organized.... Once OTC is organized, it can amend its charter -- without consent of the U.S. -- to incorporate the supra-national provisions of Chapters V and VI of the International Trade Organization.... The only recourse left to the U.S. would be withdrawal from OTC (which) could subject the U.S. to damaging retaliatory actions."

W.H. Holderness of the Southern States Industrial Council, Inc.: "The legal implications of HR 5550 are staggering.... U.S. participation (in GATT and OTC) would constitute an unprecedented delegation of administrative, judicial and legislative powers...to an organization controlled by foreign governments. This...strikes at the very roots of the Constitution."

Committee Action

ACTION -- The Committee April 18 reported (H Rept 2007), by a vote of 17 to 7, an amended bill (HR 5550) to authorize U.S. membership in OTC.

Amendments provided:

Nothing in the bill should be construed to repeal or modify by implication or otherwise any existing legislation of the U.S., or add to the President's authority to enter into foreign trade agreements to cut tariffs.

Congress was not committed to enact any specific legislation regarding any matter in OTC or GATT.

OTC's functions should be limited to administering GATT and facilitating intergovernmental cooperation solely in the field of trade.

OTC should not become a specialized agency of the United Nations.

An act of Congress would be required before U.S. accepted any amendment to OTC.

MAJORITY VIEWS

The majority report said the amendments assured that U.S. participation in OTC would "relate solely" to international trade matters and safeguards for domestic producers in existing law would be "maintained unimpaired." OTC would not have "any powers or authority not presently exercised through the GATT" but would provide "a new and better administrative mechanism."

The majority said the U.S. had "already obtained substantial benefits from the GATT" and that it was "important to our national economy that these benefits be maintained and enlarged."

MINORITY VIEWS

Minority views filed by Republicans Daniel A. Reed (N.Y.), Thomas A. Jenkins (Ohio), Richard M. Simpson (Pa.), Antoni N. Sadlak (Conn.) and Howard H. Baker (Tenn.) opposed HR 5550 on grounds that its approval would be "interpreted inevitably as constituting Congressional endorsement of GATT although the provisions of GATT itself have never been submitted to the Congress for approval." They said joining OTC would commit the U.S. to further tariff reductions and transfer Congress' authority over U.S. foreign commerce policy to an international organization. OTC would become, they said, a "permanent international bureaucracy susceptible to use as a powerful propaganda agency directed against the essential protection of U.S. industry."

Group Stands

Opposition to GATT and OTC had figured largely in the 1955 fight over the extension of the Trade Agreements Act, and veteran House Members said opponents of the measure mounted the "biggest pressure campaign" they could recall. The campaign was repeated in 1956 but this time it was successful.

Supporters of HR 5550 were led by the Committee for a National Trade Policy and the Committee for Foreign Trade Education Inc., leaders of the 1955 fight for extension of the reciprocal trade program.

Other major groups supporting HR 5550 included:

U.S. Council of the International Chamber of Commerce, Americans for Democratic Action, Assn. of the Bar of the City of New York, Committee for Economic Development, Cooperative League of the U.S.A., National Farmers Union, American Farm Bureau Federation, National Grange, League of Women Voters, Council for Improved U.S.-Japanese Relations, General Federation of Women's Clubs, National Council of American Importers, AFL-CIO and the American Assn. of Port Authorities.

OTC OPPOSITION

Opponents of the bill were led by the American Tariff League Inc., the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy and the textile and synthetic material industries.

The American Tariff League Inc., organized in 1885, is a group of more than 300 firms, associations and cooperatives supporting high U.S. tariffs.

Other groups opposing HR 5550 included:

Southern States Industrial Council, National Milk Producers Federation, National Wool Growers Assn., For America (a right-wing political organization), American National Cattlemen's Assn., National Council of Textile Industries, Wine Institute, U.S. Potters' Assn., International Brotherhood of Operative Potters (AFL-CIO), American Glassware Assn., Tungsten Institute and Florida Fruit & Vegetable Growers.

The American Tariff League May 7 said it was circulating petitions, signed by 488 companies and 16 union locals, urging Congress to keep the U.S. out of OTC.

PAYMENTS TO ILO, FAO

SJ Res 97-- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 1172) July 27, 1955.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote April 19, 1956. (For roll-call vote, see p. 163)

The Senate in 1956, by a 43-40 roll-call vote, in effect turned down a proposed increase in U.S. contributions to the International Labor Organization, a specialized agency of the United Nations. By approving an amendment to a joint resolution (S J Res 97) to raise existing limits on annual U.S. contributions to the ILO and another specialized agency, the Food and Agriculture Organization, the Senate said existing annual ILO payments should not be raised to $3 million, as proposed, unless Communist delegates representing employer and employee groups were unseated.

The joint resolution, which would have raised the ceiling on FAO contributions from $2 million to $3 million, failed to achieve House passage and did not become law. However, a rider attached to the foreign aid bill (HR 11356) authorized the $1 million increase for FAO providing, as did the amended resolution, that the U.S. share did not exceed 31.5 percent of the total budget. (See p. 418)

BACKGROUND -- Authority to increase U.S. payments to the ILO and the FAO was requested by the State Department on July 15, 1955. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee unanimously reported S J Res 97 July 27, 1955 (S Rept 1172). The report said the increases were necessary in order for the U.S. to meet its anticipated assessments for the expanding work of the two organizations.

Senate

The Senate April 19 passed S J Res 97 by voice vote, with amendments. By a roll-call vote of 43-40, the Senate agreed to an amendment sponsored by Sen. John W. Bricker (R Ohio) to hold the U.S. payment to the ILO at the existing level until employer and employee representatives from Communist countries were unseated. (For roll-call vote, see chart, p. 163)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S J Res 97 would have:

Increased the ceiling on U.S. annual contributions to the FAO from $2 million to $3 million.

Increased the ceiling on annual U.S. contributions to the ILO from $1.75 million to $3 million, but specified that an increased payment could not be made until employer and employee delegates from Communist countries were unseated.

Specified that the annual U.S. payment to the FAO and the ILO could not exceed the existing percentage of the total annual budget for either organization (31.5 percent for FAO, 25 percent for ILO).

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Bricker, modified -- Provide that the U.S. payment to ILO in any year after 1956 would not be increased beyond existing $1.75 million limit if, during the preceding year, delegates "allegedly" representing employers and employees in Russia or Communist-dominated nations were found by the State Department to have been permitted to vote in the ILO or at meetings held under its auspices; April 19. Roll-call vote, 43-40.

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.), substitute for Mansfield amendment -- Limit the percentage contribution of the U.S. to the total annual budget of the FAO to 31.5 percent and to the ILO to 25 percent; April 19. Division vote.

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), (superseded by Fulbright amendment) -- Fix the annual U.S. payment to the FAO and the ILO at not more than 33 1/3 percent of the total assessed budgets of the organizations; April 16. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- Debate centered on the Bricker amendment.

April 16 -- Bricker -- "So-called employer and employee representatives from Communist countries were seated and granted voting privileges" at the ILO conference in Geneva in 1955, over the "protests" of U.S. delegates.... "These phony delegates from Communist Russia do not resemble free employers or free employees any more than Outer Mongolia resembles a sovereign nation.... Why should the Senate reward the ILO by raising the statutory ceiling on U.S. contributions...?"

Mansfield -- "While it is true that so-called employee and employer delegates are fictions so far as the Soviet Union is concerned," if the U.S. "were to refuse the necessary funds and refuse to cooperate with other freedom-minded members of the organizations, I feel that the end result would be the creation of a vacuum into which the Soviet Union and its satellites would move."

April 19 -- William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- "I believe it is fair to say that (the State Department)... would not be in favor of an amendment of the type (offered)...by the Senator from Ohio." Knowland said he intended to support the Bricker amendment.

CULTURAL VISITS, TRADE FAIRS

S 3116 -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 1664) March 16, 1956.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote March 26.
- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 2509) June 28.
- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote July 23.
- Senate agreed to House amendments by voice vote July 24.

P.L. 860 -- Signed into law Aug. 1.

A law to promote foreign tours by American artists and athletes, and to authorize continued United States participation in international trade fairs was approved by Congress in 1956. Supporters of the bill (S 3116) said Russia had far outstripped the U.S. in the field of cultural and commercial exchanges.

U.S. participation in a few events in 1954 and 1955 had been financed through Presidential funds. The new law authorized whatever funds might be necessary to carry out the program.

An Advisory Committee on the Arts was established to assist in international cultural projects in which the U.S. might participate.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, the International Cultural Exchange and Trade Fair Participation Act of 1956:

Authorized the President to provide for tours abroad by U.S. creative and performing artists and athletes; U.S. representation in artistic, dramatic, musical, sports and other cultural festivals and exhibitions abroad; U.S. participation in international trade and industrial fairs in other countries.

Provided for the encouragement of private persons and organizations to participate in such programs and to contribute funds, property and services.

Provided that federal funds be used, as far as possible, toward meeting expenses of activities carried out through private channels and by private means.

Permitted the President, in carrying out the Act, to utilize certain provisions of the Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (22 USC, Sects. 1471-1473).

Created an Advisory Committee on the Arts to advise and assist all international cultural projects in which the government might engage, including the activities of the U.S. Advisory Commission on Educational Exchange and the Department of State.

Provided that the Advisory Committee consist of nine members appointed by the Secretary of State plus a chairman selected by the Educational Exchange Commission from its members.

Authorized participation in the Brussels Universal and International Exhibition in 1958 and provided that the President appoint a Commissioner General and two other U.S. representatives.

Authorized the appropriation of "such sums as may be necessary" to carry out the Act.

SURPLUS DISPOSAL

HR 11708 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 2380) June 18, 1956.

S 3903 -- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 2290) June 22.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote July 3.
- Passed by the House, amended, by a 389-2 roll-call vote, July 18. (See p. 220)
- Conference report (H Rept 2903) agreed to July 25 by both houses, by voice votes.

P.L. 962 -- Signed into law Aug. 3.

A program of selling farm surpluses abroad for foreign currencies -- begun in 1954 -- was doubled by Congress almost without opposition in 1956. Both houses completed action July 25 on a bill (S 3903) amending the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (Public Law 480, 83rd Congress) to increase from $1.5 billion to $3 billion the limit on government-financed sales of farm surpluses abroad for foreign currencies.

Struck from the bill by the House, and not retained in the final version, was a clause permitting the Administration to barter surpluses with Communist satellite nations. The President had sought such authority. The final bill contained a provision permitting the use of foreign proceeds of foreign currency sales for American educational projects abroad.

An attempt to amend the bill to exempt surpluses shipped under the program from the requirement of the Cargo Preference Act that at least 50 percent be sent in American flag vessels was turned down by the House. Both the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee filed reports in 1956 strongly defending the American flag rule. (See p. 492)

Included in the final bill, however, was a clause exempting fruits and fruit products from the preference requirement.

OTHER 1956 CHANGES

Other amendments to PL 480 were made in 1956 in the omnibus farm bill (Public Law 540, the Agricultural Act of 1956). These included increased authority to ship surpluses for relief purposes and provision for paying costs of shipments by private agencies. The Act provided also for the duty-free entry of strategic materials acquired through barter, for storing them in a supplemental stockpile and for reimbursing the Commodity Credit Corp. for them. (See p. 375)

The Department of Agriculture Aug. 29 announced signature with India of the largest agreement yet reached under PL 480. The contract called for disposing of surpluses worth $305.9 million at export market prices (cost to the CCC -- $550 million) and for paying $54.2 million toward shipping costs. Of the $360 million total (using foreign prices), $234 million would be a loan and $54 million a grant. The remaining $72 million would be for U.S. uses or purchases in India.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, S 3903:

Increased from $1.5 billion to $3 billion the limit on sales of farm surpluses for foreign currencies requiring appropriations by Congress, and stated that the $3 billion should be "an objective as well as a limitation."

Permitted foreign currencies derived from such sales to be used for Smith-Mundt Act projects -- to aid schools, libraries and community centers abroad founded or sponsored by U.S. citizens and serving as demonstration centers for American methods and practices.

Exempted sales of fruit and fruit products for foreign currencies from the requirement of the Cargo Preference Act that 50 percent be shipped in American flag vessels.

Background

PL 480, a law to finance the sales of farm surpluses abroad, was approved July 10, 1954. (1954 Almanac, p. 120) Up to $700 million was authorized to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corp. for surpluses to be sold abroad for foreign currencies. That amount was increased to $1.5 billion in August 1955.

Sales of agricultural surpluses for foreign currencies were also authorized under the Mutual Security Act of 1954 (PL 665, 83rd Congress).

PL 480 authorized the President to use up to $1.5 billion worth of surplus commodities for sales to "friendly" nations during the period ending June 30, 1957. CCC would be reimbursed by appropriations. Quantities sold under PL 480 must be in addition to the usual quantities that the U.S. would sell. The program was carried out through private trade.

PL 665 provided that not less than $300 million of annual Mutual Security funds be used to finance the sale of surplus farm commodities for foreign currencies. Such transactions were in addition to those under PL 480. The 1956 foreign aid bill earmarked $250 million for the purpose. (See p. 418)

EISENHOWER VIEWS

President Eisenhower in his farm message Jan. 9, 1956 requested, as part of a program to step up disposal of surpluses, that Congress repeal the prohibition contained in PL 480 on sales to Communist countries. He also suggested seeking expanded opportunities for bartering surpluses. (See p. 52)

The President July 11 submitted to Congress his fourth semiannual report (H Doc 447) on the administration of PL 480. He said that from the inception of the program in 1954 to June 30, 1956, all operations under the law (sales, relief shipments, donations and barter) totalled nearly $3 billion.

In that period 59 sales agreements or supplements to agreements (Title I of the law) had been entered into with 27 countries. The commodities involved were valued at nearly $1.5 billion at Commodity Credit Corp. cost, and about $1 billion at export market prices. Included were agreements to sell $526.1 million worth of wheat and wheat flour, $357.9 million of cotton, $165.7 million of fats and oils, $123.8 million of rice and $109.2 of feed grains (all CCC cost).

Authorized relief shipments (Title II) totalled $218 million though fiscal 1956, and commodities approved as donations for domestic and foreign relief through private and international agencies - (Title III), $681 million.

Total barter transactions (Title III), mostly for strategic materials, totalled $587.1 million at export market value.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

ACTION -- June 22 reported a bill (S 3903 -- S Rept 2290) to increase from $1.5 billion to $3 billion the limit on government-financed sales of surplus farm products for foreign currencies and permit the use of the proceeds for American educational projects abroad. The Committee amended the bill to permit barter, but not sales, of farm surpluses to Communist satellite nations. However, the amendment did not allow transactions with Russia, Communist China or North Korea.

Another amendment exempted the sales of privately held fruit stocks under the program from application of the Cargo Preference Act requirement that at least 50 percent be sent in American flag ships.

The Committee, reporting 59 agreements signed with 27 countries for the sale of agricultural commodities said it had been informed that "additional agreements totaling several hundred million dollars are being held up...awaiting additional authorization."

Floor Action

The Senate July 3 passed S 3903 by voice vote, with an amendment.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 3903:

Increased from $1.5 billion to $3 billion the limit on surplus sales for foreign currencies requiring appropriations by Congress to the CCC and stated that the $3 billion limit should be "an objective as well as a limitation."

Permitted foreign currencies derived from such sales to be used for Smith-Mundt Act projects -- to aid schools, libraries and community centers abroad founded or sponsored by United States citizens and serving as demonstration centers for American methods and practices.

Permitted barter with Communist satellite countries, but not with Russia, Communist China or North Korea.

Exempted sales of fruit and fruit products for foreign currencies from the Cargo Preference Act.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Extend Cargo Preference Act exemption to government-owned stocks of fruits and fruit products as well as privately owned stocks; July 3. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- July 3 -- Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) -- "...the amount of the authorization (under PL 480) is just about exhausted.... The Department (of Agriculture) believes that agreements which we might expect to enter into by June 30, 1957, would bring the total of the program on the basis of CCC cost, since the beginning of operations, to approximately $3 billion, which is the amount asked for in the bill."

Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.) -- "The export of fresh fruits and their products has been a problem under the so-called 50-50 legislation (Cargo Preference)...because of the lack of refrigerated shipping space in American vessels.... Under existing law the Department of Agriculture could, if it so desired, excuse the movement of these commodities from the 50-50 requirements but...it (has) not done so.... Positive action is necessary by the Congress to force the Department to recognize the problem."

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- "Of all the enormous amounts which have been moved under PL 480, only three very small amounts of fruits or fruit products have been included...a total of only $1.7 million worth...."

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

ACTION -- June 18 reported a bill (HR 11708 -- H Rept 2380) containing the same basic provisions as S 3903.

Floor Action

The House July 18 passed S 3903 by a roll-call vote of 389-6, after substituting an amended text of HR 11708 for the language of the Senate bill. (For voting, see chart p. 220)

The House first amended HR 11708, by a teller vote of 92-62, to strike out a provision permitting barter of surpluses with Communist satellite countries. The provision had been requested by the Administration and approved by the Senate July 3.

Stricken from the bill on a point of order was a section permitting the use of foreign currency proceeds of the program for the support of American schools abroad. The presiding officer, Prince H. Preston (D Ga.), ruled that the provision was not properly part of the bill because it should have been acted on by the Appropriations Committee.

An amendment by Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.), to permit American textile mills to buy 750,000 bales of surplus cotton a year for four years at favorable prices for manufacture for export, was withdrawn after a point of order was raised that it was not relevant to the bill.

An amendment to exempt all sales of surpluses under the program from the Cargo Preference Act was defeated on a 30-50 standing vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House and sent to conference, S 3903:

Increased from $1.5 billion to $3 billion the limit on surplus sales for foreign currencies requiring appropriations by Congress to the Commodity Credit Corp. and stated that the $3 billion limit should be "an objective as well as a limitation."

Exempted fresh and frozen fruits in private stocks shipped under the surplus disposal program from application of the Cargo Preference Act, except as suitable American vessels should be available.

Restricted surplus transactions under Public Law 480 to "friendly countries."

Specified that publicly financed transactions should be in addition to sales of farm commodities through normal trade channels at competitive prices.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) -- Restrict surplus transactions to "friendly countries" only; July 18. Standing vote, 81-53; teller, 92-62.

Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- Specify that transactions under Public Law 480 must be in addition to sales of farm commodities in normal trade channels at competitive prices; July 18. Voice vote.

D.R. (Billy) Matthews (D Fla.), as modified -- Exempt privately owned stocks of fresh and frozen fruits disposed of under Public Law 480 from application of the Cargo Preference Act, except as suitable American ships are available; July 18. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

W.R. Poage (D Texas) -- Exempt sales of surpluses for foreign currencies from requirement of Cargo Preference Act that at least 50 percent be shipped in American flag vessels; July 18. Standing, 30-50.

DEBATE -- July 18 -- Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- Under PL 480 "we first authorized the expenditure of $750 million.... At a later date we increased that authorization...to $1.5 billion. That authorization has now been reached and exceeded, and the (Agriculture) Department is without authority to proceed further and to consummate many important transactions which are now pending. In this bill we increase the authorization...to $3 billion.... Despite the President's Jan. 9 request for repeal of restrictions on transactions with Communist countries, "our Committee (felt) it was too broad and comprehensive and...perhaps too dangerous.... Later... we did decide to modify the section...to authorize barter transactions with satellite nations."

Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) -- "I think we should offer to give (the satellites) food but it is a mistake...to barter or trade with them so they will have food and make it appear they are successfully operating their economy in these captive countries and make profit at our expense."

Cooley -- "I do not like the idea...but in executive session there was a discussion of this important subject behind closed doors.... It was not contemplated we would carry on commerce with Communism or that we would do anything to strengthen the war potential of either the satellites or the Soviet Republic.... Once food is delivered to Poland we will...lose complete control over final disposition...of that food. It is anticipated...that in...exchange for these vital foods...we are to receive something of strategic importance to us. Frankly...I do not contemplate that much trading will be done."

Walter H. Judd (R Minn.) -- "As a matter of principle I resisted (a proposal to trade with the satellites under the Democratic Administration), and as a matter of principle I must resist it equally under the leadership of my own party.... I believe the net result will be that you will not get food to the people who need it, but instead you will greatly enhance the influence and power of the government that is oppressing the people."

Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- "...we probably made a mistake in passing Public Law 480.... It was used as a substitute for normal sales through normal channels at competitive prices and as a means to hold our commodities off world markets so as to give an umbrella to expand production in foreign countries...."

Conference

REPORT -- The conferees on S 3903, in a report filed July 24 (H Rept 2903), deleted the Senate provision for barter with Communist satellites and agreed on a Senate provision that foreign currencies derived from surplus sales might be used to support American schools, libraries and community centers abroad. It had been deleted in the House on grounds it required action by the Appropriations Committee. In effect, the conferees said foreign funds were not subject to the appropriations process unless the terms under which they were available so stated.

ACTION -- The House and Senate July 25 agreed to the conference report by voice votes, without debate.

CARGO PREFERENCE ACT

House Hearings

COMMITTEE -- House Merchant Marine.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 31 - Feb. 16 on administration of the Cargo Preference Act (PL 664 -- 83rd Congress). (See 1954 Almanac, p. 515)

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 31 -- Gwynn Garnett, Foreign Agricultural Service Administrator of the Department of Agriculture, said he favored repeal of the Act. He said it would remove foreign objections to buying surplus American commodities.

Feb. 1 -- Garnett denied Committee charges that the United States was the victim of a "gigantic squeeze play" by some foreign nations refusing to buy American surplus unless they could handle it in their own ships and get the freight charges. He proposed the Act be made permissive and not mandatory, with the United States paying the freight bill on all cargo moved in American vessels. "There's nothing moving now, anyway, so there would be no loss to American shipping," he said.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr. (D N.J.) suggested the Agriculture Department give away the surplus and pay all the freight as well.

Feb. 2 -- Thorsten V. Kalijarvi, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, said the State Department "historically" objected to cargo preference laws, but would not make any statement now of its position because it was still "gathering experience" on the law's workings.

Feb. 9 -- Donald G. Ward, Chamber of Commerce of the United States spokesman, said the law was needed to keep the U.S. Merchant Marine healthy at a time of increased competition from lower cost foreign vessels which receive help from their governments.

Feb. 15 -- Vice President Joseph H. Ball of the States Marine Lines, an ex-Sen. (R Minn., 1943-49), said any weakening of the law "would deprive United States flag berth services of a substantial percentage of the cargoes they are now carrying."

Feb. 16 -- President Francis T. Greene of the American Merchant Marine Institute said "no significant and demonstrable harm" had been done to the surplus disposal program by the operation of the "50-50" law.

President Robert E. Mayer of the Pacific American Steamship Lines said the real "root of opposition" to the law came from the "historic maritime nations" of Europe.

REPORT ISSUED

ACTION -- The Committee Feb. 27 issued a report (H Rept 1818) on the Cargo Preference Act and its relation to the farm surplus disposal program.

The Committee concluded that the Act had "definitely not" impaired the success of the surplus disposal program, nor had it "established an undesirable precedent in world trade." The Committee also held that the Act was "vitally necessary" to the American merchant marine and that "to substitute direct subsidy for cargo preference would be wholly unfeasible and unjustified." The Committee said U.S. vessels were carrying less than 20 percent of the nation's exports and recommended that the Federal Maritime Administration make a study of ways of protecting the American merchant fleet and increasing its efficiency in the field of cargo solicitation.

Senate Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Merchant Marine and Fisheries Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- April 19-26 on a bill (S 2584) to exempt sales of surplus agricultural commodities for foreign currencies from application of cargo preference requirements.

TESTIMONY -- April 19 -- Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Kalijarvi said the Department had withdrawn its previously announced support of the bill. "Subsequent experience," he said, indicated that application of the 50-50 principle "would hamper the surplus disposal program in only a few countries. In view of this fact and the fact that the Department of Commerce has testified to the urgent need for the continued application of cargo preference to agricultural commodities...the Department is withdrawing its support of S 2584."

April 20 -- Ward of the Chamber of Commerce said: "There is no question but that we should dispose of our surplus agricultural commodities as soon as possible. However, the question of additional shipping charges or the use of American flag vessels does not appear to have interfered unduly with such disposal." He said the Chamber opposed the legislation.

Garnett, Foreign Agricultural Service Administrator, urged "that a way be found...to give adequate support to our merchant fleet without limiting sales or hampering efforts to establish and maintain commercial markets for our agricultural products in other maritime nations. We...urge that any such program include the removal of the compulsory aspect of cargo preference from commodity sales" for foreign currencies.

Louis S. Rothschild, Under Secretary of Commerce for Transportation, recommended against enactment of the bill. "Over 25 vessels, with crews and officers totaling over 1,000 persons, would be rendered inactive by passage of S 2584," he said.

April 26 -- James B. Stuart, American Tramp Shipowners Assn. president: "If the applicability of the 50-50 law to agricultural surplus is nullified by passage of S 2584, I feel that a major portion of the American tramp fleet will disappear."

George D. Riley, AFL-CIO legislative representative: "The AFL-CIO supports the position taken by its Maritime Committee and the unions affiliated to that Committee in opposition to S 2584 and any weakening of the so-called '50-50' law governing the shipment of surplus agricultural products to recipient nations.... Much better still, why not award the carrying of these giveaway programs to American flag vessels 100 percent?"

ACTION -- In a report (S Rept 2376) June 27 on proposals to allow more farm surpluses to be exported in foreign ships, the Committee said proposals to amend the Cargo Preference Act would not be in the public interest. Loss of these preference cargoes, the Committee said, would have a disastrous effect upon the American merchant marine.

GROUP STANDS

Farm groups in 1956 expressed opposition to application of the Cargo Preference Act to shipments of farm commodities.

The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives Feb. 3 voiced "vigorous opposition" to application of the Act to farm shipments.

The American Farm Bureau Federation Feb. 7 urged Congress to exempt farm commodities from the law. The Bureau said Britain, the Netherlands, Sweden, Norway and Denmark bought $694 million in farm products from the U.S. in 1954 and "since then the only sale to these countries has been one of $15 million to the United Kingdom." Most of these countries are maritime nations and will not buy U.S. commodities "when we try to dictate... how they are to be shipped," the Bureau said.

SUGAR QUOTAS

HR 7030 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 1348) July 22, 1955.

- Passed, amended, by the House July 30, 1955, by a 194-44 standing vote. (1955 Almanac, p. 173)
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee, amended (S Rept 1461), Jan. 26, 1956.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate Feb. 8. (For roll-call vote, see p. 151)
- Conference report (H Rept 2174) adopted by the House and Senate May 17, by voice votes.

P.L. 545 -- Signed into law May 29.

The much-disputed sugar legislation, which failed to clear the Senate in 1955, was agreed to in 1956 when conferees set a 55-45 percent division of sugar marketing quotas between domestic and foreign producers, after annual requirements were met. The House measure had called for a 50-50 split.

Compromises also were made in the length of extension of the Sugar Act of 1948, allocations among foreign suppliers and the formula for allocating increased domestic quotas.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 7030:

Extended through Dec. 31, 1960, the Sugar Act of 1948.

Provided that any increase in U.S. consumption above 8,350,000 tons annually would be supplied 55 percent by domestic producers (instead of the 50-50 percentage in the original House version and 100 percent for foreign producers in the expiring law).

Apportioned the first 165,000 tons by which domestic quotas could be increased as follows: 51.5 percent to the domestic beet area; 48.5 percent to the mainland cane area; the next 20,000 tons to Puerto Rico; the next 3,000 tons to the Virgin Islands. (The House version allocated the first 188,000 tons of increase to the various areas in proportion to their existing share in the sugar quota.)

Provided that subsequent increases in domestic quotas be shared proportionately among all domestic producing areas, including Hawaii.

Continued existing fixed quotas for domestic and Philippine growers.

FOREIGN QUOTAS

Allotted 45 percent of U.S. sugar requirements exceeding 8,350,000 tons as follows after 1956: Cuba, 29.59 percent; Peru, 4.33 percent; Dominican Republic, 4.95 percent; Mexico, 5.10 percent; other foreign countries, 1.03 percent. Percentage of the foreign quota for each country would be: Cuba, 93.75 percent; Peru, 2.3 percent; Dominican Republic, 1.75 percent; Mexico, 1.2 percent; others, 1.0 percent.

(House and Senate bills provided these percentages of the foreign quota for the four years: House -- Cuba, 92.4; Peru, 2.5; Dominican Republic, 2.6; Mexico, 1.4; Others, 1.1. Senate -- Cuba, 94.4; Peru , 2.2; Dominican Republic, 1.2; Mexico, 1.2; Others, 1.0.)

Continued the existing foreign share of allotments up to 8,350,000 tons -- Cuba 96 percent; other foreign countries, 4 percent.

Set up this system for proration of the 4 percent quota for 1957 and subsequent years:

Countries that exported less than 1,000 tons of sugar during 1953-54 would get a fixed quota equal to their average share in the U.S. market during those years.

Countries that exported between 1,000 and 2,000 tons in 1953-54 would be allotted 3,000 tons.

Countries that exported between 2,000 and 3,000 tons during 1953-54, would receive quotas equal to their average imports in those years, plus 2,000 tons.

Countries that exported between 3,000 and 10,000 tons during 1953-54, would receive quotas equal to their average exports within their quotas in those years.

The balance would be allotted to countries whose exports in 1953 and 1954 exceeded 10,000 tons on the basis of average exports during 1951-54.

OTHER PROVISIONS

Set up a quota curtailment system as a penalty for foreign countries with quotas exceeding 10,000 tons that failed by more than 10 percent to meet their U.S. quotas in order to benefit from higher sugar prices outside the U.S.

Provided that any deficit in a domestic sugar area should be apportioned to other domestic areas, before Cuba would be allowed to fill the quota.

of principle I must resist it equally under the leadership of my own party.... I believe the net result will be that you will not get food to the people who need it, but instead you will greatly enhance the influence and power of the government that is oppressing the people."

Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- "...we probably made a mistake in passing Public Law 480.... It was used as a substitute for normal sales through normal channels at competitive prices and as a means to hold our commodities off world markets so as to give an umbrella to expand production in foreign countries...."

Conference

REPORT -- The conferees on S 3903, in a report filed July 24 (H Rept 2903), deleted the Senate provision for barter with Communist satellites and agreed on a Senate provision that foreign currencies derived from surplus sales might be used to support American schools, libraries and community centers abroad. It had been deleted in the House on grounds it required action by the Appropriations Committee. In effect, the conferees said foreign funds were not subject to the appropriations process unless the terms under which they were available so stated.

ACTION -- The House and Senate July 25 agreed to the conference report by voice votes, without debate.

CARGO PREFERENCE ACT

House Hearings

COMMITTEE -- House Merchant Marine.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 31 - Feb. 16 on administration of the Cargo Preference Act (PL 664 -- 83rd Congress). (See 1954 Almanac, p. 515)

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 31 -- Gwynn Garnett, Foreign Agricultural Service Administrator of the Department of Agriculture, said he favored repeal of the Act. He said it would remove foreign objections to buying surplus American commodities.

Feb. 1 -- Garnett denied Committee charges that the United States was the victim of a "gigantic squeeze play" by some foreign nations refusing to buy American surplus unless they could handle it in their own ships and get the freight charges. He proposed the Act be made permissive and not mandatory, with the United States paying the freight bill on all cargo moved in American vessels. "There's nothing moving now, anyway, so there would be no loss to American shipping," he said.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr. (D N.J.) suggested the Agriculture Department give away the surplus and pay all the freight as well.

Feb. 2 -- Thorsten V. Kalijarvi, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, said the State Department "historically" objected to cargo preference laws, but would not make any statement now of its position because it was still "gathering experience" on the law's workings.

Feb. 9 -- Donald G. Ward, Chamber of Commerce of the United States spokesman, said the law was needed to keep the U.S. Merchant Marine healthy at a time of increased competition from lower cost foreign vessels which receive help from their governments.

Feb. 15 -- Vice President Joseph H. Ball of the States Marine Lines, an ex-Sen. (R Minn., 1943-49), said any weakening of the law "would deprive United States flag berth services of a substantial percentage of the cargoes they are now carrying."

Feb. 16 -- President Francis T. Greene of the American Merchant Marine Institute said "no significant and demonstrable harm" had been done to the surplus disposal program by the operation of the "50-50" law.

President Robert E. Mayer of the Pacific American Steamship Lines said the real "root of opposition" to the law came from the "historic maritime nations" of Europe.

Background

REFERENCES -- For a history of sugar legislation and provisions of the 1948 Sugar Act, see 1955 Almanac, pp. 173-177.

HR 7030, as passed by the House July 30, 1955, provided for a four-year extension of the Sugar Act and granted domestic producers a 50 percent share of market demand over annual requirements. Existing quotas to supply the estimated annual U.S. need remained unchanged. Foreign quotas, except for Cuba and the Philippines, were revised, beginning in 1957. The bill also provided for government purchase of 100,000 tons of domestic sugar in 1955 for disposition outside the United States.

Senate consideration of the House-passed bill was blocked in 1955 by Sen. J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.). He maintained it was too controversial a measure to be brought up on the last day of the session (Aug. 2) and said there was "no real occasion" for its extension at that time. Fulbright continued his strong opposition during 1956 floor action on the bill.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 16-17 on HR 7030.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 16 -- Sen. Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) said Cuban objections that the proposed quota changes would penalize its producers by allocating a greater share of the market to U.S. producers were "not borne out by the facts." He said failure to grant U.S. producers the larger share proposed in the bill "will mean that our sugarcane farmers, who already have lost nearly one-third of their total acreage since 1949, face still further drastic cuts in acreages." Under Secretary of Agriculture True D. Morse also supported that view.

Henry F. Holland, Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, said "care is obviously required to avoid action which would materially worsen Cuba's present economic position, particularly since Cuba has always been our largest source of sugar as well as our most readily expansible source of additional sugar in event of emergency."

Jan. 17 -- Oscar Chapman, former Secretary of Interior, appearing for Mexican producers, said HR 7030's formula would increase Cuba's market annually by 220,000 tons compared with an 18,000-ton annual increase for Mexico. He said Mexico urgently needed the sugar trade.

Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) supported Cuba's position, said that the Caribbean area was better suited for sugar production than the U.S. He said letting Cuba supply more sugar would save the taxpayer money.

Lawrence Crosby of the U.S. Cuban Sugar Council said "Cuba cannot maintain its standard of living unless it sells more sugar to the U.S. or on the world market." The island's economy was being kept afloat currently by large government public works programs, he said.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee Jan. 26 reported an amended bill (S Rept 1461). The report said a 55-45 percent division for supplying sugar requirements exceeding 8,350,000 tons would "open the way for United States producers to participate in the larger market constantly being created by the growth of our consumption of sugar, and to a lesser extent other foreign suppliers would enjoy a part of this expanding market along with Cuba...."

The report said Cuba's assignment in 1948 of "virtually all" U.S. sugar increases was "of a temporary nature", with the understanding that "at the appropriate time the domestic areas should resume participation in market growth." "The Committee is of the opinion that 1956 is the appropriate time," the report said, because all domestic areas were producing at or above their quota levels.

Floor Action

The Senate Feb. 8 passed HR 7030 by voice vote, with committee amendments. An Administration-sponsored amendment on foreign sugar quotas, offered by Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.), was defeated by a 30-56 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 151)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate and sent to conference, HR 7030:

Extended through Dec. 31, 1962, the Sugar Act of 1948, and through June 30, 1963, the excise tax on sugar provided in the Internal Revenue Code.

Continued existing fixed quotas for domestic and Philippine growers.

Provided that any increase in U.S. consumption above 8,350,000 tons annually would be supplied 55 percent by domestic producers.

Apportioned the first 165,000 tons by which domestic quotas could be increased as follows: 51.5 percent to the domestic beet area and 48.5 percent to the mainland cane area; the next 20,000 tons to Puerto Rico; the next 3,000 tons to the Virgin Islands.

Provided that subsequent increases be apportioned according to existing quotas.

FOREIGN QUOTAS

Allotted 45 percent of U.S. sugar requirements exceeding 8,350,000 tons as follows after 1956: Cuba, 33.8 percent; Peru, 4 percent; Dominican Republic, 2 percent; Mexico, 4 percent; and other foreign countries, 1.2 percent.

Continued the existing foreign share of allotments up to 8,350,000 tons -- Cuba 96 percent and other foreign countries 4 percent.

Set up the following system for proration of the 4 percent quota for 1957:

Countries which exported less than 1,000 tons of sugar during 1953-54 would get a fixed quota equal to their average share in the U.S. market during those years.

Countries which exported between 1,000 and 2,000 tons in 1953-54 would be allotted 3,000 tons.

Countries which exported between 2,000 and 10,000 tons during 1953-54 would receive quotas equal to their average exports in those years, plus 1,000 tons.

The balance would be allotted to countries whose exports in 1953-54 exceeded 10,000 tons on the basis of average exports within their quotas in 1951-54.

For 1958 and subsequent years the 4 percent quota would be allotted according to 1953-54 averages for countries exporting less than 1,000 tons; according to 1957 quotas for the remaining countries.

OTHER PROVISIONS

Set up a quota curtailment system as a penalty for foreign countries with quotas exceeding 10,000 tons which failed by more than 10 percent to fill their U.S. quotas in order to benefit from higher sugar prices outside the U.S.

Provided that any increase in the domestic quota which could not be filled by specific U.S. areas be shifted to other domestic areas, before Cuba would be allowed to fill them.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- Allot domestic growers 55 percent of requirements above 8,350,000 tons; Cuba, 27 percent; Dominican Republic 4.9 percent; Mexico, 1.9 percent; Peru, 8.4 percent, and all others 2.8 percent. Feb. 8. Roll-call vote, 30-56.

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Give Puerto Rico an immediate share of any 1956 quota increase for domestic areas. Feb. 8. Voice vote.

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Limit price supports on sugar to 90 percent of parity. Feb. 8. Voice.

Fulbright -- Extend the Sugar Act to 1958 instead of 1962 and taxes on sugar to 1959 instead of 1963. Feb. 8. Voice.

Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- Establish percentage quotas for countries other than Cuba at 11.2 percent and allot them on the basis of average exports in 1951-54. Feb. 8. Voice.

Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Authorize Secretary of Agriculture to set aside a reasonable amount of increased domestic sugar quotas as a reserve for adjusting the proportionate shares for new acreage. Feb. 8. Voice.

DEBATE -- Feb. 7, 8 -- Aside from discussions of specific quotas, the only strong opposition to the bill came from J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.).

Fulbright -- "The Sugar Act, through a complex, crazy quilt maze of regulations, governs the sugar economy of the United States, for the benefit of a relatively few thousand producers, and to the detriment of the nation's 165 million people.... As might be expected, the quota system has been rigged so as to favor producers in domestic areas."

Conference

A Senate-House conference committee May 16 reported (H Rept 2174) agreement on provisions of HR 7030.

The conferees adopted the Senate formula for allotting the first 188,000 tons of increase in quotas among domestic producers and also adopted the Senate formula of 55-45 percent division for supplying excess annual demand. A compromise was worked out for distribution of the 45 percent excess among foreign suppliers which was substantially halfway between the maximum and minimum quantities allocated the countries in the two bills. The House provision for a four-year extension of the Sugar Act was agreed to instead of the Senate's six-year extension.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate May 17 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report on HR 7030.

DEBATE -- May 17 -- Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- "...this is a good bill.... (It) will enable sugar producers to get rid of the stored up surplus...."

Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- The Filipinos were not discriminated against by their omission from participating sugar consumption because "...their participation on the American sugar market is on the basis of a treaty. If the State Department wishes to increase the (Philippine) allotment of sugar...it should...open up the general Philippine treaty and handle it through the regular channels...."

Frank A. Barrett (R Wyo.) -- "I am especially pleased about (the) provision...(that)...the estimate for this year is in excess of 165,000 tons increase, and consequently, the domestic producers will receive some benefit immediately from this legislation."

HOUSE ACTION

The House May 17 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report on HR 7030.

DEBATE -- Charles A. Wolverton (R N.J.) -- May 17 -- Although "...there has been an increase in Mexico's allotment above (the present)...it is...(still)...much too low...We have been very derelict in our treatment of Mexico in this matter of sugar allotment...which would have been to our mutual benefit."

E.C. Gathings (D Ark.) -- "The 55-45 agreement reached in conference will go a long way in alleviating the desperate situation which exists in the beet and cane areas in this country. Cuba is entitled...to even more liberal treatment than that contained in this report... $676 million has been accumulated in balance of pay - ments with the U.S., (because)...Cuba imports more goods ...from the U.S. than (we) buy in sugar and other commodities from her."

W.R. Poage (D Texas) -- "...I have felt that the 50-50 division that we have long had between domestic and foreign growers was rather sound." Congress is wrong in trying "to provide as much acreage as the American farmers would use and then support the crop at 98 percent of parity.... If we (have) a high support price we ought to accept some restrictions in production, just as we do with all other commodities."

IMPORTED WOOL DUTIES

HR 12227 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 2868) July 21, 1956.

- Rejected by the House on a 216-123 roll-call vote July 23, under the procedure of suspension of the rules. (See p. 222)

Rejected by the House in 1956 was a last-minute effort to exempt certain imported wools from customs duty. The measure received majority approval on a 216-123 roll-call vote but not the two-thirds margin necessary for passage under the procedure of suspension of the rules. (For voting, see chart p. 222)

The bill (HR 12227) would have exempted from customs duty for three years coarse wool and hair imported for certain uses, chiefly by carpet manufacturers. Several Members objected to the bill's being brought up so late in the session under suspension of the rules. The bill also was opposed on grounds it would harm the domestic wool industry.

House

DEBATE -- July 23 -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- The Ways and Means Committee "was informed that the bill would be of particular benefit to the domestic carpet industry.... There is very little domestic production of unimproved wools and none of camel's hair.... By making the raw materials more economically available to the domestic carpet industry, we will be improving (its) competitive position...and assuring the utilization of American labor in the production of such carpets."

Henry Aldous Dixon (R Utah) -- "This bill...is premature. There have been no public hearings held on (it).... Foreign wool could displace from 2 to 5 percent of our coarser domestic wools.... (The grade of wool exempted under the bill) is usable for overcoats and rough apparel. If we take away the tariff on this type of wool for carpets, then the apparel people are justified in coming in to ask that we take away the tariff on their wool.... If we say yes, then we have ruined our sheep industry."

Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- Already rug manufacturing factories "are beginning to close up because they cannot get a supply" of coarse wool. "If this were a case where it was going to hurt our woolgrowers, that would be one thing. But that is not the case."

E.Y. Berry (R S.D.) -- "This...is far too important a matter to be given a hurried and half-considered decision...." HR 12227 "will only further damage a sick domestic wool industry.... The CCC stockpile today contains more than 11.5 million pounds (of coarse wool) and they are trying to tell you that these wools are not produced in the U.S."

PANAMA BRIDGE

HR 9801 -- Reported by House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee (H Rept 2267) June 6, 1956.
- Passed by the House, on a 325-59 roll-call vote, July 2. (See p. 212)
- Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 2628) July 18.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 20.

P.L. 753 -- Signed into law July 23.

Congress in 1956 enacted, on the day of President Eisenhower's departure for an international conference in Panama, a law to carry out a long-standing promise to that country to build a bridge over the Panama Canal.

Delay in implementing a 1942 commitment made in return for use of Panamanian defense sites in World War II had, according to the State Department, become a source of friction with Panama. The U.S. commitment had been renewed in 1955. Committee reports stressed that though traffic did not justify building a bridge, the commitment should be carried out.

While HR 9801 authorized either a bridge or tunnel to be built at Balboa, Congress expressed preference for a high-level bridge which would cost an estimated $20 million compared with the tunnel's $38 million. Either would require a Congressional appropriation rather than financing from Panama Canal Company revenues.

Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) told the Senate July 20 the President was "very anxious to have action taken on the bill" before he left that day for Panama for the meeting of Presidents of the American Republics. The Senate concurred without opposition. The House had approved the bill July 2 by a 325-59 roll-call vote, with opponents protesting the cost to U.S. taxpayers. (For voting, see chart, p. 212)

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 9801:

Authorized construction of a tunnel under, or a bridge over, the Panama Canal at Balboa.

Declared a high-level bridge would be more desirable than a tunnel.

Specified that construction, maintenance and operation of the bridge and its approaches should be administered by the Panama Canal Co.

Declared that the costs should be treated as extraordinary expenses incurred through a directive based on national policy and not related to the operations of the Panama Canal Company.

COMMUNIST CHINA

H Con Res 265 -- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 2733) July 16, 1956.
- Adopted by the House, by a 391-0 roll-call vote, July 18. (See p. 220)
- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 2697) July 20.
- Adopted by the Senate, by an 86-0 roll-call vote, July 23. (See p. 183)

Congress in 1956 adopted by unanimous roll-call votes in both houses a concurrent resolution re-stating its opposition to the admission of Red China to the United Nations as the representative of China. (For voting, see charts, p. 183 and 220) Similar statements were appended as riders to the State Department and Mutual Security Appropriations bills passed earlier in 1956 (Public Laws 603 and 853). (See p. 623 and 427.)

In reporting H Con Res 265, the House Foreign Affairs Committee said it was important to "re-state and re-emphasize the overwhelming sentiment of the United States" on the subject at a time when efforts by Red China to gain admission to the UN were being intensified.

PROVISIONS -- As adopted by both houses, H Con Res 265:

Re-stated and re-emphasized previous expressions by Congress that the Communist regime in China should not be admitted to membership in the United Nations or any of its specialized agencies as the representatives of China.

Expressed Congress' conviction that Red China's admission would gravely injure the United Nations and impair its effective functioning.

BACKGROUND -- Since House Resolution 96 was adopted in 1951 by the 82nd Congress opposing the admission of Communist China to the United Nations, Congress has frequently repeated the sentiment, in the Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, and in various appropriations bills.

House

DEBATE -- July 18 -- Walter H. Judd (R Minn.) -- Attempts apparently would be made after Congress adjourned to gain UN admission for Communist China, but Congress must head off such a "squeeze play."

Albert P. Morano (R Conn.) -- Hailed reports that Great Britain had decided not to press for a resolution admitting Communist China to the UN.

Senate

DEBATE -- July 23 -- William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Urged unanimous approval of the resolution "because at the United Nations there are groups which say that after our national elections in November the Communist (members)...and some of the so-called neutralists...will make a major attempt to have Red China admitted."

John L. McClellan (D Ark.) -- Congress should "let the world know we are opposed to letting an outlaw shoot his way into the society of nations."

George W. Malone (R Nev.) -- Suggested "there is a preponderance of sentiment in the State Department today in favor of recognizing Communist China.... The pressure from the State Department has continually been for more trade with Communist China with eventual recognition."

Knowland -- "That is not the policy" of top State Department officials or the Administration.

IMMIGRATION OFFICIALS

S 1271 -- Reported by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 227) April 25, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate April 28.
- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 576) May 10, 1955; recommitted May 17 and re-reported (H Rept 1254) July 19; recommitted July 30 and re-reported (H Rept 1802) Feb. 21, 1956; recommitted March 6 and re-reported (H Rept 1870) March 12.
- Passed by the House March 21 by a standing vote of 185-35. (For roll-call vote, see p. 192)

Private Law 538 -- Approved by the President March 29.

S 1272 -- Reported by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 228) April 25, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate April 28.
- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 577) May 10, 1955; recommitted May 17 and re-reported (H Rept 1255) July 19; recommitted July 30 and re-reported (H Rept 1803) Feb. 21, 1956; recommitted March 6 and re-reported (H Rept 1871) March 12.
- Passed by the House March 21 by voice vote.

Private Law 539 -- Approved by the President March 29.

The House acted March 21, 1956, on private bills (S 1271, 1272) to allow two retired Army generals to serve as Assistant Immigration and Naturalization Commissioners. Passed by the Senate in 1955, the bills were recommitted three times by the House to the Armed Services Committee on calls of the Private Calendar. Before the final vote on S 1271, the House defeated a motion to recommit the bill again by a roll-call vote of 80-311. (For voting, see chart p. 192)

S 1271 exempted Brig. Gen. Edwin B. Howard (ret.) and S 1272, Maj. Gen. Frank H. Partridge (ret.), both of whom had served as consultants to the Immigration Service, from application of the dual-employment law of 1894. Under that law retired military officers receiving a pension of $2,500 or more a year, unless retired for combat disabilities, could not hold civilian government posts except when confirmed by the Senate. Opposition to the private bills was expressed on grounds the Service already was headed by a retired Army general, J. M. Swing. (1955 Almanac, p. 666)

DEBATE -- March 21 -- Dewey Short (R Mo.) -- "There is no present civilian serving in the Department of Justice who is qualified to take either position to which the two generals would be appointed. The two Acting Commissioners are civilians, but they do not want the appointments because they would have to surrender their civil service status.... There is ample precedent for the passage of both bills."

Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio) -- "I am opposed to (the bills) first on the principle of filling these jobs with ex-generals; and, second, I am suspicious of the men in question because they were picked by Gen. Swing who is the Commissioner. I have met a lot of arrogant people in my time, but what I could say about Gen. Swing and the arrogance that he shows in that position would only be limited by what would be printable in the Congressional Record."

Alfred D. Sieminski (D N.J.) -- "Gen. Swing is a fighting general. There is no creampuff diplomatic approach with him.... When he is confronted with a tough problem he will fight fire with fire."

EXPORT CONTROLS

HR 9052 -- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 1998) April 12, 1956.
- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote May 21.
- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 2147) June 6.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote June 14.
- Conference report (H Rept 2485) agreed to by the Senate June 27 and the House June 28, by voice votes.

P.L. 631 -- Signed into law June 29.

The 84th Congress extended for two more years, through June 30, 1958, the law under which the Commerce Department regulates exports of scarce and strategic commodities. Congress completed action on the extension bill (HR 9052) June 28, just two days before the Export Control Act was due to expire. The Administration had sought a three-year extension.

Committee reports and debate on the bill stressed concern that iron and steel scrap were being exported in such quantities as to endanger the national security and harm small steel mills and foundries. Both houses agreed that a survey of scrap supplies should be made but disagreed over whether the Commerce Department or Interior's Bureau of Mines should make it. Finally accepted was the House's choice of the Commerce Department.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 9052:

Directed the Secretary of Commerce to make a complete survey of the iron and steel scrap available and potentially available and report to Congress within three months, with a final report by Jan. 31, 1957.

Permitted the Secretary, in making the survey, to use the services of private organizations to secure information, but required that full-time Commerce employees make any conclusions or recommendations and prohibited use of workers without compensation (WOCs) in the survey.

Extended the Export Control Act of 1949 through June 30, 1958.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Export Controls" (1949 Almanac, p. 403); "Export Controls Extended" (1953 Almanac, p. 229).

The Export Control Act of 1949, administered by the Secretary of Commerce, authorized the regulation of exports to the extent necessary (1) to protect the domestic economy from excessive drain of scarce commodities, (2) to safeguard the national security against exports of strategic materials and (3) to further U.S. foreign policy. Controls are basically of two types: "security" controls and "short supply" controls. Security controls are imposed on strategic goods such as electronics equipment, aviation gasoline, aluminum and certain machine tools. Short supply controls are used when foreign demand is so great as to drain U.S. domestic supplies or create an inflationary rise in U.S. prices.

President Eisenhower Jan. 16 requested extension of the Export Control Act for three years.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

ACTION -- April 12 reported an amended bill (HR 9052 -- H Rept 1998) to extend the Export Control Act for two years, until June 30, 1958. Although the Administration had requested a three-year extension, the Committee felt the next Congress should have a chance to review the law.

The Committee report said the U.S. must continue to take "special precautions" to prevent strategic goods from going "unchecked to the trouble spots of the world," particularly the European Soviet bloc, Communist China and North Korea.

Citing an increase in exports of iron and steel scrap from 1.6 million tons in 1954 to over five million tons in 1955, the Committee said it shared the "grave concern" of small steel mills and foundries that were "apprehensive" about a possible shortage of steel and iron scrap. The Committee recommended that the Department of Commerce undertake a survey to find out if an adequate domestic supply existed.

Floor Action

The House May 21 passed HR 9052 by voice vote, with an amendment.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) -- Direct the Secretary of Commerce to make a survey of iron and steel scrap and report findings to Congress; prohibit him from using workers without compensation (WOCs) for that purpose; May 21. Standing vote, 28-8.

DEBATE -- May 21 -- Debate centered on the implications of increased exports of iron and steel scrap.

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- Supplies of scrap are being exported without regard to U.S. requirements. "I do not want the jobs of (steel workers)...to be jeopardized because of a shortsighted (federal) program."

Henry O. Talle (R Iowa) -- "While scrap exports have been at a relatively high level, it does not appear that the mills or foundries have had any difficulty in getting supplies."

Brent Spence (D Ky.) -- "It might be very dangerous to our friendship and to our future relations" with U.S. allies if scrap shipments were curtailed sharply.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency, International Finance Subcommittee.

HEARING -- April 30 on a bill (S 3238) to provide continued authority for regulation of exports.

TESTIMONY -- April 30 -- Robert W. Wolcott, board chairman, Lukens Steel Co., said: "The Export Control Act is a sound law, but because of the manner of administration by the Department of Commerce, it appears to me that the will of Congress has been frustrated. Under these circumstances, two reasonable courses of action would appear to be open to Congress -- one would be to clarify its intent in extending the Act; the second course of action would be to modify the Act itself by establishing quantitative limitations upon scrap exports."

Lowell D. Ryan, managing director, Malleable Founders' Society, recommended: administration of the Act consistent with the intent expressed by Congress; "immediate restriction on the export of the better grades of scrap;" establishment of a program to encourage foreign countries to increase their pig iron producing facilities and to require foreign users to use low grades of scrap; and a survey "to obtain factual information concerning the potential supply of obsolete scrap which may be available in the next five to 15 years."

ACTION -- The Committee June 6 reported HR 9052 (S Rept 2147) with an amendment directing the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines to conduct the scrap survey. The House had provided for the survey to be made by full-time employees of the Commerce Department.

Floor Action

The Senate June 14 passed the bill by voice vote with the committee amendment.

DEBATE -- June 14 -- J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Despite opposition by the Commerce and Interior Departments, the Committee felt the Bureau of Mines, which collects information on consumer use of scrap, should conduct the survey, using private research organizations if desirable. The Commerce Department's "Business and Defense Services Administration, which would ordinarily be responsible for the survey, is manned largely, in the top positions, by employees of the steel companies which are the principal scrap consumers (and) have been arguing vigorously for limitations on exports of scrap.... In my judgment, a more objective survey would be conducted by the Bureau of Mines."

Conference

REPORT -- A conference report on HR 9052 (H Rept 2485), filed June 26, substantially followed the House version of the bill. It called for a scrap survey by the Secretary of Commerce, forbade him to use workers without compensation (WOCs) for the purpose, but permitted use of private groups to gather information.

ACTION -- The Senate June 27 and the House June 28, by voice votes and without debate, agreed to the conference report.

HELLS CANYON

S 1333 -- Reported by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 2275) June 19, 1956.

• Rejected by the Senate on a 41-51 roll-call vote July 19. (See p. 180)

HR 4719 -- Reported by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 2542) June 29.

The Senate July 19 rejected, by a 41-51 roll-call vote, a bill (S 1333) to authorize construction, operation and maintenance of a single high federal dam at Hells Canyon on the Snake River between Idaho and Oregon. The vote appeared to have ended 10 years of argument as to whether public or private power should develop the deepest natural gorge left undeveloped on the North American continent. Estimated cost of the federal dam was $500.4 million.

Eight Democrats crossed party lines to vote with 43 Republicans against the bill. Two Republicans crossed party lines to vote with 39 Democrats for the federal dam. (For voting, see chart p. 180)

PROVISIONS -- S 1333, as finally rejected by the Senate, would have:

Authorized the Secretary of Interior to operate and maintain a single, high dam on the Hells Canyon reaches of the Snake River between Idaho and Oregon.

Authorized construction of the Scriver Creek power plant.

Provided that electrical energy available from the Hells Canyon Dam and power plant and the Scriver Creek power facilities be marketed through the Bonneville Power Administration.

Authorized appropriations required to pay for construction of the dam.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Hells Canyon" (1955 Almanac, p. 449)

The question of whether Hells Canyon's power potential should be developed by public or private sources had been argued since 1947. President Eisenhower's Administration withdrew previous Democratic objections to private development and sent the Idaho Power Co.'s application for permission to construct three small dams on the river to the Federal Power Commission. After 18 months of hearings the FPC Aug. 4, 1955, approved the Idaho Power Co.'s plan. On Nov. 3, 1955, FPC authorized the Company to build two of the three proposed dams and on June 14, 1956, approved the issuance of unsecured promissory notes amounting to $20 million for interim financing of the project.

Chairman Clair Engle (D Calif.) of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee Dec. 22, 1955, said that, according to legal views cited by the Library of Congress, the federal government could build power projects in Hells Canyon even though the FPC had given the right to a private company. The opinion said Congress was not bound by the FPC's ruling of Aug. 4, 1955.

Senate and House subcommittees in the first session of the 84th Congress held hearings on bills (S 1333, HR 4719) authorizing federal construction of a high dam. Neither bill reached the floor in 1955.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

ACTION -- June 19 reported S 1333 (S Rept 2275) with amendments. Approval of the bill was by voice vote but the following Senators asked that their votes be recorded: For the bill -- Democrats James E. Murray (Mont.), Richard Neuberger (Ore.) and Henry M. Jackson (Wash.); Against -- Republicans Henry C. Dworshak (Idaho), Frank A. Barrett (Wyo.) and George W. Malone (Nev.). Approval came after Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.), who opposed the bill, switched to the Foreign Relations Committee and W. Kerr Scott (D N.C.), who favored the federal dam, rejoined the Committee.

Floor Action

Senate debate on the bill began July 18. On July 19 the bill was defeated, 41-51. (For voting see chart p. 180)

DEBATE -- July 18 -- Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) -- The Federal Power Commission authorized the three-dam project "by unanimous vote...after the most extensive investigation ever. No committee of Congress can match the experience, know-how and informational background" that went into the FPC's consideration.

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- "No matter what the FPC may do about private applications, only the Congress can and must exercise the judgment, and the minority's songs of praise for the Federal Power Commission cannot alter that responsibility."

James E. Murray (D Mont.) -- Idaho Power's plan is backed by an Administration bent on "emasculation of comprehensive resource development under the guise of so-called 'free enterprise or partnership' proposals."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Idaho Power "offers less storage, less flood control, less power, less recreation and imperils fish and wildlife conservation."

July 19 -- Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) -- Proponents of the federal dam have made "astronomical" claims as to how much power it would produce. The project's production would be about half the million-plus kilowatts claimed and the cost of the dam would be double that claimed.

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- "Subordinates in the White House" have been "marshalling their forces" against the bill, apparently on the theory that "if Hells Canyon can be defeated, Wayne Morse can be defeated."

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "I believe the measure is of the utmost importance for the long term economic development of our country."

Frank A. Barrett (R Wyo.) -- "Some people would have us believe that the Idaho Power plan is wholly inadequate...the smallest (dam) is twice as high as Bonneville. The second is higher than Niagara Falls and the highest is more than 100 feet higher than the dome of the Capitol."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

ACTION -- June 26 ordered HR 4719 reported by a 15-13 vote after a recommittal motion by Rep. Hamer H. Budge (R Idaho) was rejected. Rep. J. Edgar Chenoweth (R Colo.), who reportedly traded his vote for a promise of House action on the Fryingpan-Arkansas project in his state (see p. 502), voted with 14 Democrats to report the bill favorably. Rep. George A. Shuford (D N.C.) and 12 Republicans opposed it.

The Committee June 29 reported an amended bill (H Rept 2542). It called the federal dam "a more feasible project than the plan licensed by the Federal Power Commission." Minority views said the project could be developed more economically by "local interests, whether public or private." James A. Haley (D Fla.) joined in the minority views of the 13 other Congressmen who opposed the bill.

The House Rules Committee had not cleared the bill for floor action when the Senate July 19 rejected the companion measure. There was no further House action on the issue.

NIAGARA POWER

S 1823 -- Reported by the Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 1408) Jan. 19, 1956.
• Passed by the Senate, amended, by a 48-39 roll-call vote, May 16. (See p. 166)
HR 11477 -- Reported by the House Public Works Committee (H Rept 2635) July 6.

Congress in 1956 failed to authorize power development at Niagara Falls -- a project hanging fire since 1950, when the Niagara Treaty was ratified by the United States and Canada. Although the Senate completed action on its bill, an identical House measure died in the Rules Committee.

As in previous years when proposals died short of passage, groups favoring private development strongly opposed the public development bills as unjustified and discriminatory. Proponents of development by the New York State Power Authority said the proposed $440 million enterprise would yield the maximum total benefit to the nation, bring lower rates to the northeast and be consistent with national power policy.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Niagara Power." (1953 Almanac, p. 431; 1955 Almanac, p. 452)

A 1950 treaty with Canada determined the U.S. share of Niagara waters for power development and, under a Senate reservation, required Congressional approval of any development project. In 1953 a private enterprise bill passed the House, but the Senate took no action. (1953 Almanac, p. 431) In 1954, a Senate bill sought to give the Federal Power Commission authority to further development plans, with preference given public bodies. (1954 Almanac, p. 511) The bill did not reach the floor before adjournment.

In 1955, both the Senate and House held hearings on rival bills, but none reached the floor. (1955 Almanac, p. 452)

During the 84th Congress these measures again were considered: S 6, introduced by Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.); HR 142, by Rep. William E. Miller (R N.Y.); HR 420, by Rep. George A. Dondero (R Mich.) -- all outlining private enterprise development plans; S 1823, introduced by Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.), with two companion bills, HR 5878 and 8109, introduced by Reps. Irwin D. Davidson (D N.Y.) and Charles A. Buckley (D N.Y.), respectively -- all favoring public development. Also considered were: HR 5706, introduced by Buckley and leaving the choice between public and private licensee to the Federal Power Commission under terms of the Federal Power Act; and HR 5377, introduced by Rep. Edmund P. Radwan (R N.Y.), providing for immediate construction by the Corps of Engineers, with Congress to determine disposition of power upon the project's completion.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HEARINGS -- July 13, 14 and 15, 1955, on S 6 and S 1823. (1955 Almanac, p. 454)

ACTION -- The Committee Jan. 16, 1956, reported by a 6-5 vote Sen. Lehman's S 1823 (S Rept 1408), providing for development of the United States' share of the Niagara River by the N.Y. State Power Authority and directing that public agencies and rural electric cooperatives have priority over private groups in access to power from the project, which was estimated to cost $440 million. About 10 billion kilowatt hours of energy would be generated annually.

The majority report said:

The New York Power Authority was "willing and eager" to carry out the development without any cost or risk to the federal government.

The Capehart bill (S 6) to develop the river by private enterprise "reverses a national policy of half a century by turning over to a private corporate monopoly a major public resource whose benefits belong to all the people."

State development would result in lower power supply costs for public systems and lower rates for consumers in the area.

Minority views were expressed by Sens. Edward Martin (R Pa.), Norris Cotton (R N.H.), Prescott Bush (R Conn.) and Strom Thurmond (D S.C). They recommended passage of S 6, said private enterprise had pioneered the project, that public development would be "tantamount to saying that all public resources must be publicly developed" and recommended a state referendum.

Sen. Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.) said Congress was overstepping its limits in deciding a state issue and that a state referendum should be held.

Floor Action

The Senate May 16 passed S 1823, with amendments, by a 48-39 roll-call vote, after three days of debate. The Senate defeated, by a 38-48 roll-call vote, a recommittal motion by Sen. Prescott Bush (R Conn.). (For voting, see chart p. 166)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 1823, the Niagara Redevelopment Act of 1956:

Authorized the Federal Power Commission to issue a license for the project to the New York State Power Authority, subject to terms of the Federal Power Act.

Provided that the Power Authority, in contracting for disposition of project power, give equal preference to: counties and municipalities; state departments and agencies; rural electric cooperatives; and defense agencies.

Stipulated that the Power Authority make flexible arrangements in its contracts with private utility companies so sufficient power would be available to meet the future needs of preference customers.

Directed the Power Authority to obtain use of necessary transmission lines by contract, lease, purchase or construction.

Stipulated that "a reasonable portion" of power be made available to neighboring states within economic transmission distance; the Federal Power Commission would determine the portion of power to be available in case of disagreement.

Directed that project power be sold and distributed primarily for the benefit of the people, particularly domestic and rural consumers, at the lowest possible cost, to encourage the widest possible use.

Provided that when power was sold for resale, contracts must include provisions for establishing resale rates, to be approved by the Power Authority.

Directed the Power Authority, in cooperation with the appropriate state agency, to construct a scenic drive and park on the United States side of the Niagara River at a maximum cost of $15 million. The cost was to be considered a part of the net investment, and plans were to be approved by the Federal Power Commission.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- Directed the New York State Power Authority to reimburse the federal government for its expenditures for remedial works at Niagara Falls (approximately $6,400,000); May 16. Voice vote.

PRIVATE CONTROL DEBATED

DEBATE -- Private vs. state development of Niagara power and the question of granting preference to public agencies were the main points in dispute.

May 14 -- Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- During his 10 years as governor of New York "there never was a time when the private utilities were not using every device to gain control of the remaining undeveloped power of the Niagara."

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Completion of the power project would add threefold to the total amount of power, "in addition to getting for ourselves some of the potential power now used by Canada."

May 15 -- Irving M. Ives (R N.Y.) -- Was "unalterably opposed to S 1823" because: it was "in direct conflict with the law and policy" of New York State; it would discriminate against over 95 percent of the state's residents by granting a preference "to the few isolated cooperatives and municipally operated power plants scattered throughout the state;" every segment of the state's economy was opposed to it. The bill should be returned to committee to "work out some kind of compromise.... We have no business trying to pass a bill which, based on our past experience, we know will not be acceptable to the House of Representatives."

Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- "It is simply a question of private versus government enterprise and I believe in private enterprise." The remedial works in the Niagara River should be paid for by the power project and not "loaded onto the taxpayers."

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- People in New York and New England had "about the most outrageously high electric rates of any group of consumers in the entire United States," and it was "high time" to give them lower rates.

May 16 -- Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Called S 1823 "weak, objectionable and discriminatory."

Edward Martin (R Pa.) -- The bill's preference provision "is inclined toward socialism, insofar as the distribution of power is concerned."

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HEARINGS -- June 8, 9 and 10, 1955, (1955 Almanac, p. 453) and June 28, 1956.

TESTIMONY -- June 28 -- Witnesses were: Maj. Felix R. Garrett and Leonard T. Crook, Corps of Engineers, U.S. Army; Thomas F. Moore Jr. and Col. William S. Chapin, N.Y. State Power Authority; and Lauman Martin, vice president and general counsel of Niagara Mohawk Power Co.

Martin said a June 7 rock slide had crushed Niagara Mohawk's powerhouse on the Niagara River below the Falls and reconstruction would cost more than $100 million. The Committee was told an agreement would be worked out whereby the Power Authority would develop the project and sell Niagara Mohawk a prescribed amount at the same rates comparable companies would pay.

ACTION -- The Committee July 6 reported without amendment a bill (HR 11477 - H Rept 2635) identical to S 1823. The Committee rejected, by a 14-20 vote, a substitute proposal to authorize private power companies to build the project. The Committee said it "strongly favors" Niagara Mohawk's suggestion of an agreement with the Power Authority for replacement of the power lost by the June 7 disaster.

Eighteen Committee members said the legislation was needed to reduce electric rates in the Northeast and also to meet the power crisis caused by the collapse of Niagara Mohawk's powerhouse, with its installed capacity of 365,000 kilowatts. The majority said two other bills (HR 142, HR 420) which would permit private firms to develop Niagara power would "unjustifiably reverse a national policy of half a century by turning over to a private corporate monopoly a major public resource whose benefits belong to all the people."

The majority defended the public preference provision of HR 11477 by citing federally authorized water power developments in Oklahoma, Nebraska and South Carolina. According to the report, "These were public power agencies which were chartered and dedicated to the marketing of power in the best public interest. Their preference status did not render them uneconomical or interfere with their financing arrangements for construction of the projects. The Committee does not believe that the preference provisions of HR 11477 are unreasonable or that they will prejudice the conduct of operations of the New York Power Authority. On the contrary, it believes it desirable and wise and within Congressional authority to include such preference in the bill."

MINORITY REPORT

A 14-member minority opposed HR 11477 and recommended passage of HR 142. The minority complained that Committee procedure prevented them from amending the bill to delete the "so-called preference clause, which might be more appropriately called the discrimination clause."

"The issue here at stake is unmistakably clear and distinct," said the minority. "On the one hand is the development of Niagara Falls electric power by taxpaying private enterprise, and on the other, development by a state government organization which pays no taxes and must be supported by the taxpayer.... Against the tax-free status of government utility operations, privately owned companies cannot compete. Carried to its logical conclusions, the philosophy behind HR 11477 would doom private utilities in America."

Other objections to HR 11477 cited by the minority: "The project is not a multiple-purpose project, and HR 11477 would, for the first time in the entire history of electric power development in this country, authorize by federal legislation public development of a pure power project.... The public project which HR 11477 would authorize would bear no relation to any existing public project and would actually displace private enterprise.... The power cost (under public operation) is low to those who consume it only because the rest of the people will pay the differential in taxes.... In the past, government projects, attended by tax subsidies, may have been justified in areas asserted to have been underdeveloped or otherwise in need of economic rehabilitation. No such assertions are or can be made here.... Although 95 percent of the people of the state of New York receive their electricity from taxpaying distributing agencies, this bill would discriminate against them. They would receive project power only after the needs of public agencies are satisfied...." The minority also said the public preference provision of HR 11477 would "abrogate" state law. Finally, the minority said more than 200 organizations in the state supported its position and public opinion polls within the area showed the people "by an overwhelming margin, want private development."

Members signing the minority report: George H. Fallon (D Md.), Brady Gentry (D Texas), Paul G. Rogers (D Fla.), George A. Dondero (R Mich.), J. Harry McGregor (R Ohio), James C. Auchincloss (R N.J.), Hubert B. Scudder (R Calif.), Frank J. Becker (R N.Y.), Gordon H. Scherer (R Ohio), William C. Cramer (R Fla.), Fred Schwengel (R Iowa), Bruce Alger (R Texas), Alvin R. Bush (R Pa.) and Donald W. Nicholson (R Mass.).

EISENHOWER ISSUE

On July 10 President Eisenhower gave his Congressional leaders a "priority" list of legislation he hoped Congress would pass before adjourning. Sen. William F. Knowland (R Calif.) said the list included 14 measures, one of which was the Niagara power bill.

The bill had not been cleared by the House Rules Committee for floor debate when Congress adjourned.

Group Stands

The existing hydroelectric development on the American side of the Niagara River is owned and operated by the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., under a 50-year license granted by the FPC in 1921. Niagara Mohawk and four associated utility companies supported the Capehart private development measure (S 6) until the rockslide crushed Niagara Mohawk's principal plant. Then the suggestion for a compromise with the Power Authority was made.

The Executive Council of the AFL-CIO in 1956 expressed its approval of the public power measure, but the N.Y. State Assn. of Electrical Workers (AFL) opposed it, said "fair and lasting labor agreements with government agencies are almost impossible."

The New York Power Authority Aug. 20 applied to the FPC for permission to start the power project. The application sought both to by-pass the Senate's 1950 reservation as illegal and to assure Niagara Mohawk a large share of the power over a long period.

FRYINGPAN-ARKANSAS

S 300 -- Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 233) April 28, 1955.

- Passed by voice vote of the Senate, amended, July 12, 1956.

HR 412 -- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 1749) Feb. 7, 1956.

- Resolution to consider bill (H Res 641) rejected by the House July 26 on a 179-194 roll-call vote. (See p. 226)

Congress' action in 1956 on the proposed $156.5 million reclamation project in Colorado paralleled its 1954 action, when the House voted down floor consideration of a bill (HR 236) and the Senate passed a similar measure (S 964). The proposal also was considered in 1955, but there was no floor action. In 1956 its opponents declared the project "economically unsound and unfeasible," and no final action was taken.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Fryingpan Project" (1955 Almanac, p. 447)

The Fryingpan-Arkansas project was designed to import water from the Colorado River Basin across the mountains to the Arkansas River Basin and to regulate flows in the Arkansas basin so they could be used to greater advantage. Studies of the project were begun in 1936 by the Department of the Interior, with a final report recommending it submitted to Congress in June, 1953.

President Eisenhower, both in his Jan. 5 State of the Union message and his Jan. 16 Budget message, urged Congress in 1956, as he had in 1955, to authorize the project. In 1955, the Senate bill (S 300) did not undergo any floor action and a similar House measure (HR 412) did not get out of committee. (1955 Almanac, p. 447)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- March 16-25, 1955, on S 300, to authorize the Fryingpan-Arkansas project. (1955 Almanac, p. 449)

ACTION -- The Committee reported the bill April 28 (S Rept 233). The report said the Committee found it "unbelievable that the diversion of a mere 69,000 acre-feet -- an 'insignificant' and 'nominal' quantity, as opponents of the project have characterized it -- will cause any appreciable diminution in the quality of the remaining water," as charged by some opponents.

Floor Action

The Senate July 12, 1956, passed S 300 by voice vote, with committee amendments. Action came after a unanimous consent agreement to limit debate on both the Fryingpan bill and a bill (S 1333) to authorize federal construction of the Hells Canyon dam in Idaho. (See p. 499)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 300:

Authorized the construction, operation and maintenance by the Secretary of the Interior of a project to import 69,200 acre-feet of water annually, on the average, from the Fryingpan River and Hunter Creek in the Colorado River basin to the Arkansas River basin and to regulate the flow of the Arkansas River. (The project would provide supplemental water to 322,000 acres of land already under irrigation in the Arkansas River valley, provide municipal and industrial water for Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Manzanola, Rocky Ford, La Junta, Las Animas, Lamar, Crowley, Eads and Wiley in Colorado's Arkansas Valley; generate about 470 million kilowatt-hours of electric energy annually to be sold at six mills; and provide flood control, recreation benefits and fish and wildlife protection. The reimbursable costs of the project would be repaid within 51 years after completion of the last feature.)

Specified that the project was subject to a set of operating principles entered into by representatives from western Colorado and the Arkansas Valley to protect western Colorado water users.

Specified that the project was subject to the apportionments of the water allocated to the upper basin and Colorado under the Colorado River Compact and the Upper Colorado River Basin Compact, to the terms of the Boulder Canyon Project Act, the United States-Mexico Water Treaty of 1944, the Arkansas River Compact and to state water law.

Waived the excess land provision (160-acre limitation) of the federal reclamation laws on lands served by the project.

The breakdown in costs, estimated revenues and repayment periods for the project:

Estimated construction costs	$156,541,000
Tentative allocation of costs:
Irrigation	67,653,000
Municipal water
Basic project costs	8,200,000
Delivery system	16,328,000
Power	44,551,000
Flood control	17,911,000
Fish and wildlife	1,898,000
Estimated annual net revenues:
Irrigation (average)	839,000
Power	1,720,000
Municipal water
Water sales	270,000
Delivery system	585,000
Estimated repayment periods:
Irrigation investment	59 years*
Municipal water investment	50 years
Power investment	47 years

*Includes an eight-year development period.

DEBATE -- July 12 -- Eugene D. Millikin (R Colo.), sponsor of the bill -- The "chronic" shortage of water in the Arkansas River basin in Colorado will be partially remedied by this project.

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- Since Congress authorized the Upper Colorado River storage project, "representatives of public agencies and water groups in California charged with the responsibility of providing water for the people whom I...represent have withdrawn their opposition to the (Fryingpan) project."

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- "I intend to vote for Fryingpan-Arkansas, as I have voted for Trinity (in California) and...Upper Colorado, even though" the Pacific Northwest "has not secured authorizations for its projects." He said that "captious and frivolous objections" had been raised against "our projects in the Pacific Northwest" and charged that the Administration "has almost totally neglected that area of the country.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- May 9-July 16, 1955, intermittently, on HR 412, to authorize the Fryingpan-Arkansas project. (1955 Almanac, p. 449)

ACTION -- The Committee reported the bill Feb. 7, 1956 (H Rept 1749). The report said the project was sound from engineering, economic and financial standpoints and urgently needed. A minority report questioned its engineering feasibility, said the project was without economic justification.

Floor Action

The House July 26 killed the Fryingpan-Arkansas project by rejecting, on a 179-194 roll-call vote, the resolution (H Res 641) that would have enabled HR 412 to come up on the floor. (For voting, see chart p. 226)

The House Rules Committee July 24 had refused to clear the bill for the House, on a 5-5 vote. On July 25 the Committee reversed itself by voting 7-3 to send the bill to the floor.

DEBATE -- July 26 -- John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- Opposed the bill as "the most fantastic thing I have ever seen." The cost "to put an inch of water" on farm land was excessive.

J. Edgar Chenoweth (R Colo.) -- The people in his district were in "desperate need of this water." The project was self-liquidating and not dependent on any other project.

Edward H. Rees (R Kan.) -- It was "pretty drastic" not to allow consideration of the bill.

D.C. BRIDGE

HR 7228 -- Reported by House District of Columbia Committee (H Rept 1285) July 20, 1955.
- Passed, amended, by the House, on a 284-8 roll-call vote, April 23, 1956. (See p. 196)
- Reported by Senate District of Columbia Committee (S Rept 1963) May 10.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote May 14.

P.L. 534 -- Signed into law May 22.

Congress in HR 7228 amended Title II of PL 704, 83rd Congress, "An Act to authorize and direct the construction of bridges over the Potomac River at or near Jones Point, Va.", to authorize construction by the Bureau of Public Roads. The legislation was requested by President Eisenhower.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 7228:

Changed the authority for the bridge construction from the Department of Interior to the Department of Commerce, Bureau of Public Roads.

Changed the original type of draw span from a swing span to a vertical type span, and lowered vertical clearance by 30 feet.

Provided that the bridge would be maintained and operated by the states of Virginia and Maryland.

WATERSHED LAW

HR 8750 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 1810) Feb. 23, 1956.

- Passed by the House by voice vote, with amendments, April 24.
- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 2585) July 16.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote, with amendments, July 20.
- Conference report (H Rept 2902) agreed to by the House and Senate July 25, by voice votes.

P.L. 1018 -- Signed into law Aug. 7.

An important and potentially costly law approved by Congress in 1956 broadened the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act of 1954 to permit federal aid for all kinds of state and local water projects. Under the amended law, local groups could qualify for aid in planning and carrying out water projects for such purposes as municipal and industrial water supply, recreation, fish and wildlife improvement, pollution abatement by streamflow regulation and salt water intrusion control. Projects eligible for aid under the original law were limited to flood prevention and agricultural water management projects.

Like the original projects, the new ones would have to be part of a comprehensive, federally approved plan involving a watershed area of not more than 250,000 acres in which owners of at least half the land pledged cooperation in soil conservation. The amendments permitted reservoirs of up to 25,000 acre-feet capacity, rather than the 5,000 of the original law, but limited them as to purpose and federal share in construction.

UNLIMITED AUTHORIZATION

No new funds were authorized for the program as the 1954 law carried an authorization of "such funds as may be necessary" for carrying out its purposes. The Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service would continue to administer the expanded program in the 48 states and, under the new law, in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands as well.

In other changes, the amendments guaranteed 100 percent federal assumption of construction costs relating to flood control. Long-term federal loans were authorized to help local groups bear their share of a project's cost.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 8750:

Amended the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act to make eligible for federal aid any local project for water development and use that is part of an approved over-all watershed plan.

Retained the limit of 250,000 acres for an eligible watershed area and the requirement that owners of at least 50 percent of the land area cooperate in conservation practices.

Increased the size of water structures permitted under the program from 5,000 acre-feet to 25,000 acre-feet, but limited capacity related to flood control to 5,000 acre-feet.

Permitted the federal government to extend technical assistance in conservation and to share costs of planning and of improvements for irrigation, drainage and other agricultural water management.

Required the federal government to bear the entire cost of contruction for flood prevention.

Required local organizations to bear the entire cost of other improvements, to secure all necessary land and rights of way and to operate and maintain works of improvement.

Authorized federal loans of up to 50 years' duration, not to exceed $5 million for any project, to help local groups bear their share of costs.

Provided that projects involving a federal contribution of not more than $250,000 and no larger than 2,500 acre-feet could be approved by the Secretary of Agriculture without submission to Congress.

Provided that larger projects up to 4,000 acre-feet capacity should be referred for approval to the Agriculture Committees of Congress; projects over 4,000 acre-feet, to the Public Works Committees.

Required local organizations to employ professional engineers to carry out projects that included water storage facilities for municipal or industrial purposes; on other projects local organizations could hire outside engineers if they chose to do so, with the government authorized to reimburse all or part of the cost and to advance funds up to 5 percent of the project's total cost.

Extended provisions of the Act to Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Background

The Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act (PL 566 -- 83rd Congress) authorized federal assistance in planning and executing local conservation and flood control projects involving watershed areas of not more than 250,000 acres and water storage structures of not more than 2,500 acre-feet capacity. Federal construction grants were authorized only for flood control projects. Local groups were required to acquire all the necessary land and rights of way and to obtain agreement of owners of at least 50 percent of the land to carry out soil conservation practices. (1954 Almanac, p. 135)

The Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture said Sept. 24, 1956, that 600 applications had been received from local groups under the Act. Of these, 196 were approved for planning by the Service. Congressional approval necessary under the law had been secured in 27 cases when the 84th Congress adjourned, and four additional projects were approved by the Secretary of Agriculture after adjournment, under provisions of the new law. Federal assistance averaged $750,000 for each project ($125,000 a year for six years) for a total obligation of over $23 million. Federal assistance to individual projects ranged from a low of $18,000 for a Florida project to $2,200,000 for an Oklahoma project.

Appropriations granted under Public Law 566 were: for fiscal 1955, $1,750,000; fiscal 1956, $5,500,000; fiscal 1957, $9,800,000.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

ACTION -- Feb. 23 reported HR 8750 (H Rept 1810), to amend the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act of 1954. The report said HR 8750 would provide a multiple-purpose water and land-management program instead of one confined to flood prevention and agricultural water management. The report said, "Nothing in the bill will change the basic principle of the Act that the planning and carrying out of such programs is the joint responsibility of the state and local governments, individuals and the federal government, and that the cost of such projects should be divided as equitably as possible among the participants on the basis of benefits received."

Floor Action

The House April 24 passed the bill by voice vote, with minor committee amendments.

DEBATE -- April 24 -- Clifford R. Hope (R Kan.) -- "The water (problem)...is one of the most serious... confronting the country at this time.... The only way we are going to solve this great problem of making the...best use of our water is by storing (it) in the soil or in small reservoirs near the place where it fell.... That is the purpose of this legislation. It provides for multiple uses of water. There is a general realization that the original Act was too limited in providing only for flood control."

Lester R. Johnson (D Wis.) -- "Every citizen...has a vital stake in the conservation of our soil and water resources.... For this reason...I believe every citizen-taxpayer must share -- through federal aid programs -- in the cost of conserving our soil and water resources. Farmers alone cannot pay for the costs of maintaining the soil and we should not expect (them) to do so."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- July 16 reported HR 8750 (S Rept 2585) with amendments providing for clearance of plans to build projects under 2,500 acre-feet by the Secretary of Agriculture without submission to Congress, and for clearance of larger projects by the Public Works Committees instead of the Agriculture Committees of both houses. The Committee said in its report that limiting the capacity of reservoirs under the program to 25,000 acre-feet and the flood detention capacity to 5,000 acre-feet should mean "a minimum of conflict between federal agencies." The Committee urged "fuller cooperation and coordination in agency activities."

Floor Action

The Senate July 20 passed HR 8750 by voice vote, with amendments.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.) (three amendments, considered en bloc) -- Require local organizations to retain private engineers for the construction, but not the original planning, of structures that included water storage facilities for municipal or industrial purposes; July 20. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- July 20 -- George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- The bill should have been referred to the Agriculture and Forestry Committee.

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- "I saw...something during the hearings on the bill which I had never expected to see and had never seen before: The representatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the Farmers' Union and the National Grange all...were unanimous in their endorsement and approval of the bill...."

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee reported HR 8750 July 24 (H Rept 2902). Conferees clarified Senate language relating to employment of outside engineers and assistance by the Secretary of Agriculture in formulating plans. Conferees compromised on the question of which Congressional committees should clear project plans by dividing the responsibility between the Agriculture and Public Works Committees, depending upon the size of each project.

ACTION -- The House and Senate July 25 agreed to the conference report by voice votes.

PRESIDENT'S REMARKS

In signing HR 8750 Aug. 7 (PL 1018), the President expressed "regret that in one respect the new law is a step backwards." He criticized the provision that the federal government bear the entire cost of flood control construction, saying it was a burden the local groups should be willing to share. He said he would ask the next Congress to amend that provision.

RECLAMATION PROJECTS

HR 5881 -- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 481) May 4, 1955.

- Passed by the House May 26, amended, by a standing vote of 166-48.

S 2442 -- Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 1073) July 21.

HR 5881 -- Passed by voice vote of the Senate July 28, 1955, amended. (1955 Almanac, p. 460)

- Conference report filed May 23, 1956 (H Rept 2200), agreed to by the House June 13, and the Senate July 20, by voice votes. (For House roll-call vote, see p. 206)

P.L. 984 -- Signed into law Aug. 6.

Congress completed action in 1956 on a small reclamation projects bill which had been stalled in conference when Congress adjourned in 1955. In signing the bill into law Aug. 6, President Eisenhower said he did so only on the understanding that Congress would act early in 1957 to correct its "deficiencies." The President said "constitutional defects (were) inherent" in a provision giving Congressional committees the right to veto proposed reclamation projects under the law. But the bill had "general merit" despite that "seriously faulty" section, on which he said the Interior Department would not act until it was "removed or raised."

The President said delegation of the veto power to committees was objectionable either as an improper delegation by Congress of its legislative power or as a violation of the doctrine of separation of powers. Earlier in 1956 he vetoed a bill authorizing military construction (HR 9893) because it gave Congressional committees a veto power. (See p. 567)

The 1956 reclamation law provided $100 million for long-term federal grants and loans to spur small reclamation projects in the 17 western reclamation states. Earlier versions of the bill, as passed by both houses in 1955, would have extended federal aid to all 48 states and the territories of Alaska and Hawaii. A second bill (HR 8750) to extend federal aid to water projects in the other states was approved before Congress adjourned. (See story, above)

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 5881, the Small Reclamation Projects Act of 1956:

Authorized federal grants and 50-year loans for approved local reclamation projects.

Limited total assistance to any project to $5 million, or 75 percent of the total cost, though projects costing up to $10 million would be eligible.

Authorized grants for costs allocable to nonreimbursable functions (such as flood control and navigation) and loans for reimbursable functions (such as power, municipal water and irrigation), with interest charged in certain cases.

Authorized $100 million for the program.

Limited the program to 17 reclamation states -- Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Required an applicant for aid to put up $1,000 toward the cost of examining the project.

Required details of the proposed projects to be submitted to the Congressional committees concerned; if the authorizing committee disapproved the plans, specific Congressional approval would be required.

Made power produced by projects under the Act subject to the public power preference clause.

Instructed the Secretary of the Interior to administer the Act.

BACKGROUND -- HR 5881 was passed by the House May 26, 1955. The Senate July 28 passed the bill after substituting for the House text the wording of S 2442, which differed substantially from the House version. Both bills would have provided federal aid for reclamation projects in the 48 states and the territories of Alaska and Hawaii. The bill had not emerged from conference at the end of the first session of the 84th Congress. (1955 Almanac, p. 460)

Conference

On May 23, 1956, the Senate-House conference committee filed its report (H Rept 2200) on HR 5881.

The conferees adopted substantially the House version of the bill but limited its application to the 17 reclamation states. They approved two Senate provisions: that the project builders should not be required to put up more than 25 percent of the costs allowable to reimbursable functions under reclamation law; and that any power derived from a project should be available first for public uses. The conferees also modified the procedure for approving applications for aid. Instead of requiring Congressional approval of every project, they required it only when the authorizing committee specifically disapproved a proposed project.

HOUSE ACTION

The House June 13, by voice vote, adopted the conference report after defeating, by a roll-call vote of 179-209, a motion to recommit it. (For voting, see chart, p. 206)

Opposition to the conference report was voiced by representatives of eastern states who charged HR 5881 had become a regional bill. Defenders of the conference action said the Administration had urged early in 1956 that the 31 non-reclamation states' needs be dealt with in separate legislation, and that a bill for that purpose (HR 8750) had already been passed by the House and was pending in the Senate Public Works Committee. (It subsequently was enacted. See story above)

DEBATE -- June 12 -- Leon H. Gavin (R Pa.) -- Saw no reason "why we should vote $100 million to 17 states, eliminating the other 31 states in the East. (We have) no assurance that the Senate is going to take favorable action" on HR 8750, which would cover the other 31 states.

Clair Engle (D Calif.) -- "(The pending bill) deals with physically small projects, permitting local agencies to build projects...rather than have the Bureau of Reclamation do them more expensively. There is no project which is authorized by this bill which cannot be built under present reclamation law, but we think more of them will be built, and be built more cheaply, if this bill goes into effect."

W.R. Poage (D Texas) -- "If we pass this conference report...we have then given (the 17 western states) a needed tool with which to work out their problem;...if we can then pass the small watersheds bill (HR 8750)...we will have provided an effective tool for all of the U.S. and...between the two we will have a very effective program of water utilization throughout the country."

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- "What the conferees did... was to absolutely disregard the will of the House and... the Senate and write their own legislation. This bill now gives the same $100 million not to the 48 states and the two territories (but) to the 17 western states" which already have use of Bureau of Reclamation funds.... "But we in the Midwest, East and the South have had absolutely no help from the federal government for these identical projects.... The important thing is that...the 17 western states...will have the benefits of this bill and the Poage bill (HR 8750)."

A.L. Miller (R Neb.) -- "This is a bill to permit managers of local projects to handle their own planning, ...without a great deal of interference by the federal government."

June 13 -- William A. Dawson (R Utah) -- "In each of the western reclamation states there are feasible projects in the $1-$5 million class. The extensive engineering and supervision required for Bureau construction makes it uneconomic...for these smaller projects to be constructed under present law. However, if funds were available for non-interest loans, and if the local sponsoring groups could furnish the engineering data and supervision, many fine, feasible projects would be built. That is the purpose of this legislation."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 20 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) -- "For many years the people of the West have desired this kind of legislation so that small projects which are not under consideration by the Bureau of Reclamation may receive some attention." Because many required long-term financing, it was "difficult to get the money" from private sources, so federal aid was necessary.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Regretted that his amendment applying the 160-acre limitation on interest-free irrigation loans was dropped by the conferees.

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- "The conference report preserved the 160-acre principle as to all new land...which never had been irrigated." For land over 160 acres, interest must be paid "at the rate which the government is paying for its money."

CUSTOMS SIMPLIFICATION

HR 6040 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 858) June 18, 1955.
- Passed by the House by voice vote June 22. (1955 Almanac, p. 425)
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 2560) July 13, 1956.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote July 18.
- Conference report (H Rept 2866) agreed to by the House July 21 and the Senate July 25, by voice votes.

P.L. 927 -- Signed into law Aug. 2.

Congress in 1956 enacted only one of the major international trade measures sought by the Administration -- a customs simplification law. The Senate, in what amounted to a victory for trade expansionist forces, acted favorably in 1956 on a customs simplification bill which the House had approved in 1955. Before Senate approval was secured, however, the Administration put forward a compromise proposal which limited application of the new formula for valuing imports contained in the bill so as to avoid deep tariff cuts.

Exempted from the new valuation system, which was fought hard by protectionists as a back-door attempt to lower tariffs, were articles whose dutiable value would be reduced 5 percent or more by the change.

The law provided a single-valuation system, based on the price at which the goods were offered for sale as exports, instead of the old system under which the higher of two values was used, the export price or the price at which the goods would be sold in the foreign market.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 6040:

Changed the existing system of valuing imports subject to duty based on value: instructed the Treasury to assess such imports at "export value," the price at which the goods were offered for sale for export, rather than on the higher of that value or "foreign value," the price at which the goods were offered for sale in the foreign market.

Exempted from the new valuation procedure articles whose dutiable value would be reduced as a result of the change by 5 percent or more, and required the Treasury Department to make up a list of such articles, allowing 60 days for domestic industries to suggest additions.

Declared that no modification of the Antidumping Act was intended and directed the Secretary of the Treasury to report within six months on antidumping enforcement and legislation.

Simplified the procedure for converting foreign currencies for customs valuation purposes by permitting use for three-month periods of a single certified exchange rate if the rate did not vary by 5 percent or more from the daily rate.

Repealed some 30 obsolete provisions of customs law.

Created a new customs collections unit comprising the state of New Mexico.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Customs Revision" (1955 Almanac, p. 425); "Customs Study" (1954 Almanac, p. 521).

The House passed HR 6040 on June 22, 1955, after first defeating, by a 143-232 roll-call vote, a motion to recommit the measure with instructions to delete the section on valuation procedures. (For voting, see 1955 Almanac, p. 154) Hearings were held in 1955 by the Senate Finance Committee, but the bill was not reported. (1955 Almanac, p. 426)

The President repeated in 1956 the requests he had made in 1955 for customs simplification legislation. In his Economic Report Jan. 24, he urged enactment of the customs simplification bill passed by the House in 1955, with "modifications...to avoid unintended reductions in individual duties that would result from the proposed change in valuation procedures." He said the bill's enactment would "constitute a significant advance in our foreign economic policy."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- June 25-27 on HR 6040.

TESTIMONY -- June 25 -- H. Chapman Rose, former Under Secretary of the Treasury and spokesman for the Department, said the current cumbersome system of determining the value of imports had resulted in a six-month backlog of customs investigations. Rose said the Treasury Department favored amending the House-passed bill to limit application of the new system for five years to items which would enjoy a customs reduction of less than 5 percent under the change.

Harry S. Radcliffe of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. said enactment of HR 6040 would be a "forward step" in eliminating delays in customs valuations. He supported the Treasury amendment as "an attempt at reasonable compromise."

June 26 -- John G. Lerch of New York, an attorney representing 11 trade associations, said the bill was a "vicious" effort to "destroy protection of American industry and labor."

O.R. Strackbein of the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy said the bill would weaken the Antidumping Act by depriving the Treasury of information on domestic prices in countries where imports came from. Strackbein said he thought HR 6040 was an effort to live up to U.S. obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) which Congress had never approved.

June 27 -- R. Buford Brandis of the American Cotton Manufacturing Institute, Richard F. Hansen of the Manufacturing Chemists' Assn., R.W. Hooker of the Synthetic Organic Chemical Manufacturers Assn. and Edmund Wellington Jr. of the National Federation of Textiles opposed the bill.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- July 13, by a 9-3 vote, the Committee reported HR 6040 (S Rept 2560) after amending it, along lines suggested by the Treasury Department, to exempt from the new single valuation system articles which would be reduced in value by 5 percent or more. The amendment required the Treasury Department to draw up a list of such articles, allowing time for additions to be suggested by domestic interests, at the beginning of each year for three years. Articles on the lists would continue to be valued under the old two-value system unless Congress decided otherwise after publication of the fourth list. The Committee also required the Treasury to make a report on antidumping enforcement after six months.

Voting against reporting HR 6040 were Sens. George W. Malone (R Nev.), Eugene D. Millikin (R Colo.) and John J. Williams (R Del.).

A minority report filed by Malone said the amended bill assumed "that a 5 percent decrease in valuation will not significantly affect the tariff protection afforded by the existing valuation standards. Any such premise is invalid.... The amended bill provides for arbitrary and across-the-board tariff reductions rather than the 'gradual' and 'selective' reductions advocated by President Eisenhower."

Floor Action

The Senate July 18 passed the bill by voice vote, with amendments.

Three floor amendments were accepted by voice vote. One would require the Treasury to make only one list of articles exempt from the changed procedure, instead of four over a three-year period as in the Committee version.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to conference, HR 6040:

Instructed the Treasury to value imports subject to ad valorem duty on the basis of "export value," the price at which the goods were offered for sale for export, rather than on the basis of that value or "foreign value," the price at which the goods were offered for sale in the foreign market, whichever was higher.

Exempted from the changed valuation procedure articles whose dutiable value would be reduced as a result of the bill by 5 percent or more, and required the Treasury Department to make up a list of such articles, allowing 60 days for domestic industries to suggest additions.

Required the Secretary of the Treasury to report to Congress within six months on antidumping enforcement and legislation.

Created a new customs collections unit comprising the State of New Mexico.

Repealed a provision of the Tariff Act of 1930 requiring that glass imported in boxes be packed in units of 50 square feet or multiples.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

George A. Smathers (D Fla.) -- Repeal requirement in the Tariff Act of 1930 that glass imported in boxes be packed in units of 50 square feet or multiples; July 18. Voice vote.

J. Allen Frear Jr. (D Del.) -- Require the Treasury Department to make only one list (instead of four over three years) of articles whose value would be decreased 5 percent or more by changed valuation system; July 18. Voice.

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- Create a new customs collection district comprising the State of New Mexico; July 18. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Thomas A. Wofford (D S.C.) -- Exempt from new valuation procedure articles on which tariffs have been reduced 5 percent a year under authority of the 1955 extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act (HR 1); July 18. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- July 18 -- George W. Malone (R Nev.) -- "...the so-called customs simplification bill is just one more catch phrase title designed to mislead Congress and the American people.... HR 6040 would not simplify customs procedures, but would complicate them.... Every definition of value has been changed to the advantage of foreign producers...to flood our markets.... Exporters in many foreign countries operate on a two-price system -- high prices for their home consumers, and special... lower export price for goods they ship to the United States.... The present law protects American producers against foreign two-price systems,...a favorite device of foreign cartels.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Sen. Wofford's amendment "would exempt from the customs simplification procedure all articles which were the subject of tariff-rate reductions under the authority contained in HR 1.... The Treasury believes the result would be to eliminate from the operation of the Act...some 10 percent...of all ad valorem entries and would result in a serious emasculation of the simplification to be derived from the bill."

Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- "(This) is the best measure we could devise for the simplification of customs procedures....(it) may lower the valuation on a few items, but 91 percent of the imports on an ad valorem basis were not affected...."

J. Allen Frear Jr. (D Del.) -- Under the Committee requirement for four lists in a three-year period, "the trial period might be extended to six years.... This on-again, off-again character of the list would make it impossible for an importer to know from one year to another...under what system duties on his imported article might be assessed...(and) would create great confusion both at home and abroad."

Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- Feared the bill would cause "some detriment, even though...slight...to New England industries. (They), like the camel's back, cannot stand any more strain...."

Conference

The conference committee on HR 6040 filed its report (H Rept 2866) July 21. The conference bill incorporated the Senate amendments exempting from the changed valuation procedure items whose dutiable value would be reduced under it by 5 percent or more. The conferees deleted the Senate amendment repealing the requirements of the Tariff Act of 1930 on the packing of certain glass imports. They accepted other Senate amendments creating a separate customs district in the state of New Mexico, and providing that the report on enforcement of the Antidumping Act by the Secretary of Treasury should be made in six months instead of a year.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 21, by voice vote, agreed to the conference report.

DEBATE -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- The amendment on packing glass imports "was opposed by the domestic glass industry and was deleted to permit more deliberate consideration of the proposal.... The simplification of customs procedures (provided in HR 6040) will do much to bring about an improvement in the handling of goods by the Bureau of Customs" and more certainty about the application of duties on imports.

Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- "The basic provisions of the bill represent a victory for President Eisenhower of major proportion."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 25 agreed to the conference report by voice vote, without debate.

CIA 'WATCHDOG' COMMITTEE

S Con Res 2 -- Reported by Senate Rules and Administration Committee (S Rept 1570) Feb. 23, 1956.

- Rejected by the Senate April 11, by a 27-59 roll-call vote. (See p. 162)

An attempt to establish a joint Congressional committee to review the activities of the Central Intelligence Agency and other foreign intelligence operations of the government was decisively defeated in the Senate April 11, 1956. The Administration opposed the move on grounds that CIA was "too sensitive" an agency to be submitted to such scrutiny.

Chief sponsor of the resolution, Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), had pushed the proposal for three years, but the Rules Committee reported it for the first time in 1956. On the final vote, 10 of Mansfield's 34 co-sponsors voted against the measure.

Failure to approve the resolution, which would not have required the President's signature, preserved the existing situation in which CIA was accountable to four subcommittees of the Senate and House Appropriations and Armed Services Committees.

Acting on the recommendation of the Hoover Commission, President Eisenhower Jan. 13 named eight private citizens to a Board of Consultants on Foreign Intelligence Activities. The Hoover Commission also had recommended that "Congress consider" creating a joint committee to exercise surveillance over foreign intelligence. (1955 Almanac, p. 371)

Background

The Central Intelligence Agency was established by the National Security Act of 1947. Its purpose was to collect and evaluate intelligence data and to coordinate, under the direction of the National Security Council, other intelligence activities of the government. (1947 Almanac, p. 457)

CIA was authorized to keep secret the names, salaries and number of its personnel, as well as its functions. The law stated that agency funds "may be expended without regard to the provisions of law and regulations relating to the expenditure of government funds; and for objects of a confidential, extraordinary or emergency nature, such expenditures (are) to be accounted for solely on the certificate of the Director." Its appropriations are never disclosed publicly and for the performance of its functions it is authorized to "receive from other government agencies such sums as may be approved by the Bureau of the Budget."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Rules and Administration.

ACTION -- Feb. 23 reported S Con Res 2 with amendments (S Rept 1570). The resolution provided for a joint Congressional committee of 12 members, six from each house, with membership limited to persons already serving on the CIA subcommittees of the Appropriations and Armed Services Committees of both houses. The joint committee would be responsible for making "continuing studies" of CIA and intelligence problems. The CIA would be required to keep the joint committee "fully and currently informed with respect to its activities." S Con Res 2 provided $250,000 for the proposed committee's first year of operation.

In its report, the Rules Committee recalled that CIA had been investigated four times by different Hoover Commission task forces which had found that "inadequacies and poor organization existed and had gone uncorrected." The report said CIA was "freed from practically every ordinary form of Congressional review.... It is difficult to legislate intelligently if there is a dearth of the information upon which Congress must rely...to protect the public welfare...."

In a minority report, Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) said that through the Armed Services and Appropriations Committees Congress already was able to get necessary information from CIA without "endangering" security. "A new joint committee will only complicate the process," he said.

Floor Action

The Senate April 11 rejected the resolution by a roll-call vote of 27-59. (For voting, see chart p. 162)

DEBATE -- April 9 -- Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- "Because of the very nature of the CIA...it is important that a joint Congressional committee be established for the purposes of making continued studies of the activities of the Agency and problems related to the gathering of intelligence affecting the national security.... Allen Dulles, Director of CIA, may make no mistakes in assessing intelligence, but he should not be the lone judge in matters which have to do with the intentions of other nations with respect to war and peace."

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- "As a member of both (the Appropriations and Armed Services) Committees, I consider I have been informed of the activities of the CIA to the extent that...is wise.... At least twice a year (CIA briefs) the Armed Services Committee and at least once a year...the Appropriations Committee."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- No topic of government belonging to all the people...is too sensitive for the elected Representatives of a free people to handle.... What the President needs is a refresher course on the constitutional system of our country."

April 11 -- Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- "It would be more desirable to abolish the CIA and close it up, lock, stock and barrel, than to adopt any such theory as that all the Members of the Congress...are entitled to know the details of all the activities of this far-flung organization."

ADMINISTRATION OPPOSED

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- "I know that the President...and others in the executive branch...have very grave misgivings regarding the pending concurrent resolution, not only for the reason that the lives of Americans who may be seeking to obtain information which we need for the very defense of our country may be involved, but also because we have cooperative arrangements with other agencies and perhaps with friendly countries, and the slightest leakage of information regarding perhaps just one field of activity might result in the disclosure of all the agents who had been operating there, and might mean their death...."

Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.) -- The proposed committee "is not only not needed, but it would be very unwise on the part of Congress to establish it."

Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- "Congress has no right...to regulate an agency...designed solely to provide the President...with information to enable him to make decisions."

CORPORATE, EXCISE TAXES

HR 9166 -- Reported by the House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 1860) March 8, 1956.
- Passed by the House, on a 366-4 roll-call vote, March 13, (See p. 190)
- Reported by the Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 1710) March 23.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote March 26.

P.L. 458 -- Signed into law March 29.

Congress in 1956 extended until April 1, 1957, the existing corporate income tax rate and certain excise tax rates scheduled for reduction April 1, 1956. The President approved the law March 29, only three days before the tax rates automatically would have been reduced had Congress failed to act. Estimated losses in revenue had the rate reductions taken place totalled over $3 billion.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 9166, the Tax Rate Extension Act of 1956:

Extended for one year the existing 52 percent corporate income tax rate (30 percent normal tax and 22 percent surtax on income above $25,000); tax of corporations whose taxable years overlap April 1, 1957, when the normal tax rate would drop to 25 percent, would be prorated under Section 21 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Extended for one year existing excise tax rates on distilled spirits, beer, wine, cigarettes, gasoline, automobiles, trucks and buses, automobile parts and accessories and diesel and special motor fuel. (Under the Highway Revenue Act, Congress later raised gasoline, diesel and special motor fuel taxes to 3 cents a gallon and the manufacturer's tax on trucks, buses and truck trailers to 10 percent. See p. 398)

Postponed for one year "floor-stock refunds" or tax credits due to take effect April 1, 1956, on stocks of tax-paid products.

Extended for one year the existing "drawback" or tax refund on distilled spirits used in the manufacture of products unfit for beverage purposes, such as medicines and food products.

Background

Rates of the corporate income tax and certain excise taxes were scheduled for reduction on April 1, 1956, unless extended by Congress. The rates had been set in the Revenue Act of 1951 and extended in 1954 and 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 419)

Corporate income taxes, currently 52 percent, would have dropped to 47 percent through a reduction in the normal tax rate from 30 to 25 percent. Existing taxes on liquor, gasoline, special motor fuels, cigarettes and automobiles would have been substantially reduced.

Losses in revenue resulting from the reductions, calculated on a year's return, would have been $2,020,000,000 in corporate income taxes and $1,166,000,000 in excise taxes, for a total loss of $3,186,000,000.

President Eisenhower in his budget message Jan. 16 said, "To reach a balanced budget in the fiscal year 1956 and in the fiscal year 1957 it will be necessary...to continue all the present excise taxes without any reduction and the corporation income taxes at their present rates for another year beyond April 1, 1956."

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 28 on HR 9166.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 28 -- Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey in an executive session urged continuation of existing corporate and excise rax rates in order to arrive at a balanced budget by the end of fiscal 1956.

ACTION -- The Committee March 8 unanimously reported HR 9166 (H Rept 1860). The Committee rejected a proposal by Rep. Hale Boggs (D La.) to give a $2 a barrel tax cut to small brewers.

Floor Action

The House March 13 passed the bill by a roll-call vote of 366-4. It was considered under suspension of the rules, which precluded amendment and required a two-thirds favorable vote for passage. (For voting, see chart p. 190)

DEBATE -- March 13 -- Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- "It would be unthinkable to permit a revenue loss of this magnitude (over $3 billion) at the present time.... We must at all costs prevent the resumption of an inflationary trend."

Louis C. Rabaut (D Mich.) -- "The automobile industry...is going to be seriously impaired by passage of this measure in its present form.... It is extremely difficult to get along without a car today and Congress should realistically consider removing automobiles from the luxury tax class."

Thomas A. Jenkins (R Ohio) -- Favored the bill but was "opposed in principle to the passage of any major legislative proposal without full and adequate debate."

Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.) -- "I...hope...that come another year we can relieve the little people of our country, the ordinary men and women and children, of the excise taxes that restrict them in the enjoyment of the periods of relaxation that by their hard work they have earned."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

ACTION -- March 23 reported HR 9166 without amendment (S Rept 1710).

Floor Action

The Senate March 26 passed the bill by voice vote and sent it to the White House.

DEBATE -- March 26 -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- "Enactment of the pending bill would not preclude some subsequent (legislation on) other excise taxes, like the cabaret tax, the gas incinerator tax, the tax on ironers."

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Said he would not seek action on two bills he had planned to offer as amendments, S 3128 and 3129, "designed to provide equitable readjustment of income tax rates in behalf of small corporations." He hoped for later hearings on the proposals.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- "In view of the fact that at the present time the budget is barely on an even keel... Congress has no alternative but to extend" the tax rates. He said he would press at a later date an amendment to reduce the oil and gas depletion allowance from 27.5 percent to 15 percent.

70,000 PUBLIC HOUSING UNITS IN 1956 ACT

S 3855 -- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 2005) May 15, 1956.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate May 24. (For voting on amendments, see p. 169)

HR 11742 -- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee June 15 (H Rept 2363).
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the House July 25. (For roll-call vote, see p. 224)
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate July 25.
- Conference report (H Rept 2958) agreed to July 27 by voice votes of the House and Senate.

P.L. 1020 -- Signed into law Aug. 7.

As in previous years, controversy over the Housing Act of 1956 centered on public housing provisions. The final version was largely a compromise worked out between Democratic and Republican members of the House Banking and Currency Committee after the bill originally reported out became stymied in the House Rules Committee.

The Senate-passed bill provided for 135,000 public housing units a year until the 810,000-unit goal set in 1949 was achieved; the House Committee version called for 50,000 units a year for three years plus another 10,000 units a year for housing elderly persons. The compromise version, which embodied earlier Presidential requests, called for 35,000 units a year for two years, but made federal aid contingent on "workable" slum clearance programs in local communities.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted into law, HR 11742, the Housing Act of 1956:

Extended the Federal Housing Administration property improvement loan program from Sept. 30, 1956, to Sept. 30, 1959.

Authorized the Federal Housing Commissioner to waive the requirement that a home must have been occupied for at least six months to qualify for an FHA-insured home improvement loan.

Gave the FHA Commissioner permission to increase the maximum home improvement loan from $2,500 to $3,500 and the repayment time from three to five years and raised the improvement loan ceiling for multifamily houses from $10,000 to $15,000. Interest rate for the loans would be 5 percent for the first $2,500 and 4 percent on the amount above that.

Authorized $3 billion for fiscal 1957 to continue the FHA-insurance program and liberalized its terms.

Authorized a person outside the family to co-sign an FHA-insured mortgage for a person 60 years old or more.

Allowed the FHA to insure mortgages on houses built by non-profit organizations to 90 percent of their value or $8,100 per family unit, whichever was less.

Authorized the Federal National Mortgage Assn. to lower the stock purchase requirement of banks that sold mortgages to it from 3 to 1 percent if it desired. (Banks, in order to sell their mortgages to FNMA, had had to spend 3 percent of the unpaid principal of the mortgage on FNMA stock.)

Authorized FNMA to promise to buy mortgages on houses not yet built.

Authorized the Housing and Home Finance Administrator to advance money to a municipality intent on clearing a small area of slums instead of requiring it to submit a master slum clearance plan for the whole town first.

Redefined "urban renewal project" to include both slum clearance and rehabilitation of areas.

Permitted municipalities to count the cost of schools and other public facilities constructed to serve urban renewal areas as part of their contribution to the overall project.

Allowed municipalities to consider taxes they lose on publicly held land in redevelopment areas as part of the cost of the project.

Increased the urban planning grant authorization from $5 million to $10 million.

PUBLIC HOUSING

Authorized construction of 35,000 public housing units a year for persons of low incomes for two years, providing the municipality first had a "workable program" of slum clearance approved by the HHFA Administrator.

Increased the maximum portion of annual contributions and grant funds for public housing for any one state from 10 percent to 15 percent.

Specified that single, low income elderly persons, 65 years of age or more, should get priority in admittance to public housing projects.

Authorized increasing the per room maximum for public housing by $500 when it was designed specifically for elderly persons.

Extended the entire military housing program from Sept. 30, 1956, to June 30, 1958.

Increased the FHA authorization for military housing insurance from $1.3 billion to $2.3 billion.

Required the Defense Department to buy up Wherry houses when new Capehart houses are to be built on the same base.

Authorized a $50 million revolving fund to enable the Secretary of Defense to pay for the military housing.

Directed the Public Housing Administration to transfer farm labor camps to any local public housing agency nearby.

Increased the revolving fund for college housing loans from $500 million to $750 million.

Authorized hospital construction loans under the 1951 Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act in cases where loans were denied solely because of lack of funds. It authorized $5 million annually in fiscal 1957 and 1958 for that purpose.

Extended the farm housing program for five years.

Background

The Housing Act of 1954 contained provisions which, while authorizing 35,000 public housing starts for one year, tied in approval of these starts with slum clearance and urban redevelopment programs. The result of these restrictions was a slowdown of public housing to a point where only 142 starts were made in the ten-month period following passage of the Act. (1954 Almanac, p. 198)

The Housing Amendments of 1955 authorized 45,000 public housing starts to be made before July 31, 1956. The 1955 bill eliminated the 1954 proviso that extended public housing aid only to communities having slum clearance and urban redevelopment programs. President Eisenhower signed the bill but said he had "serious objections" to some of its provisions. (1955 Almanac, p. 253) One objection he cited was elimination of the slum-clearance requirement.

1956 REQUESTS

President Eisenhower in his 1956 State of the Union message made the following housing requests:

Authorize contracts for 35,000 public housing units in fiscal 1957 and 1958 for communities participating in slum removal programs.

Assist private builders and non-profit groups to provide housing for elderly people.

Increase the Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance fund.

Liberalize the home improvement loan program.

Increase the authorization for urban planning grants.

Increase the Federal National Mortgage Association's special assistance authority.

Extend the FHA military housing program.

Support a college housing program without discouraging investment by private builders.

The President's 1956 Economic Report carried these additional requests:

Extend for two years the federal-state hospital construction program.

Authorize "exceptionally favorable terms" for federally insured mortgages for persons displaced by urban renewal and other public projects.

Permit older persons buying houses with federally insured mortgages to have third parties -- individuals or organizations -- guarantee interest and amortization payments.

Authorize FNMA to vary within wider limits its stock purchase requirement.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Housing Subcommittees of the Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees held hearings late in 1955 on housing problems. The following reports were issued by the subcommittees in 1956:

COMMITTEE -- Senate Banking and Currency, Housing Subcommittee.

ACTION -- Jan. 31 released a report (S Rept 1448) on housing stating:

"The (housing) outlook for 1956 appears less promising today than the outlook for 1955 appeared a year ago."

"More than 90 percent" of all the houses started in 1955 were single-family dwellings; the Federal Housing Administration insured 20 percent of the single-family house mortgages, the Veterans Administration 30 percent and private sources financed the remainder.

There was no evidence of significant overbuilding of houses.

Hikes in the Federal Reserve discount rate and decreased lending ordered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in 1955 were factors in reducing the amount of long term mortgage money available.

Subcommittee Chairman John Sparkman (D Ala.) in a separate statement said the report demonstrated "we are not moving forward rapidly enough to meet the long term housing needs of the nation... The economy could absorb a minimum of 1½ million new starts each year."

COMMITTEE -- House Banking and Currency, Housing Subcommittee.

ACTION -- Feb. 4 released a study on slum clearance that stated:

The FHA slum-clearance program was "hopelessly bogged in administrative bungling," resulting in some families being "forced to move to dwellings inferior to those vacated."

The "almost total lack of activity" in the program was due to "the negative attitude and philosophy" of officials concerned.

More "realistic" profits should be allowed by the FHA for investors in urban renewal construction.

Easier mortgage terms should be extended to displaced slum dwellers.

ACTION -- Feb. 9 released a report on mortgage credit that said:

"A sharp decline" in building and real estate would be experienced in 1956 unless the government relaxed credit restrictions.

The increased down payment requirement imposed in July, 1955 should be dropped.

The Federal Reserve Board should reverse its policy of discouraging "mortgage warehousing" (commercial banks floating a mortgage until the regular long term mortgage is arranged).

A ceiling should be placed on mortgage discounts to prevent "abusive and excessive discounts."

FANNIE MAE

ACTION -- May 14 released a staff study on the Federal National Mortgage Assn. stating:

Raising the interest rate on money loaned to member banks by the Federal Reserve Board would have "repercussions upon the housing industry (that) can only be unfavorable."

The Administration's optimism that 1.3 million housing starts would be made in 1956 "is completely unfounded and unwarranted."

Fannie Mae (the FNMA) mortgage prices should be kept in line "with the market prevailing in different areas" but no change in the current Fannie Mae pricing law was necessary.

Banks selling mortgages to FNMA should be required to spend 2 percent instead of 3 percent of the mortgage amount on FNMA stock.

Fannie Mae should be authorized to commit itself to buy mortgages on houses planned but not yet erected "at a price high enough to provide production support to builders and yet sufficiently below the prices offered by the Association for immediate purchase to discourage excessive sales to FNMA."

Ten percent of the National Service Life Insurance funds should be spent by Fannie Mae on buying Veterans Administration guaranteed loans in areas where GI's pay extra high charges to get the loan privileges.

Senate -- S 3855

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency, Housing Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 20-29, on housing legislation.

TESTIMONY -- March 20 -- Albert M. Cole, Housing and Home Finance Administrator, said the Administration's 1956 housing bill (S 3302) proposed 35,000 public housing starts in fiscal 1957 and 1958 because "frankly, Congress wouldn't give us any more." He said a bill (S 3158) introduced by Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) was unrealistic and would be "in direct competition" with private enterprise. Lehman's bill would authorize building of 200,000 public housing units over a three-year period, with 10 percent reserved for elderly persons, and would provide a $1 billion fund for direct government lending to finance middle income housing.

Lehman said, "In my bill I'm going much further in protecting, stimulating and encouraging private enterprise than you are in your bill."

H.R. Northrup, executive vice president of the National Retail Lumber Dealers Assn., said the public housing program should be ended. In other respects he generally supported the Administration program.

March 21 -- Assistant Secretary of Defense Roger W. Fulling supported provisions of the Administration bill which would extend and enlarge the authority to provide housing for servicemen, through the use of mortgage financing.

Owen Kane of the General Accounting Office said GAO thought the Title I home repair and improvement program should be extended, but not enlarged as it was in S 3302.

Cole said, "We are doing all we can" to break down racial segregation in the housing field, but "we haven't solved the problem -- we haven't even come close." He added: "Land is not available to the Negro and other minority groups.... They are restricted in many areas -- this is a fact known to everybody who has to do with housing." He said he saw some signs of progress in breaking down racial barriers in housing.

LONG-TERM PROGRAM NEEDED

March 26 -- Robert D. Sipprell, president of the National Assn. of Housing and Redevelopment Officials, said his group favored establishing the public housing program at an annual level of 10 percent of national housing production. "With public housing units allotted by Congress on a year-to-year basis, it is practically impossible for an authority to make commitments for a local housing project and be assured that this work will not be in vain," he said. The President should be authorized to change the percentage figure if conditions dictated it, Sipprell said. John R. Doscher, executive director of Operation Home Improvement, said the Federal Housing Administration home improvement loan program should be on a permanent basis and its ceiling for individual loans lifted from $2,500 to $3,500. He said repayment time should be extended from 36 to 60 months.

March 27 -- James W. Rouse of the Mortgage Bankers Assn. of America said the Subcommittee should consider giving the Federal Housing Administration a free hand to adjust its mortgage insurance rates according to the risk involved.

March 28 -- John W. Bates Jr. of the National Assn. of Real Estate Boards said the federal urban renewal program should be changed to require cities to enforce sanitation laws before the U.S. gave them any money. He said rehabilitation under Section 220 of the Federal Housing Administration program "can probably cure a square mile of urban neglect and deterioration for every acre dealt with by complete redevelopment." He said the federal public housing program was a "discredited one" that should not be extended.

March 29 -- Joseph B. Haverstick and Thomas P. Coogan of the National Assn. of Home Builders said the government's Federal National Mortgage Assn. should be made more flexible "to assure a stable supply of credit for residential construction."

The home builders association recommended: reducing FNMA stock purchasing requirement from 3 to 2½ percent; requiring prospective borrowers to own at least $10,000 in Fannie Mae stock; authorizing FNMA to make loans to banks with mortgages as security instead of buying the mortgages outright; authorizing FNMA to make commitments in advance to buy mortgages; increasing the amount of money FNMA could loan to four times its current amount of $1 billion; adding three private citizens to Fannie Mae's board of directors; and establishing a 12 man advisory council.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The full Committee May 15 reported a clean omnibus bill (S 3855 -- S Rept 2005) calling for 135,000 public housing units a year until the 810,000-unit goal set by the Housing Act of 1949 was realized. An amendment, offered by Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.), to substitute the Eisenhower Administration 70,000-unit public housing program spread over two years was defeated by a 10-5 vote. The reported bill also contained a new mortgage-insurance program for the FHA to aid in construction of privately financed homes for elderly families.

Floor Action

The Senate May 24 passed S 3855 by voice vote, with amendments. An attempt to substitute the Administration public housing program was defeated on a 38-41 roll-call vote. Also defeated, 32-44, was an attempt to limit federal low-rent housing aid to communities with workable slum-clearance plans. (For voting, see chart p. 169)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 3855:

Extended the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) home repair and modernization program for three years, through Sept. 30, 1959; home improvement maximum loans were raised from $2,500 to $3,500 for single-family dwellings, from $10,000 to $15,000 for multiple-family dwellings.

Authorized the FHA to write insurance on property it acquired through foreclosure or other means.

Raised the maximum FHA mortgage insurance for cooperative housing from 90 percent to 95 percent of its replacement cost providing half the cooperators were veterans.

Permitted FHA to insure $3 billion worth of mortgages in fiscal 1957.

Liberalized FHA terms for prospective home builders displaced by slum clearance projects to enable them to get 100 percent FHA insurance on a $10,000 home mortgage; repayment time for these mortgages was extended from 30 to 40 years.

Extended the 100 percent FHA insurance available to displaced persons to persons 60 years old or more and to non-profit groups and governments planning to build housing for the aged; private builders also could obtain up to 90 percent FHA insurance for housing for the elderly.

Authorized 15,000 public housing units to be constructed in each of the fiscal years 1957-61 especially for elderly persons; gave them higher priority for entry into other public housing projects.

Permitted the Federal National Mortgage Assn. (Fannie Mae) to reduce its stock purchase requirements from 3 percent to 1 percent whenever it saw fit.

Authorized the Public Housing Administration to let contracts until the 810,000 public housing units goal set in 1949 was realized; limited the maximum rate of construction for any one fiscal year to 135,000 units with the condition that the President could lower that figure to 50,000 or raise it to 200,000.

Increased the authorization for loans to colleges for housing construction from $500 million to $750 million.

Directed the Housing and Home Finance Administrator to conduct a study of overall housing needs authorizing him to spend $2.5 million over a two-year period on research projects.

Authorized $450 million for direct loans for farm housing over five years, an additional $50 million to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to pay up loans for farmers from fiscal 1957-61, and an additional $50 million over the same period for farm improvements.

Extended the 1951 Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act through fiscal 1957 by authorizing $10 million for such community construction as hospitals in fiscal 1956-57.

Extended the GI home loan program, slated to expire July 25, 1957, for an additional year.

Extended the military housing program through Sept. 30, 1959.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Extend the home loan program for one year; May 24. Voice vote.

Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- Bar military personnel from housing built under the bill if there were more than a 10 percent vacancy rate in other housing in the area; May 24. Voice.

A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- Provide government mortgage insurance for private housing built in small amounts near bases for military personnel; May 24. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) -- Raise the interest rate on federal loans to colleges from 2-3/4 percent to 3-1/8 percent; May 24. Roll-call vote, 40-41. (A motion to reconsider was tabled on a 41-39 roll call.)

John W. Bricker (R Ohio) -- Limit public housing to 35,000 units a year and make federal aid contingent upon workable slum-clearance plans in local communities (motion to reconsider was tabled); May 24. Roll call, 38-41.

Prescott Bush (R Conn.) -- Require municipalities to develop "workable" master slum-clearance plans to qualify for federal aid for low rent housing; May 24. Roll call, 32-44.

ADMINISTRATION DEFENDED

DEBATE -- May 24 -- John W. Bricker (R Ohio) -- "The 35,000 units proposed by the Administration...are the number of units of public housing which can be programed, contracted for and constructed in an orderly administrative manner. They are the number which will be occupied by those now consigned to slum living through no fault of their own."

Prescott Bush (R Conn.) -- "The requirement for a workable program is not burdensome. Communities are not expected to undertake protracted and unrealistic slum prevention planning and other activities. Rather, they are merely expected to adopt sensible long-range programs within their capabilities and suitable to their local conditions."

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- "We had a 'workable' program tied into the legislation until last year. We ran for half a year with only 213 units accounted for, when there was authorization for 35,000." To require a workable slum-clearance program "would handicap the program for which we have voted. It would virtually limit it to the metropolitan areas...."

House -- HR 11742

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- May 7 - 25, on HR 10157, introduced by Housing Subcommittee Chairman Albert Rains (D Ala.); HR 9537, introduced by Rep. William B. Widnall (R N.J.); and other bills.

TESTIMONY -- May 7 -- Housing Administrator Cole "strongly" urged enactment of HR 9537, which he said was "in accord with the program of the President."

Cole said he preferred authorizing 70,000 public housing units as provided in HR 9537 over a two-year period to the 150,000 units over three years authorized in HR 10157 because "it is better to gain acceptance for a modest and smoothly moving program than to engage in controversy over large-scale proposals which (eventually) emerge as modest stop-and-go programs which are difficult to administer.... It is my firm belief that communities undertaking public housing with the assistance of federal funds should adopt" a long-range housing development program to qualify for federal aid.

Cole favored liberalization of FHA terms to enable the agency to insure mortgages for elderly persons' housing up to 95 percent of value, but not to the 100 percent of value proposed in HR 10157. He said 100 percent insurance would end up as direct federal loans since such liberal terms could not be obtained from banks.

FHA Commissioner Norman P. Mason favored extending FHA's authority to insure property improvement loans indefinitely, as proposed in HR 9537, rather than for just two years as in HR 10157. "Making this program permanent would avoid the confusion and expense to both FHA and participating institutions which have been occasioned in the past each time (the authority) neared its expiration date," he said.

J. Stanley Baugham, president of the Federal National Mortgage Assn., said "HR 9537 contains all the changes we believe are needed." He said it "might be possible" for Fannie Mae to make commitments on how high a mortgage it would buy on houses planned but not yet constructed, as provided in HR 10157, but "such a procedure tends to draw FNMA nearer to the originating or primary market and away from its basic purpose of providing supplementary assistance to the secondary mortgage market."

James W. Follin, Urban Renewal Commissioner, said, "There is no pressing necessity for increasing the existing capital grant authorization" for urban renewal for fiscal 1957 as provided in HR 10157.

COLLEGE, GI LOANS

John C. Hazeltine, Community Facilities Commissioner, favored raising the interest rate on college loans from 2-3/4 to 3-1/8 percent, as provided in HR 9374.

He said federal loans were being made at an "artificially low level" which private lenders could not match.

May 9 -- T.F. Daley, assistant administrator for legislation in the Veterans Administration, opposed using National Service Life Insurance funds to buy VA-guaranteed mortgages, as proposed in HR 10157.

May 11 -- Ira S. Robbins, National Housing Conference chairman, said the Conference endorsed most of HR 10157 but felt it did not carry adequate provisions for low-rent and public housing.

Charles W. Stevens of the American Legion opposed using 10 percent of National Service Life Insurance funds to buy up VA-guaranteed home loans in tight money areas.

Dr. Hurst R. Anderson -- representing the Council on Education; Assn. of American Colleges; Assn. for Higher Education; National Education Assn.; American Assn. of Land Grant Colleges and State Universities -- endorsed increasing the college loan program from $500 million to $750 million as proposed in HR 10157 and opposed increasing the interest rate on federal loans to colleges.

May 14 -- Boris Shishkin, secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO housing committee, said Eisenhower Administration housing proposals neglected low income and elderly citizens. He recommended constructing 200,000 federally subsidized public housing units a year.

May 16 -- Cowles Andrus of the Mortgage Financing and Urban Housing Committee of the American Bankers Assn. opposed increasing Federal Housing Administration insurance from 80 percent to 90 percent for rental housing loans and liberalizing terms on relocation housing because it "would tend to encourage unsound credit practices." He said increasing the role of the Federal National Mortgage Assn. in mortgaging as proposed in HR 10157 would be "backward steps." Andrus also opposed investing National Service Life Insurance funds in mortgages and the special provisions for elderly persons in HR 10157, said he favored the elderly housing provisions in HR 9537.

Spokesmen for the National Assn. of Real Estate Boards advocated expanding the Federal National Mortgage Assn. to insure "a continuous and adequate supply of mortgage financing." The Association said public housing was "inherently dangerous to our free society" and should be terminated. It also opposed investing National Service Life Insurance funds in mortgages.

May 17 -- Americans for Democratic Action said guarantees against racial discrimination should be a prerequisite for federal housing aid. Edward D. Hollander, ADA national director, said the Eisenhower Administration was guilty of "scandalous" neglect of the racial problem in the federal housing program. He recommended building 200,000 low-income housing units a year.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE VIEWS

May 18 -- George W. West of Atlanta, representing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said additional public housing was not necessary because of the "tremendous surge" of private home ownership since 1940. West said public housing "fosters special privilege groups who are given subsidized housing while other people of equal or lower incomes are forced to pay taxes to provide the subsidy." He opposed federal loans to states, municipalities and colleges for housing. He said the states and municipalities should finance public works programs themselves while private investors could supply money for college housing.

May 21 -- Nels G. Severin, representing Southern California home builders, said the tight money market necessitated: investing a portion of National Service Life Insurance funds into government-backed mortgages as provided in HR 10157; reducing from 3 percent to 1 percent the amount of stock a bank would have to buy from the Federal National Mortgage Assn. to sell a mortgage to the FNMA; encouraging mortgage warehousing; reducing the fee FNMA charges banks to enable them to repurchase mortgages.

Frances Levenson, executive director of the National Committee Against Discrimination, said the federal government should not grant money for public housing units until it was guaranteed they would be open to all qualified persons, regardless of race. She recommended a minimum of 135,000 public housing units a year; liberalizing house buying aids for persons "in the economic no-man's land between public and private housing;" establishing unified relocation standards for urban renewal and public housing; reviewing periodically federal housing projects to determine if segregation were practiced.

Clarence Mitchell, Washington bureau director of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, said, "Our experience shows that the executive branch of the government does not intend to act on this problem (of discrimination in housing). Housing remains today the one commodity sold in a discriminated market."

May 24 -- Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, commander of the Strategic Air Command, said military housing should be expanded. He said SAC needed 55,000 units, but would get less than 9,500 started before the existing housing legislation expired in September.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee June 15 reported a clean omnibus bill (HR 11742 -- H Rept 2363) calling for construction of 50,000 public housing units a year for three years. The bill authorized FNMA to promise builders in advance to buy mortgages on houses they wanted to construct and reduced the amount of FNMA stock a person wanting to sell a mortgage to the agency would have to buy. The bill also permitted construction over a three-year period of 30,000 public housing units for elderly persons and provided a $250 million revolving fund for direct government loans to non-profit corporations building homes for elderly persons. The Federal Housing Administration, military, college, farm and rental housing programs were continued, most of them on a more liberal basis.

The House Rules Committee June 29 voted, 6-4, to table HR 11742. The Committee acted after Rep. Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) testified that Housing Administrator Cole said the measure was "unrealistic, excessive and ill-conceived." Chairman Albert Rains (D Ala.) of the House Banking and Currency, Housing Subcommittee said the Administration charges were "completely unfounded and are deliberately attempting to deceive."

COMPROMISE REACHED

Rep. William B. Widnall (R N.J.) July 20 introduced a compromise bill (HR 12328) which had been worked out between Democratic and Republican members of the House Banking and Currency Committee. The compromise bill reduced the public housing authorization to 35,000 units a year for two years. It eliminated sections of the Committee bill providing for government loans to non-profit organizations to build housing for the elderly and authorizing use of 10 percent of the funds in the National Service Life Insurance fund for GI mortgages.

The compromise retained a Committee provision requiring the Defense Department to buy up Wherry housing when new Capehart housing was to be built on the same base. Both bills authorized a $50 million revolving fund to enable the Secretary of Defense to pay for the military housing. (The 1949 Wherry Act authorized private construction and operation of rental housing at military bases and established a revolving fund to insure the mortgages. Capehart housing, authorized in 1955, is military housing built under government contract and operated by the government. Capehart housing is FHA-insured.)

On July 21 the Rules Committee granted a closed rule (H Res 618) on the Banking Committee bill, HR 11742, allowing two hours of debate on the measure. The rule specified that only one amendment was in order: to substitute the text of Widnall's bill, HR 12328, for HR 11742 "any rule of the House to the contrary notwithstanding."

Floor Action

The House July 25 passed HR 11742 by voice vote after substituting, by a 115-24 standing vote, the text of the Widnall compromise (HR 12328) for the text of the reported bill. Previously, an attempt to amend the rule under which the bill was considered to permit an amendment to strike out all public housing provisions was defeated by a 92-299 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 224)

DEBATE -- July 25 -- Howard W. Smith (D Va.) -- "The rule is probably the most drastic gag rule that I have seen presented in my time here in the House.... It prohibits the offering of any amendment on the original bill and then it prohibits the offering of any amendment on the substitute bill."

Leo E. Allen (R Ill.) -- "I am convinced if we do not have this bill (HR 12328) here before us, there probably would be no bill. That would be unfortunate because FHA-insured loans and other good features of the bill expire Sept. 30, 1956."

Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) -- "The Senate bill, I think,...was the worst, although most comprehensive, housing bill that was ever passed. It was a worse type of bill than even the bill the House committee reported out, if that were possible."

Albert Rains (D Ala.) -- Listed "three outstanding faults with the Widnall bill" (HR 12328): it did not provide "real true helps for housing for the elderly," did not earmark funds in the National Service Life Insurance fund for the GI home loan program and did not provide enough public housing.

Senate Action -- HR 11742

The Senate July 25, by voice vote, substituted an amended text of its own bill (S 3855) for the one passed by the House.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- Amend the Senate bill to provide 35,000 public housing units a year for two years; July 25. Standing vote.

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- Reduce the amount of military housing mortgages the government can insure from $3 million to $2.3 million up to Dec. 31, 1957; July 25. Voice.

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Substitute the text of S 3855 for HR 11742; July 25. Voice.

DEBATE -- July 25 -- Fulbright -- "If Senators desire to uphold the right and dignity of the body in which they serve, they should vote to ask the House for a conference on this legislation."

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- Requiring the Defense Department to buy Wherry projects "seems to me to have in it some features which would almost guarantee windfall profits...which the Department of the Defense would be required to pay."

CONFERENCE ACTION

The House and Senate July 27, by voice votes, agreed to the conference report on HR 11742 (H Rept 2958). The conference report generally embodied the compromise provisions passed by the House.

Group Stands

The Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. May 4 urged Congress to deny HHFA's request for 35,000 additional public housing units in fiscal 1957. The Chamber said "federally subsidized public housing is not needed now to stimulate employment as...during the depression years ...(and) it is not necessary as a solution to housing shortages, since more than 10.5 million privately financed dwelling units have been built since World War II."

The National Housing Conference at its April 11-13 annual meeting urged Congress to resume "the public housing program of 200,000 units a year authorized by the Housing Act of 1949." The NHC also recommended establishment of a Department of Housing and Urban Affairs, with cabinet status; a return to local responsibility in housing administration; and equal opportunity for housing, regardless of "race, color, creed or national origin."

The National Association of Real Estate Boards at its annual convention Nov. 1-10, 1955 recommended liquidation of the public housing program on July 31, 1956, when the legislation would have expired; continuation of the urban renewal program, with federal assistance limited to communities with "minimum housing codes;" and Congressional investigation of public housing authorities and their "increased use" by middle income groups.

MORTGAGE CREDIT EASED

The White House Sept. 20 announced the government had taken three steps to loosen mortgage credit, and a fourth to reduce down payments for buyers of low-priced homes. According to the announcement, FNMA would reduce its stock purchase requirement from two to one percent and would also issue advance commitments to buy mortgages on housing not yet begun at 94 percent of value instead of the previous price of 92 (both moves were authorized under the new law). It was also announced that the Home Loan Bank Board would permit member savings and loan associations to borrow an amount equal to 12½ percent of their savings. The previous maximum had been 10 percent. Finally, the FHA reduced its down payment requirement from 7 to 5 percent on homes valued at $9,000 or less. Officials said about 16 percent of FHA-insured mortgages were in this category.

DEPRESSED AREAS

HR 11811 -- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 2543) June 29, 1956.

S 2663 -- Reported by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 2555) July 12.

• Passed, amended, by a 60-30 roll-call vote of the Senate July 26. (See p. 184)

The Senate completed action on distressed areas legislation July 26, one day before the 84th Congress adjourned. The House Rules Committee failed to clear a similar bill for House consideration in the last hours of the session.

The legislation passed by the Senate and reported in the House sought to establish a new Area Redevelopment Administration to provide federal assistance to industrial and rural areas subject to chronic unemployment and underemployment. The Senate version provided three revolving funds for loans: $100 million each for industrial and rural redevelopment areas and $75 million in loans for public facilities in these areas. It also authorized $50 million in grants and $4.5 million for a program of technical assistance to redevelopment areas.

President Eisenhower requested legislation to aid industrial areas with heavy unemployment in his 1956 State of the Union message and in the 1956 Economic Report. The Administration program contained no request for rural depressed areas and sought $50 million for a revolving loan fund to help finance industrial development projects in depressed areas.

Background

The principal index used in defining non-agricultural depressed areas in the United States is the Bimonthly Summary of Labor Market Developments in Major Areas, prepared by the Bureau of Employment Security, Department of Labor. This report classifies these areas according to the degree of unemployment. The current classification system, adopted in May, 1955, groups areas into six major labor supply categories, designated as Groups A through F. These reflect the level of unemployment, expressed as a percentage of the total labor force, as follows: A, less than 1.5 percent; B, 1.5-2.9 percent; C, 3.0-5.9 percent; D, 6.0-8.9 percent; E, 9.0-11.9 percent; F, 12.0 percent or more. Areas in Groups D, E, and F, are considered to have a "substantial labor surplus."

According to the Bimonthly Summary for July, 1956, 23 of the 149 major labor market areas had a substantial labor surplus, ranging upward from 6 percent of the total labor force. Three of these were in Puerto Rico. The remaining 20 were distributed through 10 states, with four each in Pennsylvania and Michigan. There were 31 areas with a substantial labor surplus in July, 1955.

In addition, the July, 1956, report listed, as having a substantial labor surplus, 60 smaller areas in 18 states. In July, 1955, there were 101 smaller areas in the substantial labor surplus category. These areas are not part of the regular classification system.

Agricultural "depressed areas" were defined in the Senate bill (S 2663) as "those rural areas in which... there exists the largest number and percentage of low-income families, and a condition of substantial and persistent underemployment."

ADMINISTRATION APPROACH

President Eisenhower, in his State of the Union message, Jan. 5, 1956, said:

"We must deal with the pockets of chronic unemployment that here and there mar the nation's general industrial prosperity. Economic changes in recent years have often been so rapid and far-reaching that areas committed to a single local resource or industrial activity have found themselves temporarily deprived of their markets and their livelihood."

The President outlined his plan to aid areas with heavy unemployment in the Economic Report, Jan. 24. He proposed establishing in the Commerce Department an Area Assistance Administration (provided with a $50 million revolving fund) which would:

"Provide technical assistance to communities or larger areas, either directly or through grants, for studying their resources and preparing practical plans for industrial development." Aid would not be limited to areas with chronic unemployment.

"Extend capital improvement loans for projects that promise to improve a community's long-run economic outlook but for which financing cannot be obtained on reasonable terms from private sources." Loans would be made jointly with state or local agencies, the federal loan would be limited to about one-quarter the cost of the project, and the state or local share should be at least 15 percent. To qualify, communities must have had an 8 percent unemployment rate for most of the preceding 24 months.

In addition, the President proposed amendments to housing laws to:

Give priority to unemployment areas in financing public facilities.

Make urban renewal benefits available for industrial redevelopment in business sections.

POLITICAL BACKGROUND

The Administration's decision to propose a major depressed areas program reflected pressure brought by a number of Republican Congressmen from districts hard hit by chronic unemployment. This pressure increased following the 1954 Congressional election, when Democrats captured some seats by stressing the unemployment problem. Following the late 1955 announcement that the Administration would present a plan, Sen. Ralph Flanders (R Vt.) commented: "The Republicans...have at least as much at stake as the Democrats in some program to aid these distressed situations. I'm sorry its political possibilities as well as its human possibilities were not recognized sooner by Republicans."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare, Labor Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- In January, February, March and April on two bills (S 2663 and S2892) to aid depressed areas suffering chronic unemployment.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 4 -- Sen. Harley M. Kilgore (D W.Va.) said Congress should take action "promptly" to alleviate "this ugly condition of continuing and extensive joblessness." He said the problem was beyond the reach of local and state government.

Reps. Thomas J. Lane (D Mass.) and Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) supported S 2663, which would authorize $100 million in loans to help build industrial plants and $100 million in grants to finance construction of public works in depressed areas.

Jan. 6 -- Sen. William A. Purtell (R Conn.) told Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), sponsor of S 2663, that if a federal program were set up in Illinois it would cost in taxes "more than your state will get out of it."

Sens. John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) and Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) endorsed S 2663.

Jan. 9 -- Sen. Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) said only "state and community industrial development programs, with such federal assistance as may be necessary," could alleviate the situation. Any federal program, he said, should be designed "to create new job opportunities."

Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) said that loans and grants for construction of public facilities should carry a non-segregation provision.

Jan. 23 -- Govs. G. Mennen Williams (D Mich.), Orville L. Freeman (D Minn.) and George M. Leader (D Pa.) backed S 2663. Leader said the problem of depressed areas required a "joint attack" by communities, states and the federal government. Williams said definition of a distressed area should be lowered to 9 percent of the labor force jobless for at least nine months, or 6 percent for at least 18 months.

Jan. 26 -- Rep. James E. Van Zandt (R Pa.) said there was need for a permanent federal program to assist the nation's economically depressed areas.

Feb. 10 -- At a Wilkes-Barre, Pa., hearing, Vice President Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers said pending depressed areas legislation was inadequate to relieve unemployment and hardship in Pennsylvania's anthracite region. He said the UMW favored legislation which would emphasize aid in the form of new industries and public works.

Feb. 24 -- In Johnston City, Ill., State Representative Paul Powell said distress in the area was caused chiefly by abandonment of coal as a fuel by industry and railroads.

Hugh White of the United Mine workers said his union favored S 2663. Maurice L. Campbell of the Benton Civic Industrial Assn. said some of the mine unemployment in the area was due to technological improvements in the mines themselves.

ADMINISTRATION VIEWS

March 20 -- Under Secretary of Labor Arthur Larson said the Administration hoped Congress would approve S 2892, introduced by Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.), rather than S 2663. Larson said he favored S 2892 because it followed more closely President Eisenhower's philosophy that "such legislation should be directed at helping communities to help themselves."

Mayor Charles P. Taft (R) of Cincinnati, chairman of the Committee for a National Trade Policy, said neither bill would provide assistance for workers who lose their jobs as a result of import competition.

March 23 -- Charles H. Slayman of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce said S 2663 "is dangerous in that the federal government is getting out of its field and into competition with private enterprise when it attempts to further attempts to promote industrial growth of selected areas or towns.... This measure will bring about a condition in which industry in one area will be taxed to support its competition in another area."

Perry M. Shoemaker of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. said: "Financial aid would not contribute to the objective of finding productive employment for the unemployed.... We look to enlightened local action as the key to meeting this problem."

March 28 -- Rep. Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio) endorsed S 2663 and criticized S 2892, which he said "shows no understanding of the social devastation which is wreaked by these chronic unemployment areas...."

Louise Stitt said: "The National Consumers League heartily endorses S 2663 because it is the first and only measure to be brought before the Congress which presents a comprehensive program to deal with the problems of depressed areas...."

The National Assn. of Manufacturers, calling S 2663 a step toward the "welfare state," said "the problem of depressed areas is a state and local responsibility."

March 29 -- George D. Riley, AFL-CIO legislative representative, said S 2663 "reflects a realistic and sufficiently comprehensive effort to launch a full-scale attack on the problem of area blight. The limited aid proposals of the Administration...are entirely inadequate and unrealistic."

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The full Committee July 12 reported S 2663 (S Rept 2555), which would authorize $225 million in federal loans for areas hard-hit economically: $100 million would be loaned to industry, $50 million to rural areas and $75 million for public facilities in depressed areas.

Sen. Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) said, in a minority report, "The extension of federal functions in the manner and to the degree proposed by S 2663 constitutes an unwarranted invasion of private rights...." Supplemental views were filed by four other Republican members of the Committee in support of many features of the Administration bill.

Floor Action

The Senate July 26 passed, by a roll-call vote of 60-30, the depressed areas bill which called for an independent Area Redevelopment Administration to handle the program. An amendment to place the proposed Administration in the Department of Commerce was defeated July 25, by a roll-call vote of 43-43. (Vice President Nixon, who can vote to break a tie, was absent when the roll call occurred. For voting, see chart p. 184)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate and sent to the House, S 2663:

Established an independent Area Redevelopment Administration to be headed by an Administrator appointed by the President.

Established a Government Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment, consisting of 12 agency heads.

Directed the Administrator to designate industrial and rural redevelopment areas meeting certain criteria.

Provided three revolving funds for loans: $100 million each for industrial and rural redevelopment areas and $75 million for loans for public facilities.

Authorized $50 million in grants to such areas.

Authorized $4.5 million for a program of technical assistance to redevelopment areas.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.), two amendments considered en bloc -- Raise from $50 million to $100 million the loan fund for rural areas; strike from the bill provisions limiting the maximum size of rural redevelopment areas, requiring borrowers to demonstrate that their proposed operations would not lead to unemployment in other areas and stipulating that bidders in redevelopment areas receive priority consideration in government procurement programs; July 25. Voice vote.

Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) -- Bar redevelopment assistance to public service projects unless state regulatory bodies certify services being rendered are inadequate; July 25. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- Establish Area Revelopment Administration in Department of Commerce, under an Assistant Secretary of Commerce; July 25. Roll call, 43-43.

Ralph E. Flanders (R Vt.) -- Require participation of private lenders in redevelopment loans when available; July 25. Voice.

DEBATE -- July 25 -- John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) -- "A national policy...is long overdue. These communities cannot escape from the economic doldrums unless some federal aid is extended to them."

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "The agency to do the job is an independent agency, where there is some imagination, where there is some perspective, where there is some drive."

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- "I believe we will regret this sort of legislation.... All we do is to take from one section of the country and give to another...."

July 26 -- Smith -- "The provisions we had all agreed upon to protect workers in highly industrialized areas were deleted by the acceptance of the Fulbright amendment. My enthusiasm...is further decreased by the unwillingness...to accept my amendment and the guaranty-loan amendment.... In the light of these conditions I feel it is necessary to oppose the bill."

Kennedy -- "This is the best bill we can have passed at this session."

House

COMMITTEE -- House Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- April 11-26 on a bill (HR 8555) to assist depressed areas.

TESTIMONY -- April 23 -- Solomon Barkin, research director of the Textile Workers Union of America (AFL-CIO), said HR 8555 represented "cynical gestures" by the Administration. "The continued emphasis on local affairs reflects an inadequate grasp of the difficulties and the size of the problem," he said. He endorsed S 2663.

April 24 -- President Perry M. Shoemaker of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Co., representing the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., said HR 8555 "would not contribute to a sound revival" for depressed areas.

ACTION -- The Committee June 21, by a 15-8 vote, approved HR 8555 with several amendments.

June 29 -- A "clean" bill (HR 11811 -- H Rept 2543) to authorize federal aid to areas suffering large-scale unemployment or low income was reported. The bill was similar to the Senate bill (S 2663) but differed substantially from the Administration-supported bill in which loan funds were limited to $50 million.

BILL STYMIED

The House Rules Committee failed to clear the bill for House consideration.

On the last day of the session, July 27, Rep. Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) said "the failure of the Administration and the Republican leadership of the House to agree by unanimous consent to permit the aid to distressed areas bill to be called up...prevented the passage...of that bill.... Department of Commerce spokesmen and the Republican leadership...refused even to agree to consider the Administration bill as proposed by the President....it is a crying shame that the Administration leadership, who were 100 percent against this bill, once more rejected a direct request from their own President...."

EISENHOWER COMMENTS

At President Eisenhower's Aug. 1 press conference, a reporter mentioned that the Senate had passed a bill to aid distressed areas but:

"In the House, the Commerce Department representatives and the Minority Leader were charged with failure to agree to bring such legislation to the floor of the House by unanimous consent. Has the Republican leadership explained to you their refusal to back such legislation?"

The President answered: "No. You are telling me something now that I didn't know. As a matter of fact, it is one piece of legislation I was disappointed was not passed, and I don't know the reason lying behind it."

In a campaign speech at Lexington, Ky., Oct. 1, Mr. Eisenhower said his proposals "for financial and technical aid to areas suffering chronic local unemployment...were sidetracked by the opposition in Congress." He said he would renew his request in 1957, if re-elected.

DEFENSE PRODUCTION

HR 9852 -- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee March 29 (H Rept 1983).

- Passed by the House, amended, May 31, by voice vote.
- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee, amended, June 14 (S Rept 2237).
- Passed by the Senate, amended, June 22, by voice vote. (For roll-call votes, see p. 172)
- Conference report (H Rept 2486) agreed to by voice vote in the Senate June 27; by a 200-197 roll call in the House June 28. (See p. 210)

P.L. 632 -- Signed into law June 29.

Congress in 1956 extended the Defense Production Act of 1950 for two years and added a controversial new provision directing government agencies to promote the principle of geographical dispersal of industry in the interest of national defense.

The conference report on HR 9852, which retained the dispersal amendment added by the Senate, was accepted in the House by a three-vote margin over the vigorous protests of Members who feared the provision would be used to the disadvantage of existing industrial centers.

Backers of the amendment said it would give Congressional approval to an "existing policy" aimed at insuring the survival of the nation in the event of an enemy attack.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, HR 9852:

Extended the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, to June 30, 1958.

Extended authority for purchase of strategic materials to June 30, 1965.

Required the Secretary of Commerce to study, in consultation with the Joint Committee on Defense Production, the supply and marketing of nickel and to file an interim report by Aug. 15, 1956, and a final report by Dec. 31, 1956.

Declared it to be the policy of Congress to encourage the geographical dispersal of U.S. industrial facilities in the interest of national defense and to discourage concentration of facilities within areas vulnerable to enemy attack.

Directed each government agency, when practical and consistent with existing law and a sound economy, to apply the dispersal principle in the construction of government-owned industrial facilities, in giving financial aid for construction or improvement of any industrial facilities and in the procurement of goods and services under the DPA "or any other act."

Specified that nothing in the dispersal provision would preclude the use of existing industrial facilities.

Provided that the expenses of the Joint Committee on Defense Production -- not to exceed $65,000 per fiscal year -- would be paid from the contingent fund of the House of Representatives (in lieu of being paid half by the Senate, half by the House).

Background

REFERENCE -- "Defense Production" (1955 Almanac, p. 472)

The Defense Production Act of 1950 (PL 774, 81st Congress), an outgrowth of the Korean conflict, was amended and extended in 1951, 1952, 1953 and 1955. The major provisions of the Act, as amended in 1955:

Authorized the government to allocate strategic materials and to require private companies and producers to give priority to defense orders and contracts.

Permitted the use of various incentives -- including loans and loan guarantees, purchase of strategic materials and subsidy payments to producers of such materials -- to expand productive capacity needed to meet defense mobilization goals.

Authorized the President to use without-compensation employees (WOC's) to carry out the purposes of the Act and to exempt them from the conflict-of-interest statutes, subject to certain restrictions.

Imposed a system of checks on the use of WOC's, including a requirement that they put on public file a statement listing their business connections and financial interests at the time of their appointment, plus follow-up reports every six months.

Authorized creation of an "Executive Reserve" -- a pool of individuals trained for government duties in the event of a national emergency, who would serve without compensation.

Authorized an exemption from the antitrust laws for private parties engaged in combined actions found to be in the public interest as contributing to the national defense (the so-called "voluntary agreements" authority).

President Eisenhower, in his 1956 State of the Union message, asked Congress to "once again extend the Defense Production Act" in order to maintain "flexibility to meet new requirements." The U.S. had "the facilities, materials, skills and knowledge rapidly to expand the production of things we need for our defense whenever they are required. But mobilization base requirements change with changing technology and strategy," he said.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- March 13, 14 on HR 9852, to extend the Defense Production Act to June 30, 1958.

TESTIMONY -- March 13 -- Arthur S. Flemming, Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization, supported the bill.

March 14 -- Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks asked for elimination of requirements in the Act for disclosure of personal financial interests of businessmen serving in government posts without compensation. Weeks said this was an "unfair restriction" and "an invasion of their right of privacy which I find extremely difficult to justify." Weeks said his position was his "personal view" and did not represent the Eisenhower Administration opinion.

ACTION -- The Committee reported HR 9852 March 29 (H Rept 1983) with an amendment to require non-government members of the "executive reserve" to file statements of their business and financial interests at the time of their appointment, plus follow-up statements every six months. (The amendment would thus subject executive reservists to the requirements applying to WOC's.)

Eight Democrats disagreed with the report on the grounds that the Act should be extended for one year rather than two, in order to assure that "in these... perilously tense times" the defense production program would be reviewed in 1957,

Minority views filed by six Democrats criticized the President for failing to request standby authority to freeze prices, wages and rents in the event of an emergency.

Floor Action

The House passed HR 9852 by voice vote May 31, after accepting a modified version of the committee amendment on executive reservists, also by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 9852:

Extended the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, to June 30, 1958.

Extended authority for purchase of strategic materials to June 30, 1965.

Directed the Secretary of Commerce, in conjunction with the Joint Committee on Defense Production, to investigate the current supply and marketing of nickel and allocations between defense and civilian users and to make an interim report to Congress by July 15, and a final report by Dec. 31, 1956.

Required non-government members of the Executive Reserve to file statements of their business and financial interests at the time of their appointment.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- Insert provision requiring a nickel investigation; May 31. Voice vote.

Oliver P. Bolton (R Ohio) -- Specify that non-government members of the Executive Reserve were not required to file semi-annual statements listing changes in their business interests; May 31. Voice.

DEBATE -- May 31 -- Charles A. Vanik (D Ohio) -- Urged a reappraisal of the Act, saying that defense mobilizing was being used "to prop up sagging conditions in various businesses and industries."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency, Production and Stabilization Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- April 23, 25 on a bill (S 3407) to extend the Defense Production Act to June 30, 1958.

TESTIMONY -- April 23 -- Sen. Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) proposed an amendment, incorporating the provisions of S 2879, to promote the dispersal of industrial facilities in the interest of national defense.

Arthur S. Flemming, Director of ODM, endorsed the dispersal amendment. Sen. Prescott Bush (R Conn.) opposed it.

April 25 -- Testimony favoring S 3407 was heard from Secretary Sinclair Weeks; Horace B. McCoy, Deputy Administrator, Business and Defense Services Administration; Kenneth F. McClure, assistant general counsel, all of the Commerce Department.

ACTION -- The full Committee June 14 reported HR 9852 (S Rept 2237) with amendments. The Committee deleted the provision in the House version that would have required non-government members of the Executive Reserve to file statements of their financial interests at the time of their appointment. Other major committee amendments were the geographical dispersal provision and addition of language to "strengthen the President's hand" in exercising the allocation authority when defense requirements cause significant dislocation of normal distribution.

Floor Action

The Senate passed HR 9852 by voice vote June 22, following sharp debate on the geographical dispersal provision. The Senate accepted the committee amendment favoring dispersal by a roll-call vote of 48-13 after defeating, by a 20-50 roll call, a motion by Prescott Bush (R Conn.) to table the amendment. (For voting, see chart, p. 172) All other committee amendments were agreed to by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, the provisions of HR 9852 were the same as those in the final version (page 520) with the addition of the committee amendment strengthening the allocation authority, which would have:

Required the President -- when the share of any material allocated to the military caused "significant dislocation" of normal civilian distribution -- to exercise controls over the distribution of the remaining civilian supply.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- In lieu of committee amendment on geographical dispersal, insert a provision endorsing the policy and criteria set forth in Defense Mobilization Order I--19, Jan. 11, 1956 (setting forth the existing federal dispersal policy); June 22. Standing vote.

DEBATE -- June 22 -- Bush -- The dispersal amendment "is a dagger thrust at the heart of my own state and region and of every other industrial area.... Should (it)... creep into the law, pork barrel pressures would be exerted upon federal officials to use government procurement, tax favors, loans and any other forms of financial assistance as a means of developing some states to the detriment of others...." It would apply "to all industries, whether defense or non-defense, and to all government purchases of all goods and services, whether or not essential for security reasons."

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- The dispersal amendment would "give Congressional approval and emphasis to a policy which is (now) being followed, at least to some degree.... The endorsement of Congress should stiffen the backs of the administrators in applying the policy of dispersal."

Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- "I am the author of the disputed (dispersal) amendment." Dispersal is "one of the best ways we have to insure the survival of this nation in the event of an attack.... One study indicates two H-bombs could destroy one-third of our steelmaking capacity and 10 H-bombs could destroy three-fourths of our steel industry."

Kuchel -- Urged adoption of his substitute amendment. "In a matter of this extreme importance, language which has been tested by all the agencies should be adopted, instead of...substituting language which is susceptible of the widest kind of interpretation."

Conference

In the conference report on HR 9852 filed June 26 (H Rept 2486), conferees unanimously agreed to accept all Senate amendments but one. Eliminated was a provision emphasizing the President's authority to help civilian users of any commodity in seriously short supply as a result of military requirements. The report said the provision was directed primarily to the nickel situation and the investigation required under the bill would enable Congress to take such action as seemed advisable.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate June 27 agreed to the conference report, by voice vote, without opposition.

HOUSE ACTION

The House June 28 agreed to the conference report by a roll-call vote of 200-197 over the protests of Representatives who opposed the geographical dispersal provision. (For voting, see chart p. 210)

DEBATE -- Albert W. Cretella (R Conn.) -- The dispersal provision "is a back door attempt to pirate industries (to) other localities under the guise that their present location may become a delicate area in the event of war.... I do not believe there is any part of the United States which would not be vulnerable to attack (in the event of war)."

Leonor Kretzer Sullivan (D Mo.) -- "I am...afraid that in 'encouraging' dispersal of industry, the vast powers of the federal government in allocations, or in the use of tax amortization laws, can be used very definitely to the disadvantage of existing industrial centers."

Albert Rains (D Ala.) -- The dispersal amendment "does not prevent expansion of industry.... All (it) does is to say to the...taxpayers...that where we spend your dollars for defense we must spend (them) in those places where it will not be subject to destruction by atomic attack."

William A. Dawson (R Utah) -- "Why should we permit our defense industries to be concentrated in the coastal areas where they are sitting ducks for an atomic attack.... Is it not about time we cast aside our selfish interests in our various areas?"

PRICE DISCRIMINATION

HR 1840 -- Reported by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 2202) May 24.

- Passed by the House on a 394-3 roll-call vote June 11. (See p. 206)

The House passed in 1956, but the Senate failed to act on, a bill (HR 1840) to tighten antitrust law forbidding price discrimination. The bill would have limited the circumstances in which a person could defend himself against price discrimination charges by pleading he had acted in good faith to meet competition. Such a defense could not be made if the effect of the price discrimination was to "substantially lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly."

Highlighting House action was a successful discharge petition filed to get HR 11 out of the House Judiciary Committee. Two days after the petition had received the required 218 signatures and was awaiting House action, the Committee reported a bill (HR 1840) similar to HR 11. It was passed by the House June 11 but died in the Senate.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House and sent to the Senate, HR 1840:

Declared that Congress reaffirmed that the purpose of the antitrust laws in prohibiting price discriminations was to secure equality of opportunity of all persons to compete in trade or business and to preserve competition where it existed, to restore it where it was destroyed and to permit it to spring up in new fields.

Amended the Clayton Antitrust Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, to prohibit use of the "good faith" defense against a charge of price discrimination if the effect of the discrimination might be "substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly."

Background

The Robinson-Patman Act of 1936 was enacted after Congress decided that existing price discrimination laws needed strengthening. The Act was designed to ban "unfair trade practices and unlawful price discrimination," and to prohibit "restraint and monopoly for the better protection of consumers, workers, and independent producers, manufacturers, merchants, and other businessmen."

The Act contained two main provisions:

- Section 2(a) provided that "it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality."
- Section 2(b) provided that "upon proof being made at any hearing on a complaint...that there has been discrimination in price or services or facilities furnished, the burden of rebutting the prima facie case...shall be upon the person charged with a violation...and unless justification shall be affirmatively shown, the (Federal Trade) Commission is authorized to issue an order terminating the discrimination."

Section 2(b) also contained the so-called "good faith" clause, which provided that "nothing...shall prevent a seller rebutting the prima facie case thus made by showing that his lower price or the furnishing of services or facilities to any purchaser...was made in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor, or the services or facilities furnished by a competitor."

COURT RULING

It was this good faith clause on which the Supreme Court based a 1951 decision in the case of Standard Oil Co. vs. Federal Trade Commission (340 U.S. 231). In effect the Court ruled that good faith was a complete defense against price discrimination charges. In its decision, the Court said:

"Where a seller sustains the burden of proof placed upon it to establish its defense under Section 2 (b), we find no reason to destroy that defense indirectly, merely because it also appears that the beneficiaries of the seller's price reductions may derive a competitive advantage from them or may, in a natural course of events, reduce their own resale prices to their customers."

Proponents of the 1956 bill said the Court's decision opened a "loophole" in the price discrimination law.

House

Rep. Wright Patman (D Texas) March 8 filed a discharge petition to bring to the House floor his bill (HR 11) to amend the Robinson-Patman Act. By May 21 the petition had received the required 218 signatures.

Technically, the petition would discharge from the Rules Committee a resolution (H Res 414) providing for House consideration of HR 11, which had been in the Judiciary Committee since Patman introduced it, Jan. 5, 1955. Under House rules, the first date on which the House could debate the discharge motion would be June 11.

Patman's petition was the first to receive the requisite number of signatures since a 1954 discharge petition on a postal workers' pay raise bill that died in the Senate. (1954 Almanac, p. 398) Of 30 petitions since 1910, when the procedure originated, only one resulted in a law being passed -- the 1938 wage and hour law.

BILL REPORTED

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary.

ACTION -- May 24 reported a bill almost identical to HR 11 (HR 1840 -- H Rept 2202), introduced by Byron G. Rogers (D Colo.). The only difference between it and HR 11 was that HR 1840 omitted a declaration of policy before the enacting clause. Each bill would prohibit a defendant in a price discrimination proceeding from using the "good faith" defense if the effect of the price discrimination was to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly.

Floor Action

The House June 11 passed HR 1840 by a 394-3 roll-call vote, after amending it to include HR 11's declaration of policy. (For voting, see chart, p. 206)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Wright Patman (D Texas) -- Insert statement of policy; June 11. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- June 11 -- Controversy centered on the question of whether the bill would completely eliminate the "good faith" defense in price discrimination proceedings. Several Representatives said the legislation was "confusing" and that its meaning was not clear. In response to questions, Patman said the bill would have no effect on freight absorption or delivered price practices.

Laurence Curtis (R Mass.) -- "The present bill knocks out (the) defense of good faith entirely. It says that good faith shall be a defense unless the charge is that there is a substantial lessening of competition. A case never comes up at all unless there is (such) a question."

Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) -- "When the effect may be to substantially lessen competition in a given area, then good faith is not a defense under the bill. Good faith may still be applicable as a defense where the injury is to an individual competitor but not to the vigor of competition.... This bill has many hidden meanings; it presents many problems.... There are many things in (it) which may take many Supreme Court decisions to clarify.... However,... in view of (its) importance in protecting the economy against discriminations, particularly the small business segment, I shall vote for the bill."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

ACTION -- July 27 reported a bill (HR 9424 -- H Rept 2817) on corporate mergers and price discrimination. The text of a bill introduced by Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- S 11, identical to Patman's bill, HR 11 -- was included as section 3 of the reported bill, with an added provision that nothing in the bill should be interpreted as making it illegal for the seller to absorb freight charges to meet competition.

On the Senate floor late July 27, just before the 84th Congress adjourned, Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) and Kefauver sought unanimous consent for consideration of the price discrimination section of HR 9424. Objection by John W. Bricker (R Ohio) blocked action on O'Mahoney's motion.

Group Stands

Favoring the bills to strengthen price discrimination law were small business groups. Opposed were oil, steel and railroad interests.

A coordinating body set up to support the Patman bill, the Anti-Monopoly Conference, comprised 12 organizations:

Cooperative League of the U.S. of America (13 million members)
International Assn. of Machinists (700,000)
Nat'l. Assn. of Independent Tire Dealers (8,000)
Nat'l. Assn. of Retail Druggists (40,000)
Nat'l Assn. of Retail Grocers (44,000)
Nat'l. Candy Wholesalers Assn. (1,700)
Nat'l. Congress of Petroleum Retailers (35,000)
Nat'l. Council of Farmers' Cooperatives (three million)
Nat'l. Farmers Union (300,000)
Nat'l. Food Brokers Assn. (1,700)
United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Assn. (2,800)
U.S. Wholesale Grocers Assn. (2,000)

(The Anti-Monopoly Conference previously had been identified as the National Council for Preservation of the Robinson-Patman Act.)

The bill also was supported by the United Auto Workers (AFL-CIO) and the National Federation of Independent Business.

GROUPS OPPOSED

Opposition was spearheaded by oil interests, including Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, National Petroleum Assn., Western Petroleum Refiners Assn. and the National Oil Jobbers Council. They were supported by the Assn. of American Railroads and the Jones-Laughlin Steel Corp.

ANTITRUST LAW

HR 9424 -- Reported by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 1889) March 15, 1956.
- Passed by the House by voice vote April 16.
- Reported by Senate Judiciary Committee, with amendments (S Rept 2817), July 27.

Despite two attempts to revise antitrust law in line with Administration requests, Congress failed to enact antitrust legislation in 1956.

A bill (HR 9424) to require large corporations planning mergers to notify the government in advance was passed by the House but failed in the Senate. Brought to the Senate floor in the final hours of the session, it was not acted on.

Both houses did act on separate bills (HR 5948, S 3911) to close what was described as a loophole in existing antitrust law by curbing bank mergers as well as other corporate mergers. House and Senate versions did not correspond, however, and had not been reconciled when Congress adjourned July 27.

PARLIAMENTARY CONFUSION

Both efforts were intertwined in a complex parliamentary situation.

The House Feb. 6 passed a bill (HR 5948) amending the Clayton Act to cover bank mergers. April 16, the House passed a bill (HR 9424) on pre-merger notification that also included the bank merger provision of HR 5948.

The Senate July 25 passed its own bank merger bill (S 3911) which differed from the House in departing from the language of the Clayton Act. Instead, it amended the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to require advance notice of mergers of insured banks and to prohibit mergers which would "unduly" (the Clayton Act said "substantially") lessen competition or tend "unduly" to create a monopoly.

The pre-merger notification bill (HR 9424) passed by the House April 16 meanwhile was held up in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Finally it was reported July 27, the last day of the session, with two other measures tacked on to it. One was the Senate bank merger bill (S 3911) passed two days earlier; the other was a bill on price discrimination (S 11). The catch-all measure, which included other substantial amendments, was brought up in the last hours of the session. Unanimous consent was sought to act on the price discrimination section, but objection was heard. (See p. 523)

Background

REFERENCES -- "Antitrust Investigations" (1955 Almanac, p. 545); "Antitrust Measures" (1955 Almanac, p. 466).

An upswing in business mergers in 1954 and 1955 led to demands both for new legislation and more active enforcement of existing statutes. Section 7 of the Clayton Act of 1914, as amended in 1950, was the chief statutory basis for government action against mergers.

Section 7 reads:

"No corporation engaged in commerce shall acquire, directly or indirectly, the whole or any part of the stock or other share capital and no corporation subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission shall acquire the whole or any part of the assets of another corporation engaged also in commerce, where in any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly."

In 1955 Congress passed two laws, at Administration request, to strengthen the government's antitrust hand. One (HR 3659 -- PL 135) boosted the maximum penalty under the Sherman Act from $5,000 to $50,000; the other (HR 4954 -- PL 137) gave the government the right to sue for actual damages suffered as the result of antitrust violations. Hearings were held on several other measures and on the report of the Attorney General's National Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws, published March 31, 1955. Several committees conducted investigations of antitrust matters.

1955 REPORT

The House Judiciary's Antitrust Subcommittee Dec. 27, 1955, issued a report on corporate and bank mergers.

The Subcommittee's Democratic majority said a rising tide of mergers was "one of the most ominous clouds on the economic horizon," called enforcement of the 1950 Celler-Kefauver Antimerger Act by the Federal Trade Commission and Department of Justice "negligible" and "a token gesture."

The Subcommittee said since 1951 over 3,000 concerns had "disappeared in this swelling merger tide;" that an estimated 500 mergers would occur in manufacturing and mining in 1955, "thus breaking all records for a quarter of a century."

The Subcommittee recommended: "a substantial increase" in appropriations to the Department of Justice and FTC specifically earmarked for merger work; premerger injunctive action by the Department of Justice when deemed necessary; assignment of merger cases to the agency best able to handle them instead of existing "first come first served" methods.

1956 REQUESTS

In his Economic Report sent to Congress Jan. 24, 1956, President Eisenhower requested the following six revisions of antitrust legislation:

- "First, all firms of significant size that are engaging in interstate commerce and plan to merge should be required to give advance notice of the proposed merger to the antitrust agencies, and to supply the information needed to assess its probable impact on competition.
- "Second, federal regulation should be extended to all mergers of banking institutions....
- "Third, federal approval should be required for the acquisition of banks by holding companies.
- "Fourth, the Clayton Act should be amended to make explicit the federal government's authority to take action in merger transactions in which either party is engaged in interstate commerce.
- "Fifth, it should also be amended so as to make the cease-and-desist orders of the Federal Trade Commission final when issued, unless appealed to the courts.
- "Sixth, when civil rather than criminal proceedings are contemplated, the Attorney General should be empowered to issue a civil investigative demand, compelling the production of documents before the filing of a complaint, and without having to invoke grand jury proceedings."

Bills covering all six requests were introduced in 1956. But neither the Administration nor Congress pressed for action on one controversial recommendation of the 1955 Attorney General's Committee -- repeal of the so-called fair-trade laws.

ANTITRUST RECORD

The antitrust record of the Eisenhower Administration rested largely in the hands of Stanley N. Barnes, who served from 1953 to 1956 as Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division. He was confirmed March 20 by the Senate as a circuit court judge.

Barnes instituted a program of pre-merger clearance under which businesses intending mergers voluntarily sought his Division's opinion on the merger's legality. Seven such proposed mergers were submitted for review in 1953, 12 in 1954 and 18 in 1955. Of the total, 21 were cleared, seven denied, the others abandoned. Clearance meant only that the Division approved the proposed merger on the basis of the facts available and did not either alter its right to proceed against a corporation if new facts emerged, or bind a succeeding Attorney General.

Barnes also began in 1955 to press in the courts selected merger cases to obtain "adequate high court interpretation" of the governing section of the Clayton Act.

In a March 1, 1956, speech before the Federal Bar Association in Chicago, Barnes called for greater public support of antitrust enforcement:

"My own feeling is that Congressional failure to enact strengthening amendments stems in large measure from the lack of any organized out-of-government pressure for strengthening antitrust.... Antitrust affects most individuals primarily as consumers. And since the consumer's interest is only infrequently represented by organized group pressure, vocal and effective popular support for strengthened antitrust is not always forthcoming...."

BANK MERGERS

House

The House Feb. 6 passed, by voice vote without amendment, a bill (HR 5948) to prohibit bank mergers achieved by acquisition of assets where the effect would be to create banking monopolies. HR 5948 had been reported (H Rept 1417) by the House Judiciary Committee July 26, 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 468)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 5948: Amended the Clayton Act to prohibit the acquisition of assets of other banks by banks, banking associations or trust companies when the effect might be substantially to lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly.

DEBATE -- Feb. 6 -- Proponents of HR 5948 said the bill would plug a loophole in existing law. The Clayton Act dealt with bank mergers achieved by stock acquisition and did not cover those in which assets were acquired.

Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) -- "The present situation is such that unless adequate precautions of the kind proposed here are taken, there is a very real possibility that banking credit will to an ever-increasing extent be dominated by small, tightly-knit groups."

Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) -- "The Federal Reserve Board and the Attorney General can keep a vigilant and discriminating eye on bank mergers only if they have the weapons at hand."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

ACTION -- July 16 reported a bill (S 3911 -- S Rept 2583) amending the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to require all insured banks to give the government prior notice of intent to merge, and barring mergers which "unduly" lessened competition or tended "unduly" to create a monopoly.

The Committee said it chose the phrase, "unduly to lessen competition," rather than the Clayton Act standard of "substantially to lessen competition," in order to give more leeway to regulating authorities. A minority report, signed by Sens. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.), said the Clayton Act test should have been retained.

Floor Action

The Senate July 25 passed S 3911 by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 3911: Required all banks insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to obtain advance approval of mergers, consolidations or assumption of liabilities. National or district banks would obtain approval from the Comptroller of the Currency, state banks which were members of the Federal Reserve System would obtain approval from the Federal Reserve Board, and non-member banks would obtain approval from the FDIC.

Directed the three banking agencies to disapprove proposed mergers if the effect would be to lessen competition unduly or tend unduly to create a monopoly.

Required the three agencies to consult with each other to maintain uniform standards and permitted, but did not require, them to request the opinion of the Attorney General.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Bar any merger which might substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly unless the Attorney General deemed it necessary to prevent the probable failure of one of the banks concerned; July 25. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- July 25 -- Douglas -- "It was not until the Celler bill (HR 9424) had passed the House and was before the Judiciary Committee of the Senate that these regulatory agencies discovered an interest in regulating bank mergers.... The only conclusion I can draw is that they wanted a softer bill."

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- "The Senate in passing the bill is merely taking action in futility. The Senate is asked to pass a bill which the House cannot consider because of the lack of time, and against which the Department of Justice has already testified saying (it) is largely a sham."

PRE-MERGER NOTICE

House

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Antitrust Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 16-23, 1956 -- on anti-merger bills (HR 6748, HR 7229 and HR 8332).

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 16 -- Rep. Wright Patman (D Texas), sponsor of HR 6748, said: The "utter failure" to stem corporate mergers was due to lack of enforcement of the Clayton Act by the Justice Department and Federal Trade Commission; incentives for mergers lie in government tax laws which favor big business and high income families; unchecked, the current merger movement "will end with a few giant corporations owning all the wealth of the country."

He recommended: reduction of the basic corporate tax rate from 30 to 22 percent; a new organization to supply funds to small and medium-sized firms for "long-term business investment." HR 6748 would require million dollar corporations to notify the Justice Department and FTC about merger intentions. It would also give the government more power to prohibit mergers.

FTC Chairman John W. Gwynne said current laws were "inadequate" to stem the "flood tide" of business mergers. He favored requiring companies with capital of more than $10 million to file merger notices.

Jan. 18 -- Chairman John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) of the Senate Small Business Committee said the "trend toward economic concentration must be halted...if we are to preserve our traditional system of fair and free competition."

Jack T. Jennings of the Cooperative League of the U.S. favored stricter merger legislation.

Jan. 20 -- T.M. Evans, Pittsburgh, Pa., manufacturer, said a graduated income tax imposed on corporations instead of the existing flat rate would "set a practical limit on the size a company may become."

Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.), a member of the Senate Judiciary. Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee, said big corporations had brought about a separation between ownership and control. He said General Motors had become "a collective economic state."

Jan. 23 -- Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes said there would be "chaos" if his Department had to review every proposed merger. He endorsed a bill (HR 8690) calling for 90-day notification of merger plans by corporations with assets exceeding $10 million.

S. Chesterfield Oppenheim, University of Michigan law professor, said the American Bar Assn. Committee on Merger Legislation was against notification requirements.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Judiciary Committee March 15 favorably reported a bill (HR 9424 -- H Rept 1889) to amend the Clayton Act to require 90 days' notice of intent to merge corporations with a total worth of more than $10 million. The bill also would permit the Federal Trade Commission, as well as the Justice Department, to seek injunctions against mergers. Two committee amendments were added to the Antitrust Subcommittee's clean bill: a civil penalty ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 for willful failure to comply with regulations and stipulation that a sale or purchase in the ordinary course of business was not subject to advance notification.

Floor Action

The House April 16 passed the pre-merger notification bill by voice vote, without amendment.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 9424 made the following amendments to the Clayton Act (15 USC, 18, 25):

Required that the acquiring corporation in a proposed merger notify the Attorney General and the appropriate federal commission or board 90 days in advance of the transaction if the combined capital structure of the parties involved exceeded $10 million.

Required that the notice include specified information to enable the government to assess the merger's probable impact on competition.

Required parties to a proposed merger to furnish, within 30 days, additional information requested by the government.

Specified that the merger could not take place until 90 days after delivery of the notification, but permitted waiver in appropriate cases.

Specified that pre-merger notification would not be necessary where a transaction was not in essence a merger or its equivalent.

Imposed a civil penalty ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 for willful failure to provide advance notification or to submit the required information.

Gave the Federal Trade Commission authority to seek a preliminary court injunction to restrain the consummation of a merger pending determination of its legality.

Prohibited mergers of banking institutions achieved by acquisition of assets where the effect would be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly (a provision included in HR 5948, passed by the House Feb. 6).

DEBATE -- April 16 -- There was no opposition to the bill. Several Representatives said the bill "did not go far enough" to halt monopolistic mergers.

Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) -- In 1955 "the number of mergers set a 25-year record and proceeded at a rate four times that of 1949.... Since 1951 over 3,000 independent concerns have disappeared through merger activity, which has played a most important part in hastening the reduction of competition...and promoting a growing concentration of economic power.... Many of these mergers occur in secret," which means that the government is unable to get any information about them.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 23-July 2, 1956, on three bills relating to business mergers (HR 9424, S 3341 and S 3424).

TESTIMONY -- May 23 -- Subcommittee Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) read a letter from Chairman J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee claiming any legislation dealing with bank mergers belonged before his group. Fulbright said he doubted his committee would act on the subject during the session.

Representatives of the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Comptroller of the Currency endorsed tighter federal controls over bank mergers.

May 24 -- Stanley N. Barnes, head of the Justice Department's Antitrust Division, said HR 9424, as passed by the House, would inhibit many desirable mergers and would seriously impair the ability of smaller business concerns with financial difficulties to work out solutions to their problems.

Rep. Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) said HR 9424 had "adequate teeth," yet placed the primary responsibility with the merging companies. He urged its support.

OBJECTIONS RAISED

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, in a letter to the Subcommittee, said HR 9424 was "too broad and inflexible." He recommended an amendment allowing companies planning to merge to get a binding advance decision on the prospective move from the government.

May 28 -- Harvey M. Crow, associate general counsel for the National Assn. of Manufacturers, said the House measure introduced "a new, novel and extremely objectionable approach to our antitrust laws."

B.F. Castle, executive vice president of the National Milk Foundation, said HR 9424 was "a road block to normal, natural business programs" and would adversely affect small milk dealers.

Russell B. Brown, general counsel of the Petroleum Assn., said HR 9424 would give government agencies "power to slow down commerce for the convenience of the administrative agencies."

May 31 -- John W. Gwynne, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, supported HR 9424 and said it might be made to cover situations where one company acquired a number of small companies over the years.

Ellsworth C. Alvord, representing the American Mining Congress, said notice of merger should be given after the details had been worked out and the plan approved by the board of directors of the companies involved, but prior to stockholder approval.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Coal Assn., in testimony prepared for the hearing, opposed the proposed legislation.

June 2 -- General Counsel Philip A. Ray of the Department of Commerce said HR 9424 was written in "broad and inflexible terms. We strongly urge that an effort be made in this legislation to distinguish mergers and acquisitions of the type that would clearly tend to have an effect upon competition...from those day-to-day transactions which have no competitive effects." Ray said HR 9424 could create "havoc" in the commercial financing field because any transfer of assets as security for loans would come within the notice and waiting period requirements. Ray said the 90-day waiting period should be cut to 30 days so as not to impose "unreasonable and unnecessary restrictions upon business activity."

George J. Burger of the National Federation of Independent Business endorsed S 3341. Burger said small business "must be protected against any and all merger actions in our economy that would tend to reduce their rightful position or permit a situation to be created where they would be a 'captive group' of the big segments in our economy."

CATCH-ALL BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Judiciary Committee July 27 reported HR 9424, substantially amended (S Rept 2817). Incorporated in the new text were two other bills: S 11, on price discrimination; and S 3911, on bank mergers.

The Senate version made the anti-merger provisions of the Clayton Act applicable to mergers where either party, instead of both parties, engaged in interstate or foreign commerce. Corporations were empowered to sue the government for a decision on the legality of a proposed merger. The 90-day waiting period was changed to 20 days with regulatory agencies having authority to extend it to 90 days, and provisions on furnishing information were altered.

The Senate bill exempted from the notification and waiting requirement transactions in which a corporation acquired not more than 15 percent or $1 million worth of another corporation's voting stock (the House version was 5 percent of any stock, and on condition that acquisition was solely for investment purposes). Other changes in exemptions and waivers from the notification requirement were also made by the Senate Committee, and its effective date was delayed.

Congress adjourned later July 27, before there was any Senate floor action on HR 9424.

VETERANS' PENSIONS

HR 7886 -- Reported by House Veterans' Affairs Committee (H Rept 2302) June 8, 1956.

- Passed by a 365-51 roll-call vote of the House June 27, with amendments. (See p. 210)

HR 7886 would have increased rates and liberalized the basis for payment of non-service-connected pensions to veterans. The Senate took no action on HR 7886, or on an identical bill (S 3436) which died in the Senate Finance Committee. Committee Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) July 26 denied he was personally holding up action on the bill. He said "the various governmental departments have not responded to the request of the Committee for their opinion either for or against this proposed legislation." Byrd said "there has been no effort to suppress or prevent consideration of the bill; but we cannot proceed to consider it until we have received the proper reports."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House and sent to the Senate HR 7886:

Presumed total disability for all World War I veterans at age 65.

Increased payments for totally disabled veterans of both World Wars and Korea from $66.15 to $75 a month and from $78.75 to $90 a month for those having reached the age of 65, providing their annual income was not more than $1,400, if unmarried, or $2,700 if married.

Provided a 10 percent pension bonus to veterans who served 30 days or more outside the continental limits of the United States.

Increased payments for totally disabled veterans requiring the aid of another person from $135 to $150 a month.

Background

HR 7886 was introduced Jan. 3 by Rep. W. J. Bryan Dorn (D S.C.) at the request of the American Legion. (For names of Congressmen who are Legion members, see p. 529)

The seven-member President's Commission on Veterans' Pensions, headed by Gen. Omar N. Bradley (ret.), April 22 recommended elimination of non-service-connected pensions except for veterans not covered by social security. The report said the cost of a general pension for all veterans would be "staggering."

President Eisenhower May 30 supported the Commission's views in a letter to Rep. William H. Ayres (R Ohio). The President said he opposed the major proposals of the Legion bill and said "our first obligation is to our war-disabled veterans (and) their widows and orphans."

Chairman Olin E. Teague (D Texas) of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee May 9 said Legion departments had received a telegram from Legion Commander J. Addington Wagner stating that the Commission report was being used as a "stalling tactic" against the Legion's bill. Teague said, "I don't object to criticism but I do object to charges that are not true."

House

COMMITTEE -- Veterans' Affairs.

ACTION -- June 8, by a 10-8 vote, ordered reported a catch-all bill (HR 7886 -- H Rept 2302) providing an $85 a month pension for veterans of World War I and II less than 65 years old and $105 for those 65 and over. The compensation would be increased by 20 percent for veterans who served 30 days or more overseas. The bill also provided increased payments to those with service-connected disabilities and to widows of veterans.

Floor Action

The House June 27 passed HR 7886 by a 365-51 roll-call vote, with amendments. (For voting, see chart p. 210) Opponents of the bill said, before amendments, that it would cost $148 billion by the year 2000. Proponents said this figure was greatly exaggerated.

William H. Ayres (R Ohio), by a point of order, struck from the bill provisions for increased compensation payments to service-disabled veterans, veterans' widows and dependents, which he felt should be passed as separate legislation. His point of order was sustained on grounds House rules granted privilege to pension bills but not to compensation bills. A motion by Ayres to recommit the amended bill was defeated by a 110-305 roll-call vote after it initially was agreed to on a 159-107 standing vote.

Before passage by the House, the bill was amended, on the initiative of its supporters, to cut down the estimated cost of its provisions.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

W.J. Bryan Dorn (D S.C.) -- Set pension bonus to veterans who served 30 days or more abroad at 10 (rather than 20) percent; June 27. Voice vote.

B.F. Sisk (D Calif.) -- Limit presumed total disability at age 65 to veterans of World War I only; June 27. Voice vote.

Dorn -- Set disability payments for all veterans at $75 a month to age 65 and $90 a month after age 65 (instead of $85 and $105, respectively); June 27. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- June 26 -- Ayres -- "We all know the President is not going to sign" this bill.

Olin E. Teague (D Texas) -- "It would be just a fraud upon the veterans" to make them think the bill could become law.

James E. Van Zandt (R Pa.), former Veterans of Foreign Wars commander-in-chief -- The program "represents nothing more than an additional cost of war." The pensions would go only to those veterans with limited incomes.

June 27 -- B. F. Sisk (D Calif.) -- His amendment -- to grant pensions at age 65 for World War I veterans only -- should satisfy critics who said "we were attempting to pass a bill and set up pensions 20 or 30 years in the future" without knowledge of conditions at that time.

Teague -- The move was "merely an attempt to get the camel's nose under the tent.... Every year from now on, we will have the World War II veterans in asking for the same thing."

Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- "A large segment of the nation's daily press" had "whipped up" opposition to the bill, basing it on high cost estimates provided by the Veterans Administration. "I am inclined to believe the estimates are high."

Group Stands

The major battle waged between the various interested groups was whether pensions should be paid to non-service-connected disabled veterans or to service-incurred disabled veterans only.

Leading the opposition to HR 7886 was the American Veterans Committee, which opposed all non-service-connected disability payments. The Disabled American Veterans Feb. 29 supported service-connected disability increases but said "if we go into a general pension plan, it is going to have to be taken away from the service-connected disabled veterans or their widows or orphans."

The American Veterans of World War II and the Korean War opposed increased payments for non-service-connected disabled. Rudolph G. Pesata, national commander of AMVETS, Feb. 29 said "the enactment of this legislation may jeopardize the entire benefit structure." He said the first obligation "is to the service-connected veteran and his dependents."

The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce also opposed HR 7886. The group March 1 said "our veterans have received from...Congress more than adequate compensation and remuneration in dollars and kind -- for the time they spent in service.... It seems preposterous that we, as veterans, should expect our federal government, when there is no service-incurred disability involved, to continue to give us pensions or other benefits placing us, in effect, in a preferred citizen category."

AMERICAN LEGION PRESSURE

Leading the fight for passage of HR 7886 was the American Legion. National Commander J. Addington Wagner Feb. 28 said "the American Legion is seeking liberalization of disability benefit laws and regulations which are already in use. We do not favor a general, or service pension. We ask a measure of security for war veterans who, by reasons of disability or unemployability, are insecure." He said "liberalization of existing pension law and regulations will make sure that the 20th century war veteran...not go down in history as the man who served his nation and, in his old age, was forgotten by the nation."

Chairman Teague of the Veterans' Affairs Committee June 9 said the bill was voted out of committee only because of "pressure" exerted by the American Legion. He said he hoped the House would defeat the bill and "teach the American Legion a lesson it won't forget."

Wagner June 11 said in reply: "Congressman Teague's prediction, we believe, will prove as erroneous and baseless as the charge he has made against his committee's members. I feel that a majority of the House membership, in considering HR 7886, will be moved by a keener concern for the welfare of disabled veterans and their dependents."

The AVC June 11, in a letter to all Members of Congress, said "we urge you not to let the Congress become the stooge of the American Legion in its current attempt to ramrod a general veterans' pension into law."

The AMVETS June 18 joined the fray in a letter to the Legion urging the withdrawal of its support of HR 7886 and asking the organization to join AMVETS in backing a compromise. AMVETS termed the bill a "costly measure" with no chance of enactment.

Cooper T. Holt, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Sept. 29 said he had received a letter from President Eisenhower declaring that men who served "in an active theatre of operations have performed an extraordinary service to this country." Holt said the letter indicated the President "has repudiated that portion of the Bradley Commission report which holds that military service is an 'ordinary' duty of citizenship that warrants no special consideration."

VETERANS' COMPENSATION

HR 12038 -- Reported by the House Veterans' Affairs Committee (H Rept 2581) July 3, 1956.

- Passed by a 391-0 roll-call vote of the House July 12. (See p. 218)

HR 12038 would have increased service-connected disability compensation and dependency allowances and benefited more than two million veterans with service-connected disabilities. The cost would be about $172 million during the first year and diminish later. The bill died in the Senate Finance Committee which also failed to act on another bill (HR 7886), passed earlier by the House, that called for increased rates for payment of non-service-connected pensions. (See Veterans' Pensions above.)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House and sent to the Senate HR 12038:

Increased by 10 percent current compensation payments that range from $17 a month for 10 percent disability to $163 a month for 90 percent disability.

Increased compensation payments for 100 percent disabled veterans from $181 to $225 a month.

Increased compensation for dependents of service-connected disabled veterans by 10 percent, ranging from $21 to $23.10 a month for a wife only, and up to $61.60 for a wife and three children.

DEFENSE CONTRACTS

HR 8710 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 1688) Jan. 30, 1956.

- Passed by a 372-2 roll-call vote of the House Feb. 20. (See p. 188)

The House Feb. 20 passed HR 8710, to amend the Armed Services Procurement Act of 1947 by repealing the Defense Department's authority, during a national emergency proclaimed by the President, to negotiate contracts let by the Army, Navy and Air Force instead of advertising for competitive bidding. The action followed a report by the Armed Services Committee that 94.19 percent, by dollar value, of all Defense Department contracts from Jan. 1, 1953, to June 30, 1955, were negotiated rather than advertised for competitive bidding.

The Senate took no action on the bill.

Background

President Truman Dec. 16, 1950, declared a national emergency following the start of the Korean War. One result of his proclamation was to invoke a section of the Armed Forces Procurement Act of 1947 that suspended the competitive bidding process for the duration of the emergency. From 1951 on, the Defense Department continued to use the authorization to negotiate contracts. The House Armed Services Committee said it became "concerned" in October, 1955, with the number of Defense Department contracts resulting from negotiation instead of competitive bidding.

House

COMMITTEE -- House Armed Services, Special Investigations Subcommittee.

ACTION -- Dec. 16, 1955 submitted to the full Committee a report on armed forces' procurement practices.

The report said in the 30-month period Jan. 1, 1953-June 30, 1955, contracts let by the Army, Navy and Air Force totalled $36,367,486,000 but only $2,111,354,000, or 5.8 percent, of that amount was given out by competitive bidding.

The Subcommittee concluded that it was "inescapable that the Departments have -- by a consistent, progressive increase in the use of an exception in the Armed Services Procurement Act -- practically scrapped the traditional system of free advertised competitive bidding. Continued use of negotiation has so permeated the (Navy) Department that it speaks to its employees of competitive advertised bidding as something 'not prohibitive.'"

The Air Force "has engaged in an almost cynical flaunting of the declared purpose of the Armed Services Procurement Act," the report continued. It added that under current procedures "neither the Congres nor the public can learn...whether it is getting the best price from the best possible potential of American industry."

Chairman Carl Vinson (D Ga.) of the full Committee said "I shall urge...Congress to do some first class overhauling of the Armed Services Procurement Act to restore more competition" in defense purchasing.

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 9 - 13, 1956, on proposed legislation (HR 7995) to have the armed forces award at least half of military contracts through competitive bidding.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 9 -- Chairman Vinson said HR 7995 would end the blanket authority for the military to negotiate contracts under the 1950 Korean war emergency proclamation.

Jan. 11 -- Assistant Army Secretary F. H. Higgins said the Army gets the benefit of competition between suppliers even when it purchases without formally advertised bids.

Deputy Assistant Defense Secretary Robert C. Lanphier Jr. said the use of blanket authority was confined, effective Jan. 1, to purchases allocated to help labor surplus and disaster areas or small business, buying of non-perishable subsistence items, contracts not over $100,000 for scientific research and development and "specific procurement programs designated by the secretary of a military establishment."

Jan. 12 -- Vinson said there was not a "scintilla of evidence of any collusion, five percenters or the like" but testimony indicated the services had dodged requirements.

Jan. 13 -- Assistant Secretary of Air Force Dudley C. Sharp said the Air Force could not buy advanced plans and complicated weapons by advertising for bids.

ACTION -- The Committee Jan. 30 reported a clean bill (HR 8710 -- H Rept 1688) that required competitive bidding on most military contracts.

Floor Action

The House Feb. 20 passed, by a 372-2 roll-call vote and sent to the Senate, the bill (HR 8710) to amend the Armed Services Procurement Act of 1947. (For voting, see chart p. 188) It was amended to permit more negotiated contracts than the Committee proposed.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 8710 would have:

Repealed the Defense Department's authority, during a national emergency proclaimed by the President, to negotiate contracts instead of advertising for competitive bidding, but retained the authority in emergencies proclaimed by Congress.

Provided that formal bidding processes were not necessary for amounts under $2,500 (instead of the existing $1,000) or for purchase of non-perishable (as well as perishable) subsistence items.

Raised from $25,000 to $100,000 the point at which the agency head was forbidden to delegate responsibility for research and development procurement.

Permitted negotiation of contracts in aid of small business, labor surplus or disaster areas, and required monthly reports to Congress on such contracts.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

William H. Bates (R Mass.) -- Authorize the Secretary of Defense to negotiate certain contracts to aid small business, labor surplus and disaster areas; Feb. 20. Standing vote, 87-68.

Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- Require Secretary of Defense to define "labor surplus areas" and "major disaster areas" and to report to Congress monthly the number and type of contracts executed thereunder; Feb. 20. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- Feb. 20 -- Debate centered on Bates' amendment, which was supported by Congressmen who said the Defense Department needed authority to negotiate contracts in distressed areas. Opponents argued that the matter should be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency for appropriate legislation.

FEDERAL OFFICIALS' PAY AND RETIREMENT

HR 7619 -- Reported by House Post Office and Civil Service Committee (H Rept 1474) July 27, 1955.

- Passed by voice vote of the House July 30, 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 366)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee (S Rept 2642) July 18, 1956.
- Passed by the Senate July 20, by voice vote with amendments.
- Conference report (H Rept 2935) agreed to July 26 by voice votes of the House and Senate.

P.L. 854 -- Signed into law July 31.

HR 7619 raised the salaries of many top government executives, made several changes in the organization of the Civil Service Commission and liberalized and increased Civil Service retirement benefits at an estimated additional cost of $310 million annually. Title I of the bill was the Federal Executive Pay Act of 1956.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 7619 fixed the following annual salaries:

$25,000 -- Cabinet officers (a $2,500 raise).

$22,500 -- Director, Bureau of the Budget; Comptroller General; Director, Office of Defense Mobilization; Under Secretary of State; Deputy Secretary of Defense.

$22,000 -- Secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force.

$21,000 -- Commissioner of Internal Revenue; Director of Central Intelligence; Director of Federal Bureau of Investigation (the bill, however, provided that the FBI Director's salary should be $22,000 as long as the office was held by "the present incumbent"); Administrators of Federal Civil Defense Administration, General Services, Housing and Home Finance Agency, Veterans' Affairs; Directors of International Cooperation Administration and United States Information Agency; Governor of Farm Credit Administration; President of Export-Import Bank of Washington; Deputy Postmaster General; Under Secretaries of Treasury, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

$20,500 -- Chairmen of Civil Aeronautics Board, U.S. Civil Service Commission, Council of Economic Advisers, Federal Communications Commission, Board of Directors of Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., Federal Maritime Board, Federal Power Commission, Board of Governors of Federal Reserve System, Federal Trade Commission, Foreign Claims Settlement Commission, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Interstate Commerce Commission, National Labor Relations Board, National Mediation Board, Railroad Retirement Board, Renegotiation Board, Securities and Exchange Commission, Subversive Activities Control Board, Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and U.S. Tariff Commission; Comptroller of Currency; Assistant Comptroller General; Deputy Administrators of FCDA and VA; Deputy Directors of Budget Bureau, CIA, ODM, USIA; Deputy Under Secretaries of State; Director of Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service; First Vice President of Export-Import Bank.

ADMINISTRATORS

$20,000 -- Administrators of Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs (State Department), Civil Aeronautics, Commodity Stabilization Service, Rural Electrification Administration, Small Business Administration, St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp., Wage and Hour and Public Contracts Division (Labor Department); U.S. Archivist; Assistant Directors of Budget Bureau; Assistant Postmasters General; departmental Assistant Secretaries; Associate Director of FBI; Chairman of Military Liaison Committee to Atomic Energy Commission (Defense Department); Communities Facilities Commissioner of HHFA; Commissioners of Federal Housing Administration, Public Housing Administration, Urban Renewal Administration; Counselor of State Department; Deputy Administrators of HHFA and GSA; Directors of Administrative Office of U.S. Courts, Bureau of Prisons, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, National Science Foundation and Selective Service; General Counsel, NLRB; Librarian of Congress; President of Federal National Mortgage Assn.; Public Printer; Special Assistant to HEW Secretary (Health and Medical Affairs); Under Secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force; members of boards and commissions (excluding chairmen).

$19,000 -- Architect of the Capitol; Assistant to Director of FBI; Commissioners of U.S. Court of Claims; Governors of Alaska, Canal Zone, Guam, Hawaii, Virgin Islands; legal advisers, solicitors or general counsels of executive or military departments (excluding Justice Department).

$18,000 -- Commissioners of Indian Claims Commission.

$17,500 -- Administrators of Agricultural Research Service (Agriculture Department), Bonneville Power Administration, Farmers' Home Administration, Soil Conservation Service (Agriculture Department); Assistant Architect of Capitol; Assistant Director of Administrative Office of U.S. Courts; Associate Director of Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service; Chief Assistant Librarian of Congress; Chief Forester of Forest Service (Agriculture Department); Chief of Staff of Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation; Commissioners of Customs, Federal Supply Service (General Services Administration), Immigration and Naturalization, Narcotics, Public Buildings Service, Public Roads, Reclamation, Social Security; Deputy Administrator of St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp.; Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue Service; Deputy Public Printer; Manager of Federal Crop Insurance Corp. (Agriculture Department).

$17,000 -- Deputy Administrators of SBA; U.S. Treasurer.

OTHER RAISES

In addition to these increases, the bill also:

Authorized the President to fix the salaries of 15 staff assistants in the Executive Office in a range of $17,500 to $22,500 per year.

Increased the salary of the Surgeon General of the U.S. Public Health Service to $20,000, the Deputy Surgeon General to $19,000 and three other medical officers of USPHS to $17,500.

Raised the ceiling on six top positions in ICA to $19,000.

Raised to $15,000 the ceiling on salaries for representatives and alternates to UNESCO.

Raised to $19,000 the salary ceilings on certain top positions under the Mutual Security Act of 1954.

Adjusted the rates of pay of civil service grades GS-17 and GS-18 to maximums of $14,835 and $16,000 respectively (from $14,620 and $14,800).

Adjusted the salaries of top positions in the Postal Field Service and Veterans' Administration.

Raised the salary range of a limited number of professional and scientific positions in the Public Health Service, Agriculture Department and other agencies to $12,500-$19,000.

CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT

Changed the factor for calculating civil service retirement annuities to 2 percent of five-year-high average salary multiplied by years of service in excess of 10, plus 1.5 percent for the first five years of service and 1.75 percent for the second five years of service.

Continued an alternate formula of 1 percent of the five-year average salary plus $25 multiplied by number of years in service.

Continued the right to optional retirement, at age 55, on reduced annuity, after 30 years of service.

Provided for optional survivorship benefits for retired employees; charged a penalty of 2.5 percent on the first $2,400 of annuity and 10 percent for survivorship benefits above that amount.

Changed the reduction factor for retirement before age 60 to 1 percent for each year between 55 and 60.

Provided disability benefits of the lesser of 40 percent of salary or the annuity which would have been earned at age 60.

Changed existing survivorship rights to make widows eligible, regardless of age, instead of at age 50, and to make dependent widowers eligible.

Increased survivorship benefits for children, but put a ceiling on the total benefits for one family.

Increased from 6 to 6.5 percent of salary the employee's contribution to the retirement fund and provided for a matching contribution by the government.

Raised the contribution for Members of Congress to 7.5 percent.

OTHER PROVISIONS

Provided for staggered, six-year terms for Civil Service Commissioners and established a line of succession to the chairmanship.

Provided that general counsels of the Post Office, Agriculture and Health, Education and Welfare Departments should be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Established the following professional and scientific positions: Defense Department, 120; National Security Agency, 25; National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, 30.

Authorized the Civil Service Commission to increase from 1,200 to 1,226 the number of positions in civil service grades GS-16,-17,-18.

Background

The House passed HR 7619 on July 30, 1955..(1955 Almanac, p. 366)

As passed by the House, the bill would have increased the pay of 237 appointed federal officials but would not have made any changes in the civil service retirement program. The Senate, on the last day of the 1955 session, deferred consideration of HR 7619 until 1956.

President Eisenhower, in his 1956 State of the Union message, requested an executive pay increase as well as "needed adjustments in the pay for the top career positions." The President said other legislation would be proposed "to effect major improvements in the civil service retirement system." (For text, see p. 45)

Senate -- S 2875

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service, Special Retirement Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 1, 8, 9 and March 13.

ACTION -- The full Committee April 18 unanimously reported a bill (S 2875 -- S Rept 1787) to liberalize civil service retirement system benefits for federal employees. According to the Committee report, the bill would "provide a sound and systematic method of pay-as-you-go financing" and correct "inequities" in existing law.

Floor Action -- S 2875

The Senate May 23 approved S 2875 by voice vote, with amendments. Earlier the Senate rejected, by a roll-call vote of 16-65, an Administration-backed amendment by William F Knowland (R Calif.) to delete a provision giving automatic survivorship coverage on the first $2,400 of an annuity. Knowland said after the defeat he would not press other Administration amendments to the bill. (For voting, see chart p. 168)

The Senate also rejected, by a roll-call vote of 36-46, an amendment to drop from the bill a provision to permit optional retirement before age 60, on reduced annuity, after 30 years of service.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 2875:

Changed the factor for calculating retirement annuities for more than five years' service from 1.5 percent to 2 percent of the average salary of the highest five-year period.

Permitted optional retirement before age 60, on reduced annuity, after 30 years of service.

Provided automatic survivorship benefits for retired employees on the first $2,400 of annuity; charged 10 percent for survivorship benefits above that amount.

Changed existing survivorship rights to make widows eligible, regardless of age, instead of at age 50, and to make dependent widowers eligible.

Increased survivorship benefits for children, but put a ceiling on the total benefits for one family.

Increased from 6 percent to 7 percent of salary the employee's contribution to the retirement fund, and provided for a matching contribution by the government.

Raised the contribution of Members of Congress to 8 percent.

Instructed the Secretary of the Treasury to invest retirement funds so as to yield "the average rate" of interest.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- Limit survivorship benefits for children with one surviving parent at $600 per year for each child, or 40 percent of deceased employee's average salary, or a total annual payment to all children of one family of $1,800; set 20 percent higher ceilings on payments to orphans; May 23. Voice vote.

Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- Stipulate that the Secretary of Treasury invest retirement funds so as to yield "the average rate" of interest rather than a required 3.5 percent; May 23. Voice.

Carlson (as modified by Johnston) -- Delete a provision to permit transfer of credits back and forth between the social security and civil service retirement systems. Voice.

Lister Hill (D Ala.) -- Broaden the definition of disabled servicemen eligible for credit under civil service retirement to include those injured "in line of duty" as well as in combat; May 23. Voice.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Increase retirement levy on salaries of Members of Congress from 7 percent to 8 percent, and raise from 60 to 62 the age at which Members might qualify for annuities; May 23. Standing.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Carlson -- Delete provision for optional retirement after 30 years' service before the age of 60; May 23. Roll-call vote, 36-46.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Restore existing law on survivorship coverage of retired persons, to require election of coverage and payment of 5 percent on first $1,500 of annuity and 10 percent on the rest; May 23. Roll call, 16-65.

BILL PRAISED

DEBATE -- May 21 -- Olin D Johnston (D S.C.) -- S 2875 was "the most progressive and important piece of employee legislation...acted upon by the Post Office and Civil Service Committee during...several decades."

May 22 -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "Additional legislation is needed to meet the needs of (already) retired employees."

May 23 -- Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- "The Civil Service Commission (says) that in the first year the bill would cost $10 million; in the fifth year $60 million; in the tenth year $150 million; and that 40 years from now, it may cost $466 million.... It is a very significant fact that this cost will not be reached until 40 years from now."

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- "Practically all areas of gainful employment except employment by the... government are covered by Old-Age and Survivors Insurance....The benefits of our present civil service retirement system, as well as the benefits provided by S 2875, accrue only to that minority of federal employees who stay in federal service.... The best method of improving the retirement...protection of federal employees is to give them the basic protection of social security."

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- "The bill is not as fair a retirement bill as some people have pictured it.... Under the formula provided in the bill, it would give most of the benefits to those who earn in excess of $5,000, and...the employees who earn $2,500 or less get absolutely no benefit whatever under the bill...."

House -- S 2875

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

ACTION -- July 21 reported S 2875 (H Rept 2854). The Committee substituted for the Senate bill a new text which permitted optional retirement at age 55 after 30 years of service; established a penalty of 3 percent on the first $2,400 of survivorship annuity for a retired employee and 10 percent on the balance; maintained employee deductions at 6 percent; set deductions for Members of Congress at 7 percent (instead of 8 percent); and set the formula for computing annuities at 1 percent plus $30 or 1.75 percent of average salary, multiplied by the years of service, whichever was higher.

No further action was taken on the bill, but some of its major provisions were added to the 1955 House-passed bill (HR 7619) in the Senate.

Senate -- HR 7619

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service, Executives' Pay Subcommittee.

HEARING -- July 5, on HR 7619.

TESTIMONY -- July 5 -- Chairman Philip Young of the Civil Service Commission, one of 40 witnesses favoring the bill, said most of the executives had received no pay increases since 1949 and added: "It is not reasonable to assume that the federal government can long continue to recruit competent people to shoulder these responsibilities, no matter how patriotic they may be, if we require unreasonable personal sacrifices on their part."

ACTION -- The full Committee July 18 reported HR 7619 (S Rept 2642), amended. The Committee substituted for the House text a new bill which included major provisions of S 2875.

Floor Action -- HR 7619

The Senate July 20 passed HR 7619 by voice vote, with amendments.

PROVISIONS -- There were only minor differences in the salary provisions of the bill as passed by the Senate and the final version. (See p. 531) Other provisions of HR 7619 as passed by the Senate:

CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT

Changed the factor for calculating civil service retirement annuities for more than five years' service from 1.5 percent to 2 percent of the average salary of the highest five-year period.

Permitted optional retirement after 30 years of service, regardless of age.

Provided optional survivorship benefits for retired employees; charged a penalty of 2.5 percent on the first $2,400 of annuity and 10 percent for survivorship benefits above that amount.

Permitted an employee to designate the portion of his earned annuity he wished to be used for survivorship benefits.

Changed existing survivorship rights to make widows eligible, regardless of age, instead of at age 50, and to make dependent widowers eligible.

Increased survivorship benefits for children, but put a ceiling on the total benefits for one family.

Increased from 6 to 7 percent of salary the employee's contribution to the retirement fund, and provided for a matching contribution by the government.

Raised the contribution for Members of Congress to 8 percent.

OTHER PROVISIONS

Provided for staggered, six-year terms for Civil Service Commissioners and established a line of succession to the chairmanship.

Provided that general counsels of the armed forces and the Agriculture, Post Office and Health, Education and Welfare Departments should be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Provided that the difference between fourth-class mail income and estimated mail costs must be more than 10 percent before the Postmaster General was required to request rate changes from the ICC.

Established the following scientific and professional positions: Defense Department, 120; National Security Agency, 25; National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, 20. (The Committee bill had provided 275, 50 and 60 respectively, as well as 10 for the Interior Department and 35 for the Commerce Department.)

Authorized the Civil Service Commission to establish the maximum number of positions in grades 16, 17, and 18 of the General Schedule (but not to exceed 329 for GS-17, 126 for GS-18 and 1,215 for all three grades combined).

Set pay for D.C. Commissioners at $17,500.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- Authorize the following professional and scientific positions: Defense Department, 120; NSA, 25; NACA, 20; July 20. Voice vote.

Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- Increase the salary of the Surgeon General of the U.S. Public Health Service to $20,000, the Deputy Surgeon General to $19,000 and three other medical officers of USPHS to $17,500; July 20. Voice.

Earle C. Clements (D Ky.) -- Delete language concerning compensation of certain employees of Congressional committees and Senate Legislative Counsel; July 20. Voice.

Clements -- Permit optional retirement after 30 years of service, regardless of age, instead of at age 55; July 20. Voice.

Clifford Case (R N.J.) -- Set pay for D.C. Commissioners at $17,500; July 20. Voice.

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- Strike provisions concerning appointment and salary of Federal Highway Administrator; July 20. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Raise classification of Administrator of Veterans' Affairs from $21,000 to $22,000; July 20. voice.

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- Set at $19,000 the salary of the Assistant to the Director of the FBI; July 20. Voice.

Bridges -- Raise classification of one assistant in the Executive Office of the President from $17,500 to $20,000; July 20. Voice.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Make salary increases retroactive to beginning of first pay period after Dec. 31, 1955; July 20. Voice.

TOO MUCH OFFICIALDOM

DEBATE -- July 20 -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- "We have been proliferating officialdom...all around. One cannot go downtown without bumping into a deputy; and he does not wear a sheriff's badge, either."

Morse -- The pay raises should be made retroactive because the Senate considered them the last night of the 1955 session but delayed action (at Morse's insistence) until 1956 so that hearings could be held.

A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- The best way to kill the bill would be to make the raises retroactive.

Conference

REPORT -- A joint Senate-House conference committee July 26 reported HR 7619 (H Rept 2935). Conferees made only minor changes in the salary provisions approved by the Senate. They changed the Senate-approved formula for computing civil service retirement annuities and deleted a provision for retirement after 30 years' service regardless of age. They raised employee deductions to 6.5 percent and deductions for Members of Congress to 7.5 percent. In most other respects Senate retirement provisions remained unchanged.

According to the report, the conference bill "contains the three essentials for financing the retirement fund on a normal cost plus interest basis.... It requires employees' contributions of 6-1/2 percent of salary and matching contributions by the departments and agencies. It directs the Civil Service Commission to submit annual estimates of appropriations necessary to finance the fund on a normal cost plus interest basis and to continue the retirement system in full force and effect."

ACTION -- The House and Senate July 26 agreed to the conference report by voice votes without debate.

Group Stands

The retirement provisions of S 2875, which were largely incorporated in HR 7619, had the support of the Government Employees' Council (AFL-CIO) and the National Federation of Federal Employees. S 2875 also had the support of the National Assn. of Letter Carriers and the National Assn. of Retired Civil Employees. The National Federation of Post Office Clerks and the National Assn. of Post Office and General Services Maintenance Employees also favored liberalization of retirement benefits.

JUDICIAL DEPENDENTS

HR 11124 -- Reported by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 2170) May 16.

• Passed by the House May 21 by a 237-52 roll-call vote. (See p. 202)

S 3410 -- Reported by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 1983) May 14.

HR 11124 -- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote July 13.

• Conference report (H Rept 2934) agreed to by voice votes in the Senate July 25 and the House July 26.

P.L. 973 -- Signed into law Aug. 3.

The bill provided annuity payments for widows and dependent children of federal judges. Although most Congressmen favored the measure, there was some opposition from those who said it would set a precedent for similar payments and was merely a "gratuity."

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, HR 11124:

Provided the following annuities:

To widows aged 50 or more -- Monthly payments based on: 1.25 percent of a deceased judge's average annual salary for judicial and/or civilian allowable service in the last five years, multiplied by the sum of the years of service as federal judge, Congressman, member of the armed forces (five-year maximum) or legislative employee (15-year maximum). To this would be added three-quarters of 1 percent of the average annual salary for the last five years multiplied by the sum of years of executive branch or other governmental service.

To widows with dependent children up to 18 years of age -- for each child $360 annually, up to a maximum of $900 annually for more than two children.

To dependent children (where there was no widow) -- an annuity of $480 each.

The bill also:

Directed that maximum pensions could not exceed 37.5 percent of the average salary.

Provided that each judge contribute 3 percent of his salary annually into a "judicial survivors' annuity fund" to make his survivors eligible for payments.

Directed that judges must elect to come under the annuity plan within six months of taking office or within six months of the bill's enactment.

Required that a judge make a five-year contribution to the fund before his widow was eligible for an annuity.

Stipulated that the widow's annuity would terminate at her death or remarriage. ("Widow" was defined as a surviving wife married to the judge for at least two years prior to his death.)

Provided annuities for living widows of judges who died prior to enactment of the legislation, and exempted them from the five-year mandatory contribution of living judges.

Background

In 1950 the American Bar Assn. said adequate provision should be made for dependents of federal judges. In 1953 the Commission on Judicial and Congressional Salaries recommended that the lack of pensions for widows and dependents of Supreme Court Justices and other federal judges "be remedied promptly." Congress in 1954 took action only on dependents of Supreme Court Justices, passing a law (PL 702, 83rd Congress) providing benefits for Justices' widows.

House

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Subcommittee No. 5.

HEARING -- Feb. 6 on several bills (HR 75, 678, 3764 and 6974) to provide annuities.

TESTIMONY -- Witnesses included: Chief Judge John Biggs Jr., Third Judicial Circuit; Robert Meyers, chief actuary, Department of Health, Education and Welfare; and Judge Eugene Worley, Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

ACTION -- The Committee May 16, reporting a clean bill (HR 11124 - H Rept 2170), said there was "a definite need to establish by statute a system whereby moderate benefits may be paid" to judicial dependents.

Floor Action

The House May 21 passed HR 11124 by a 237-52 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 202)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, the major provisions of HR 11124 were the same as those in the final version except that the House bill:

Required that a judge contribute only 1.5 percent of his salary annually to the survivors annuity fund. (The final version made it 3 percent.)

Omitted a requirement that a judge make a five-year contribution to the fund before his widow would be eligible for an annuity.

Set a maximum payment to dependent children when there was no widow at $1,200. (The final version permitted $480 for each child.)

DEBATE -- May 21 -- Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) -- Approximately 380 judges, including those retired and resigned, would be eligible for the program. Benefit payments in the first year would be approximately $280,000, with the cost gradually rising to about $850,000 a year in 25 years.

John Bell Williams (D Miss.) -- Opposed HR 11124 because "it looks to me like a gravy train for the judiciary."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- May 14 reported S 3410 (S Rept 1983), which differed from the House measure only in the provision for payment of annuities to all current widows. While the House bill covered all such widows, the Senate bill required that the deceased judges should have had a five-year minimum of judicial experience.

Floor Action

The Senate July 13 passed HR 11124 by voice vote, with amendments, and sent it to conference. The Senate eliminated annuities for widows of judges who died prior to enactment of the bill and made changes in annuity provisions.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Albert Gore (D Tenn.) -- Require a judge to contribute to the survivors fund for five years before his widow would be entitled to an annuity; July 13. Voice vote.

Gore -- Increase from 1.5 percent to 3 percent the amount of a judge's salary to be deposited in the annuity fund; July 13. Voice.

Gore -- Eliminate from the bill the annuity provided for widows of prior judges; July 13. Voice.

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Provide a flat payment of $480 annually for each dependent child, where there was no widow; July 13. Voice.

DEBATE -- July 13 -- Gore -- Regretted that his amendment eliminated annuities for widows of prior judges, but to grant these annuities would "establish a precedent that may go very far indeed."

Herman Welker (R Idaho) -- It was time "to call a halt to the idea that every time a bit of sympathy is involved we should level down upon the American taxpayer."

Dirksen -- Favored the bill because Congress should "close this one gap in the whole retirement system...."

Conference

REPORT -- House-Senate conferees July 25 filed a conference report (H Rept 2934) in which they agreed to the Senate's 3 percent figure for a judge's annual contribution and the five-year requirement; made all current widows eligible; provided for annuities when a judge had failed to make certain required deposits; compromised on allowable service requirements; and accepted the Senate's $480 annuity figure for orphan children.

ACTION -- The conference report was agreed to, without debate, by the Senate July 25 and the House July 26.

PAYMENT TO CROW INDIANS

S J Res 135-- Reported by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 1626) March 6.

- Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, March 16.

H J Res 516-- Reported by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 2068) April 26.

S J Res 135-- Passed by voice vote of the House, amended, May 7.

- Conference report (H Rept 2201) agreed to May 24 by voice vote in the Senate and a 176-126 roll-call vote in the House. (See p. 204)
- Vetoed by President Eisenhower June 7.

Calling it an "extravagant" award, President Eisenhower June 7 vetoed S J Res 135, which would have authorized a $5 million federal payment to the Crow Indians as "just compensation" for tribal land in Montana needed for construction of the Yellowtail Dam and Reservoir.

BACKGROUND -- The purpose of the resolution was to conclude a drawn-out controversy between the Crow Indian Tribe of Montana and the Department of Interior over compensation to the Indians for their consent to federal acquisition of tribal lands required for construction of the Yellowtail Dam. Construction of the dam as a unit of the Missouri River Basin multiple-purpose development project in Montana and Wyoming was authorized in 1944.

The Crow Tribal Council Jan. 11, 1956, offered to accept $5 million for the land after previously rejecting offers of a $1.5 million payment by the last two Secretaries of the Interior. Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay Feb. 27 said a $1.5 million payment would be "fair and equitable" and that the market value of the land amounted to one-thirtieth of that amount.

Floor Action

The Senate passed S J Res 135 by voice vote March 16, authorizing a $5 million payment to the Tribe. The House passed the measure May 7, by voice vote, after substituting the provisions of H J Res 516, which provided for a $1.5 million payment. In the conference report filed May 23 (H Rept 2201), House conferees agreed to the payment voted by the Senate.

HOUSE ACTION

The House May 24 agreed to the conference report on S J Res 135 by a 176-126 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 204)

DEBATE -- May 24 -- A.L. Miller (R Neb.) -- He and the other Republican member of the conference committee, John P. Saylor (R Pa.), did not sign the conference report because "there was no effort to compromise the difference of $1.5 million and $5 million between the Senate and the House." The $5 million payment was "excessive," and the vote to approve it was "political.... I understand the Indians vote in Montana." He said the bill might be vetoed.

Stewart L. Udall (D Ariz.) -- The Indians agreed to accept a $5 million payment, after rejecting lower offers. "As with any negotiated settlement, we take it -- not because we know it is right -- but simply because it is the best we can do under the circumstances and we want to go ahead with the project.... I happen to think that the settlement in this instance is fair and just."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate May 24 agreed to the conference report by voice vote, without debate, thus clearing the measure for the President.

Sen. James E. Murray (D Mont.) June 7 said there was "not an iota of truth" in a Washington, D.C. newspaper story saying that he had arranged to hold a confirmation hearing on Assistant Secretary of Interior Wesley A. D'Ewart in exchange for Presidential approval of S J Res 135. "As a result of this false charge I have no choice but to vacate the hearing that had been tentatively set (for June 19) on Mr. D'Ewart's nomination," he said. (Although a hearing was held in July, the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, of which Murray was chairman, never did act on D'Ewart's nomination, made in October, 1955. See p. 646. D'Ewart was defeated by Murray in the 1954 Montana Senatorial race.)

Veto

President Eisenhower June 7 vetoed the joint resolution because of "the extravagant nature of the award approved by Congress." The standard of payment for land taken over by the government was "just compensation", although awards larger than just compensation had been made in other cases involving Indian lands, the President said. "If the Congress determines that it wishes to provide for an extra payment in this case, it should not be done under the claim that it is just compensation." The President said he regretted that the veto might cause additional delay in proceeding with construction of the Yellowtail unit and expressed hope that Congress would approve a settlement which would permit a "speedy start on this much-needed unit."

REACTIONS

Montana's three Democrats in Congress, Sen. Mike Mansfield, Rep. Lee Metcalf and Murray, in a joint statement June 8, termed the veto "bad news for Montana ...and for western states interested in power and irrigation. The charges of 'giveaway' directed to the provisions of S J Res 135 are baseless and unfounded" and the $5 million price recommended by Congress "is based upon a sound and reasonable evaluation of a dam site," they said.

Rep. Orvin B. Fjare (R Mont.) praised the President for his "courageous veto" of S J Res 135. "Montana's citizens should commend the President for not bowing to Washington press releases which stated that he would not dare to veto the bill since the dam was in my Congressional District, where I held only a 1,608-vote margin in 1954." (In the Nov. 6 election, Fjare lost to Democrat Leroy A. Anderson, who stressed the Crow Indian veto.)

Mansfield June 11 said he and Murray did not feel the necessary votes to override the veto could be obtained.

GOVERNMENT ACCOUNTING

• Passed by the House by voice vote June 5.
S 3362 -- Reported by Senate Government Operations Committee (S Rept 2266) June 19.
HR 9593 -- Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, amended, June 20.
• Conference report (H Rept 2726) agreed to by the Senate July 17 and the House July 20, on voice votes.
P.L. 798 -- Signed into law July 25.

Congress in 1956 enacted two laws implementing some of the key recommendations of the second Hoover Commission in the field of budgeting and accounting. One bill (S 3897) set in motion a program for putting government accounts on the annual accrued expenditures basis. The second (HR 9593) simplified the method of paying claims against lapsed appropriations.

KENNEDY BILL

Congress sent to the President July 25 a bill (S 3897) amending the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 and the Budget and Accounting Procedures Act of 1950 along lines recommended by the second Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government. Stricken from the final version was what Sen. John F. Kennedy (D Mass.), the bill's sponsor, called its "heart", a provision that Congress should make annual appropriations on the accrued expenditures basis. The provision was adopted by the Senate but dropped by the House on the insistence of its Appropriations Committee.

As finally approved by both houses, the bill required the executive branch to take steps to put its accounts on an accrual basis, present budget requests to Congress on a cost-performance basis and improve other budget and accounting practices.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, S 3897 required executive agencies of the government:

To maintain their accounts as soon as practicable on an accrual basis, and to develop their requests for appropriations from cost-based budgets.

To take steps to introduce consistency in accounting and budget classifications and to synchronize accounting and budget classifications with administrative structure.

To work toward the objective of financing each operating unit, at the highest practical level, from not more than one administrative subdivision of funds.

CLAIMS BILL

Congress completed action July 20 on another bill (HR 9593) implementing accounting recommendations of the Hoover Commission. The new law simplified the method of paying claims made against lapsed appropriations. Instead of requiring review by the General Accounting Office when the delayed bills were presented, the claims could be honored directly by the agency concerned. The agency's obligated balances would pass, at the end of two fiscal years after the year in which they were available for obligation, into a special agency account from which payment could be made.

Direct savings of the new system to the General Accounting Office, which would be relieved of investigating all except questioned claims, were estimated at $600,000 a year. The legislation was passed in slightly different form by the House and Senate. The final version followed the House language in most particulars.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 9593:

Authorized government agencies to pay claims against lapsed appropriations directly, instead of requiring payment by the Treasury Department on authorization of the Comptroller General (head of the General Accounting Office).

Directed that obligated but unexpended balances of appropriations should go into a special agency account at the end of two fiscal years after the year in which they could be obligated, and that unobligated balances should revert to the Treasury.

Background

Both bills grew out of attempts to implement recommendations of the second Hoover Commission in the field of budget and accounting. The Commission June 20, 1955, released a report by its task force headed by J. Harold Stewart, head of the accounting firm of Stewart, Watts & Bollong. The task force made 25 specific recommendations which they said would save the government about $4 billion, or 8.5 percent of controllable budget expenditures. (1955 Almanac, p. 371)

President Eisenhower May 10 asked Congress (H Doc 401) to enact legislation to "support the major objectives of the Commission's recommendations" on budget and accounting.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Government Operations, Reorganization Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 20-28, 1956, on Hoover Commission recommendations relating to government budgeting, accounting and fiscal reporting programs embodied in four bills (S 3362, S 3199, S 2480 and S 2269); and June 4-6 on S 3897.

TESTIMONY -- March 20 -- On S 3362: W.J. McNeil, Assistant Secretary of Defense, said "With respect to the ...(recommendation)...that all obligations be liquidated from a single account, we should like to point out that the bill moves only part of the distance in the direction of this worthwhile objective.

"Our problem in carrying out provisions of S 3362 arises from the fact that there are very large adjustments of unliquidated obligations in the Defense Department after the end of the fiscal year."

Robert F. Keller of the GAO said: "In the event S 3362 is enacted, it is estimated that (more than) 40,000 ...cases a year, which under present law are required to be processed by the (GAO), can be paid directly by the agencies. As a result...personnel of the (GAO) now engaged in such work will be available for...more productive work."

June 4 -- Sen. Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) said S 3897 would require government agencies to disclose what money they actually had on hand instead of letting it pile up, unnoticed, under previous obligational authorizations, a provision which he said would "in effect increase Congressional control over expenditures rather than lessen it." He endorsed S 3897. Endorsement also came from Comptroller General Joseph Campbell, Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey and Director Percival F. Brundage of the Budget Bureau.

June 5 -- Dr. Robert N. Anthony, associate professor of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration; Chairman J. Harold Stewart of the Hoover Commission Task Force on Budget and Accounting; M.C. Connick of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S.; and William Jackman, president of the Investors League of New York, testified for S 3897.

June 6 -- Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) endorsed S 3897. Assistant Secretary of Defense McNeil suggested clarifying the wording regarding obligational authority but otherwise endorsed the bill. Percy Rappaport, assistant director for accounting, and William J. Armstrong, chief of the accounting group, both of the Budget Bureau, supported S 3897.

ACTION -- June 19, the Government Operations Committee reported S 3897 (S Rept 2265). It would place government accounts on an annual accrued expenditures basis and require Congress to make appropriations on that basis.

Floor Action

The Senate June 20 passed S 3897 by voice vote, without amendment. One of the bill's sponsors, John F. Kennedy (D Mass.), said its enactment would bring "the most important reforms and improvements in the government's financial structure in a decade or more."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate and sent to the House, S 3897:

Provided that Congress should appropriate money for each fiscal year on the basis of estimates of expenditures to be made or accrued during the year.

Required the executive branch to prepare its budgets on a cost-operating basis and maintain its accounts on an accrual expenditures basis.

DEBATE,-- June 19 -- John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) -- "The heart of the bill is...Section I, which provides that the Congress make its appropriations for each fiscal year upon the estimates of expenditures actually to be made or to be accrued during that fiscal year.... This feature would eliminate or substantially reduce the tremendous carryovers of unexpended balances of appropriations, presently estimated as high as $48 billion, which have plagued the Congress for many years.... Enactment of this legislation will produce substantial operating economies by placing our financial structure on a more businesslike basis where we know each fiscal year what is required, what is expended, and what we have received for the expenditures made.... Stating of appropriations on an expenditures basis will not affect the existing statutory authority of the executive departments, including the Department of Defense, to contract for or make commitments for capital expenditures in future fiscal years, provided that the existing requirement that advance approval be obtained from the Appropriations Committees...is met."

June 20 -- Kennedy -- "...more than $25 million of government expenditures in 1956 are being made from funds appropriated in previous years.... (Currently) appropriations are made upon an obligation basis which at times extends over several fiscal years in the future.... This measure offers a hope of...far greater control by the executive branch and by the Appropriations Committees...."

Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- Presented a list showing the difference between annual appropriations and annual expenditures for the past nine years (in billions):

Fiscal Year	Appropriation	Expenditure
1948	$39	$34
1949	41	40
1950	50	45
1951	84	45
1952	93	66
1953	80	74
1954	63	68
1955	57	65
1956	62	64 (estimated)

"In 1957 the President has requested appropriations totalling $66 billion and the Budget Bureau has estimated that we shall spend $66 billion. The accumulation of unexpended balances...now totals $74.6 billion.... After the original appropriation, in practice, very little legislative control is exercised over annual expenditures from multiyear appropriations."

House

COMMITTEE -- Government Operations, Executive and Legislative Reorganization Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 21-22 on HR 7209, 7338, 8236, 9402 and 11052, to amend government budget and accounting procedures to conform with recommendations of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government (Hoover Commission).

TESTIMONY -- May 21 -- Karney A. Brasfield, assistant to the Comptroller General, went over HR 9402 section by section, opposed appointment of a comptroller general in each executive agency because of the wide differences between agencies; endorsed simplification of the allotment system for funds.

The Treasury Department, in a letter, generally endorsed provisions of HR 9402 to increase Congressional and executive control over expenditures. The Department opposed putting a comptroller in each government agency and an additional study to eliminate duplicate accounting by the Treasury.

May 22 -- Percy Rappaport, assistant director of the Budget Bureau, opposed Hoover Commission Recommendation 22 to require the Budget Bureau to prepare over-all reports on the government's financial status (in addition to straight fiscal reports) on grounds adequate accounting systems for the government as a whole have not been set up. He also opposed Recommendation 2 requiring agencies to submit performance reports to the Bureau which, in turn, would consolidate them and submit them to the President each year. "We agree with the objective of this proposal but feel that adequate authority for this procedure now exists," Rappaport said. He endorsed, in principle, the proposal to base budget requests on cost instead of just asking for additional obligational authority. The cost feature was designed to pin-point budget requests by showing when and how much of previous appropriations were spent. It would show Congress how much left-over money was on hand.

The Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. said the Hoover proposals would help correct these current "serious defects" in the current budgeting system:

"The lack of dependable information on over-all costs of new federal programs and projects; lack of enough independent data on the actual need for funds requested; the fact that Congress has no control over actual expenditures once the money has been appropriated; the fact that budget presentations...reflect emphasis not on cost consciousness, but primarily on the petitioner's desire for an appropriation."

BILL AMENDED

ACTION -- July 11, the Government Operations Committee ordered reported (H Rept 2734) an amended bill (HR 11526) implementing recommendations of the Hoover Commission in budget and accounting. The House bill as amended by the Committee omitted a provision that Congress appropriate funds on an annual accrued expenditures basis. The report said the Committee heard "strong testimony" from the Chairman and ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee objecting to that provision "primarily on the ground that it would necessarily lead to contract authority for programs which extend beyond one fiscal year. It was felt that contract authority weakened Congressional control...." The Committee said the $4 billion savings estimated by the Hoover Commission if its recommendations were followed was a "myth."

Floor Action

The House July 13 passed S 3897 by voice vote, after amending it to substitute the text of the related House bill with committee amendments (HR 11526).

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House and sent to conference, S 3897:

Required the executive branch, to the extent deemed desirable and practicable by the President, to prepare its budget on a cost basis and, as soon as practicable, to maintain its accounts on an accrual basis.

Required executive agencies to take steps to introduce consistency in accounting and budget classifications and to simplify methods of subdividing funds within the agency.

DEBATE -- July 13 -- William L. Dawson (D Ill.) -- "The bill as amended would have the President's budget contain information on program costs and accomplishment and the development of cost-based budgets for the various departments and agencies.... It would also require the accounts of the departments and agencies to be maintained on an accrual basis so that if the Congress at some time in the future should decide on an accrued expenditures budget the necessary accounting foundation will have been laid.... I am sure in conference the Senate will agree with us that (the provision for appropriations on an expenditures basis) should have been dropped."

Glenard P. Lipscomb (R Calif.) -- "That the present fiscal system has serious shortcomings is rather unanimously agreed by all authorities in the field.... The starting point (for improvements) is the development of accurate, meaningful, useful fiscal data which would be generated from an adequate and efficient budget and accounting system. Until we put the fiscal operations of the government on such a system, all the desirable procedural changes in the world will have only minimum effectiveness.... (The requirement that appropriations be in terms of annual expenditures was omitted because) this would require changing the present manner of handling long lead-time programs, such as major procurement and construction contracts, primarily in the Department of Defense, and...enactment of such a measure would necessarily be better deferred until development of a basic foundation...and an ability to program and report to the Congress more effectively."

Conference

The Conference committee July 23 filed its report (H Rept 2872) on S 3897. The conferees struck out the provision in the Senate bill, omitted from the House version, that Congress should make its annual appropriations on an accrued expenditures basis. The conference version was substantially the bill as passed by the House. Three Senate conferees refused to sign the report because the appropriations provision was left out.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 23, by voice vote, without debate, agreed to the conference report.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 25 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) -- Regretted that the House conferees "felt unable to accept the heart of the bill, which would have placed our appropriations on an annual accrued expenditures basis.... That was the heart of the Hoover Commission recommendation on budgeting and accounting.... House conferees felt they could not accept the provision because of the opposition of some Members...to that reform."

Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) -- "This bill, which had so much promise of restoring to the Congress control of the public purse...is now but an empty gesture.... Any claim that this action...carried out the Hoover Commission's major recommendations...would be a deception. And to claim...substantial savings any way near approaching the ridiculous estimates...given official credence would be to deliberately mislead the American public."

GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE

For a description of the history, functions and activities of the General Accounting Office, headed since 1955 by an Eisenhower-appointee, Joseph Campbell, see the Congressional Quarterly fact sheet that follows -- "GAO Functions as Auditor for Congress."

CQ Fact Sheet — On the General Accounting Office

GAO FUNCTIONS AS AUDITOR FOR CONGRESS

A leading part in the fight for government economy has been played by the General Accounting Office, a little-known but important arm of Congress.

- What is the General Accounting Office?
- How does it operate?

History and Function

The General Accounting Office is the agency of Congress that checks on the financial transactions of the executive branch of the government. It was established by the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 as part of the legislative branch. Its duties were clarified by the Legislative Reorganization Acts of 1945 and 1949 and the Budget and Accounting Procedures Act of 1950.

GAO is designed to perform, for Congress, an independent audit of government financial transactions and to determine how well the executive agencies manage their financial affairs. It also controls expenditures by executive agencies and recommends improvements in accounting procedures to the agencies.

GAO's jurisdiction includes most, but not all, parts of the executive branch. Congress has given some offices, like the Central Intelligence Agency and the Executive Office of the President, final authority over their own expenditures. GAO audits for these agencies only if they request them. It also audits some expenditures of Congress, but final authority to approve or disapprove them is not in GAO's hands.

GAO operations fall into three broad categories:

- Development of federal accounting procedures.
- Control of expenditures, including quasi-judicial decisions on the legality of expenditures and claims.
- Audits and investigations.

Accounting Procedures

While GAO does not keep accounts for any executive agency, it has authority to prescribe principles and standards of accounting the agencies should meet. In cooperation with the Treasury Department and the Bureau of the Budget, GAO instituted in 1949 a joint program to improve accounting. A 1955 article in the Journal of Accountancy said this program "promises to work the most significant transformation in our government's financial management since the days of Alexander Hamilton."

Many agencies, including Defense, Agriculture, Justice and Health, Education and Welfare Departments, the General Services Administration and the Atomic Energy Commission have overhauled their accounting systems in accordance with joint program recommendations. Typical changes:

Use of electronic machines to process Treasury checks was recommended late in 1955: Estimated savings of $1.75-$2.25 million a year.

A new money order system was recommended to the Post Office Department in 1951. Result: Elimination of 300 million forms a year, estimated savings of $6 million annually.

Introduction of dollar control of inventories by the Army in 1953 enabled the service to reduce excess stocks of supplies by $7 million in one year and save $3 million.

After the Air Force began measuring work performance and established dollar control of inventories at its maintenance depots, it was able to reduce its fund request for fiscal 1956 by $40 million.

Control of Expenditures

Warrants -- GAO's approval warrant is required before appropriated funds may be transferred from the Treasury to an executive agency or spent by that agency. By agreeing or refusing to countersign warrants, GAO enforces the constitutional mandate that "no money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law."

Decisions -- The Comptroller General, head of GAO, is required at the request of the agency concerned to issue advance opinions on the legality of any proposed expenditure. These decisions are binding on the executive branch, but not on Congress or the courts. They afford protection to agency officers who must account for appropriated funds. The opinions often determine not only the legality of particular payments but of entire programs. In 1955, for example, GAO advised the Defense Department in an advance decision that specific authority from Congress was needed before it could lease the early-warning radar defense network to private companies for construction and operation. In fiscal 1955, GAO issued 5,909 such decisions.

Claims -- GAO has general statutory authority to settle all claims by and against the government. As with its advance decisions, GAO's findings are binding on the executive branch but may be reversed by Congress or the courts. Congress has authorized many agencies to settle their own claims and some cases go directly to the courts. But in fiscal 1955, GAO settled 183,597 general claims and an additional 55,343 transportation claims.

Audits and Investigations

- Government-Type Audits -- GAO's audit of most agencies, except government corporations, is based on the principle that an officer who handles public funds must account for them or be personally responsible for repayment. Generally, each agency has two accountable officers -- the disbursing officer, who is responsible for distribution of funds, and the certifying officer, who certifies the legality and correctness of the disbursements. They share accountability for the agency's financial transactions.

The purpose of the government-type audit by GAO is to determine the validity of expenditures and collections so that the account of the responsible fiscal officers of an agency may be settled. Control is based on its "power of disallowance;" authority to state what is lawful and unlawful in the use of public funds. GAO's finding can be overturned only by Congress or the courts.

GAO's disallowance of a payment enables the government to collect the sum improperly spent from the responsible agency official, his bondsman or the person who received the money. A Congressional committee reported in 1949: "The value of accountability for public funds has been proved in practice. The vision of personal responsibility exercises a highly deterrent effect on individuals entrusted with public monies and encourages them to prevent erroneous or illegal expenditures as well as to collect back those which have been made.... It has been mainly through the government-type audit that the General Accounting Office has collected and paid into the Treasury during the past few years hundreds of millions of dollars illegally or improperly paid out or withheld." In fiscal 1955, collections from disallowances and other audit action totaled $9,816,665.

• Commercial-Type Audits -- In auditing the operations of government corporations, such as the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Commodity Credit Corp., GAO is not permitted to exercise its power of disallowance. It can, however, report errors and discrepancies it finds to the management of the corporations for their action. It also can report to Congress what it has found about the operating efficiency and financial position of the corporations, emphasizing areas where stricter Congressional controls may be needed. By these means, GAO has been able to press money-saving ideas in corporation management.

GAO generally has opposed creation of additional government corporations. In 1955 Comptroller General Joseph Campbell testified: "The corporate form of government activity is objectionable because, for the most part, it is free from the normal safeguards set up by the Congress to maintain adequate control over the conduct of public business and the expenditure of public funds. For example, budgeting is subject to less control; broad powers are usually vested in the board of directors to take action without regard to laws generally applicable to government departments and agencies; and the expenditures of corporations, although subject to audit, are not subject to the disallowance power of the General Accounting Office.

• Transportation Accounts -- GAO also is charged with sole responsibility for auditing all the transportation payments of the government. The law requires carriers' bills to be paid by agencies when presented and only GAO is permitted to review the bills and seek refunds for overpayments. In fiscal 1955 GAO collected $34,928,507 in refunds.

• Investigations -- GAO is empowered, on its own initiative or at the request of Congress, to investigate the propriety and effectiveness with which agencies are using funds. These investigations go beyond normal audit procedures to seek out fraud and irregularity.

In fiscal 1955 GAO's 240-man investigations section reported on 445 probes, 40 of which were conducted at the request of Congress. Typical of these investigations were:

A report to the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee on widespread abuse of sick leave provisions by postal employees.

A report to the Senate Government Operations Committee on a contract for sailor hats, which touched off the public hearing that resulted in cancellation of the contract.

A national survey of the validity of parents' claims to veterans insurance benefits.

An investigation of the Deseret, Utah, Army Chemical Depot, which led to the integration of its activities with neighboring Tooele Ordinance Depot; 206 jobs were abolished with an annual saving of $1,149,000 and $13.6 million of planned construction was canceled or curtailed.

Aid to Congress

As an agency of the legislative branch, GAO works closely with Congress and particularly with the Appropriations and Government Operations Committees of both chambers. During fiscal 1955 it assigned 35 staff members to assist Congressional committees for various periods of time. In the same year it sent 4,930 reports to Congress, most of them requested by individual Members. Each year GAO prepares for the House Appropriations Committee a summary of its audits and investigations of executive agencies' operations during the previous year. This report, emphasizing GAO's criticisms of agency programs and management, is in the hands of committee members when agency officials are questioned on their appropriation requests.

Staff and Organization

Personnel -- On July 1, 1955, GAO had 5,776 employees. Half were in general auditing work and another 2,000 specialized in transportation and general claims. The number of employees had declined from a high of 14,904 in 1946.

Organization -- GAO is headed by the Comptroller General, appointed by the President for a single 15-year term and removable only with the concurrence of Congress. It has, in addition to its Washington headquarters, branches in 21 American cities and a European headquarters in Paris. From the field offices members of the investigative and audit staffs conduct studies at the sites of agencies, installations and projects.

Budget -- GAO had an appropriation of $31,981,000 for fiscal 1955 and 1956. In June Congress approved a fiscal 1957 appropriation of $34 million. Every year since 1944, GAO has collected more money for the government than it spent. In fiscal 1955, collections totaled $55,247,160.

Comptroller General -- The Senate on March 18, 1955, confirmed the nomination of Joseph Campbell of New York City as Comptroller General. Campbell was a certified public accountant in private practice until 1941, when he became assistant treasurer of Columbia University. He served as treasurer and vice president of the University until July, 1953, when he was named a member of the Atomic Energy Commission. He resigned from the AEC just before his appointment to the GAO.

ATOMIC ENERGY REACTORS

S 4146 -- Reported June 29, 1956, by Joint Atomic Energy Committee (S Rept 2390).

- Passed by the Senate July 12, by a 49-40 roll-call vote. (See p. 177)

HR 12061 -- Reported June 29 by Joint Atomic Energy Committee (H Rept 2622). (Senate and House bills and reports were identical).

- Recommitted by the House to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee July 24 by a 203-191 roll call. (See p. 224)

The bill, which would have authorized $400 million for the construction of demonstration atomic reactors, was opposed by the Eisenhower Administration and by four of the five members of the Atomic Energy Commission. Opponents of the legislation said authority for the program already existed and that it was an attempt to put the government into the atomic power business. Proponents maintained the only purpose of the measure was to accelerate the development of peacetime atomic power.

PROVISIONS -- As reported by the Committee and passed by the Senate, S 4146:

Authorized and directed the Atomic Energy Commission to contract for an undesignated number of large-scale power demonstration reactors to show the practical value of facilities "for the generation of electric energy in industrial or commercial quantities;" the reactors were to be constructed at AEC production sites, energy generated to be used by AEC.

Directed the AEC to contract for smaller experimental prototype power reactors; according to the Committee report, "These facilities are expected to be located at AEC production, testing and laboratory sites, with the power absorbed at those sites."

Gave the AEC responsibility for conduct of a "vigorous program of international cooperation and assistance in the design, construction and operation of power reactors and related matters."

Directed AEC, beginning Jan. 1, 1957, to submit quarterly reports to the Joint Committee on program's progress.

Authorized appropriation of $400 million to finance the program over a five-year period.

Background

The AEC established a Reactor Development Division in 1949 and inaugurated a power reactor development program early in 1955. The Atomic Energy Act of 1954 provided the basis for greater private participation in the development program. (1954 Almanac, p. 534)

The Joint Atomic Energy Committee March 26, 1955, announced formation of a nine-member panel of citizens to study the "impact of the peacetime uses of atomic energy."

Robert McKinney, editor and publisher of the Santa Fe New Mexican and former Assistant Secretary of Interior, was named chairman. Other members of the panel: Ernest R. Breech, Ford Motor Co. chairman; George R. Brown of Brown and Root Inc., Houston, Texas, engineering and construction firm; Sutherland C. Dows, Iowa Electric Light and Power Co. president; John R. Dunning, Columbia University dean of engineering; Frank M. Folsom, Radio Corporation of America president; T. Keith Glennan, Case Institute of Technology president, Cleveland, Ohio; Samuel B. Morris, Los Angeles Water and Power Department general manager; and Walter P. Reuther, AFL-CIO vice president.

The Panel on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy made its report Jan. 31, 1956. The panel urged that responsibility for developing the peacetime atom be transferred to a broad partnership of government and independent science, technology and industry. The panel recommended on atomic power:

If private industry failed to take the initiative, AEC should support a program to develop wide, competitive use of atomic energy, "even to the construction with public funds of one full-scale 'demonstration' plant of each major reactor size and type."

Atomic power should be exploited as a source of electric power "at a rate consistent with sound technological, economic and public policy considerations."

AEC should encourage more widespread contributions to the controlled thermonuclear program in the U.S.

AEC should provide sufficient information about the "feasibility of nuclear fission power" to encourage investors.

(For a detailed summary of the panel report, see p. 547)

Development Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Joint Atomic Energy.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 7-March 5, on the development, state and growth of the atomic energy industry and on the report of the Panel on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 7 -- Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission said "all but a small amount of information bearing on the peaceful uses of atomic energy" would be made available to "responsible" industrial groups and individuals by March 1. "Substantial progress was achieved during 1955 in all facets of the program to encourage and aid private enterprise in the development of peaceful uses of atomic energy at home and abroad," he said.

Feb. 8 -- Dr. W. Frank Libby of AEC estimated industry was saving $200-300 million a year by the use of isotopes, and agriculture was saving $100 million. He predicted that within 10 years American industry would save $1 billion a year through the use of isotopes as processing and quality controls. "Even if we fail to get atomic power," he said, "radioactive isotopes by themselves will pay the way of the atom."

Rep. Melvin Price (D Ill.) called for hearings "to explore what part, if any" the federal government should take in protecting future atomic power firms from "catastrophic" financial loss that might result from damage claims. (See "Nuclear Insurance," p. 546)

Feb. 15 -- Clyde T. Ellis of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn. said "the U.S. has no civilian atomic energy program worthy of the name.... Other nations, including Russia, have achieved world leadership" in the field. He called for "dynamic administration and leadership" instead of "the present inertia" at the AEC. Ellis said Congress should provide funds to cooperatives and public bodies "for the development and construction of experimental nuclear reactors...up to 50,000 kilowatts."

Tom Pickett of the National Coal Assn. said the country's best interests are not served by "unwarranted optimism" that low-cost atomic power "is on the verge of achievement."

AEC SPLIT

Feb. 23 -- AEC Commissioner Thomas E. Murray said there was an atomic power race as well as a nuclear weapons race and "the United States is certainly off to a slow start." He said the government should finance a $1 billion-a-year developmental program for five years for installation at home and abroad of atomic power reactors capable of generating two million kilowatts. Private industry could not assume the risk in this developmental phase, Murray said, but probably could take over by 1960. The goal for a second five-year phase should be 10 million kilowatts by 1965, Murray said. He said some of his ideas on a long-scale program had been presented at AEC meetings and turned down.

Feb. 29 -- Chairman Strauss said "government funds should not be used for full-scale power installations, merely to enlarge the use of atomic energy for power purposes" while such use was commercially uneconomic. Strauss said that AEC was "considering...complete declassification of all information...primarily concerned with design and construction of power-producing reactors."

March 1 -- Strauss said it "would be a mistake" to discount "for the foreseeable future" an atomic-powered automobile. AEC General Manager Kenneth E. Fields and Dr. W. Kenneth Davis, head of the AEC's reactor division, said they could not envision an atomic automobile nor a locomotive in the foreseeable future.

March 5 -- Harry E. Jordan, American Water Works Assn. secretary, said the government should encourage the "application of radioisotopes to solving civilian engineering problems." He said the U.S. was behind other countries, notably Great Britain and West Germany, in this field because the AEC "has failed...to give encouragement to civilian studies of the application of radiation techniques." He recommended establishment "of a permanent interdepartment panel to explore the possible areas of application of radiation techniques in the solution of civilian problems."

SHIP PROPULSION

K.W. Van Eman, vice president of the Skinner Engine Co., Erie, Pa., said that while proposals were being submitted for the design of an atomic-powered oil tanker to be completed by mid-1959, there was still no program to provide for the propulsion units of that vessel. He said the Committee should consider allowing "small business...to engage in the marine atomic development with the prototype plant, consisting of an atomic reactor with a marine engine."

PATENTS

William A. Steiger of the National Assn. of Manufacturers said "patentability in the atomic field" should "be determined in accordance with established patent law with two exceptions, namely, prior secret use by the Commission and papers published by the Technical Information Service of the Commission." He said foreign inventors would hold an "abnormal" proportion of atomic patents issued in the U.S. unless the patent provisions of the Atomic Energy Act were liberalized.

SMALL BUSINESS

John Menke, president of the Nuclear Development Corp. of America, White Plains, N.Y., said "the impact of the growth of atomic energy on industry should not only be to make the larger companies bigger. Now is the time to guide its growth and to foster vigorous progress and competition which the newer, modest companies will always supply in our country."

INSURANCE

Francis K. McCune, General Electric Co. vice president, said: "The gravest problem now facing the atomic energy business is that of liability for the consequences of an atomic incident." He said legislation should be enacted to "provide indemnity against atomic hazards" and that such indemnity provisions "should cover liability only above the amount of insurance which is determined to be available in the private market on a reasonable basis."

March 6 -- Philip Sporn of Nuclear Power Group Inc. said "within a very short time, nearly all non-federal activities will be badly delayed and some even stopped completely, unless the third party liability problem (resulting from atomic catastrophe) is faced immediately." He said the government should provide "excess coverage over that offered by the insurance industry."

GOVERNMENT PARTICIPATION

Benjamin C. Sigal of the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, AFL-CIO, said: "It is inexcusably shortsighted for us to allow the program of full-scale reactors to founder because of an unjustifiable ideological concern that our system of free enterprise will somehow be irretrievably damaged if our government builds a few large-scale reactors." He said the power requirements of the U.S. were increasing rapidly and the "need for exploration and exploitation of nuclear power is urgent." AEC, he said, should "proceed immediately with a vigorous program for constructing full-scale nuclear reactors for the production of electric power."

Leland Olds, Energy Research Associates head, said he was convinced "that Congress must recognize effective development of atomic power as a fundamental responsibility of the federal government without further waiting to determine whether private enterprise can be depended upon for 'expeditious and efficient' progress." He said the field of atomic power development was "broad enough for federal, non-federal public, cooperative and private participation."

Elmer L. Lindseth of the Edison Electric Institute cited the "rapid obsolescence of initial atomic power facilities" and said there was no "present need for the government to embark on a large-scale program of building 'demonstration reactors' with taxpayers' funds, particularly in the present state of knowledge of the art."

Jack Jennings of the Cooperative League of the U.S. said that in view of the delay by private firms, the "government should undertake development of an atomic power program." Rural electric cooperatives and public bodies should be given preference, he said, "in the granting of licenses for construction of atomic power plants for research and development purposes."

Andrew J. Biemiller, AFL-CIO legislative representative, supported a "crash program" for development of atomic power. He endorsed in principle a bill (S 2725) by Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) which would instruct AEC to build six full-scale demonstration reactors in various parts of the country. "In spite of all the pledges of investment, when and if any of the private enterprise plans now being considered are effectuated, there is little if any actual decision to proceed beyond the planning stage," he said.

LABOR'S ROLE

Elwood D. Swisher of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, AFL-CIO, recommended "enactment of a uniform federal safety code covering the industrial uses of nuclear energy," fixing of minimum compensation standards for injury or disease induced by radiation, a revised program of information control including specific definition of what constitutes a security risk, and replacement of the Atomic Energy Labor-Management Relations Panel with a three-way panel representing labor, industry and the public.

Civilian Power Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Joint Atomic Energy.

HEARINGS -- May 23-29 on the atomic power program.

TESTIMONY --May 23 -- Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) said "...we are losing the race for construction of industrial and civilian atomic power reactors. At a recent...conference, the Russians announced a five-year reactor construction program...(for) 10 full-scale power reactors, having a total capacity of from 2...to 2.5 million kilowatts...." In the United States, the Atomic Energy Commission "(is negotiating) with five groups which are said to have submitted...proposals" for reactor construction. "...if the dates projected for completion of these projects are met, we would have by 1960...only 689,000 kilowatts of capacity in being." Gore said the "government...can assume a greater economic risk than...any one company or...group..., (and) can do the job faster. (My)...bill, S 2725 (directing AEC construction of six nuclear power facilities for electric power production)... would supplement the present program."

AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss said: "If there were some...reason for doing so the U.S. could...build millions of kilowatts of generating capacity by 1960 -- but it would not be economically competitive power." Strauss said he thought private industry's building and operation of atomic power plants would achieve "vital cost reduction" quicker than the government could.

May 24 -- Sen. Wayne L. Morse (D Ore.) said the U.S. "cannot afford to wait for private enterprise to satisfy all its vested interests in the status quo." He said he was "convinced that a few billion dollars invested over the next five years in a crash federal atomic power program would pay off a hundred times over" in benefits to the U.S. at home and abroad.

Spokesmen for the Florida Power Corp. and the Southern California Edison Co. inserted statements in the record opposing Gore's plan. Their views were shared by two other spokesmen for private industry -- W.E. Kelley of the National Assn. of Manufacturers and Elmer L. Lindseth of the Edison Electric Institute.

Kelley, president of Walter Kidde Nuclear Laboratories and former manager of the AEC's New York office, said Gore's proposal would place the government in "competition" with private enterprise in the development of electric power sources. He added: "In our opinion, enactment of this bill would reverse the intent of Congress...; it would not accelerate sound long-term development...; nor would it assist the 'qualitative' development of nuclear reactors, but instead would concentrate on 'quantity' development."

COMPETITION WITH BUSINESS

Lindseth said Gore's bill would "put still another agency of the...government in the tax-exempt electric power business on a commercial basis in competition with tax-paying investor-owned electric companies."

May 25 -- Jerry Voorhis, executive director of the Cooperative League of the USA, said passage of Gore's bill (S 2725) would be a step in the direction of low-cost, plentiful power. He said cooperatives "are in a very vulnerable position indeed unless they have some source from which they can obtain their power besides that of their hostile competitors."

Charles E. Oakes, president of Pennsylvania Power & Light Co., said S 2725 was "a significant step towards blocking the normal future growth of the electric industry through pre-emption by government of the nuclear power field and interposition of the insurmountable barrier of tax-free government power." Oakes said if federal development of nuclear power reactors were necessary from an international standpoint, there should be State Department support of such a plan.

May 28 -- Tom Pickett, executive vice president of the National Coal Assn., said the coal industry opposed the Gore bill because it felt there was "no current domestic need for the development of a new source of electric power. There is no assurance that nuclear power will ever be as cheap as today's power from conventional fuels," Pickett said. He said statements that the world coal reserves were very limited were "a complete distortion of the truth."

Robert McKinney, chairman of the Panel on Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy said the U.S. should build power reactors in "fuel-short" countries, instead of expanding its domestic atomic power program. He opposed the Gore bill because it would involve "new burdens on all the taxpayers."

May 29 -- James F. Fairman, Consolidated Edison Co. engineering vice president, said the government could do better spending its money for fundamental research than for atomic power plants.

Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers (AFL-CIO), in a statement submitted for the hearing, said the United States atomic power program was "shockingly inadequate" compared to that of Russia and Britain. Reuther urged passage of the Gore bill.

James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, said enactment of the Gore bill would strengthen the government's foreign policy, "which is in part dependent upon our position of world leadership in the field of atomic power."

Andrew J. McMahon, chairman of the Utility Workers of America (AFL-CIO), opposed S 2725 as "but another effort to put the government into the business of generating and distributing electric energy."

John Jay Hopkins, chairman and president of General Dynamics Corp., said there should be joint government-industry efforts to deliver and build abroad by 1960 as many as 50 atomic power reactors.

FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY

June 18 -- AEC Commissioner Murray, in a statement filed with the Committee, said the government had "prematurely abdicated to private industry the primary responsibility for building large power reactors." Murray said the prospect of getting "any substantial quantity of industrial atomic power in this country by 1960 is very gloomy -- and getting more gloomy every day." Murray advocated enactment of legislation "similar to that proposed by Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) and Rep. Chet Holifield (D Calif.)" calling for the government to build six large atomic reactors (S 2725 and HR 10805). He said nations must begin to integrate nuclear power into their economy, but "if action is not forthcoming to break the monopoly now enjoyed by private industry in the large reactor program we will not be prepared."

A government program, Murray said, would help industry eliminate technical obstacles, and increase the number of trained reactor engineers. He said private industry's "fear" of government entry into the power field was "unwarranted" and could not "rightly be countenanced as cause for delay."

Committee Chairman Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) said Murray's statement was "a significant contribution" to the Committee's work.

BILLS REPORTED

ACTION -- The Joint Committee June 29 reported identical clean bills (S 4146 -- S Rept 2390, HR 12061 -- H Rept 2622) to accelerate the civilian atomic power program by authorizing $400 million for an unspecified number of demonstration atomic plants to be built by the Atomic Energy Commission. The plants would be built at AEC sites only, and the electrical energy produced would be used by the AEC.

Senate

The Senate July 12 passed S 4146 by a 49-40 roll-call vote. Three Republicans -- Thomas H. Kuchel (Calif.), William Langer (N.D.) and Alexander Wiley (Wis.) -- and 46 Democrats voted for the bill. All dissenting votes were cast by Republicans. (For voting, see chart p. 177)

DEBATE -- July 12 -- Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- "The Committee had in mind the construction of the equivalent of three large-scale prototype demonstration reactors, two small-scale prototype reactors...and assistance abroad in the design and construction of the equivalent of five small-scale reactors."

Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) -- "This bill...is not necessary. It authorizes an additional $400 million for a purpose which is not in itself well-defined and... which is already provided by existing legislation.... It will require additional scientists, and there is no place to obtain them in sufficient numbers unless we dilute our already diluted weapons program and peaceful experimental development program...."

John W. Bricker (R Ohio) -- "The Atomic Energy Commission opposes this program."

John O. Pastore (D R.I.) -- "This bill constitutes a good attempt to fortify our foreign policy and our obligation, even to American industry, to demonstrate -- by using our own funds for the building of these prototype large-scale reactors -- that we are on the level."

House

The House July 24 killed HR 12061, the companion bill to S 4146. With Republicans providing most of the votes, it recommitted the measure to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee by a 203-191 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 224)

Previously the House had agreed to a number of amendments designed to protect private power companies and other atomic programs. It had also voted, 195-199, to reject a motion by Clarence Cannon (D Mo.) to strike the enacting clause, which would have killed the bill. Cannon, one of the bill's supporters, apparently offered the motion as a parliamentary maneuver to gain additional speaking time. When he asked unanimous consent to withdraw the motion, Republican opponents of the bill objected, and the motion was first agreed to on a 155-135 standing vote, then rejected on the roll call.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

W. Sterling Cole (R N.Y.) -- Make it permissive and not mandatory for the Atomic Energy Commission to construct large-scale power demonstration reactors; July 24. Teller vote, 133-105.

Cole -- Make it permissive for AEC to build the smaller reactors authorized in the bill; July 24. Voice.

Cole -- Make it explicit that the smaller reactors were to be built at AEC production sites with the energy generated to be used by AEC; July 24. Voice.

Cole -- Invite participation by private capital, unless to do so would delay construction of the project for more than six months; July 24. Standing, 121-86; teller, 148-101.

Cole, as modified -- Prevent construction, ownership or operation by AEC of reactor demonstration facilities in any foreign country; July 24. Voice.

Cole -- Strike provision requiring quarterly reports on the progress of the program, July 24. Voice

John M. Vorys (R Ohio) -- Authorize the President, not AEC, to conduct the program of international cooperation in reactor development; July 24. Voice.

Cole -- Insure that the program would not interfere with the progress of other atomic programs; July 24. Teller, 152-120.

Cole, as amended by Chet Holifield (D Calif.) -- Direct AEC to sell the demonstration reactors after 15 years of operation; July 24. Teller, 150-120.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Cole -- Authorize appropriation of $50 million for one year instead of $400 million for five years; July 24. Voice.

John Phillips (R Calif.) -- Prevent AEC from building a reactor in an area in which a public or private utility is negotiating for a license to build or operate a reactor; July 24. Standing, 118-123.

DEBATE -- July 24 -- W. Sterling Cole (R N.Y.) -- The program could be a "Trojan horse" and a vehicle to put the government in the atomic power business, but "this bill prevents that from happening."

Carl T. Durham (D N.C.) -- "This bill does not put the government in the power business.... (it) contemplates purely an experimental and demonstration program."

Noah M. Mason (R Ill.) -- "This is a crash program when we have no crash to take care of."

Chet Holifield (D Calif.) -- AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss, who opposed the bill, "has an inflated sense of ego.... He wants to impose his will on the program in place of the will of Congress."

WHY BILL WAS KILLED

Cole subsequently said the defeat of the bill was "the direct result of an attempt to use atomic energy as a vote-getter in the public power areas and, under the cloak of a laudable purpose, to attract the votes of people everywhere who are eager to advance the atomic program." His amendments, he said, were intended to "remove the last vestige of resemblance between the bill before the House and original so-called Gore-Holifield bills which were an admitted attempt to place the federal government in the electric business and to socialize the atomic industry." Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) had said he regarded the bill as one of the keystones of a public power program he expected the Democrats to enunciate in their 1956 platform. (See "1956 Democratic Convention")

Utility Ad Dispute

America's Independent Electric Light and Power Companies June 13, in a full-page advertisement in 36 newspapers, supported private development of atomic power for electricity. In its advertisement, the organization of 123 independent electric companies claimed that under private development the United States led all other nations in the number of nuclear reactors built or planned. The power companies said there were 90 atomic reactors in the U.S. to 17 in Soviet Russia.

Two Senators on the Joint Atomic Energy Committee disputed the advertisement. They cited Committee hearings on S 2725 to back up their claims.

Sen. Gore, sponsor of S 2725, June 13 said the ad "indicates that the private power companies spent approximately $100,000...to mislead and misinform the American people." He asserted that of the 55 reactors said by the ad to have been completed in 1956 "not one plant is able to produce electric power in commercial or industrial quantity" and of the 35 listed as being built or planned "only one is under construction." Committee Chairman Anderson June 13 said hearings before his Committee did not justify the ad. He said another advertisement should be written "explaining the terrific advance of the Russians in view of all the numbers against them."

Joe Jenness, assistant general manager of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn., June 19 said the ad was "completely dishonest and misleading." He said "America is falling behind" the Soviet Union in production of atomic reactors.

As of June, 1956, AEC announcements listed 42 operating reactors "of all types." A spokesman for the Commission said only one reactor currently was planned for commercial use, and construction would not be complete until 1957.

The House Appropriations Committee June 26 asked the N.W. Ayer & Sons advertising agency to appear before the Committee to explain "the purpose" of the June 13 advertisement which Members claimed misrepresented the status of U.S. development of peacetime atomic power. The Committee also requested an unidentified editorial writer of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch to appear in connection with an editorial on June 24 referring to "an atomic-power policy that has collapsed." Chairman Clarence Cannon (D Mo.) said Committee members wanted to know the "basis of some of the statements" in the editorial.

The Post-Dispatch June 29 refused to testify before the Committee. A telegram signed by Irving Dilliard, editorial page editor, said "it would be a profound disservice to freedom of the press...for an editorial representative of this newspaper to permit himself to be questioned by a committee of Congress concerning an editorial."

Chairman Cannon said the newspaper's refusal was "unquestionably within its rights. To summon the newspaper before the Committee would unquestionably be in contravention of freedom of the press guaranteed by the First Amendment.... In view of the fact that the Post-Dispatch declines to come gratuitously, that is the end of it." The ranking Republican member, John Taber (N.Y.), said, "They proved that they lied by refusing to come. That's an admission that they didn't tell the truth."

The Committee June 29 heard voluntary testimony in executive session from two representatives of N.W. Ayer & Sons.

July 20, in a report (H Rept 2849) on the Second Supplemental Appropriation bill for fiscal 1957 (HR 12350), a majority of the Committee declared the utilities' "ad was misleading and ill-advised." They said it was "conceived at the convention of the Edison Electric Institute at Atlantic City in early June, 1956." The Committee recommended a $400 million appropriation to speed up the civilian atomic power program.

The majority's conclusions were vigorously disputed by 15 Republican members of the Committee in a minority report on HR 12350. (See p. 639)

NUCLEAR INSURANCE

HR 12050, S 4112 -- Reported by the Joint Atomic Energy Committee (H Rept 2531, S Rept 2298) June 29, June 22, 1956.

Floor action was blocked in the second session on HR 12050, and companion bill S 4112, measures to fix the extent of liability of owners and operators of atomic energy plants, despite urgent requests for its passage both by President Eisenhower and some members of Congress. Democratic opponents of the bill called it a "gimmick of the private industry people," said the Republicans had blocked the "only practical program" - the development of peaceful atomic reactors (HR 12061). (See story above) Democrats similarly blocked consideration of another atomic energy measure (S 2643, HR 9743) providing Holding Company Act exemptions for certain companies, also apparently in retaliation for rejection of HR 12061.

PROVISIONS -- As reported, HR 12050:

Authorized the Atomic Energy Commission to provide government indemnifications to approved licensees.

Limited the amount of liability to $500 million.

Authorized the AEC to determine the type and amount of financial protection for licensees.

Authorized the AEC to enter into indemnification contracts until Aug. 1, 1966.

Background

The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy held hearings in January and February on the development of the atomic-energy industry. The Committee said the hearings made

CQ Fact Sheet On Atomic Energy

PROSPECTS OF COMMERCIAL ATOMIC ENERGY

How, when and where will the atom enter into everyday peaceful uses? The first comprehensive survey of this subject was made by the Panel on the Impact of the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy, appointed in 1955 by the Joint Senate-House Committee on Atomic Energy. The Panel's 155-page report, together with a 750-page volume of background papers, was published Jan. 31, 1956.

Already developments have outstripped some of the factual material contained therein. But the broad prospects and basic problems visualized by the Panel promise to remain valid for some time to come. These are highlighted in this summary of the key facts, conclusions and recommendations contained in the report and the accompanying background papers, many of which were supplied by the Atomic Energy Commission. Quotations are drawn from the Panel report, except where otherwise identified. Organization of the summary follows that employed in the report itself.

ATOMIC POWER

"An atomic power reactor is a complex, expensive, and potentially hazardous machine. It is not a small black box in which one has only to put a lump of fissionable material. It cannot be transported in the luggage compartment of an automobile. It requires for its fabrication highly specialized techniques and materials."

Technology

• ONE PLANT: "The first 'demonstration' plant should be completed in 1957. (This is the pressurized water reactor at Shippingport, Pa., designed to produce 60,000 KW.) Others should be finished and in operation before or during 1960."

• PROFITS: "The prospects for profitable return on investment, at this stage of research and development, are admittedly not high.... Around 1960 we should have adequate technological information at hand on which to base judgment of the economic possibilities of atomic energy as a power resource.... Decisions made on the basis of data which should be available around 1960 could result in economically competitive atomic power plants coming into operation 3 to 5 years later, or around 1965."

• COST BARRIER: "The main impediment to economical nuclear power in all of the pressurized water reactors is the high cost of the metallurgical and chemical reprocessing steps." (Robert A. Charpie, Oak Ridge National Laboratory)

• SAFETY FACTOR: "The main elements in capital cost which tend to make estimates high are a conservatism in safety requirements and no way of estimating process improvements after a plant is in operation. We now insist that every reactor be enclosed in a blast-proof envelope which will guard against the spread of radioactive contamination in the event of a full-scale chemical or steam explosion occurring to the reactor." (Charpie)

• URANIUM SUPPLY: "Present and projected supplies of uranium plus the isotope separation capacity available would support a very large nuclear power industry, unlikely to be attained in the United States during the next 20 years or so, if solely used for nuclear power purposes." (AEC)

Prospects

• FIXED CHARGES: "Cheap atomic power will never be free. Even with zero fuel costs, power users must still pay capital carrying charges, operating, maintenance and transmission expenses. And to these, taxes must be added for private power producers."

• ENERGY TREND: "Our electric-generating capability has more than doubled since the close of World War II, and now stands close to 115 million kilowatts. If this rate of growth continued over the next 25 years, the atomic power capability of the United States in 1980 could be larger than our entire electric-generating capacity now."

• PROSPERITY: "There is no assurance that the upward movement of our economy will continue, regardless of the environment prevailing."

• RATE: "The rate of growth of atomic power will depend to a large degree on the rate of expansion of our total economy. By 1975 atomic power could amount to 20 to 40 percent of presently installed electric-generating capability in the United States. If this occurs, however, it will be in the context of a total generating capability of 3 to 4 times present levels."

• LAG: "If the somewhat less optimistic forecasts for capital fuel costs per kilowatt of generating capacity or fuel costs actually apply, a growth lag can occur, possibly extending as much as 15 years beyond 1965."

OTHER FUELS

• ENERGY: "Of the total energy consumed in the United States -- for electric power as well as for all other purposes -- 42 percent is supplied by oil, 29 percent by coal, 25 percent by natural gas, and 4 percent by falling water."

• COAL: "The most serious effect on the coal industry would come about if atomic power achieved competitive status between 1965 and 1975, and rapidly captured the entire market for new generating capacity and replacement installations."

• OIL & GAS: "In view of the rather small percentage of oil and natural gas used for the purpose of generating electricity and the progress being made toward reducing such low-profit use, it is unlikely that there will be any significant loss of revenue by the oil and natural gas industry due to the growth of atomic power."

• RAILROADS: "The railroad electrification potentialities of atomic power are not significant.... Even if atomic power costs do follow the most optimistic forecasts, other factors such as traffic densities and electrification costs will likely favor diesel or gas turbine operation over electrified operation."

• NET EFFECT: "The net domestic impact of atomic power should be beneficial to individual consumers and to industry."

Recommendation

• "In the event that industry does not take on the full risks and burdens, the (Atomic Energy) Commission should support a program to bring atomic power to a point where it can be used effectively and widely on a competitive basis, even to the construction with public funds of one full-scale 'demonstration' plant of each major reactor size and type."

THERMONUCLEAR POWER

"The controlled thermonuclear program -- which has as its goal the controlled release of energy from the fusion of light nuclei -- is being actively pursued at three major sites (Los Alamos, Princeton University, and Livermore), with smaller projects at several other sites (including Oak Ridge, New York University)." (AEC)

Technology

• HIGH HEAT: "The problem involved is that of ionizing a suitable material (such as deuterium), heating the resulting plasma to temperatures of 100,000,000 degrees centigrade or higher, and confining it at this temperature for a sufficiently long period of time to permit an appreciable fraction of the ions to fuse, with consequent release of energy. To be of general usefulness, the energy thus released must then be converted into electrical power, either directly or through the medium of suitable heat exchangers." (AEC)

• CONTAINER: "It is clear that no container made of ordinary material can confine the plasma at these temperatures without vaporizing instantly. The only media which conceivably are capable of fulfilling this task are electric or magnetic fields...." (AEC)

Prospects

• LONG-RANGE: "It is virtually certain that no full-scale reactor will be developed in the next year or two; it is, however, highly probable that success will be achieved eventually. Breakthroughs on the one hand, or severe setbacks on the other, can play havoc with any estimate that one might give at this time. Even after the development of an operating prototype of a full-scale thermonuclear machine, many more years of intensive effort would be required to develop an economically competitive source of thermonuclear power." (AEC)

Recommendation

"That the Commission, in encouraging investment in nuclear fission power, see to it that investors have sufficient information about the feasibility of nuclear fusion power upon which to base determinations for themselves as to the propriety of their investments and actions."

MEDICINE, PUBLIC HEALTH

"Radioisotopes are now used in 2,416 institutes throughout the country. Of these, 870 are hospitals or medical clinics, 212 are colleges and universities, and 235 are Federal and State laboratories. The remaining 1,200 institutions are industrial in nature. It has been estimated that in the past 9 years, 500,000 patients have been given isotopes for diagnostic purposes and one-tenth of this number has received therapeutic doses." (Drs. Louis H. Hempelmann and Shields Warren)

Technology

• DIAGNOSIS: "Clinical diagnosis with radioisotopes, such as blood-volume determination, can be made more accurately and much faster.... Other diagnostic uses... include: exact location of some malignant tumors; and analysis and prompt diagnosis of various disorders of the heart and blood system."

• THERAPY: "A new medical therapy reactor is being built at Brookhaven (Long Island) by the Commission for treating brain cancer.... The use of reactor radiation for therapy is still in the relatively experimental stage. More widespread use of these and standard X-ray devices is certain, although radiation is not likely to become a universal replacement for surgical treatment of cancer."

Prospects

• IMPACT: "The principal social impact of atomic developments in the medical field is expected to be improved health and longer life for the individual, and increased productivity and a larger proportion of aged persons for the Nation as a whole."

• DANGER: "Unless an accurate tally is kept of the radiation each patient receives, long-term injuries, such as more rapid deterioration, may result.... The day may come when every citizen should have a personal record of radiation dosage received in the course of diagnoses and therapy."

• TRAINING: "For the most part, American medical and postdoctoral students today are going into practice without any real knowledge of the general effects of radiation or the techniques made possible by the availability of radioisotopes."

Recommendation

• Ways must be found to "provide all medical schools with adequate facilities for training in atomic medicine techniques; create additional research centers....; design low-cost atomic medical equipment...; make available at reasonable prices the now expensive radioactively labeled organic compounds essential for research and therapy; assure prompt availability of current atomic developments in the field of medicine....; inaugurate a nationwide education program on the more judicious use of radiation...."

AGRICULTURE

"The present status of agricultural research using atomic energy is that only a few products have advanced through the experimental stage and are available for introduction on our farms. Among these are a rust-resistant type of oats, a type of peanut resistant to leaf wilt and another type of peanut in which yields are increased 30 percent over normal. Work with other crops is still in the research laboratory stage or is going through a period of testing and development at the experimental testing stage. It will be another 10 years before much of this is in practical use on American farms." (Summary of seminar)

Technology

• PLANT BREEDING: "By exposing living plants, insects, viruses, and even animals to man-controlled atomic radiation, it is possible to induce new species and subspecies at a more rapid rate. In one case, it is estimated that nine years of conventional plant breeding results were accomplished in 18 months."

• TRACER RESEARCH: "Radioactive tracers of most of the elements important in plant nutrition are available. They permit investigators to follow these elements as they move through root, stem and leaf. We are learning how to judge the efficiency of different kinds of fertilizers.... Tracer studies of animals will make possible cheaper feeding and better management."

• CROP STORAGE: "Radiation of grains and potatoes ...has been of demonstrated effectiveness in prolonging storage life. These techniques are beginning to go into commercial practice, and may substantially reduce food production losses due to spoilage in storage."

Prospects

• IMPACT: "For individual efficient farmers on adequate lands...atomic developments may mean benefits. For some marginal farmers, they may mean little or even added disadvantage. For the nation, they appear likely to add to the problem of farm surpluses."

• ABROAD: "Foreign markets appear to offer no solution to United States farm surpluses.... The same atomic developments and techniques which may only add to United States crop surpluses will help bridge the gap between scarcity and plenty abroad."

Recommendation

"That the (U.S.) agencies and departments concerned with assistance to foreign countries develop a coordinated and vigorous program of high priority with technical assistance from the Commission, to focus atomic research where it can be useful soonest in undernourished countries."

FOOD PRESERVATION

"Radiation can kill all or most of the bacteria and insects present in some fresh fruits, vegetables, grain and meats, and thus contribute to checking deterioration. No residual radiation is left in the foods themselves. With proper packaging to prevent entry of new bacteria and insects, foods which lend themselves to preservation by radiation should have substantially increased usable life."

Technology

• ARMY TESTS: "Experiments on human consumption of foods preserved by radiation are being conducted under the direction of the Army Quartermaster Corps... Doses of radiation may range from large long-term preservative levels to low pasteurizing levels. Off-flavors and off-odors tend to result from doses large enough to kill all bacteria."

• RADIATION SOURCE: "Both electrostatic machines and radioactive byproducts from nuclear reactors can be used to accomplish the actual preservation. Preliminary economic data...should be available by the end of 1956 as a result of the planning work for the Army pilot plant (which) begins operation in 1958."

Prospects

• TIME LAG: "Even if we have enough experimental evidence within five years to establish the commercial feasibility of the process, another three to 10 years more may have to elapse before the food-processing industry will be able to apply these new techniques on any substantial scale."

• IMPACT: "Present trends toward prepackaging and brand identification would likely be accentuated. Some foods, now kept under refrigeration, may then require only chill-tray protection: others may be placed on the drygoods shelves. Fruits and vegetables which must now be picked before they are ripe in order to get them to the dinner table before they spoil may be available to the consumer in field-ripened condition."

• NET EFFECT: "Radiation preservation of food does not appear likely to replace other methods of food preservation to any substantial extent in the foreseeable future."

ATOMIC PROPULSION

"Possibilities of applying nuclear energy to propulsion were recognized early in the atomic energy program. To date, actual work in the field has been limited to military applications. The Navy and Air Force are engaged in extensive research and development programs directed toward atomic-powered submarines, surface vessels and aircraft. An atomic-powered submarine is already in operation."

Technology

• COMMERCIAL SHIPS: "There is at present no government program directed specifically to the development of atomic engines for commercial ships.... Early development of atomic propulsion for naval vessels reflects the fact that this type power plant can be more easily applied to large ships than to other forms of transportation."

• COMMERCIAL AIRCRAFT: "Atomic propulsion of aircraft appears feasible -- if technological developments proceed as now foreseen. The program is thought likely to require between half a billion and one billion dollars to accomplish, and has as its objective a military airplane in which economics are not a primary consideration."

• LOCOMOTIVES: "There is no real program, government or private, at present concerned with the development of atomic propulsion for locomotives.... Industrial interest has so far apparently been limited to a total expenditure of not more than several hundred thousand dollars. A major development program would involve tens of millions of dollars."

Prospects

• SHIPS: "The initial capital investment in an atomic-powered commercial vessel utilizing present technology appears likely to be much greater than that required for a conventionally powered commercial vessel.... The cost of a conventional $10 million oil tanker would be approximately doubled by the installation of a nuclear power plant. Unless these very high capital costs can be reduced or balanced by savings in the cost of nuclear fuel or other economies, such a ship obviously cannot be competitive. To accomplish this cost reduction, a great deal of technological development remains to be done."

• AIRCRAFT: "The quantity of shielding required to reduce radiation to acceptable human tolerance levels would appear at this time to rule out commercial passenger application.... No usable estimates of eventual costs of construction and operation of atomic-powered commercial cargo airplanes are yet possible.... This application of nuclear energy should not, therefore, have any real impact on civil aviation in the United States during the next 15 or 20 years."

• LOCOMOTIVES: "Sufficient information is not available at present to justify discussion as to when atomic-powered locomotives might achieve competitive economic advantage."

• MOTOR VEHICLES: "Nuclear energy does not appear to be a feasible source of power for commercial or civilian vehicles in the foreseeable future. Technically, there seems to be no prospect of designing a properly shielded atomic power source consistent with the size and weight of present-day motor vehicles.... Another serious deterrent is the potential radiation hazards arising as a result of accidents."

GENERAL INDUSTRIAL USES

"The $1 million worth of radioisotopes now being sold annually by the Commission to industry are making possible savings through process and quality controls estimated at $100 million annually.... Greater significance may lie in future utilization of atomic heat and radiation."

Technology

• QUALITY CONTROL: "Some 350 industrial firms are at present using radioisotopes in radiography to inspect metal castings and welds for possible flaws.... About 300 industrial firms are using a large variety of radioisotope gages to measure the thickness and density of such materials as sheet metal, rubber, paper and plastics. The tobacco industry, using radioisotope density gages to determine the quality of cigarettes, now employs more of these gages than any other single industry."

• PROCESS HEAT: "This nation now utilizes approximately 10 percent of its total energy consumption as process heat in the production of such basic materials as metals, chemicals, cement, glass, paper, petroleum and rubber products.... However, many such processes require temperatures of 1,500 degrees F. to 3,000 degrees F., which cannot be achieved in reactors incorporating even the most advanced atomic and metallurgical technology known today."

• RADIATION: "Radiation can be used to supply energy to initiate some chain chemical reactions and to supply all of the energy required in basic chemical reactions.... The fact that irradiated polyethelene can withstand higher temperatures than ordinary polyethelene plastics has already been applied by industry on a limited scale in the production of heat-resistant plastic laboratory equipment."

• SPACE HEATING: "Space heating now uses 30 percent of the energy consumed in the United States.... Waste heat from a research reactor at Harwell, England, has been used since 1948 to provide space heating for adjacent buildings. Similar applications under Commission direction have been made at Hanford, Washington.... There are, however, no other real development efforts underway."

Prospects

• RADIOISOTOPES: "Continued rapid expansion of specialized industrial applications of radioisotopes should make great savings for industry possible over the years ahead.... It is not easy to place an actual dollar value on these potential contributions, but improvement of existing products and development of new products will certainly result."

• PROCESS HEAT: "As much as 44 percent of new process heat-production facilities, some 100,000 megawatts, may depend on fission heat in the five-year period between 1975 and 1980. Some severe technological hurdles must be overcome to accomplish this utilization... Full utilization of nuclear process heat will come only when bulk exit temperatures of 2,500 degrees Fahrenheit are obtained." (AEC)

• RADIATION: "Progress in the field of applied radiation chemistry is admittedly slow.... It is estimated that there are only about 50 technical people at the bachelor of science level or higher engaged in research in this field, and that half of these are in universities or in government laboratories.... The discovery of a money-making application would certainly accelerate the progress manyfold." (David S. Ballantine, Brookhaven National Laboratory)

• SPACE HEAT: "Atomic home furnaces are theoretically feasible, either in the form of small reactors or as devices containing radioactive fission products. However, these applications of nuclear energy do not appear to make any sense on the basis of foreseeable technology. Small reactors suitable for residential space heating appear certain to cost many times as much as comparable sized conventional home heating systems. The upper levels of atomic power growth in the entire next 25 years appear to yield only enough radioactive fission products to heat a few thousand homes."

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS

"The United States, United Kingdom, and the Soviet Union are the only countries with really mature (nuclear) programs. These three countries have available large raw material resources and are engaged in the manufacture of both plutonium and enriched U-235. Each of these countries is engaged in the development of peaceful applications of atomic energy, including nuclear power reactors." (Staff memorandum)

Prospects

• POWER: "Atomic power plants to provide in excess of 100 million KW generating capability might be installed in the free world outside the United States by 1980.... The growth of atomic power abroad is likely to take place more rapidly in high-cost or energy-short countries than in the United States."

• SALES: "A gap may occur for the power equipment manufacturing industry between present domestic interest in atomic power reactors and actual sales in substantial volume.... The foreign market for power reactors with its high near-term growth potential may offer a solution to bridging this gap. The potential demand may represent a $30 billion market."

• POLITICAL: "In the uncommitted areas of the world, American leadership in making atomic power available could be a strong influence in guiding these areas toward the course of freedom."

Problems

• EXPECTATIONS: "World interest in obtaining the benefits of atomic power promptly is now at a very high level. If anything, it has grown more rapidly than have the technological developments needed to justify this interest."

• DANGERS: "Operation of atomic power reactors results in byproduct plutonium or uranium 233, useful in weapons manufacture. The establishment of atomic power plants throughout the world, therefore, presents the problem of controlling these byproducts in such a way as to prevent diversion to military purposes."

• CONTROL: "Elaborate systems for checking the flow of materials through reactors and fuel processing plants, and for inspection teams and physical security measures would add greatly to the cost of plant operation."

Recommendations

"The United States (should) promptly convene a series of regional conferences of our bilateral partners for the immediate establishment of realistic goals for the installation of atomic electric generating plants in specific countries.... In issuing invitations to such conferences, (the U.S. should) announce that it is prepared to furnish nuclear fuels, provide necessary technological assistance and permit contracts for the installation of at least one million kilowatts of atomic generating capacity outside the United States as soon as possible -- we hope by 1960."

PUBLIC ATTITUDES

"There is the overriding fact that the peaceful atom and the military atom are almost hopelessly entwined -- historically, psychologically, administratively and technologically. This not only affects the kinds of questions that people are asking about the peaceful atom, it actually creates a whole series of areas of concern that otherwise probably would not exist." (Walker Cisler, president, Atomic Industrial Forum)

• PUBLICITY: "Technical facts are frequently stretched beyond reality in speeches, articles and statements by highly placed officials in both the executive and legislative branches. American businessmen of international stature also make the same error. Atomic energy is established as newsworthy in itself and receives international news coverage. There seems to be a natural tendency for each speaker or writer to outpromise the last.... The objectives of our research programs cannot be accomplished by wishful thinking."

• LAW: "No great volume of peaceful uses of atomic energy exists today.... Drafted under pressure so as to open rapidly the peaceful uses of atomic energy to private enterprise, the language of the 1954 (Atomic Energy) Act sometimes seems to confuse hope for eventual development of a flourishing private industry with the misconception that such an industry is already in being."

CONTROL OF INFORMATION

"There is no accurate measure of how much atomic information is now out from under control and how much remains classified.... The number of declassified documents involved is unimportant by itself, since it is not known how much of the information is either significant or up to date. Where most exact recent data is retained as classified, publication of old data is more likely to do damage than to be of assistance."

• ACCESS PERMITS: "Under such permits, persons with limited clearances -- somewhat more readily attained than full clearances -- are permitted access to certain categories of classified information....(But) the existence of other relevant information, to which access is not permitted, serves to introduce the element of the unknown which can be a strong deterrent to private investment."

• PRIVILEGED GROUP: "Contractors to the Commission have full access to all data needed in connection with their projects. They thus have an advantage over mere access-permit holders.... Only by hiring ex-employees of the Commission or its contractors...can 'outsiders' partially offset this advantage."

Recommendation

"The Commission (should) remove all reactor technology from the restricted data category, including such areas as fuel element fabrication and processing techniques, leaving specific military applications of such technology to be protected, insofar as national security is involved, by the defense classification system."

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT

"The bulk of all research and development on peaceful uses of atomic energy is today performed in three national laboratories and other principal contractor-operated Commission laboratories. These are the only research centers in the country which now possess the very expensive facilities for such advanced work."

• UNIVERSITIES: "The study of basic nuclear physics and chemistry has become rapidly very expensive. Thirty years ago an expenditure of $100,000 for high voltage equipment was regarded as a major investment. Today, capital expenditures of less than $1 million are not regarded as noteworthy. As a consequence, universities are more and more looking to the federal government for such funds." (T.W. Bonner and W.V. Houston, Rice Institute)

• INDUSTRY: "The great disparity in research effort between government laboratories and industrial laboratories is of real concern to the (industrial research) directors we interviewed, who feel that industry will never be able to get a hold of the problem and lead in atomic energy applications (as it does in electronics) unless the gap in budgets is narrowed." (A.A. Kucher and Michael Ference Jr., Ford Motor Co.)

• GOVERNMENT: "In the field of research the Commission is in a transitional period. On the one hand it must encourage industrial participation; on the other it must insure that no line of research or development of potential value to the nation remains unexplored. The objective during this transition must be the more equitable sharing of the total responsibility."

MANPOWER, EDUCATION

"The Commission estimates that it is currently employing about 3,600 scientists and 2,500 engineers, through contractors, who are primarily or partly engaged on peaceful application of atomic energy....Assuming that 83 million kilowatts of atomic electric power generating capability were to be installed by 1975, the Commission estimates that a total of 16,000 scientists and engineers would be required to design, construct and operate the plants as well as related fuel fabrication and chemical processing facilities."

• SKILLED LABOR: "Many workmen, with many different skills, will have to learn to work with the atom.... Several thousand welders in the United States have today had experience in meeting the high standards required in atomic reactors and atomic processing systems.... Experience indicates that the skills which will be required of the majority of affected workers can be met by present union and industrial practices...."

• MILITARY COMPETITION: "Shortages to date result more from the competition of large and continually expanding atomic military programs than from activities in the peaceful uses.... Military atomic undertakings are now branching out far beyond weapons."

HAZARDS, INSURANCE

"The possibility of the accidental release of very large quantities of radioactive materials as the result of an accident to a high-power nuclear reactor has led to greater care in the selection of reactor sites.... In view of the general perversity of nature, it is not inconceivable that we may experience a series of catastrophic accidents after a longer period of favorable experience in the construction and operation of nuclear reactors." (AEC)

• PRECAUTIONS: "Many procedures for the safe handling of radioactive materials have been worked out. These range from the design of simple handling equipment ...to the complex, almost human, remote control devices for working with more dangerous quantities. Research has resulted in a firmer basis for limits on radiation dosage levels....(But) expanding the peaceful uses of atomic energy increases the proportion of the population that could be exposed."

• INSURANCE: "While there is optimism that workmen's compensation, property damage, loss of use, health, accident and other types of insurance can be accommodated to the realities of atomic operations, this optimism does not yet extend to public liability insurance.... Not only the owner, the operator and the supplier of an atomic reactor are involved, but, for example, so too is the user of atomic wastes or irradiated material, or even the purveyor of food or equipment which may have been exposed to atomic radiation.... When the public liability insurance problem is resolved -- and only then -- can we look for the maximum vigor and growth of private atomic industry." (Atomic Industrial Forum)

• GOVERNMENT ROLE: "We are not satisfied that the time has yet arrived to reconsider the need for a federal atomic insurance program covering peaceful uses.... At least two and possibly three years remain in which to conduct research and accumulate knowledge and experience before any substantial private activity can be delayed or stopped because of the inability to obtain adequate insurance."

FEDERAL CONTROLS

• PRICES: "The provisions of the 1954 Act mean that there is only one buyer for any special nuclear material -- the Commission.... In most prospective near-term commercial atomic power reactors, the 'buy-back' price could make or break the economics of the plant. By law, the Commission can only guarantee 'buy-back' prices for seven years, while plants able to produce such material must run for 25 to 40 years to amortize their costs. Thus private investors have no way of forecasting when they may suddenly be thrown into a losing operation as a result of changes in future Commission-guaranteed prices."

• FREE ENTRY: "The 1954 Act which ostensibly opens up development and application of peaceful uses to responsible private investors does not, in fact, give anyone the uncontrolled right to engage in such activities even if the applicant meets all established criteria....' (Sections 102, 103 and 104) constitute an interference by the federal government in the right of a private investor to risk his own money, even to go broke, if he chooses to do so."

FINANCIAL SUPPORT

• RESEARCH: "Guidance related to research conducted in Commission laboratories for itself and for others should be given by the Congress.... Without such guidance, the Commission is placed in a position to exercise influence over the economics of private ventures which may lead to charges of favoritism, partiality, and mismanangement of government resources. This is an excessive responsibility to place on the Commission. It is almost certain to lead to an overly cautious attitude on the part of Commission personnel."

PATENTS

"The patent concepts developed in Chapter 13 of the 1954 Act reflect issues other than patents themselves. Fears of both public power and private monopoly found expression there. Nevertheless, the law is not clear. The emphasis lies on protecting established or anticipated interests, both public and private, rather than on fostering vigorous scientific and engineering exploration.... Private individuals and organizations must be assured promptly of the extent of their rights to patents developed from privately financed work wherever it is performed."

GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION

"The peaceful uses of atomic energy affect the functions of almost every department and agency of the executive branch and all of the corresponding committees of the Congress. Organization of both branches of our government must be directed toward acceptance of the fact that the era of atomic centralization in the government in general and the Commission in particular ended with the decision to press forward with peaceful uses.

"There is no actual focal point in the Commission for the integration of policies and programs related to peaceful uses comparable to the focus and impetus provided for military applications. Yet the urgency for exploration of both is rapidly approaching equality as a matter of national policy."

U-235 RELEASED FOR REACTOR DEVELOPMENT

President Eisenhower Feb. 22 announced the U.S. would make available 40,000 kilograms (88,000 lbs.) of the fissionable nuclear material U-235 for research and atomic power uses at home and abroad. He said:

"The quantities of Uranium 235 which will be made available for distribution over a period of years under this determination are:

"a. In the United States, through lease for all licensed civilian purposes, principally for power reactors -- 20,000 kilograms.

"b. Outside the United States, through sale or lease for peaceful purposes, principally power and research reactors -- 20,000 kilograms. This is in addition to the 200 kilograms already made available for research reactors abroad."

The President added these points:

- "It is not intended that nations which are presently producing U-235, or the Soviet Union or its satellites, shall share in this distribution.
- "Distribution of special nuclear material will be subject to prudent safeguards against diversion of the materials to non-peaceful purposes....
- "The special nuclear material to be made available will support the start of nuclear power programs with a generating capacity of several millions of electrical kilowatts....
- "As additional projects are undertaken by our industry and by other nations, more nuclear fuel will be required. The Atomic Energy Commission has informed me that it will recommend that additional supplies be made available as become necessary in the future.
- "This action...is an earnest of our faith that the atom can be made a powerful instrument for the promotion of world peace."

Statement by Strauss

Accompanying President Eisenhower's announcement was a statement by Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission, with the following amplifications:

- "The 40,000 kilograms of U-235 available to domestic and foreign users will not all be distributed in the coming year or in any other single year. It will be distributed over a period of years as needed, with smaller amounts in the early years....
- "In the present state of the nuclear art, countries with available water power or supplies of coal and oil will, for some time to come, find it more economic to build and operate conventional power plants....
- "Licenses (for domestic power reactors) may be issued for a varying period extending up to 40 years, and delivery of U-235 to licensees will be spread over the life of the licenses, to permit start-up of reactors and replacement of fuel as required in later years....
- "Based on the value of $25 per gram of contained U-235 for enriched uranium leased for research reactors...the 40,000 kilograms of U-235 now made available for such sale or lease would have a value of $1 billion."

Possible Impact

Immediate Congressional and editorial reaction hailed the President's announcement as a boon to peace. A British Foreign Office spokesman said: "It is doubtful whether any other country could match this figure and it gives an indication of the remarkable progress that America has made in the development of atomic energy and of its intention to encourage its peaceful uses."

However, all available evidence suggested that two or more years might elapse before any of the 40,000 kilograms of U-235 finds its way into a power reactor. Congressional Quarterly checked the sequence of events relating to disposition of the 200 kilograms of U-235 mentioned by the President, with the following results:

Nov. 15, 1954 -- U. S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge told the United Nations General Assembly the U. S. was setting aside 100 kilograms of U-235 for allocation to other countries for research purposes.

Feb. 12, 1955 -- The AEC said it had agreed to sell India 10 tons of heavy water for use as a moderator in a research reactor.

March 29, 1955 -- The AEC said the U.S. had "agreed in principle" to sell Italy 10 tons of heavy water for similar purposes.

May 3, 1955 -- The U. S. and Turkey signed the first bilateral agreement for the building of research reactors, providing that the AEC "would lease to Turkey up to six kilograms of contained U-235 in uranium enriched up to a maximum of 20 percent U-235." The six kilograms were allotted from the 100 set aside Nov. 15, 1954.

June 24, 1955 -- President Eisenhower announced that an additional 100 kilograms of U-235 had been set aside for foreign countries.

Feb. 22, 1956 -- Strauss said that, to date, research-type bilateral agreements were "now in effect with 26 nations." Like the Turkish agreement, most of these provided for the lease of several kilograms of U-235. Thus, well over one-half of the 200 kilograms set aside for foreign research purposes had been allocated.

March 2, 1956 -- AEC officials told CQ that, except for five kilograms in the reactor which the U. S. set up at the Geneva atoms-for-peace conference in August, 1955, and subsequently sold to Switzerland, none of the 200 kilograms had been shipped abroad, nor had the heavy water promised to India and Italy been sent. The reason: research reactors to be fueled by the U-235 had not been built as yet.

Further Allotments?

Several years may elapse before fuel needs catch up with the supply of U-235 already set aside. Although Britain is well advanced on a 10-year power reactor program, only one commercial plant was under construction in the U. S. No final action had been taken on several private proposals before the AEC. However, two of these will require more than 13,000 kilograms of U-235 over a 40-year span. Consolidated Edison's proposed plant would have an initial charge of about 250 kilograms of U-235, but would need 8,550 kilograms over 40 years. Thus, any extensive growth of power reactors in the next few years will call for additional fuel allotments.

it apparent "the problem of liability in connection with the operation of reactors is a deterrent to further industrial participation in the program." The Committee said although the possibility of accidents was "infinitesimal", it did exist. The Committee also called a seminar in March of representatives of companies and insurance firms to further discuss the problems of operating reactors.

The seminar considered two bills (HR 9701 and HR 9802) which set a statutory limit on liability for atomic accidents and provided government indemnity or reinsurance to supplement private insurance. Following the meeting, legislation incorporating features of both bills was recommended by the Joint Committee. Two other bills were introduced: HR 11242, proposing a program of permissive reinsurance; and S 3929, prepared by the Joint Committee staff and providing a statutory limit on liability plus government indemnity. A clean bill (HR 12050) with a companion Senate measure (S 4112) was reported by the Joint Committee following hearings.

President Eisenhower, in a July 27 message to Congress, said failure to pass HR 12050 would "needlessly delay" the atomic energy development program. He said he had not previously urged passage of the bill "on the premise -- obviously a mistaken one -- that, it having bipartisan support, there would be no question as to its enactment."

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Joint Atomic Energy.

HEARINGS -- May 15 - June 14 on bills (HR 9701, 9802, 11242 and S 3929) to encourage private development of atomic power by setting a statutory limit on liability for atomic accidents and providing government indemnity or reinsurance to supplement private insurance.

TESTIMONY -- May 15 -- Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission said Congress should authorize a $500 million federal atomic accident insurance program. Private companies, he said, had offered coverage up to $65 million for an atomic mishap. Strauss said, "The lack of protection against possible liability in excess of the available commercial insurance constitutes a major deterrent to the development of nuclear power by private industry."

AEC Commissioner Willard F. Libby said that the "worst possible accident" involving a runaway 100,000 kilowatt reactor could cause property damage up to $200 million, kill between 20 and 50 persons in a populated area and expose up to 500 to "damaging levels of radiation."

C. Rogers McCullough, chairman of AEC advisory committee on reactor safeguards, said, "if a nuclear runaway is once started, no human being can respond rapidly enough to stop it. One must recognize that the best known (safety) devices are not infallible. It can be definitely expected that there will be reactor accidents even though the utmost is done to prevent them."

May 16 -- Ambrose B. Kelly, Associated Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Cos. general counsel, said "despite the efforts of the insurance industry, which has organized three...syndicates for atomic energy risks with a capacity beyond that ever offered industry...the lack of complete protection against crushing financial loss is a brake on our entire atomic power program."

Kelly said a government indemnity program should apply "equally to both government and private atomic installations." The indemnity program "should apply only after private insurance has been exhausted," Kelly said. Claims should be handled by private companies. The fee should be "sufficient...to finance an adequate program of inspection" to see that safety rules were carried out.

H.R. Searing, chairman of the board of Consolidated Edison Co. of N.Y., said the insurance problem should "be resolved in order to encourage interested companies to go forward."

May 17 -- Willis Gale, Commonwealth Edison Co. chairman, said his company's 180,000 kilowatt nuclear power plant to be built near Chicago -- the largest yet planned -- would be ready for trial operation July 1, 1960, or "three months ahead of the AEC deadline." Gale said the government should "solve the problem of third party liability from a major nuclear catastrophe."

INSURANCE LIMITS

May 18 -- Ex-Rep. Tom Pickett (D Texas, 1944-53), executive vice president of the National Coal Assn., said the government should insure industry against atomic disasters "only insofar as the actual liabilities exceed the (private) insurance purchased." He said government insurance should cover only those plants which will produce new information. "The government should not subsidize in any way projects which appear to duplicate each other...nor nuclear power projects which may be constructed after atomic energy is considered to have passed the experimental stage and reached the competitive stage." Pickett added that atomic plants should be located in remote areas to safeguard the public.

H.W. Yount, vice president of Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. and member of the Insurance Executives Study Group on Atomic Energy, said one of the greatest obstacles to insuring atomic plants was the uncertainty about damages to persons outside the power plant.

May 21 -- William Webster, president of Yankee Atomic Electric Co. which expected to build an atomic power plant in Massachusetts, said "solution of the insurance problem will eliminate the only absolute roadblock to Yankee's program."

Ex-Rep. Andrew J. Biemiller (D Wis. -- 1945-47, 1949-51), AFL-CIO legislative representative, said, "The problem that is new in regard to workmen's compensation, disability insurance, medical care and unemployment insurance in this new industry is that exposure to physically harmful radiation can take place and the individual...may not even know it. We recommend, for the protection of the human race as well as the individual workers involved, the establishment of the highest standards of protection -- a shorter work week, longer vacations and rotation of workers from jobs where high levels of exposure are likely.... Each worker should have a copy of his tally sheet regarding his total exposure for life. Existing compensation legislation and restrictive statutes of limitations not designed to deal with this whole problem should be reviewed." He said the safety features of the atomic age have been painted "too rosy" by Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- May 25 -- Chairman Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) introduced a bill (S 3929) to supplement private insurance covering atomic energy hazards to the public. The measure would have the government give private industry financial protection above amounts provided by private insurance companies.

May 28 -- A new syndicate, the Nuclear Property Insurance Assn., was organized in New York to insure the property of concerns operating nuclear reactors from damage caused by the reactors. A spokesman said the firm expected to be able to write "in excess of $50 million" of insurance on each reactor installation.

TESTIMONY -- June 14 -- AEC Commissioner Harold S. Vance said the private development of atomic power would be delayed if Congress failed to enact in 1956 "some form" of insurance legislation. He said the matter was "absolutely urgent." Vance said the AEC had "no objection" to the Anderson bill (S 3929) though it still preferred its own proposals (HR 11242, HR 9802).

BILLS REPORTED

ACTION -- The Joint Committee June 29 reported a bill (HR 12050 -- H Rept 2531) to amend the 1954 Atomic Energy Act to provide federal insurance and to set a $500 million limit on the liability of a person running an atomic energy plant. An identical bill (S 4112 -- S Rept 2298) was reported to the Senate June 22.

In a separate opinion, Rep. Chet Holifield (D Calif.) opposed HR 12050 on grounds "it is premature in the present state of the art to take blind risks with human lives before we acquire more knowledge and operating experience in this new and potentially dangerous art. I believe that the quickest and safest way to progress is to build reactors at present government-owned isolated sites, under strict supervision of experienced technicians, under strict safety precautions, under government supervision and where direct government responsibility is exercised.... I would have no real objection to private industry participating at government-owned sites during this critical experimental stage of the art."

NO FURTHER ACTION

HR 12050 was not called up for action on the House floor but on July 27, the final day of the session, Rep. W. Sterling Cole (R N.Y.) of the Atomic Energy Committee tried parliamentary tactics in an effort to induce House leaders to schedule the bill for debate. For 6½ hours Cole blocked all legislative moves needing unanimous consent.

He said HR 12050 and another bill (HR 9743), to exempt nonprofit groups doing atomic research from the Public Utility Holding Company Act, "would do more to remove the logjam of reactor development of peacetime uses of atomic energy than anything else conceivable that the Congress can do.... Responsibility for failure to consider these vital bills must rest squarely on the (Democratic) leadership of the House."

Chet Holifield (D Calif.) replied that private industry was not willing to go ahead with large-scale reactors because there was no evidence they would be economic. He said the Republicans "stood in the way of the only practical program" by taking the lead in defeating the bill (HR 12061) for federal construction of large-scale power demonstration reactors.

UNIONS PROTEST REACTOR

In August two international unions filed petitions with the AEC aimed at blocking construction of a neutron-breeder reactor at Lagoona Beach, Monroe County, Mich.

The International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (AFL-CIO) Aug. 30 said the reactor posed a "catastrophic threat to the more than 1,849,000 citizens of Detroit and the 303,500 citizens of Toledo, Ohio, both 30 miles from Lagoona Beach." The danger, the petition stated, "lies in the possibility of the reactor exploding or otherwise going out of control."

The AEC had granted a "conditional" permit to the Power Reactor Development Co. of Detroit for construction of the reactor, designed to furnish about 100,000 kilowatts of electrical energy from uranium 235.

The United Automobile Workers of America (AFL-CIO) Aug. 31 said the AEC had violated the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 in issuing the conditional construction permit without holding formal hearings. The UAW said the plant as planned raised questions as to "reasonable assurances" of the project.

The AEC said that when the permit was granted it was made clear that operation of the reactor would not be permitted until its safety had been checked by the AEC. The "condition" of the conditional permit was that all safety factors must be checked, said the AEC.

ATOMIC MERCHANT SHIP

HR 6243 -- Reported by House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee (H Rept 1130) July 12, 1955.

- Passed by voice vote of the House July 18. (1955 Almanac, p. 463)

S 2523 -- Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 2258) June 18, 1956.

HR 6243 -- Passed by the Senate by voice vote, amended, June 20.

- Conference report (H Rept 2870) approved by voice votes of the House and Senate July 23.

P. L. 848 -- Signed into law July 30.

Congress in 1956 gave the "go-ahead" for construction of an atomic-powered merchant ship to promote the peacetime application of atomic energy. The estimated cost was $37 million. President Eisenhower Oct. 15 approved plans for a ship, powered by a pressurized water reactor, that would be 595 feet long and carry 100 passengers and 12,000 tons of cargo.

In 1955, Congress failed to approve President Eisenhower's proposal for a "peace ship" after doubts were raised as to its practicality.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, HR 6243:

Authorized construction of a nuclear-powered merchant ship.

Authorized appropriation of necessary funds for construction by the Maritime Administration and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Background

In April, 1955, President Eisenhower proposed an atomic-powered ship as "an atomic exhibit carrying to all people practical knowledge of the usefulness of this new science...." His proposal received a mixed reception in Congress, with objections that its building would slow down other work on nuclear ships and also that it would add little to United States prestige. Opposition led to linking the proposal with a plan for long-range development of an economically competitive nuclear-powered merchant ship.

Although various measures were reported by House and Senate committees and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy in 1955.and the House passed HR 6243, Congress took no final action. (1955 Almanac, p. 463)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARING -- June 6. Witnesses included Chairman Lewis Strauss, Adm. H.G. Rickover, and W.K. Davis, Division of Reactor Development, all of the AEC, and Under Secretary of Commerce Louis S. Rothschild.

ACTION -- The Committee June 18 reported S 2523 (S Rept 2258), authorizing construction of a nuclear-powered merchant ship. The Committee eliminated provisions for an atomic-powered "peace ship", said "the psychological effect on the people of the world would be as pronounced" with a merchant ship as with an exhibition ship. The report said "the experience gained in commercial operation would be of immense practical value to the United States shipping industry."

Floor Action

The Senate June 20 passed, by voice vote, the House bill (HR 6243), after substituting the amended text of S 2523 for the House language.

PROVISIONS -- As passed and sent to conference, HR 6243:

Authorized construction of a nuclear-powered prototype merchant ship.

Authorized appropriation of necessary funds for construction by the Maritime Administration and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Authorized research and experimental work by the Maritime Commission in connection with the project.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Give the AEC, as well as the Maritime Administration, jurisdiction over the bill's subject matter; June 20. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- June 20 -- Senators agreed that the Maritime Administration should design and build the ship but the AEC should design and build the nuclear powerplant for it.

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.), chairman of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee -- Wanted it clear that a merchant ship, not an atomic exhibit ship, was to be built. "I have pleaded with the AEC to submit a recommendation for something other than...a floating playhouse. They have declined to do so. It must be that the playhouse idea is still in their minds."

Magnuson -- Preliminary negotiations already had taken place between the Maritime Administration, the Secretary of Commerce and AEC, and "they have perfected a plan whereby they will work together."

Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) -- The "so-called showboat" would be more impressive than the proposed merchant ship. "Let us not delude ourselves that this will be a competitively and economically sound ship when it comes into operation."

Conference

REPORT -- House and Senate conferees July 21 filed a report (H Rept 2870) in which the only major change was deletion of the Senate provision authorizing research and experimental work by the Maritime Administration. The conferees said this provision was "not germane to the purpose of the bill."

ACTION -- The Senate and House July 23 agreed by voice votes to the conference report.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) said the conferees left it up to the Atomic Energy Commission, the Secretary of Commerce and the Maritime Administration to determine whether the ship should be a tanker, cargo vessel or a combination passenger-cargo ship.

ATOMIC UTILITY EXEMPTION

S 2643 -- Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 2287) June 22, 1956.

S 2643, HR 9743 -- Reported by Joint Atomic Energy Committee (S Rept 2529, H Rept 2694) July 11 and 12.

Two companion bills exempting companies from the Public Utility Holding Company Act during research work using atomic energy reactors failed to receive floor consideration by Congress in 1956. The bills originally would have exempted utilities from the Act when they combined efforts to produce electricity by atomic energy, but this provision was killed after opponents claimed it would result in monopolies beyond government regulation.

House Democrats blocked consideration of the bills late in the session, apparently in retaliation for House rejection of HR 12061, a bill to accelerate peaceful reactor development. (See p. 542)

PROVISIONS -- As reported by the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, S 2643 would have:

Granted an automatic exemption from the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 to nonprofit organizations operating atomic reactors primarily for research and development.

Terminated the exemption 30 days after issuance of an AEC order declaring the facility no longer was being used primarily for these purposes.

Provided that proceedings to determine whether the facility no longer was being used mainly for research could be instituted by the AEC, the Securities and Exchange Commission or any interested person.

Background

Following enactment of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, the Atomic Energy Commission, in January, 1955, announced the beginning of its power demonstration reactor program and invited proposals from private industry.

S 2643 was introduced in July, 1955. In its original form the bill's purpose was to encourage and facilitate, 1) production of electric energy from special nuclear material by private companies; 2) production of electric energy from new generating facilities using any source of power, through pooled resources of two or more electric utility companies.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Special Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- April 17 - May 24 on S 2643, to exempt utilities and other companies from the Public Utility

Holding Company Act when they combined efforts to produce electricity, especially by atomic power.

TESTIMONY -- April 17 -- Chairman J. Sinclair Armstrong of the Securities and Exchange Commission said the "broad and permanent" exemption granted by the bill would be "contrary to the interests of both consumers and investors." He said atomic power projects had not been delayed because of the Act.

April 18 -- Walker L. Cisler, president of Power Reactor Development Co. in Detroit, said a proposed $40 million Michigan atomic power project would be dropped unless an exemption bill such as S 2643 were passed.

William Mitchell, general counsel of the Atomic Energy Commission, said any exemption granted should be limited to the period when a reactor "is being used primarily for research and development. Such an exemption would enable companies to cooperate while the risks are unknown but would place nuclear generating facilities in the usual utility company pattern when the economic risks have become known," Mitchell said.

James L. Grahl of the American Public Power Assn. opposed the bill, stating it "could have the effect of removing entirely a vital segment of the nuclear power industry" from regulation.

April 19 -- J.E. Corette, president of the Montana Power Co., said plans for a $140 million hydroelectric project on the Snake River in Idaho "cannot proceed on the present basis" unless Congress amends the Holding Act.

April 24 -- Clyde T. Ellis, National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn. general manager, said enactment of S 2643 would result in "a monopolistic nuclear heat industry" and "deny to the American people many of the benefits of their...$15 billion investment in nuclear development..." and "prevent the development of low-cost power."

Robert MacGregor, New York State Electrical Workers Assn. vice president, said the bill could help convert atomic promises into actual jobs and payrolls.

Andrew J. McMahon of the AFL-CIO Utility Workers Union said his union endorsed the bill to "encourage the maximum development of low-cost electric energy from all sources of power."

OPPOSITION VOICED

May 18 -- Leland Olds, former chairman of the Federal Power Commission; Andrew J. Biemiller, legislative representative, AFL-CIO; Wallace J. Campbell, director, Cooperative League of the USA; Angus McDonald, National Farmers Union; and Harry A. Poth Jr., Minnesota Power & Light Co., opposed the bill.

Sens. John O. Pastore (D R.I.) and Charles E. Potter (R Mich.), sponsors of S 2643, said they would kill the section redefining holding companies, the provision which had generated the most controversy.

May 24 -- Dean E. Blythe Stason of the University of Michigan Law School said research and developmental projects in the atomic energy power field should be exempted from the Act. But SEC Chairman Armstrong said a bill to do that was unnecessary, contending the SEC could make the exemption through a rule.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The full Committee June 22 reported S 2643 (S Rept 2287) with amendments and referred it to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee. The Committee eliminated a provision relating to cooperative creation of new generating facilities using any source of power, and limited the Holding Company Act exemption to research and development work by nonprofit organizations.

The report said the bill's provisions had been limited to research because "when reactors can be built and operated as economically as competitive powerplants, they should be subject to such regulation as the public interest demands of any other generating facility."

The Joint Committee reported S 2643 (S Rept 2529) July 11 in the Senate and its companion bill (HR 9743--H Rept 2694) July 12 in the House.

BILL KILLED

HR 9743 was objected to on the House Consent Calendar July 26 -- one day before adjournment -- by Democrats Wayne L. Hays (Ohio), Melvin Price (Ill.) and Chet Holified (Calif.) and struck from the Calendar. Their objection apparently was in retaliation for the Republican-led move to reject HR 12061, a bill for peaceful reactor development. (See p. 542)

BANK HOLDING COMPANIES

HR 6227 --	Reported (H Rept 609) by House Banking and Currency Committee May 20, 1955.
•	Passed, with amendments, by the House on a 371-24 roll-call vote June 14, 1955. (See 1955 Almanac, p. 152)
S 2577 --	Reported, amended, by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 1095) July 25, 1955; additional amendments reported March 6, 1956 (S Rept 1095, part 2).
HR 6227 --	Passed by voice vote of the Senate, amended, April 25, 1956. (For roll-call votes on amendments, see p. 164)
•	House agreed to Senate amendments April 26, by voice vote.
P.L. 511 --	Signed into law May 9.

Congress in 1956 enacted legislation designed to preserve the independent banking system in the United States and halt the growth of potential banking monopolies. The Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 provided for federal regulation of the creation and expansion of bank holding companies and prohibited such companies, with certain exceptions, from managing or controlling nonbanking assets unrelated to the banking business.

There was little Congressional opposition to the bill but some Congressmen said it was discriminatory because of exemptions and exceptions. President Eisenhower, when he signed the bill May 9, called it a "step forward," but said it fell short of achieving its objectives because of "various exemptions and other special provisions which will require the further attention of Congress."

An estimated 46 bank holding companies in the U.S. were subjected to federal regulation under the Act's provisions. The law defined a bank holding company as one which owned or controlled two or more banks, and thus exempted an estimated 116 U.S. bank holding companies which owned only one bank.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956:

Defined a bank holding company as: (1) a company which directly or indirectly owned or controlled 25 percent or more of the voting shares of two or more banks or of a bank holding company; (2) a company which controlled the election of the majority of the directors of two or more banks; (3) a company for the benefit of whose shareholders or members, 25 percent or more of the voting shares of two or more banks was held by trustees.

Specified that the definition of a bank holding company did not include certain operations and companies, including banks carrying on normal trust business, certain investment companies, religious and charitable organizations and companies with at least 80 percent of their total assets in the field of agriculture.

Prohibited bank holding companies from acquiring assets of any additional bank located in another state unless the laws of that state specifically authorized acquisition by out-of-state companies.

Made it unlawful, without prior approval of the Federal Reserve Board, for a company to become a bank holding company.

Made it unlawful, without prior FRB approval, for a bank holding company to acquire voting shares in a bank if, after acquisition, the company would own or control, directly or indirectly, more than 5 percent of the bank's voting shares.

Made it unlawful, without prior FRB approval, for any bank holding company or subsidiary, other than a bank, to acquire all or substantially all of a bank's assets or to merge or consolidate with any other bank holding company.

Exempted from the requirement for FRB approval, transactions involving the conduct of trust business, normal bank-lending operations and acquisitions by a bank holding company of additional shares of a bank in which it already had majority control.

Permitted state or federal bank supervisory authorities to file with the FRB a formal recommendation that the proposed expansion of a bank holding company be denied; required the FRB to hold a hearing if such a recommendation was made and to approve or deny the proposed expansion by formal order; provided the right to judicial review of such orders.

NON-BANKING BUSINESS

Prohibited a bank holding company from acquiring, after enactment of the law, ownership or control of any voting shares of any company which was not a bank or a bank holding company.

Provided that existing bank holding companies could not, for more than two years after enactment of the law, retain control or ownership of any voting shares of a company not related to banking, or engage in a business other than banking, managing or controlling banks, or furnishing services to a bank of which it owned or controlled 25 percent or more of the voting shares.

Permitted the Federal Reserve Board to extend the two-year deadline for periods of not more than one year at a time, up to a maximum of five years after enactment of the bill or five years after the date upon which a company became a bank holding company, whichever was later.

Permitted bank holding companies to retain ownership and control of non-banking assets in specified cases where such retention would not violate the purposes of the bill -- including exemptions for tax-exempt labor, agricultural and horticultural organizations and certain activities of bank holding companies closely related to banking.

Prohibited the borrowing of subsidiary bank funds by a bank holding company or by another subsidiary in the bank holding company system (so-called upstream or horizontal borrowing).

Amended the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to provide tax exemptions for distributions of stock, securities and other assets of non-banking businesses which a bank holding company was required to divest itself of.

Subjected companies convicted of willful violation of the law's provisions to a fine of not more than $1,000 a day for each day during which the violation continued; subjected individuals convicted of willful participation in a violation to a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Bank Companies." (1955 Almanac, p. 477)

While existing law provided federal regulatory control over individual banks, prior to enactment of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 there was only limited control over the activities of bank holding companies that managed or controlled banks. The Banking Act of 1933 provided a measure of federal regulation if the bank holding company controlled at least one member bank of the Federal Reserve System, and only if the holding company wished to vote the stock of that member bank. As of December, 1954 only 18 holding company affiliate bank groups were under the supervision of the Federal Reserve Board while more than 100 bank holding companies were not subject to supervision. The 1933 law did not prevent a bank holding company from controlling non-banking interests.

Proponents of additional legislation contended that the existing law did not provide safeguards against undue concentration of control of banking activities. Bills to regulate the activities of bank holding companies had been introduced in nearly every Congress since 1938 when President Franklin D. Roosevelt requested such legislation in a special message to Congress. None of the bills was enacted and in 1955 Congress again began hearings on the subject.

Hearings were held by the House Banking and Currency Committee Feb. 28 - March 8 and by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee July 5 - 14. Legislation regulating bank holding company activity was generally supported by the Federal Reserve Board, the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency, the Independent Bankers Association and the American Bankers Association; opposed were representatives of individual bank holding companies, including the largest -- Transamerica Corp. Certain provisions of the various bills before the two committees were opposed by witnesses who otherwise supported the legislation.

COMPARISON OF BILLS

Similar bills were reported to the House May 20, 1955, (HR 6227 -- H Rept 609) and to the Senate July 25 (S 2577 -- S Rept 1095). There were two principal differences between the bills:

The House bill granted to bank supervisory authorities -- state authority for state banks and the Comptroller of the Currency for national banks -- the power to veto the proposed expansion of a bank holding company, regardless of the opinion of the Federal Reserve Board. The Senate bill gave the bank supervisory authorities an opportunity to file a formal recommendation with the FRB but left the final decision on expansion up to the FRB. The Federal Reserve Board and the Comptroller of the Currency were opposed to the House provision.

The House bill contained an absolute prohibition against the expansion of bank holding companies across state lines, while the Senate bill did not. The House version was supported by the Independent Bankers Association and opposed by the American Bankers Association, the FRB and the Comptroller of the Currency.

The House passed HR 6227 June 14 by a roll-call vote of 371-24. The Senate did not act on S 2577 in 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 477)

President Eisenhower, in his 1956 Economic Report, asked Congress to pass legislation to require federal approval of acquisition of banks by holding companies.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- Additional hearings were held Feb. 8 and 24, 1956, on S 2577.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 24 -- President Frank N. Belgrano Jr. of Transamerica Corp., San Francisco, said it would be "the rankest kind of discrimination to pass a bill which takes our property away and lets practically all others in the same line of business continue to hold comparable investments." Under the bill, he said, "Transamerica Corporation would be required to divest assets which represent in value approximately 50 percent of its entire business...while many bank holding companies, as well as holding companies owning savings and loan associations and personal finance companies, would not be required to divest."

ACTION -- The Committee March 6 reported amendments to the tax provisions of the bill and a number of clarifying and technical amendments (S Rept 1095, part 2). The Committee report said the amendments modified the bill's tax provisions "so as to prevent abuse and... make them more flexible to meet legitimate business needs by aligning them closer to similar provisions in the Internal Revenue Code of 1954."

Floor Action

Following three days of debate, the Senate April 25 passed HR 6227 by voice vote, after substituting the amended language of S 2577. By a roll-call vote of 58-18, the Senate accepted an amendment by Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) which barred bank holding companies from acquiring a bank in another state unless that state passed a law permitting acquisition by out-of-state companies. (For voting, see chart, p. 164) Douglas said no such laws were in existence. The amendment thus brought the Senate bill in line with House-passed provisions prohibiting expansion across state lines.

An amendment to permit bank holding companies to retain non-banking assets already held was rejected by a roll-call vote of 12-69. Also rejected, by a 28-51 roll call, was an amendment to broaden the definition of a bank holding company to include companies owning only one bank.

Three amendments adopted by voice votes had the effect of exempting three specific bank holding companies in Kentucky, Georgia and Florida from the requirement that they get rid of their non-banking assets. Committee amendments were accepted April 23 by voice vote.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.) -- Permit a bank holding company to own stock of an investment company whose sole business is investing in the securities of other companies, provided the investment company does not own more than a specified percent and value of such securities (Barkley said the amendment would apply only to one company in Kentucky); April 24. Voice vote.

Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- Exempt from requirement that bank holding companies get rid of non-banking interests, shares lawfully acquired and owned, prior to enactment of the bill, by a bank that owned a bank holding company or by any of its wholly owned subsidiaries (would apply only to one company in Georgia, George said); April 24. Voice.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Prohibit bank holding companies from acquiring, directly or indirectly, assets of any additional bank located in another state unless the laws of that state specifically authorized acquisition by out-of-state companies; April 24. Roll call, 58-18.

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Specify that no company shall be defined as a bank holding company if at least 80 percent of its total assets were composed of holdings in the field of agriculture (would apply only to one company in Florida, Holland said); April 25. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- Permit bank holding companies to retain non-banking assets acquired prior to enactment of the bill; April 25. Roll call, 12-69.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Revise definition of a bank holding company to include companies owning or controlling 25 percent or more of the shares of one or more banks; April 25. Roll call, 28-51.

Morse -- Provide that the filing with the Federal Reserve Board by any company of an application for exemption on the ground that it was not a bank holding company would exempt such company from provisions of the bill until the application had been acted upon by the FRB; April 25. Voice.

Morse -- Revise procedure to be followed by the FRB in disposition of an application to create or expand a bank holding company; April 25. Voice.

Morse -- Prohibit the FRB from denying any application for exemption from divestiture provisions until the applicant had been given due notice and granted an opportunity for a hearing; April 25. Voice.

Morse -- Provide that the FRB could not deny any application for a tax relief certificate (under divestiture provisions) without granting the applicant company an opportunity for a hearing; specify that the procedure provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act would apply to all hearings when the applicant had requested a hearing; April 25. Voice.

Morse -- Grant subpena power to the FRB in connection with hearings held under provisions of the bill; April 25. Voice.

Morse -- Provide for extension of time limit within which divestiture of assets must be effected and during which tax relief may be granted, pending final administrative or legal decisions; April 25. Voice.

DEBATE -- April 24 -- George, Holland and Barkley -- Said their amendments would not violate the purposes of the bill and, because of special conditions, the requirement for divestiture of non-banking assets was not warranted in the case of one company in each of their states.

Douglas -- Was "not happy" about the exemptions in the three amendments. "They came about in the play of stresses and strains of banking and political life...."

A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- Opposed the Douglas amendment, saying it would constitute a "federal freeze on future (bank holding company) expansion without regard to the merits of each individual case."

Douglas -- Holding companies had been expanding "rapidly" since 1955. "Transamerica has been extending its empire...and has banks in 10 states.... What the bill with my amendment does is to check a rising trend to monopoly without undoing it completely."

April 25 -- Capehart -- The bill was "unfair" because of its exemptions and the fact that holding companies owning only one bank did not have to get rid of their non-banking assets. "We ought to treat all companies alike... (permitting them) to retain their non-banking assets under certain rules and regulations."

Morse -- The bill lacks procedural safeguards and is "notoriously guilty of unfair discrimination.... Some of the one-bank companies that are exempted have great industrial empires."

Robertson -- "It is a physical impossibility to frame a bill which will please everyone.... The bill is pleasing and acceptable to all the independent bankers. They were the ones who for 18 years were asking Congress to enact legislation on this subject."

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- "Every moment we delay (enactment of the bill)...we are aiding the growth of potential banking monopolies."

HOUSE ACTION

The House concurred in Senate amendments to HR 6227 April 26, by voice vote and without debate, clearing the bill for the President.

ADMISSIONS TAX

HR 9875 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 2743) with amendment July 17, 1956.
- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote July 21.
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 2781) with amendments July 25.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote July 26.
- Senate amendment concurred in by the House by voice vote July 26.

P.L. 1010 -- Signed into law Aug. 6.

Congress in 1956 passed a law to ease the federal tax on admissions, citing the economic plight of the motion picture theater industry caused by television.

HR 9875 amended the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to exempt from the 10 percent federal tax admission tickets costing 90 cents and less. Under the 1954 Code admissions of 50 cents and less were tax-exempt. The exemption did not apply to admissions to horse or dog racing, sales outside the box office and in excess of the regular price, or amounts paid to cabarets.

The annual loss to the Treasury under the new law was estimated at $60 million.

Background

HR 9875 was reported July 17 by the House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 2743). As originally introduced, the bill would have taxed only the amount of admission in excess of $1, but the Committee amended it to make full admissions in excess of $1 subject to the 10 percent tax, while exempting that and lesser amounts. The report cited "the serious economic condition" confronting the motion picture theater industry because of television. The House passed the bill July 21.

The Senate Finance Committee July 25 reported another amended version of HR 9875 (S Rept 2781). The Committee said it substituted the 90 cent exemption level "because it believes...the $1...level is slightly higher than required...to provide tax-free admissions for most small or community type theaters. Also, the lower exemption provided...reduces the annual revenue loss by $10 million."

The Senate Committee's version was agreed to by both chambers July 26.

MOVIE ATTENDANCE REPORT

The Senate Select Small Business Committee July 27 filed a report (S Rept 2818) on "Motion Picture Distribution Trade Practices in 1956." The report said attendance at movie theaters reached a weekly average of 82 million persons in 1946, dropped to less than 46 million in 1955 and was expected to be smaller still in 1956. It said popcorn concessions were the only things that keep many movie theaters from losing money.

"The Committee believes," the report said, "that many of the problems and disputes between distributors and exhibitors can be settled within the industry itself if the responsible leaders on both sides will put a stop to the constant fratricidal warfare which does nothing but worsen a difficult situation."

MINERAL STOCKPILE

S 3982 -- Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 2146) June 6, 1956.
- Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, amended, June 18. (For roll-call vote, see p. 171)
- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 2596) July 3.
- Passed by the House, by voice vote, amended, July 13.
- Senate agreed to House amendments by voice vote July 13.

P.L. 733 -- Signed into law July 19.

Congress in 1956 passed a bill (S 3982) authorizing a two and one-half year subsidy program for the mining of tungsten, fluorspar, asbestos and columbium-tantalum. The cost of the program was estimated at $91.7 million, including handling and storage costs.

President Eisenhower in 1955 pocket vetoed a mineral stockpiling bill (HR 6373) because it would have required government purchases of minerals "in far greater quantities...than are necessary for defense purposes." (1955 Almanac, p. 471)

PROVISIONS -- The final version of S 3982, the Domestic Tungsten, Asbestos, Fluorspar, and Columbium-Tantalum Production and Purchase Act of 1956, was the same as that passed by the House. It:

Authorized the Department of Interior to establish a mineral purchase program until Dec. 31, 1958, and delegate procurement functions to the General Services Administration. (The Senate bill made GSA the administering agency.)

Provided for the following purchases:

Tungsten -- A minimum of 1,250,000 short ton units at $55 a ton for all producers, with a limit on the amount of purchase from any one producer of 5,000 short ton units a month. (The Senate gave small mines a higher price and placed no limit on monthly sales.)

Asbestos -- 4,000 tons under the same regulations and prices in effect Jan. 1, 1956, under the Defense Minerals Program Extension Act of 1953 (PL 206, 83rd Congress).

Fluorspar -- A maximum of 250,000 short tons, at $53 a short ton, with price to be determined by quality. (The Senate set a 250,000 ton minimum)

Columbium-Tantalum -- A maximum of 250,000 pounds at prices in effect Dec. 1, 1955.

Directed that all materials purchased under the program be kept available by the Department of the Interior for the strategic stockpile or a supplemental stockpile.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Mineral Stockpile" (1955 Almanac, p. 470)

President Eisenhower, in his pocket veto of the 1955 mineral stockpiling measure, said a long-range minerals program was needed instead of a "stop-gap measure" which extended government aid only to a segment of the industry. Congress, in considering the 1956 bill, said the responsible administrative agencies had not developed a long-range program. As a result, interim assistance was recommended by the Office of Defense Mobilization, the Department of the Interior and the Bureau of the Budget.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- April 19 - May 25 on S 3982, to authorize a federal subsidy program for critical minerals.

TESTIMONY -- Witnesses representing producers, the Interior Department and ODM suggested means for meeting emergency needs of the industry.

ACTION -- The Committee June 6 reported S 3982 (S Rept 2146), authorizing a mineral purchase program through Dec. 31, 1958. The report said passage of the bill was "a matter of considerable urgency" since purchase programs on some of the minerals had expired and others were due to expire.

Floor Action

The Senate June 18 passed S 3982 by voice vote with committee amendments. The Senate rejected, by a 22-32 roll-call vote, an amendment by Henry C. Dworshak (R Idaho) proposing a monthly limit of 5,000 units on tungsten sales by any one producer to the General Services Administration. (For voting, see chart p. 171)

DEBATE -- June 18 -- James E. Murray (D Mont.) -- Passage of S 3982 was necessary to prevent "widespread economic distress" in mining areas, since purchase programs on some of the minerals already had ended.

Dworshak -- Opposed S 3982 as "highly discriminatory.... Instead of bulwarking even the tungsten segment of the industry (it) will prove harmful because of its long-range implications."

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- The government has "enough of these minerals now in the stockpile to last us five years in the event of an all-out war." Yet the bill would commit the government "to buy the minerals at about 50 percent above the prevailing price...in the name of national defense."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Mines and Mining Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 25 on HR 11890 and other bills proposing a mineral purchase program.

ACTION -- The Subcommittee June 27 substituted the text of HR 11890 for S 3982 and reported it to the full Committee. The Committee reported S 3982 (H Rept 2596) July 3.

The report said the Committee regretted that production limitations and price reductions placed in the bill at the Administration's request "will cause considerable distress to a number of producers, both large and small." The report also emphasized the need for a long-range, non-defense domestic minerals program.

Floor Action

The House July 13 passed S 3982, authorizing a two and one-half year subsidy program for the mining of tungsten, fluorspar, asbestos and columbium-tantalum. The House measure included amendments requested by the Interior Department, GSA and Budget Bureau.

As passed by the House, the bill eliminated the Senate's higher rate for tungsten producers whose yearly production did not exceed 1,000 short ton units. The House measure set a monthly limit on tungsten sales, which the Senate bill did not do. The Senate's rate for fluorspar production also was reduced.

DEBATE -- July 13 -- Carl T. Durham (D N.C.) -- Enactment of the bill would set "a Congressional policy which has been needed for several years." Domestic tungsten production must be maintained because of increased imports and their lower prices.

Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) -- "Certain shortsighted proponents" of the foreign minerals program showed an "utter indifference" to the needs of the domestic industry.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 13 agreed, by voice vote, to House amendments to S 3982, clearing the bill for the White House.

DEBATE -- James E. Murray (D Mont.) -- The bill was "merely stopgap legislation," pending a program the Secretary of the Interior had promised to propose early in the next Congress.

Alan Bible (D Nev.) -- S 3982 was "a reasonable solution" pending a long-range mining program.

AUTOMOBILE DEALERS

S 3879 -- Reported by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 2073) June 4, 1956.
- Passed by a 75-1 roll-call vote of the Senate June 19, with amendments. (See p. 171)
- Reported by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 2850) July 20, amended.
- Passed by the House, by a standing vote of 146-45, amended, July 23.
- Senate concurred in House amendments by voice vote July 25.

P.L. 1026 -- Signed into law Aug. 8.

Congress in 1956 enacted a so-called "automobile dealers' day-in-court bill." The outgrowth of extensive hearings by Senate and House committees, the bill gave car dealers the right to sue in federal courts to recover damages from manufacturers who failed to act in good faith in carrying out the terms of dealer contracts, or in terminating them.

The bill was an avowed attempt to balance the unequal powers of dealers and manufacturers of automobiles. Dealers complained in hearings that cars were forced on them beyond their sales capacity, and if they failed to sell the assigned quota, their franchises might be abruptly terminated.

In signing the bill President Eisenhower said it represented "a new departure in the exercise of federal authority" which would "undoubtedly come to the attention of the courts."

Another bill, which would have authorized Federal Trade Commission regulation of unfair trade practices in the automobile distributing industry was reported July 25 by the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S 3946 -- S Rept 2791) but received no further action.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law S 3879:

Authorized automobile dealers to sue in federal district courts to recover damages from automobile manufacturers who failed to act in good faith in complying with the terms of dealer franchises or in terminating them.

Permitted manufacturers to plead as a defense in such a suit the failure of a dealer to act in good faith.

Defined "good faith" as the duty of both parties to act in a "fair and equitable manner" to guarantee the other party "freedom from coercion, intimidation, or threats," but stipulated that "recommendation, endorsement, exposition, persuasion, urging or argument" did not constitute a lack of good faith.

Set three years as the time limit in which suit could be filed after the cause of action.

Stated that the law should not invalidate any provision of state law unless there was a direct conflict between express provisions of the two laws which could not be reconciled.

Stated that the Act did not repeal or modify any existing provision of antitrust law.

Background

The grievances of automobile dealers were aired in late 1955 and 1956 before four Congressional Subcommittees. Dealers said manufacturers over-produced, forced cars on them, permitted "bootlegging" of cars to increase sales, required dealers to provide service and warranty without fair compensation and cancelled dealer franchises without notice.

The Judiciary Committees produced the bill (S 3879) giving injured dealers recourse to the federal courts. The Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committees considered bills to regulate unfair trade practices in the industry, the Senate Committee reporting a bill (S 3946) giving the FTC regulatory authority.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Automobile Marketing Policies Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 19-March 12, intermittently, on charges of abuses in auto marketing.

BACKGROUND -- The Subcommittee Jan. 18 released a report which said that a high percentage of auto dealers felt "bootlegging" of new cars had hurt their business and blamed it on over-production or sales pressure from the manufacturers.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 19 -- George Romney of American Motors Corp. predicted a sales decline because "we are going to begin in 1956 to pay the price of bootlegging, price packing, over-production, misleading advertising and absurd credit."

Jan. 20 -- Frederick J. Bell, National Automobile Dealers Assn. executive vice president, recommended: eliminating "phantom freight" charges -- charges made by the manufacturer to the dealer which the manufacturer had not been required to pay; permitting manufacturers to put anti-bootlegging clauses into franchises, so dealers selling to bootleggers could have their contracts cancelled; setting prescribed geographical sales areas for dealers.

Jan. 23 -- Paul Herzog, NADA research division manager, said there was a fixed charge for shipping from Detroit even if cars were assembled at places near the purchase area.

March 9 -- Harlow H. Curtice, General Motors president, said unethical advertising, car bootlegging and misleading price claims comprised a "cancerous growth that has taken place during the past two and a half years."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- March 9 -- Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes, head of the antitrust division, said action would have to be taken "someday soon" if "economic concentration in the automobile industry" should continue "as in the recent past." Curtice replied: "Nonsense, that's all. Just nonsense."

LEGISLATION OPPOSED

March 10 -- Matt Triggs of the American Farm Bureau Federation said the organization opposed modifying antitrust legislation to restrict car sales to certain territories and did not see the need for legislation to curtail auto bootlegging.

Stacy Rowell, president of the National Independent Automobile Dealers Assn., said factory-dealer franchises should be adjusted through voluntary arrangements, not by federal legislation.

March 12 -- Henry Ford II, president of Ford Motor Co., said he authorized soliciting of his dealers for political contributions and would do so again to re-elect President Eisenhower. He said dealers suffered no penalty if they did not contribute.

BILLS CONSIDERED

HEARINGS -- June 4-21 on S 3946 and other bills to regulate auto dealer-factory relationships.

TESTIMONY -- June 4 -- Chairman A.S. (Mike) Monroney (D Okla.) said S 3946 was an attempt to blend into one bill the proposals of several other Senators for regulating the auto industry. Monroney said his bill "writes certain ground rules of fair play into the marketing of automobiles along the lines the Subcommittee's 15 month study indicates to be desirable, both from the standpoint of the industry and from the standpoint of the public." He said S 3946 would police unfair methods of competition by providing recourse to the Federal Trade Commission and courts for breaches of contract. Monroney described as unfair practices: forcing of unwanted products on auto dealers; bootlegging of new cars by auto dealers without giving the manufacturer an opportunity to repurchase them; requiring dealers to maintain service and warranty facilities without an equitable system of compensation from manufacturers; cancelling dealer franchises without specifying why.

Rep. Brooks Hays (D Ark.) said "the time is ripe for legislation."

Frederick J. Bell, executive vice president of the National Automobile Dealers Assn., endorsed S 3946. "This bill, far from granting special privileges to anyone, would place the retail automobile dealer in a comparable position to other small businessmen." Carl E. Fribley, NADA president, also endorsed the bill.

Lloyd C. Halvorson, National Grange economist, said S 3946 was an improvement over other bills but "we still have some fears." He said manufacturer-dealer relationships "are matters largely to be worked out by private contract negotiation.... For government to get into the business of establishing the manufacturer-dealer relationship is to get into a form of socialism where government controls property, even if it does not own it." He said the bill might lead dealers to order cars in small quantities to keep prices high. He said the dealers were asking for a tightening up of their franchises so they would not "have to face the full force of competition like most businesses."

June 5 -- William H. McGaughey, vice president of American Motors Corp., said his firm and its dealers "can work out our marketing problems without specific legislation. We are strongly opposed to provision 5 which would require the manufacturer to assume legal responsibility for liquidating assets of a terminated dealer. This section appears to require the factory to come to the aid of the dealer regardless of the dealer's own conduct," he said.

June 6 -- Sen. Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) described his own bill (S 3543) regarding auto marketing.

GM, FORD OPPOSITION

June 12 -- William F. Hufstader, General Motors vice president, opposed the section of S 3946 which would require the manufacturer to repurchase cars dealers could not sell. Hufstader said the provision placed "no limitation upon the right of the dealer to return cars to the manufacturer for repurchase. He may do so for any reason which may be entirely to his self-interest."

William T. Gossett, Ford Motor Co. vice president and general counsel, said enactment of S 3946 "would result in higher prices to the public, create unemployment and inject federal control into day-to-day business operations of auto dealers and manufacturers." He suggested industry be given "sufficient time" to work out its own problems.

June 21 -- Stanley N. Barnes, chief of the Justice Department Antitrust Division, opposed the bill, saying it would open a "Pandora's box" of legislation for other industries. He said special legislation to protect franchised car dealers was not "sound law."

Chairman John W. Gwynne of the Federal Trade Commission said the legislation would invite "wholesale intervention by the government in the conduct of business between private parties."

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The full Committee July 25 reported S 3946 (S Rept 2791) to regulate competition and distribution of autos in interstate commerce. Chairman Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) said the vote was 11-2, with one member abstaining and another absent.

No further action was taken on the bill.

"DAY IN COURT" BILL

COMMITTEE -- Senate Judiciary.

ACTION -- June 4 reported S 3879 (S Rept 2073), which permitted automobile dealers to sue in federal district courts to recover double damages from manufacturers who failed to act in good faith in carrying out dealer contracts, or in terminating or failing to renew them.

In its report the Committee said Antitrust Subcommittee hearings held in 1955 "indicated that great pressure had been exerted...upon dealers to accept automobiles, parts, accessories and supplies which they did not need, did not want or did not feel their market was able to absorb."

Floor Action

The Senate June 19 passed the bill by a roll-call vote of 75-1. The bill was amended to permit suits for actual, rather than double, damages and to require the dealer as well as the manufacturer to act in "good faith." (For voting, see chart p. 171)

During debate Sen. Charles E. Potter (R Mich.) read a letter from Deputy Attorney General William P. Rogers opposing the bill as reported. Rogers said the bill's language might "raise constitutional problems" and its provision for double damages would provide dealers with "a sanctuary from the rigors of competition (which) seems at odds with the basic principles of antitrust."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate and sent to the House, S 3879:

Authorized automobile dealers to sue in federal district courts and recover damages from automobile manufacturers who failed to act in good faith in complying with the terms of the dealer franchise or in terminating it.

Permitted manufacturers to plead as a defense in such a suit the failure of a dealer to act in good faith.

Defined "good faith" as the duty of both parties to act "in a fair, equitable and non-arbitrary manner" to guarantee the other party "freedom from coercion, intimidation or threats" so as to preserve "the equities... inherent in the...relationship."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.), four amendments voted en bloc -- Redefine "good faith" to mean the duty of each party to a dealer franchise to guarantee the other party freedom from coercion or intimidation; permit the manufacturer in a suit to plead as a defense the lack of good faith of the dealer; substitute "compensatory damages" for "twofold" damages; strike out section 2 of the bill as redundant; June 19. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- June 19 -- O'Mahoney -- "There has developed in the United States a situation...whereby a comparatively few manufacturers...because of disproportionate economic power, hold almost complete control over the activities of the small automobile dealers.... Before the (Judiciary Committee) hearing was held...most ...franchises were year to year franchises, terminable at will. The independent local automobile dealers -- ...more than 40,000... -- who had invested, upon the average, not less than $100,000, found themselves absolutely unable to defend themselves..."

John W. Bricker (R Ohio) -- "There have been cases of arbitrary action -- perhaps unfair action -- on the part of the companies in their dealings with their dealers.... But...I think the record will show that a very small minority of the dealers are complaining about their relationships."

Charles E. Potter (R Mich.) -- "The Senate is being asked to act upon a bill which will have far-reaching effect. The bill seems tame on the surface.... No hearings were held directly on this bill.... Representatives of the industry have not testified on the proposed legislation. Dealers have not testified.... The various departments of government have not testified...nor have consumer or labor groups...."

A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- "Whenever the government has moved...to insure fair play...it has always been charged with interference with the rights of business to operate.... We are dealing with the No. 1 industry of America and the world. If that is not an important enough industry in which to legislate, I do not know what industry would be."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Finance and Commerce Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- April 11 to May 2 on charges of abuses in auto marketing.

TESTIMONY -- April 11 -- E.W. Ivey, administrative assistant to the general manager of General Motor's Chevrolet division, said he opposed as "unnecessary" a proposed bill (HR 528) to ban freight charges in excess of actual costs. He said his company had "eliminated so-called 'phantom' freight."

W.F. Hufstader, GM vice president in charge of distribution, said he endorsed a proposed bill (HR 2688) to ban auto bootlegging but opposed proposed legislation (HR 6544) to permit closed-territory dealerships. He said HR 2688 would remove a "legal roadblock" to stopping bootlegging. Hufstader said HR 6544 would "prohibit the normal ebb and flow of trade and prevent the customer from purchasing where he desires."

May 2 -- Assistant Attorney General Barnes said "the efficient and impartial enforcement of the antitrust laws will not be served by singling out particular industries for exemption from those laws for conduct which, in other industries, is liable to criminal prosecution." Barnes said automobile "bootlegging" was caused by "factory sales pressure and factory set delivery charges." He said he would be "reluctant to see an increase in the number of causes for which a manufacturer may arbitrarily terminate a dealer franchise."

He specifically opposed HR 2688 relating to "bootlegging" and did not endorse HR 528 or HR 6544.

JUDICIARY HEARINGS

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary, Antitrust Subcommittee No. 5.

HEARINGS -- July 2-10 on companion bills (S 3879 and HR 11360) to permit auto dealers to bring suit against manufacturers.

TESTIMONY -- July 2 -- Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) said the Ford Motor Co. had tried to influence its dealers to oppose the proposed legislation. He said a number of selected dealers were called to Dearborn, Mich., in telegrams signed by Henry Ford II, for a one-day meeting June 20. Later, a deluge of telegrams was received by Congress opposing the bills, O'Mahoney said.

Steward C. Holman, New Jersey Ford dealer, said "I don't want it to be construed in any way that the Ford Motor Co. could brainwash me...."

Hayes Tucker, chairman of the National Committee of Ford, Lincoln, Mercury Dealers, said his group decided to oppose the legislation "when dealers became aware of its possible consequences." He said his committee was formed after the June 20 Dearborn meeting.

Frederick J. Bell, executive vice president of the National Automobile Dealers Assn., said dealers opposing the bills were told passage would place them under government control. Bell said Congress should pass the legislation before it adjourned.

William H. McGaughey, vice president of American Motors Corp., said the bills "would be most harmful to small business, to users of motor vehicles and to the smaller automobile manufacturers."

July 3 -- B.E. Holt, Illinois Ford dealer, said he was "amazed to find out we dealers were supposed to have been brainwashed at a meeting in Dearborn." Holt was dismissed as an "evasive witness" by Chairman Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) after Holt declined to give a "yes" or "no" reply to Celler's question, "Would it be a hardship to require a manufacturer to be fair?"

July 9 -- Robert A. Bicks, of the Department of Justice Antitrust Division, said a "large portion of the staff" of the Department's litigation section was engaged in antitrust investigations of General Motors and Ford Motor Co. He said the Ford investigation had been in progress since 1953. Bicks said the Justice Department, "from an antitrust standpoint," would not object to legislation limited to giving an individual dealer some damage remedy in cases of "coercion, intimidation or threats." He said any legislation designed to stamp out "bootlegging" of new cars would be contrary to the spirit of the antitrust laws.

William T. Gossett, Ford vice president and general counsel, said the legislation would: tend to perpetuate bootlegging; undermine the dealer system; decrease sales and production; increase unemployment; and eventually increase prices of cars and service to the public.

William F. Hufstader, GM vice president, said the proposed legislation was "unnecessary and undesirable," since the company's new contract provisions and policies already had accomplished "the real objectives" of the bills.

July 10 -- Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks in a letter to the Committee opposed the legislation on grounds it "would raise numerous problems of interpretation and would undoubtedly create confusion in franchise relationships between manufacturers and dealers."

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Judiciary Committee July 20 reported S 3879 (H Rept 2850) with amendments. The House version retained the basic provisions of the Senate bill but redefined "good faith" to meet objections of the Justice Department, eliminating the reference to preserving the "equities" in the dealer-factory relationship.

House amendments also defined manufacturers and dealers affected as those dealing in passenger cars, trucks and station wagons; limited the right to sue to cases occurring after passage of the bill; and set a three-year limit for filing suits after the cause of action. Other amendments provided that the bill should not conflict with federal antitrust law or over-ride state laws except where conflicting provisions could not be reconciled.

A minority report by William M. McCulloch (R Ohio) and Hugh Scott (R Pa.) said the bill "adopts the wrong approach" and "interferes with the individual's right to contract." Their report said that "while federal legislation of some character...may be required, precipitous and unprecedented action during the closing days of this Congress is unwarranted and unnecessary."

Floor Action

The House July 23, by a standing vote of 146-45, passed S 3879 with committee amendments.

DEBATE -- July 23 -- Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) -- "Legislation is required to remedy the manifest disparity of economic bargaining power...between the franchised dealer and these monolithic automobile manufacturers.... Automobile dealers...subjected to economic duress and intimidation by manufacturers have been unable to obtain redress in the courts...."

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- "This...is a very temperate bill. We all hope it will produce the desired results so that automobile dealers will not be subjected in the future...to...atheistic, capitalistic practices by certain big companies."

Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) -- "I cannot agree...that this is a relatively innocuous piece of legislation. It is probably the most important bill...during the 25...years I have been here because you are changing the concept of a rule under the Constitution that no state, even the federal Congress, can impair the obligations of contracts."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 25 by voice vote concurred in House amendments to the bill.

DEBATE -- Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- Objected to two paragraphs in the House Committee report (H Rept 2850) which he said would encourage automobile bootlegging. The report said the manufacturer's obligation to act in good faith was not affected by, and he could not plead as a defense if sued, the fact that a dealer violated his franchise by selling to other dealers or at cut-rate prices.

CONGRESSIONAL VETO

HR 7992 -- Reported by the House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 2151) May 14, 1956.
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 24. (For roll-call vote, see p. 224)

The House July 24 passed a bill (HR 7992) permitting Congress to veto -- by adopting a resolution of disapproval -- Defense Department plans to discontinue, or transfer to private industry, military operation of commercial-type projects. On May 10 the House had deleted a similar provision from the fiscal 1957 defense appropriations bill (HR 10986) by a 222-156 roll-call vote. (See chart, p. 200) President Eisenhower opposed the rider as a violation of the "constitutional principle" of separation of powers. (1955 Almanac, p. 220) The Senate took no action on the bill.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 7992 would have:

Enacted into permanent law 29 legislative provisions that had previously appeared in defense appropriation acts.

Required the Secretary of Defense to submit to Congress any proposed transfers of operations performed by civilian personnel of the Department for three continuous years or more, and in which more than 10 employees were engaged.

Prohibited any proposed transfer from taking effect until after 60 continuous days of session had elapsed since submission of the proposal.

Permitted any Member of Congress to introduce a resolution disapproving such a transfer, and provided that the transfer could not take place if a resolution of disapproval was adopted within the 60-day period.

Background

In 1955 President Eisenhower described as "unconstitutional" a rider in the fiscal 1956 Defense appropriation bill that granted the Appropriation Committees -- for one year -- power to block the shifting to private industry of work performed by Defense Department civilians. He said "Congress has no right to confer upon its committees the power to veto executive action or to prevent executive action from becoming effective." (1955 Almanac, p. 220)

Nevertheless, the House Appropriations Committee Oct. 20, 1955, ordered the Defense Department to delay closing 14 government-operated plants until Congress reconvened in January. The Defense Department planned to let private industry take over the work done in the federal plants.

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

ACTION -- May 14 -- four days after the House deleted a similar provision from the fiscal 1957 defense appropriations bill (HR 10986) -- reported a bill (HR 7992 -- H Rept 2151) that included the veto-power provision.

Floor Action

HR 7992 was passed by the House July 24 by voice vote and sent to the Senate. The veto-power provision, a committee amendment, was accepted July 24 on a 201-185 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 224)

DEBATE -- Republicans objected to the veto-power amendment. They said it would keep the federal government in competition with private business. Democrats said the provision established an orderly means for the government to transfer these operations to private industry.

July 21 -- Noah M. Mason (R Ill.) -- "They have tried this roadblock before and we have turned it down. They have simply brought it back under a new guise."

Robert L.F. Sikes (D Fla.) -- "It does not keep the government in business.... We seek to insure a proper screening process."

SERVICEMEN'S SURVIVORS

HR 7089 -- Reported by House Select Committee on Survivors' Benefits (H Rept 993) June 28, 1955.

- Passed by voice vote of the House July 13. (1955 Almanac, p. 346)
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 2380) June 28, 1956.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate, amended, July 2.
- Conference report (H Rept 2718) agreed to by voice votes in the Senate and House July 17.

P.L. 881 -- Signed into law Aug. 1.

Congress in 1956 passed legislation increasing benefits for survivors of servicemen and bringing 2,850,000 military personnel under the social security system. In signing the measure "with great satisfaction," President Eisenhower said "Congress, by completely revising the entire military survivor system, for the first time in many years, has given a measure of financial security" to military families.

PROVISIONS -- The Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivor Benefits Act (HR 7089):

Increased Veterans Administration survivor benefits and repealed the existing $10,000 free insurance program for servicemen.

Set the minimum monthly payment to a serviceman's dependent survivor at $112, plus 12 percent of his basic pay (a $122-$266 range).

Revised the six months' death gratuity payment paid by the Defense Department, setting the range at $800 - $3,000 (instead of the existing $468 - $7,656 range).

Authorized payment of the gratuity to survivors of men who died of service-connected causes within 120 days after separation from service.

Placed all servicemen under contributory social security, replacing the existing $160 per month gratuitous wage credit, effective Jan. 1, 1957.

Authorized government reimbursement to the social security trust fund for wage credits given servicemen since Sept. 15, 1940.

Directed that persons currently receiving Veterans Administration compensation could elect to remain under that system or go under the new one, if eligible.

BACKGROUND -- HR 7089 was passed by the House in 1955 after detailed study by a Select House Committee. (1955 Almanac, p. 346)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- June 4 - 8, 1956.

ACTION -- June 28 reported HR 7089 (S Rept 2380), raising benefits for military survivors and placing 2,850,000 military personnel under the social security system. The Senate version was similar in most respects to the 1955-passed House measure.

The amended Senate bill eliminated the Public Health Service Commissioned Corps and Coast and Geodetic Survey from the definition of members of the military service during peacetime (approximately 2,700 persons) and continued the right of a veteran to take out term insurance within 120 days after separation from service. The House bill prohibited this right to non-disabled veterans. The Senate also added a provision giving servicemen who had been in the armed services in 1940-45 the right to coverage under the National Service Life Insurance Act.

Floor Action

The Senate July 2 passed HR 7089, amended, by voice vote and sent it to conference.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 7089 conformed to the final version of the bill except that it:

Authorized free $10,000 insurance in time of war or national emergency.

Granted persons with active service between Oct. 8, 1940, and Sept. 2, 1945, the right, within one year, to apply for and receive insurance under the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Raise minimum monthly dependency and indemnity compensation for a widow to $130 plus 8 percent of her deceased husband's pay; July 2. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- July 2 -- Humphrey -- The bill's differential between benefits for privates' and officers' widows was "far too discriminatory." The civilian income of many inductees "considerably exceeded" their income as a private.

Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- The increase suggested by Humphrey would raise the cost of the bill by $55 million a year.

Lister Hill (D Ala.) -- Elimination of Public Health Service personnel from the bill "is not equitable or consistent."

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- There were 14 million veterans of World War II and the Korean War who did not have National Service Life Insurance, and the Senate provision would give them an opportunity to get it. Only the Bureau of the Budget objected to the provision. The cost would be approximately $3.50 a policy.

Conference

REPORT -- House-Senate conferees, reporting July 16 (H Rept 2718), agreed to delete the Senate provisions reviving the $10,000 free insurance program in time of war and permitting World War II and Korean War veterans to take out policies for one year after the bill's enactment. Conferees restored coverage for Public Health Service Commissioned Corps and Coast and Geodetic Survey personnel, eliminated in the Senate bill.

ACTION -- The House and Senate July 17 agreed by voice votes, without debate, to the conference report.

MILITARY PUBLIC WORKS

HR 9893 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 1890) March 15, 1956.
- Passed by a 377-3 roll-call vote of the House April 12. (See p. 194)
- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 2364) June 26.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate, amended, June 28.
- Conference report (H Rept 2641) agreed to by voice vote in both houses July 9. (For House roll-call vote, see p. 216)
- Vetoed by President Eisenhower July 16.

HR 12270 -- Discharged from further consideration of House Armed Services Committee (no report filed) July 17.
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 17.
- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 2775) July 25.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate, amended, July 26.
- House agreed to Senate amendments by voice vote July 26.

P.L. 968 -- Signed into law Aug. 3.

Congress July 26 completed action on the military public works bill (HR 12270) for fiscal 1957 following a Presidential veto July 16 of the first military construction bill (HR 9893). The veto was based on "objectionable measures" requiring Congressional committee approval of Defense Department plans for construction of military housing and Talos missile facilities. The legislation authorized projects, with an estimated cost of $2.1 billion, at military bases in the United States and overseas.

The First Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1957 (HR 12138) provided $1.8 billion for military construction authorized in HR 12270.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 12270, the Military Construction Act of 1956, authorized for military public works:

Army
Inside United States	$ 86,916,000
Outside U.S.	35,763,000
Classified	200,783,000
Subtotal	$ 323,462,000
Navy
Inside U.S.	$ 292,572,000
Outside U.S.	61,625,000
Classified	84,043,000
Subtotal	$ 438,240,000
Air Force
Inside U.S.	$ 742,873,000
Outside U.S.	405,061,000
Classified	213,000,000
Subtotal	$1,360,934,000
TOTAL	$2,122,636,000

The bill also:

Authorized $180,000 for construction of housing for the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff at Fort McNair, D.C., and for special communications facilities.

Authorized appropriations for construction of 3,790 new housing units for service personnel.

Required the Secretary of Defense to submit reports on proposed housing contracts to the Senate and House Armed Services Committees. Contracts could not be made until 180 days after the submission of reports, unless the Committees approved an earlier date.

Permitted the Secretary of Defense to acquire by purchase, donation, condemnation or other means, military housing financed with mortgages insured under the Wherry Act and leased to private individuals (so-called "Wherry housing").

Authorized the Secretary of Defense to use up to $250 million of foreign currencies -- acquired through Commodity Credit Corp. transactions -- for construction or acquisition of family housing and community facilities in foreign countries.

BACKGROUND -- The legislation was part of the Defense Department program for 1956. It authorized construction of additional public works "urgently needed" by the Department of Defense. Congress authorized $2,360,530,300 for similar purposes in fiscal 1956. (1955 Almanac, p. 343)

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 20 - March 8, 1956, on HR 8625, the Defense Department military public works bill.

ACTION -- March 15 reported as a clean bill HR 9893, amended (H Rept 1890), which would authorize almost $2.1 billion for construction at military installations.

Floor Action

The House April 12 passed HR 9893 by a 377-3 roll-call vote, authorizing $2,085,170,000 for military construction in fiscal 1957. The bill provided $16 million for Air Force construction of facilities for the Navy-developed Talos anti-aircraft missile. (For voting, see chart p. 194)

Debate centered on proposed sites for an Air Defense Command base in Michigan.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Gerald R. Ford Jr. (R Mich.) -- Authorize an Air Force base at Kalkaska, Mich., instead of at Manistee, Mich.; April 12. Standing vote, 52-85.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services, Real Estate and Military Construction Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 7 - April 19 on S 3122.

ACTION -- The Committee June 26 reported (S Rept 2364) a substitute version of HR 9893, recommending $2,106,611,000.

Floor Action

The Senate June 28 passed the bill by voice vote with amendments, authorizing $2,113,158,000 in military construction for fiscal 1957.

The bill also authorized:

$50 million for Army-Navy work on the intermediate range ballistic missile program.

$137 million for Nike and other Army anti-aircraft facilities, no money for Navy-developed Talos sites, requested by the Air Force.

$180,000 for housing the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff at Fort McNair and for special communications equipment.

Construction of 3,790 houses for service personnel.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Alan Bible (D Nev.) -- Require restudy of needs before the Navy can acquire land for a gunnery range at Black Rock, Nev.; June 28. Voice vote.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Permit settlement of claims by property owners for less than $1,000; June 28. Voice.

Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) -- Authorize $6,547,000 for construction at Hobbs Air Force Base, N.M.; June 28. Voice.

DEBATE -- June 28 -- John Stennis (D Miss.) -- The Armed Services Committee found that Nike is the "only operational" anti-aircraft system the country has, whereas Talos is "in the experimental stage." "There is apparent overlapping of assigned roles and missions in this field" that the Defense Department should iron out.

Conference

A Senate-House conference committee July 7 reported (H Rept 2641) a compromise version of HR 9893 that followed Senate allocations for most projects and provided a total authorization of $2,138,886,000. Included was a House provision, denied by the Senate, authorizing about $16 million for construction of site facilities for the Navy-developed Talos missile. Conferees agreed that the authorization should not be used until "the Secretary of Defense has come into agreement with the (Senate and House) Armed Services Committees...with respect to... the relative merits" of the Nike and Talos missile programs and the "proper assignment of roles and missions."

The compromise bill provided for construction of a new Air Defense Command base at Manistee, Mich., as designated by the House, in lieu of Kalkaska, Mich., as provided in the Senate version.

Eliminated from the bill was a Senate amendment authorizing payments to landowners whose property value was decreased as a result of the establishment of military facilities adjacent to their property. The problem was so "fraught with complexities in individual application" that extended study would be necessary to develop legislation, the conferees said.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 9 agreed to the conference report by voice vote, after rejecting on a 29-343 roll-call vote a motion by Victor A. Knox (R Mich.) to recommit the report with instructions to substitute Kalkaska, Mich., as the site of the new Air Defense Command base. (For voting, see chart, p. 216)

DEBATE -- Knox -- The Kalkaska site had been selected by the Air Force, land already had been acquired and residents of the area had committed themselves to $475,000 in contracts for expansion of facilities. "This base if moved to Manistee will cost the taxpayers...$3.9 million more than it would if built at Kalkaska."

Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- The controversy was debated April 12 when the House approved the Manistee site. Testimony from the Air Force showed "that from a military standpoint these two bases were equal."

A.L. Miller (R Neb.) -- While many old Air Force bases were unused, the Air Force is buying new land for new bases. "Something ought to be done about that."

Vinson -- The Air Force has adopted a policy of dispersing its B-52 bombers throughout the U.S. in order to eliminate concentration. "A complete survey will be made...to see what facilities which were built during World War I and II can be used in the dispersal program without buying any more land."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 9 agreed to the conference report on HR 9893 by voice vote, thus clearing the bill for the White House.

DEBATE -- John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Expressed disappointment that the conferees had eliminated his amendment providing compensation to landowners with property adjacent to military facilities. "Some of these people will be seriously hurt unless something is done.... They have the right of redress for damages caused by their government."

Veto

President Eisenhower July 16 vetoed the bill.

In his veto message (H Doc 450), Mr. Eisenhower said he could not approve HR 9893, in spite of its "manifest importance to national defense," because of two provisions that "violate the fundamental constitutional principle of separation of powers." The "objectionable" provisions specified by the President:

Prohibited the use of a $16 million authorization for construction of Talos guided missile site facilities "until the Secretary of Defense shall have come into agreement with the (Senate and House) Armed Services Committees with respect to its utilization."

Prohibited the Department of Defense from entering into any contract for construction or acquisition of military housing units unless the Department "in each instance has come into agreement" with the Armed Services Committees.

The President made an "urgent" request to Congress to reenact the bill without these provisions.

HOUSE ACTION

A new military construction bill (HR 12270) -- minus the "objectionable" provisions, but otherwise identical to HR 9893 -- was approved by the House Armed Services Committee July 17 and passed by voice vote of the House on the same day.

DEBATE -- In a brief discussion of the bill, Rep. Carl Vinson (D Ga.), Chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said he hoped to present a bill "during this session...whereby the Congress may retain some voice in and supervision over the construction of Capehart (military) houses.... I feel confident that we can still retain some surveillance over these important matters.... It is to be hoped that the (Defense) Department will reach a decision as to the best type (of missile) before they spend the money" on the Talos missile.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Sen. Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), Chairman of the Armed Services Committee, July 17 said his Committee would "be a bit more deliberate" in considering the new construction bill. The President, he added, "has heretofore approved at least two bills containing similar provisions to those he found so objectionable.... This can but lend credence to the many rumors that the executive branch...is planning drastic reductions in our military strength as soon as the Congress leaves Washington."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 26 -- one day before adjournment -- passed by voice vote the new Military Construction Act (HR 12270).

The Senate amended the measure by deleting the entire Talos authorization and requiring the Secretary of Defense to submit reports on proposed housing contracts to the Senate and House Armed Services Committees. The contracts could not be made until 180 days after submission of the reports unless the Committees approved an earlier date. Senators said this provision was "in keeping" with suggestions made in the veto message.

The House July 26 agreed to the Senate amendments by voice vote, and the President signed the bill into law Aug. 3, without comment.

POWER RATE INCREASE

S 3338 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Public Works Committee April 18, 1956 (S Rept 1764).

- Passed, amended, by the Senate April 19 by voice vote.
- Reported, amended, by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee July 18 (H Rept 2788).
- Passed, with amendments, by the House, on a 201-140 roll-call vote, July 27. (See p. 226)
- House amendments agreed to by voice vote of the Senate July 27.
- Pocket vetoed Aug. 9.

The bill was designed to prevent the Southwestern Power Administration from increasing power rates to rural cooperatives and public bodies before July 1, 1957. SPA, marketing agency for power generated at government flood control dams in six southwestern states, had proposed to increase the price from 5.5 to 7.7 mills a kilowatt hour. The rate increase was designed to help relieve a deficit in power revenues under a schedule calculated to repay federal investment in power facilities in 50 years.

Sponsors of the bill from southwestern states contended it was unfair to increase rates to co-ops and public agencies entitled to preference in the purchase of federal power without also increasing rates charged to private power companies and industrial consumers of SPA power. The bill's 11-month freeze of rates was termed a moratorium to allow time for a thorough study of the entire SPA rate structure and accounting system, with a review of the possibility of renegotiating contracts with private purchasers of SPA power.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- April 18 reported S 3338 (S Rept 1764) with an amendment. As reported, the bill would have barred rate boosts on power from all federal projects from Jan. 1, 1956 to July 1, 1957. The Committee amendment provided that the restriction should not apply to existing contracts which contained specific rate increase provisions. The Interior Department opposed the bill.

Floor Action

The Senate April 19 passed S 3338 by voice vote after accepting a technical amendment.

DEBATE -- April 19 -- Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- SPA's proposed rate increase would result "either in the serious impairment of the financial structure of most rural electric cooperatives in the Southwest, or in their being forced into such a position that they will have to fail to meet their commitments for repayment of their loans to the government."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

ACTION -- July 18 reported S 3338 (H Rept 2788) with amendments that limited the rate-freeze to SPA only. The bill also directed use of an accounting system under which the cost allocated to power would be only that of adding power to flood control projects. Finally, the bill directed the Secretary of Interior to renegotiate existing contracts with non-preference customers to maintain uniformity in preference and non-preference rates. The Senate Committee amendment was deleted from the bill.

Floor Action

The House July 27 passed S 3338, amended, by a 201-140 roll-call vote. Previously H Res 625, the rule under which the bill was considered, was agreed to first by an 84-72 division, then by a 219-126 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 226)

It was decided, in the closing hours of the session, not to press the committee amendments concerning cost allocation and contract renegotiation, so these amendments were deleted by voice vote.

DEBATE -- July 27 -- Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.) -- One third of all SPA power went to a non-preference customer, Reynolds Metals Co., under terms of a 30-year contract which did not contain a rate redetermination clause. This "amounts to a subsidy of nearly $1 million a year."

Earl Chudoff (D Pa.) -- The Reynolds contract was made in 1952 when there was a shortage of aluminum for defense needs. "Just because we cannot review that contract, I cannot see why we have to penalize the farmers and little people in the southwest area."

Clair Engle (D Calif.) -- Hardships caused by the severe drought in the area justified the bill. "When there is no water to run through the powerhouse, there is no power to sell, and if the droughts are bad enough, the farmers cannot buy what power there is."

Veto

President Eisenhower pocket vetoed the bill Aug. 9. He said the only purpose S 3338 would serve would be to prevent the Secretary of Interior from fulfilling his obligations under the Flood Control Act of 1944 to establish rate schedules. The bill would result in a revenue loss of $2,167,000 in fiscal 1957, he said.

ILLINOIS WATERWAY

HR 3210 -- Reported by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 1029) June 29, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 6, 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 480)
- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 2578) July 14, 1956.
- Passed by the Senate, on a 43-33 roll-call vote, July 27, 1956. (For voting, see chart p. 185)
- Pocket vetoed Aug. 9.

The Senate, on the last day of the session, sent to the President a bill, similar to one he pocket vetoed in 1954, to increase the flow of Lake Michigan water through the Illinois River and channels connecting it to the Mississippi River. Opponents of the bill said it would hamper Great Lakes shipping and Niagara and St. Lawrence power development. It was vetoed Aug. 9.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, HR 3210:

Authorized Illinois and the Sanitary District of Chicago to withdraw, under the supervision of the Army, an annual average of 2,500 cubic feet of Lake Michigan water a second, for three years.

Set the maximum diversion at any time as 5,000 cubic feet per second.

Authorized $280,000 for a study by the Army Engineers and the Public Health Service of the effects of the increased diversion; $190,000 of the cost could be charged to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Directed the Secretary of the Army to report to Congress by Jan. 31, 1959, the results of the study and to recommend whether the increased diversion should be continued.

BACKGROUND -- The House Public Works Committee, in its 1955 report on HR 3210, said the bill met the objections to the previous measure which the President had vetoed (1954 Almanac, p. 519). The Bureau of the Budget said the bill was "not in accord with the program of the President." The House passed the bill by voice vote July 6, 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 480)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- July 14 reported HR 3210 without amendment (S Rept 2578). The Committee said the Canadian government's opposition to the bill was "unreasonable," since Lake Michigan lay wholly within the United States and was not considered a "boundary water" under terms of a 1909 boundary treaty.

Floor Action

The Senate July 27 passed HR 3210 on a 43-33 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 185)

DEBATE -- July 27 -- George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- The bill would divert water needed to provide power for the northeastern states.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- "I hope the Senator does not think that the sole function of the Great Lakes is to supply water in order that New York and Vermont may reap the benefits."

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- "It is a fantasy...for Vermont to say she has a vested interest in the waters of Lake Michigan."

Alexander Wiley (R Wis.) -- "This proposal is 'special interest' legislation at its worst.... If enacted, it may have serious effect on our Great Lakes and other interstate commerce." None of the President's objections to the 1954 bill "has been successfully answered by proponents of this latest version...."

VETO STATEMENT

In pocket vetoing the bill Aug. 9, President Eisenhower said an Army Corps of Engineers' report on the project was nearing completion and that it would be "unwise" to authorize the project before the report was submitted. He also said Canada, Wisconsin, Ohio and New York had registered objections to the legislation.

WATER POLLUTION

S 890 -- Reported with amendment by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 543) June 14, 1955.
- Passed by Senate with amendment by voice vote June 17, 1955.
- Reported, amended, by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 1446) July 26, 1955.
- Recommitted to House Public Works Committee Jan. 23, 1956.

HR 9540 -- Reported with amendment by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 2190) May 21, 1956.

S 890 -- Passed by the House, amended, by roll-call vote of 338-31 June 13, 1956. (See p. 208)
- Conference report (H Rept 2479) agreed to by both houses by voice votes June 27.

P.L. 660 -- Signed into law July 9.

The 1956 amendments to the Water Pollution Control Act of 1948 (PL 845, 80th Congress) increased federal funds available to states for the development of water pollution control programs and authorized a maximum of $500 million to assist communities to build sewage treatment works. Congressional action, completed June 27, 1956, three days before the Act was due to expire, June 30, extended and expanded the Act for the five-year fiscal period ending June 30, 1961.

President Eisenhower sought extension of the program but made no request for the federal matching funds for the construction of community sewage treatment facilities. There was Congressional and pressure-group accord on the need for strengthening the original Act, but many opposed the authorization of federal funds to help communities build sewage treatment works.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, S 890:

Authorized $500 million to be spent in matching funds to help communities build sewage disposal plants, with no more than $50 million to be spent in any one year.

Limited allocations to single projects to 30 percent of the cost, or $250,000, whichever was less.

Directed that at least 50 percent of funds allocated go to communities of 125,000 population or less.

Authorized $100,000 for research fellowships.

Required the Surgeon General to help states prepare comprehensive water pollution control programs and conduct research projects.

Authorized the U.S. to give states $3 million in matching funds in each of the fiscal years 1957 through 1961 to assist them in comprehensive water pollution control programs; the money would be allocated to the states on the basis of population, extent of pollution and need. The federal share could not exceed two-thirds of the total cost.

Directed the Surgeon General to approve pollution control projects before the states received federal money.

Established a nine-member Water Pollution Control Advisory Board to be named by the President.

Specified procedures for enforcing pollution rules that could be instituted either in the state where pollution originated or where it was discharged --

a. Whenever the Surgeon General "has reason to believe" that pollution is occurring, he would call a conference of the officials in the states where the pollution originates and where it adversely affects residents.

b. The Surgeon General after the conference would recommend remedial action.

c. If no action was taken six months after his recommendation, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare would call a public hearing where the pollution originates.

d. After the hearing, the Secretary would recommend steps to be taken by the polluter and give him at least six months to carry them out.

e. If still no remedial action were taken, the Secretary, upon written request of either the state in which the pollution originated or the one adversely affected, would request the Attorney General to bring suit against the offender.

Background

Water -- the blood of the nation's economy -- is becoming polluted faster than mechanical hearts can purify it.

The problem is an acute one since demand for fresh, clean water is expected to double by 1975 (see chart) while the supply will remain fairly constant. The waste expected from atomic energy plants in future years magnifies the difficulties.

The only solution is keeping available water so clean it can be used over and over during its flow to the ocean. This means more sewage treatment plants to reduce drastically discharges of raw waste into streams and onto the ground.

A stream becomes polluted when more waste is put into it than its oxygen can decompose, or purify. Poison discharged on the ground often seeps down to the water table, the source of well water.

Who Uses Most Water?

(Usage in billion gallons of water per day)

	1900		1955		1975
	Usage	Percent	Usage	Percent	Usage	Percent
Communities	5	12%	22	8%	37	9%
Industries	15	38	120	46	246	54
Irrigation	20	50	120	46	170	37
Total	40	100%	262	100%	453	100%

Public Health Service statistics show that sewage purification will have to be increased both in volume and in efficiency to stem the tide of pollution. This means money and lots of it.

Municipalities will have to spend $5.3 billion in the next 10 years to keep water usable, according to the PHS. Industry will have to spend at least that and probably more because of the huge poison byproduct of synthetics and nuclear production.

The $5.3 billion municipal total is only $1.4 billion less than municipalities spent on sewage disposal from 1920 to 1954.

PHS figures broken down for municipal needs as of Jan. 1, 1955: $1.7 billion to replace worn out facilities; $1.7 billion to meet future demands up to 1965; $1.9 billion to build the backlog of projects on hand.

PHS officials said no figures were available on what industry should spend for sewage disposal facilities in the next 10 years, but they said the total was at least equal to the municipal estimate of $5.3 billion.

The accompanying chart shows more raw sewage has been dumped into waterways even though proportionally more of the total waste has been treated by municipalities and industry since 1930.

PHS figures indicate that municipal dumping of untreated sewage into waterways between 1930 and 1955 went up 10 percent despite the fact the percentage of total waste discharged into the streams declined from 82 percent to 58 percent in that period.

The amount of the waste dumped into waterways by industry nearly doubled between 1930 and 1955 despite

ADMINISTRATION VIEWPOINT

President Eisenhower, in his health message on Jan. 31, 1955, asked Congress to "provide greater assistance to the states for water pollution control programs. As our population grows and demands for water increase, and as the use of chemicals expands, our water supply problems become more acute. Intensified research in water pollution problems is needed as well as continuing authority for the Public Health Service to deal with these matters. The present Water Pollution Control Act expires on June 30, 1956. This termination date should be removed and the Act should be strengthened."

In his health message on Jan. 27, 1956, the President said: "Problems of water pollution control grow more pressing with population growth and with industrial development and expansion.... I again recommend that the authority in this Act be strengthened and placed on a permanent basis."

In its June, 1955, report, the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government said: "The correction of pollution has been left largely to state and local control. However, the U. S. Public Health Service states that as we are becoming an urban industrial nation, the streams can no longer take the load of pollution that we are putting on them. They state that of about 100 million people living in cities, about 25 million have water with adequate treatment, while 31 million people are in communities having no pollution treatment. The rest have inadequate treatment. The problem of pollution being often of interstate character is in need of definite national policies."

1955 LEGISLATION

The 1948 Water Pollution Control Act was signed into PL 845, June 30, 1948. The Senate passed the bill by a voice vote July 16, 1947. S 418 was passed by the House, amended, on a 138-14 division vote amid cries it was too lenient and invaded states' rights. (1948 Almanac, p. 152)

S 890, sponsored by Sen. Edward Martin (R Pa.), was reported (S Rept 543) June 14, 1955, by the Senate Public Works Committee and passed by the Senate by voice vote June 17, 1955. It was reported (H Rept 1446) by the House Public Works Committee July 26, 1955, and recommitted by unanimous consent Jan. 23, 1956.

Congress July 6, 1955, completed action on a related bill (S 928) to provide a program of research and technical assistance in air pollution abatement. Titled the "Air Pollution Control Act of 1955," it was signed by President Eisenhower (PL 159) July 14, 1955.

House

COMMITTEE -- House Public Works, Rivers and Harbors Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 12 - 15, 1956, on S 890 and HR 9540.

TESTIMONY -- March 12 -- Asst. Sec. Roswell Perkins of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said the current Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 466-466j) should be revised to strengthen its research authority, to increase federal aid to states developing water pollution programs and to clarify enforcement provisions. He opposed grants for sewage plants because the "inadequate level of municipal construction in this field appears to be due less to the inability of municipalities to finance such construction than to the fact that waste treatment facilities are commonly assigned a low priority in the capital financing programs of municipal governments."

Dr. Mitchell Wendell of the New York State Joint Legislative Committee on Interstate Cooperation said his group favored amendments which would require the Surgeon General to have a written request from the state involved before holding hearings on pollution complaints. "Enforcement provisions of both proposals (S 890, HR 9540) would discourage expansion of state and interstate programs," Wendell said.

Dr. Daniel Bergsma, New Jersey State Commissioner of Health representing the Assn. of State and Territorial Health Officers, said the association held a special two-day conference Feb. 8 and 9, 1956, which led to the endorsement of HR 9540 except for the section on granting money to states to build sewage treatment plants. Bergsma said the association favored federal loans instead of grants.

March 13 -- Executive Secretary Milton P. Adams of the Michigan Water Resources Commission said a majority of state representatives which met in Atlantic City Oct. 11, 1955, favored HR 9540.

Mayor R.P. Weatherford Jr. of Independence, Mo., representing the American Municipal Assn., endorsed HR 9540. He said "municipalities are financially unable to deal effectively with the water pollution problem.... The federal government...is the only agency which can, in cooperation with the states and local government, solve the pollution problem."

March 14 -- Leonard E. Pasek of the National Assn. of Manufacturers said current legislation was satisfactory and there was no need for large federal grants to combat pollution further. He said states and municipalities should handle the problem.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee May 21 reported a bill (HR 9540 -- H Rept 2190) to extend and strengthen the Water Pollution Control Act.

HR 9540 authorized $5 million in each of the fiscal years 1957-61 to states and interstate agencies to help them develop water pollution control programs. The federal share would be between one third and two thirds of the project's cost, depending on how the per capita income of the state compared to the U.S. average. HR 9540 also authorized the appropriation of $500 million, in amounts of no more than $50 million a year, to help pay for state and interstate agency sewage treatment plants. The federal grants were limited to one third of the plant's construction cost or $300,000, whichever was smaller. At least half of the total U.S. funds allocated for sewage plants were required to go to communities of 125,000 population or less. The bill authorized the Attorney General to bring suit against a polluter when requested to do so in writing by the state where the pollution originates or by the state suffering from the pollution.

Committee Republicans George A. Dondero (Mich.), J. Harry McGregor (Ohio), Frank J. Becker (N.Y.), Gordon H. Scherer (Ohio), Bruce Alger (Texas) and Donald W. Nicholson (Mass.) objected to the provision to grant federal money to help states build sewage disposal plants. They said the section "embarks the federal government not only upon a new spending spree but also upon an entirely new federal activity. While the present bill provides for the expenditure of half a billion dollars, this is only a small fraction of the amount that will be required ultimately for such activity."

Floor Action

The House June 13 passed, by a 338-31 roll-call vote with amendments, a bill (S 890) to authorize federal money to help states fight water pollution. The text of HR 9540 was substituted for that of S 890 before the measure was returned to the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 208)

Debate centered on whether the U.S. should spend $500 million to help states plan and build sewage disposal plants. Opponents of the provision held it would set an expensive precedent while proponents said lack of sewage plants was the biggest single cause of water pollution.

A recommittal motion by J. Harry McGregor (R Ohio) was defeated by a 165-215 roll-call vote. He moved to send the bill back to committee to eliminate the section regarding grants for sewage disposal plants.

PROVISIONS -- As returned to the Senate, S 890 was similar to the conference version agreed to by both houses June 27. The House version differed from the final bill in these major respects:

The House version authorized $5 million annually -- compared to $3 million in the conference version -- in matching funds to assist states to develop water pollution control programs.

It stipulated that no grant for community sewage treatment works could exceed one third the cost of the project or $300,000, whichever was smaller. The final version set the limits at 30 percent of the cost or $250,000, whichever was smaller.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

George A. Dondero (R Mich) -- Eliminate the section that would give federal money to states for sewage treatment plants; June 13. Standing vote, 98-109. Teller vote, 112-118.

Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.) -- Require both the offending and complaining state to request federal court action before a suit is started against a polluter; June 13. Voice.

Russell V. Mack (R Wash.) -- Delete provision for awarding federal scholarships for pollution engineers; June 13. Voice.

DEBATE -- June 13 -- Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio) -- "Remember, if you adopt this policy (of giving federal money to build sewage disposal plants), it would be a return to PWA days of the depression and would of course favor certain communities only."

John A. Blatnik (D Minn.) -- "The crux of the national pollution problem is the lag in construction of waste treatment works."

John F. Baldwin Jr. (R Calif.) -- If the Jonas amendment requiring two states to request U.S. court action against a polluter were adopted, "it would take the heart right out of the enforcement provision of this bill."

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- If the bill "does not result in real progress toward pollution cleanup, I predict the Congress will be writing much stronger legislation within a very few years. The water supply situation of this country is becoming that critical."

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee June 26 reported (H Rept 2479) a compromise version of S 890 that embodied most of the provisions of the House-passed bill. The House version included authority to spend up to $50 million a year from a $500 million fund to help communities build sewage treatment works. The Senate-passed bill did not include a similar provision. The conferees agreed on the program but reduced the maximum amount which could be spent on one project from $300,000 to $250,000.

ACTION -- The House and Senate June 27 adopted by voice votes the conference report (H Rept 2479) on S 890.

President Eisenhower July 9 signed S 890 into Public Law 660. He said the bill, by providing federal grants to localities to pay part of the cost of constructing sewage treatment works, went beyond the legislation he recommended.

Group Stands

A sampling of group stands on water pollution legislation:

AMERICAN MUNICIPAL ASSN. -- "The only way we can win this (pollution) battle is with federal aid.... We maintain that water pollution control is a national problem and that the government does have a clear-cut responsibility to work with the states and municipalities toward its solution...." March 13, 1956.

NATIONAL ASSN. OF MANUFACTURERS -- "State and local governing bodies are competent to handle pollution abatement and stream improvement, and where problems arise incident to interstate waters, these can best be handled most expeditiously and satisfactorily through interstate compacts.... The fiscal position of the states or local governments should not be enhanced by direct federal payments to them.... We believe that much more will be accomplished by cooperation than by compulsion." March 14, 1956.

NATIONAL WILDLIFE FEDERATION -- "...(We) have for years supported and worked for stronger state laws (regarding water pollution)." March 14, 1956.

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS -- "We believe the primary responsibility for pollution clean-up rests on state and local governments. The federal share should be one of stimulating, of coordinating, of research and surveys and of law enforcement when necessary..." March 14, 1956.

AMERICAN RECREATION SOCIETY -- "The complications of interstate waterways make it imperative to give the federal government the right to intervening." March 15, 1956.

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION -- "The federal government...should assist and promote and educate and hold up the problem for public inspection -- but should rely upon state governments and instrumentalities of state governments and upon enlightened public interest to carry the major burden of getting the job done." March 14, 1956.

MANUFACTURING CHEMISTS ASSN. -- "...there has been no showing of need for increasing the federal government's enforcement power in the field of water pollution abatement and therefore we do not approve of granting such power." March 14, 1956.

RIVERS AND HARBORS VETO

HR 12080 --
- Reported by House Public Works Committee July 7, 1956 (H Rept 2639).
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 23.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Public Works Committee July 25 (S Rept 2784).
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate July 26.
- Conference report (H Rept 2955) agreed to July 27 by the House, on a 130-31 standing vote, and by the Senate, by voice vote.
- Pocket vetoed Aug. 10.

Rivers and harbors bills often are called "pork barrel" measures because they contain many local projects of interest to individual Members of Congress. The 1956 pork barrel bill (HR 12080) would have authorized federal construction of $1.6 billion worth of flood control, navigation, power and beach erosion projects in almost every state. Actual construction of the projects would have been contingent upon later appropriation of funds.

President Eisenhower vetoed the bill because, he said, many of the projects had not been thoroughly reviewed and approved by the executive branch, the Army Engineers or the states concerned. It was the first veto of a pork barrel bill since Franklin D. Roosevelt did so in 1940.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, HR 12080 authorized the following appropriations:

RIVERS AND HARBORS

Navigation projects	$ 104,721,000
Other projects	22,537,000
Subtotal	$ 127,258,000

FLOOD CONTROL

New projects or modifications	$ 347,693,000
Increased basin authorizations	653,300,000
Lower Mississippi Basin (including Army Engineers and Interior Department projects)	289,445,000
Missouri River Basin (Department of Interior)	200,000,000
Subtotal	$1,490,438,000
TOTAL	$1,617,696,000

The bill omitted a provision of previous rivers and harbors acts which required submission of reports by the Army Engineers before funds could be authorized for any project.

Projects on which the reviews required by existing law had not been completed at the time of the President's veto included: four each in Connecticut and California; three in Florida; two each in Louisiana, Illinois and Massachusetts; one each in Maryland, Oregon, Alabama, Tennessee, South Dakota, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Also lacking final review were the following interstate projects; six Mississippi River projects; Millwood Reservoir and alternate reservoirs in Oklahoma and Arkansas; and a water hyacinth eradication program.

BACKGROUND -- The bill contained the largest authorization of any rivers and harbors bill in the last 12 years. Comparison with previous bills:

Act	Authorized
1944	$1,331,968,000
1946	1,293,295,000
1950	1,453,723,125
1954	1,072,351,814

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.
HEARINGS -- May 1 - June 26.
ACTION -- July 7 reported HR 12080 (H Rept 2639). The Committee approved projects totalling $1,343,871,000.

Floor Action

The House July 23 passed HR 12080 by voice vote.
PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 12080 authorized the following appropriations:

RIVERS AND HARBORS

Navigation projects	$58,087,000
Other projects	22,517,000
Subtotal	$80,604,000

FLOOD CONTROL

New projects or modifications	$ 181,522,000
Increased basin authorizations	592,300,000
Lower Mississippi River Basin	289,445,000
Missouri River Basin	200,000,000
Subtotal	$1,263,267,000
TOTAL	$1,343,871,000

DEBATE -- July 23 -- Clifford Davis (D Tenn.) -- "This bill contains 85 projects: 29 for rivers and harbors, 7 for beach erosion and 49 for flood control.... The projects are distributed in 36 states. No section was omitted, no partisanship shown...."

J. Harry McGregor (R Ohio) -- "We have $572,505,500 worth of projects in this bill that have not met the standards" established by Congress over a period of years.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.
HEARINGS -- July 16-17.
ACTION -- July 25 reported HR 12080 (S Rept 2784) with amendments. The Committee added $45,479,000 to the House authorization for rivers and harbors and $182,671,000 to the authorization for flood control projects.

Floor Action

The Senate July 26 passed HR 12080 by voice vote with amendments.
PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 12080 authorized the following appropriations:

RIVERS AND HARBORS

Navigation projects	$104,721,000
Other projects	22,537,000
Subtotal	$127,258,000

FLOOD CONTROL

New projects or modifications	$ 347,693,000
Increased basin authorizations	653,300,000
Lower Mississippi River Basin	289,445,000
Missouri River Basin	200,000,000
Subtotal	$1,490,438,000
TOTAL	$1,617,696,000

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) -- Increase from $1,761,000 to $2,936,000 the authorization for Port Washington Harbor, Wis.; July 26. Voice vote.

Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) -- Add $44,500,000 for Saylorville Dam and Reservoir on the Des Moines River, Iowa; July 26. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- Delete $25 million authorization for Bruces Eddy Dam, Idaho; July 26. Standing.

DEBATE -- July 26 -- Chavez -- Projects on which Army Engineers' reports had not been received were included in the bill because the projects were "of an emergency nature." The Committee, however, did not wish to establish a precedent and "believes that complete and full justification of the economic feasibility of these projects should be established before appropriations are made for their construction."

Neuberger -- The Bruces Eddy project "would do irreparable damage to natural resources and to wildlife." It would imperil elk feeding grounds and steelhead trout migration in the Clearwater River system.

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- "The evidence before the Committee was that there would be no damage to the wildlife of the area by reason of the Bruces Eddy project.... I do not believe the Senate will consider the protestations of the Senator from Oregon with reference to a project in Idaho....."

Conference

The House, by a 130-31 standing vote, and the Senate, by voice vote, July 27 agreed to the conference report (H Rept 2955) on HR 12080. As sent to the President the bill authorized appropriation of $1,617,696,000 for river, harbor and flood control projects. The final total was the amount approved by the Senate July 26 and was $273,825,000 more than the House had voted July 23.

Veto

President Eisenhower Aug. 10 pocket vetoed HR 12080. In his veto message the President said: "While the majority of the projects...have been given adequate study and review with the executive branch and by the affected states, there are still a large number which have not been reviewed in accordance with the orderly procedures set forth in the applicable laws." The President said review requirements had not been met for 32 projects in the bill, "involving financial commitments of over $530 million." Mr. Eisenhower said he regretted it was necessary to veto the bill but that his action "need cause no delay in starting the many worthwhile projects in the bill" as the measure did not actually appropriate the money for them.

House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.) Aug. 11 said the President "recklessly disregarded the will of Congress" in refusing to sign the bill.

AIR SUBSIDY

S 3449 -- Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 2015) May 17, 1956.

- Passed by a 53-22 roll-call vote of the Senate July 9. (See p. 176)

HR 8902 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 2530) June 29.

- Recommitted by the House on a 196-153 roll-call vote July 26. (See p. 226)

The Senate in 1956 passed, but the House voted to recommit, bills (S 3449, HR 8902) which would have had the effect of increasing airline subsidies. Under provisions of the almost identical bills, airlines could have sold used flight equipment without having the net gain -- which might be substantial in the existing market -- taken into account in fixing subsidies, provided the funds were reinvested in new equipment.

Opponents said the legislation would give a windfall to one airline, Pan American, which the Commerce Department estimated would have received $17.3 million of a total $22 million in increased subsidies over the five years 1951-55, had the proposal been in effect. Supporters said new equipment which the bills would enable airlines to buy would decrease costs and, after two or three years, result in lower subsidies.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

ACTION -- May 17 unanimously reported S 3449 (S Rept 2015) with amendments. The Committee report stated that Civil Aeronautics Board members were divided on the merits of the legislation, with Harmar D. Denny Jr. and Chan Gurney supporting the bill, and Chairman Ross Rizley and Vice Chairman Joseph P. Adams opposing it. The Department of Commerce and the General Accounting Office also were opposed.

The Committee said it was "convinced that by aiding carriers now to obtain the new equipment they required, the possibility of decreasing subsidy payments...(was) enhanced.... This legislation in the long run would insure advantages both to the industry and to the taxpayer."

Floor Action

The Senate July 9 passed the bill by a roll-call vote of 53-22. The Senate rejected on a 22-62 roll call a recommittal motion by John J. Williams (R Del.) and, on a 37-46 roll call, his amendment to require that the investment base used to determine airline subsidies should reflect capital gains covered by S 3449. The effect of the amendment would have been to reduce subsidies by reducing the amount on which an 8 percent return is guaranteed.

Also rejected, on a 32-43 roll call, was an amendment to restrict application of S 3449 to airlines grossing less than $50 million a year, which would have ruled out Pan American Airlines. (For voting, see chart, p. 176)

The Senate June 14 had postponed final action after an inconclusive voice vote on the bill. Thomas E. Martin (R Iowa), temporary presiding officer, said he was in doubt as to the outcome of the close voice vote. By unanimous consent the Senate postponed a roll-call vote.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 3449:

Instructed the Civil Aeronautics Board, in calculating airline revenue for the purposes of determining subsidies, not to count capital losses or gains derived from the sale of flight equipment if the funds were reinvested in new equipment within a reasonable period.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Deduct capital gains from sales of flight equipment reinvested in new equipment from depreciation base of such new equipment for purposes of determining air subsidies; provide for recovery by the Treasury of the balance of retained capital gains, if the airline goes off subsidy; July 9. Roll-call vote, 37-46.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Restrict application of the formula in S 3449 to airlines with annual gross income of less than $50 million; July 9. Roll call, 32-43.

SUBSIDIES DEBATED

DEBATE -- June 14 -- John J. Willams (R Del.) -- "Under existing law, without the bill, the (CAB) takes into consideration both gains and losses, whereas, if this bill were passed, it would take into consideration only losses, which means that the carriers would be reimbursed for their losses in the computation of the subsidy formula, but when they made money, they could put it in a separate account."

Alan Bible (D Nev.) -- "In considering the amount of subsidy payments to airlines, the CAB endeavors to give the carrier approximately an 8 percent return on its capital investiment if it is a national carrier, and a 9 percent return...if it is an international carrier.... We should be greatly interested in strengthening our airlines by giving them the opportunity of offering to the people the very fastest and most modern and safest type of air transportation.... The Committee...felt that although there would be a temporary increase in subsidy..within the second, third or fourth year the subsidy would be decreased, for the very simple reason that with modern... equipment the cost of operation per revenue mile would decline."

Williams -- "As I interpret the bill, it will bring about a perpetual increase in the annual subsidy (and) leave in the hands of management the power to regulate their own subsidies.... It is not a general airline bill, because practically all the benefits will go to one airline.... Figures prepared by the Department of Commerce (show) that over the past five years, had the bill been in effect, it would have cost an additional $21,970,000, of which $17,288,000 would have gone to Pan American and three other companies getting most of the remainder...."

July 9 -- Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) -- "This industry...is entitled to the opportunity for growth which it must have if we are to keep up with the last word in efficiency and good air transport...."

Williams -- "Let us not fool ourselves; this is a little extra gravy for a special group that has already been riding the gravy train.... Every government agency has expressed opposition to the bill as it is now written."

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Wanted to "set a ceiling on the benefits to be derived from the bill.... The way the bill is written, the major benefits will go to one line.... (It) will result in Pan American's getting the lion's share of the subsidy payments."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

ACTION -- June 29 reported a bill (HR 8902) to permit subsidized airlines to sell operating equipment without having the capital gains count as revenue in determining air subsidies if they were reinvested "within a reasonable time" in new equipment "similar or related" in use. John W. Heselton (R Mass.) July 9 filed minority views. He said the bill was not consistent with the basic policy of the Civil Aeronautics Act that subsidies should be based on "need" and that in practice the bill would be discriminatory.

Floor Action

The House July 26, by a 196-153 roll-call vote, returned HR 8902 to Committee. The recommittal motion was made by John W. Heselton (R Mass.), who led the fight against the bill. Earlier the House adopted, by a 184-178 roll call, a resolution (rule) to permit consideration of the bill. (For voting, see chart p. 226)

Before the successful recommittal motion, an amendment restricting the capital gains formula to sales of flight equipment was approved by voice vote. Rejected by voice votes were amendments to limit the formula to airplane sales; to make the effective date of the law Aug. 15, 1956, rather than Jan. 1, 1956; and to bar from the law's benefits airlines grossing more than $50 million a year.

DEBATE -- July 26 -- Walter H. Judd (R Minn.) -- "(This bill) amounts to a tremendous windfall for the airlines...that are still on subsidy."

Oren Harris (D Ark.) -- Unless airlines were given the means to buy costly new equipment, the travelling public would be in danger.

ALASKA MENTAL HEALTH

HR 6376 -- Reported, amended, by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee July 25, 1955 (H Rept 1399).

- Passed by the House, by voice vote with amendments, Jan. 18, 1956.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 2053) May 25.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate June 7.
- Conference report (H Rept 2735) agreed to by the Senate July 16, by voice vote, and by the House July 20, by a 130-16 standing vote.

P.L. 830 -- Signed into law July 28.

One of the most controversial pieces of legislation tackled by Congress in 1956 was a routine bill designed to give the territory of Alaska responsibility for the care of its own mentally ill residents. Opponents of HR 6376 said it would authorize establishment of a "concentration camp for political prisoners" and a "Siberia in Alaska for the deportation of undesirable patriots." Responsibility for the proposal, which was backed by the Eisenhower Administration, was variously attributed to plotting by Communists, Socialists, Zionists and Catholics. The bill's supporters in Congress, finding themselves charged with treason, said no legislation ever had been more widely "misinterpreted."

HR 6376 finally was enacted, but only after all commitment procedures -- one of its most controversial features -- had been eliminated.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 6376:

Authorized the territorial legislature to prescribe procedures for the care, commitment and treatment of the mentally ill of Alaska.

Authorized appropriations, over a 10-year period, of $6 million to provide an integrated mental health program for Alaska; disbursement of funds would be controlled by the Surgeon General.

Authorized appropriation of $6.5 million for construction of hospital facilities in Alaska.

Granted to the territory one million acres of public land in Alaska and provided that income from the land "shall first be applied to meet the necessary expenses of the mental health program of Alaska."

Reserved to the United States certain mineral deposits in the land granted under the act.

Background

Responsibility for the treatment and care of the mentally ill of Alaska was vested in the Secretary of Interior in 1905, at a time when Alaska had no local government. Since 1910, the Secretary had contracted with a private institution, Morningside Hospital in Portland, Ore., for the care of Alaskan mental patients. The territorial government was not permitted to amend or repeal the federal law pertaining to commitment procedures, which were described as "archaic and inhumane."

Legislation to transfer responsibility for the care of Alaska's mentally ill from the federal to the territorial government had been before Congress since the 81st Congress. A bill similar to HR 6376 was passed by the House in the 83rd Congress but could not muster enough interest to gain passage in the Senate.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

ACTION -- July 25, 1955, reported HR 6376 (H Rept 1399), with amendments. The Committee report said the bill would "correct many of the injustices reflected upon the mentally ill patients and will place Alaska under supervision of the program recommended by the United States Public Health Service ...and the Office of Territories of the Department of the Interior." The Committee said HR 6376 was patterned after the Draft Act Governing Hospitalization of the Mentally Ill, prepared by the Public Health Service, and was "recommended for favorable consideration by the Council of State Governments."

Floor Action

The House Jan. 18, 1956, passed HR 6376 by voice vote with amendments.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House HR 6376:

Vested responsibility for carrying out the program in the territorial governor.

Authorized admissions to qualified hospitals either on the patient's voluntary application or on the basis of application by others supported by medical certification.

Required examination of a patient within five days after admission to a hospital.

Preserved the patient's right to petition for discharge and to seek a writ of habeas corpus.

Authorized hospitalization upon court order after examination of the proposed patient by two examiners (or one, if two were not available).

Made the head of the hospital responsible for the protection of patients' rights.

Authorized the governor to transfer any patient hospitalized by the judicial procedure who was not a resident of Alaska to the state where he had legal residence.

Authorized him to make reciprocal agreements with the states for the care of each other's mentally ill.

Authorized appropriations, over a 10-year period, of $6 million to provide an integrated mental health program for Alaska.

Authorized appropriation of $6.5 million for construction of hospital facilities in Alaska.

Granted to the territory one million acres of public land in Alaska and provided that income from these lands "shall first be applied to meet the necessary expenses of the program...."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) -- Provide that income from lands granted under the act shall be used for the hospitalization and care of the mentally ill of Alaska; Jan. 18. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

A.L. Miller (R Neb.) -- Require Alaska to match federal funds; Jan. 18. Voice.

DEBATE -- Jan. 18 -- Leo W. O'Brien (D N.Y.) -- "I believe this bill to be a perfect marriage of the humane and the practical. Simultaneously, we are ripping out a shameful thing and we save money in the process."

Edith Green (D Ore.) -- "...a person can be accused of the crime of being insane in Alaska. He is arrested as a common criminal and is thrown in jail. Then if he is found guilty he is transported to Portland, Ore."

William A. Dawson (R Utah) -- Dollar-for-dollar matching "would mean a 10 percent increase in taxes to the citizens of the territory of Alaska, which they simply cannot bear in view of the fact the federal government owns 98 percent of all the territory of Alaska."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 20-21, March 5 on HR 6376.

ACTION -- May 25 reported HR 6376 (S Rept 2053) with amendments. The amended bill gave the Alaska legislature power to draft its own mental health laws instead of setting down federal regulations as in the House bill. The Committee noted that the House-passed bill had the approval of the Administration, the American Medical Assn., the National Assn. for Mental Health, the American Psychiatric Assn. and other "leading private organizations qualified to express technical opinions." It said it had eliminated the commitment procedures of the House version partly because they had been "misunderstood" and partly because the people of Alaska were "fully capable of drafting their own laws." The Committee went on record that its action was "in no way a repudiation or disapproval of the provisions approved by the House of Representatives and endorsed by such a large number of qualified experts."

Floor Action

The Senate June 7 passed HR 6376 by voice vote with an amendment.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 6376:

Authorized the territorial legislature to prescribe procedures for the care, commitment and treatment of the mentally ill of Alaska.

Authorized appropriations, over a 10-year period, of $6 million to provide an integrated mental health program for Alaska; disbursement of funds would be controlled by the Surgeon General.

Authorized appropriation of $6.5 million for construction of hospital facilities in Alaska.

Granted to the territory one million acres of public land in Alaska and provided that income from the land "shall first be applied to meet the necessary expenses of the mental health program of Alaska."

Reserved to the United States certain mineral deposits in the land granted under the act.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

William Langer (R N.D.) -- Reserve to the U.S. certain mineral deposits in the land granted to the territory; June 7. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- June 7 -- Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.) -- "Of all the bills which have come to my attention since I have been a Member of the Senate and of the House, the pending bill has been as widely misinterpreted as any piece of proposed legislation which has ever been presented to the Congress."

Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) -- The land-grant provision "is intended to give to the territorial government a tax base and an income with which to finance the continued mental health program in Alaska and is not, as has been suggested by opponents to the bill, to be used as a vast concentration camp."

Conference

A Senate-House conference committee July 17 filed its report on HR 6376 (H Rept 2735). Conferees made only one change in the Senate version of the bill: they increased from 30 days to 210 days the time granted the Secretary of Interior either to assign to the governor of Alaska, or to terminate, the federal contract with Morningside Hospital.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 16 approved the conference report by voice vote, without debate.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 20, by a 130-16 standing vote, agreed to the conference report and sent the bill to the White House.

DEBATE -- E.L. Bartlett (D Alaska) -- "The land is to be transferred so that the territorial government will have revenue to carry out the mental health program."

Leo W. O'Brien (D N.Y.) -- "We (the bill's supporters) have been charged with being party to a Communist plot under which your friends and neighbors could be... spirited off to a Siberian camp in Alaska. That is one reason (the original House) committal provisions are out of this bill.... The attacks which have been made on this legislation...have challenged the integrity of Congress itself."

GAO AUDIT

At the direction of the House Interior Committee, the General Accounting Office conducted an audit of the books of Morningside Hospital -- the first such audit in 45 years of operation under government contracts. In its report, released July 9, GAO said the sanitarium company's profits from 1936 to 1954 were $821,406, rather than $403,234 as reported by the company's president, Wayne W. Coe. GAO found that profits averaged 26 percent, although Coe had reported them as "a little over 1 percent" for the 19-year period. GAO criticized the hospital for maintaining an inadequate professional staff and Coe for charging personal expenses as company expenses.

Group Stands

Groups that favored passage of HR 6376: American Medical Assn., American Psychiatric Assn., National Assn. for Mental Health, Alaska Territorial Medical Assn., Alaska Hospital Assn., General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Assn. of American Physicians and Surgeons opposed the House version of HR 6376, but endorsed the compromise version reported by the Senate committee.

The genesis of much of the opposition to the bill was an article, "Siberia, U.S.A.," written by Mrs. Leigh F. Burkeland of Van Nuys, Calif., and widely circulated by the California chapter, Minute Women of the U.S.A.

Attacks on the bill appeared in the following:

Santa Ana (Calif.) Register -- "...we may be establishing in Alaska our own version of the Siberia slave camps run by the Russian government."

Women's Voice -- "Siberian concentration camp now ready for you."

Gerald L.K. Smith's The Cross and the Flag -- "... the one-worlders, the object of UNESCO and the Mental Health Organization have embarked upon a program to root out all ideas opposed to their own.... So we have the Alaska Mental Health Act!"

Dan Smoot Speaks -- "...the Alaska Mental Health Act...fits into a sinister pattern which has been forming ever since the United Nations was organized."

Williams Intelligence Summary -- "...in view of the fact that so many psychiatrists are of alien origin and are Marxist fanatics and generally are trying to classify 'super patriots,' anti-Communists, anti-Zionists and other political opponents as mental cases, extreme caution should be used by the legislators...."

Other organizations opposing the bill were the American Public Relations Forum Inc., For America League, Women for God and Country, and Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

Rep. Clair Engle (D Calif.), Chairman of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, said July 27 enactment of the bill "speaks loudly for the ability of Members of Congress to arrive at a sound conclusion in the face of an anti-enactment campaign earmarked by assertions embracing gross misinformation, half-truths, patent untruths, scurrilous and abusive language, and personal attacks directed at the Committee, its members, and Members of Congress at large."

FEDERAL EMPLOYEE SECURITY PROGRAM

The federal employee security program, long under attack by Democrats, continued in a state of siege in 1956. Joining in the attack were: Democratic critics of the program; ex-Sen. Harry P. Cain (R Wash., 1947-53), a retiring member of the Subversive Activities Control Board; and the Supreme Court, which June 11 ruled that only employees in "sensitive" jobs could be dismissed as security risks.

These were the major points at issue:

- Are all government jobs "sensitive?" The Court held, in effect, that they are not. The Administration, in practice, has failed to distinguish between "sensitive" and "non-sensitive" jobs in its handling of the security program.
- Should separate criteria apply to questions of employee loyalty, security and suitability? Cain says "yes." The Administration decided otherwise, when the President April 27, 1953, issued Executive Order 10450, which terminated the Loyalty Review Boards set up by President Truman and laid the basis for the current, across-the-board security program.
- Should employees suspected of being "security risks" be suspended from their jobs, with consequent loss of pay, pending a final decision on their cases? Critics say this imposes an unreasonable hardship on employees who subsequently may be cleared. The Administration contends that immediate suspension is required by law, and that it is up to Congress to change the law.
- Do security procedures in general protect the employee's right to "due process," and particularly his right to face his accusers? Critics say "no," while the program's defenders stress the dangers of revealing the identity of FBI informers.

Supreme Court Decision

The Court's June 11 decision came on an appeal by Kendrick M. Cole, an employee of the Food and Drug Administration, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, who was suspended and dismissed in 1953 under terms of the security program. Cole appealed his discharge to the Civil Service Commission "which declined to accept the appeal on the ground that the Veterans' Preference Act, under which petitioner claimed the right of appeal, was inapplicable to such discharge." Cole then went to court, arguing that the President had gone beyond the intent of Congress in extending the 1950 law to all government agencies, and that the Act did not apply to "non-sensitive" jobs in any event.

In its 6-3 decision, the Court, in effect, agreed with Cole's second contention without ruling specifically on his first argument. Concerning Section 22-3 of the 1950 Act (see box), the basis of Executive Order 10450, the Court said: "While the validity of this extension of the Act depends upon questions which are in many respects common to those determining the validity of the Secretary's exercise of the authority thereby extended to her, we will restrict our consideration to the latter issue and assume, for the purposes of this decision, that the Act has validly been extended to apply to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare."

Basic Security Law

Although many laws pertain to security matters, authority for the program established under Executive Order 10450 rests primarily on the Act of Aug. 26, 1950 (U.S. Code, Title 5, Sections 22-1 et seq.). Following are its principal provisions:

"Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 652 of this title (relating to removal for cause), or the provisions of any other law, the Secretary of State; Secretary of Commerce; Attorney General; the Secretary of Defense; the Secretary of the Army; the Secretary of the Navy; the Secretary of the Air Force; the Secretary of the Treasury; Atomic Energy Commission; the Chairman, National Security Resources Board; or the Director, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, may, in his absolute discretion and when deemed necessary in the interest of national security, suspend, without pay, any civilian officer or employee" of the foregoing departments and agencies.

"Provided, that to the extent that such agency head determines that the interests of the national security permit, the employee concerned shall be notified of the reasons for his suspension and within 30 days after such notification any such person shall have an opportunity to submit any statements or affidavits to the official designated by the head of the agency concerned to show why he should be reinstated or restored to duty. The agency head concerned may, following such investigation and review as he deems necessary, terminate the employment of such suspended civilian officer or employee whenever he shall determine such termination necessary or advisable in the interest of the national security of the United States, and such determination by the agency head concerned shall be conclusive and final....

"22-3. The provisions of section 22-1 to 22-3 of this title shall apply to such other departments and agencies of the government as the President may, from time to time, deem necessary in the best interests of the national security...."

In the majority's opinion, it was clear that the term "national security" in the 1950 Act was not used "in an all-inclusive sense but was intended to refer only to the protection of 'sensitive' activities. It follows that an employee can be dismissed 'in the interest of the national security' under the Act only if he occupies a 'sensitive' position...." The President's executive order, on the other hand, "enjoins upon the agency heads the duty of discharging any employee of doubtful loyalty, irrespective of the character of his job and its relationship to the 'national security'...." So the majority concluded:

"From our holdings (1) that not all positions in the government are affected with the 'national security' as that term is used in the 1950 Act and (2) that no determination has been made that petitioner's position was one in which he could adversely affect the 'national security,' it necessarily follows that petitioner's discharge was not authorized by the 1950 Act. In reaching this conclusion, we are not confronted with the problem of reviewing the Secretary's exercise of discretion, since the basis for our decision is simply that the standard prescribed by the executive order and applied by the Secretary is not in conformity with the Act."

In their dissent from the majority's opinion, Justices Clark, Reed and Minton held that Congress had not intended to restrict application of the 1950 Act to 'sensitive' agencies or jobs. "We believe," the minority concluded, "the Court's order has stricken down the most effective weapon against subversive activity available to the government.... The President's standard is 'complete and unswerving loyalty' not only in sensitive places but throughout government. The President requires and every employee should give no less. This is all that the Act and the order require. They should not be subverted by the technical interpretation the majority places on them today."

Reaction to Decision

On June 15, Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. announced that all federal agencies "have been advised that any employee holding a non-sensitive position and presently under suspension in pending civilian employee security proceedings should be restored to duty immediately...in order that the executive branch comply fully with the opinion of the Supreme Court in the case of Cole vs. Young, decided June 11.... Pending further study of the effect of the opinion upon the federal security program, no removal proceedings should be commenced against any employee in a non-sensitive position under Executive Order 10450." Brownell's order affected 17 non-sensitive employees under suspension.

The Administration never has revealed the number of employees fired under the summary provisions of the 1950 Act, as extended to all agencies by 10450. It has published several lists -- the latest of which covers the period from May 28, 1953, through Sept. 30, 1955 -- showing the number of employees fired "because of security questions falling within the purview of Section 8 (a) of E.O. 10450," and the number who resigned "in cases where the file was known to contain unfavorable information under Section 8 (a)...." The latest list shows a total of 3,685 fired and 5,920 resigned. Of these, 2,023 were fired by and 2,832 resigned from the 11 agencies listed in the 1950 Act. Most of the remaining terminations and resignations occurred in six other agencies, to which the terms of the 1950 Act were extended by 10450. The Departments of Agriculture; Interior; Health, Education, and Welfare; General Services Administration; Post Office and Veterans Administration together accounted for 1,301 firings and 2,708 resignations, according to the list.

Congressional Action

The Court decision in the Cole case prompted the introduction of five bills in Congress. Four of these would have amended the Act of 1950 in such a way as to clarify the President's power to extend the security program to cover all government employees, regardless of position. Congressional committees held hearings on the four bills, but none was reported to the floor. Hearings were held on the following:

HR 11721, by Rep. Francis E. Walter (D Pa.) stated that all government employees shall be "deemed to be employed in an activity of the government involving national security."

S 4047, by Sens. Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.), Edward Martin (R Pa.), Norris Cotton (R N.H.) and William F. Knowland (R Calif.), provided that nothing in the 1950 Act should be "construed to limit the application" to those "occupying positions deemed to be sensitive."

S 4050, by Sen. James O. Eastland (D Miss.), would make the 1950 Act apply to all jobs "without regard to the classification of such offices or positions as sensitive or nonsensitive."

S 4051, by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.), would extend the 1950 Act "to any agency" named by the President.

The fifth bill (HR 11841, introduced by Rep. Edward H. Rees (R Kan.), would revamp the entire security program by recreating a Loyalty Review Board.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Internal Security Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 26-27 on S 4047, S 4050, S 4051.

Executive Order 10450

This order, issued by President Eisenhower April 27, 1953, superseded Executive Order 9835 of March 21, 1947, under which the Truman Administration had operated the loyalty review program, and extended the provisions of the Act of Aug. 26, 1950 (see preceding page) "to all other departments and agencies of the government." In addition, 10450 made three basic changes:

- Shifted to the suspected employee the entire onus of proving that his employment was "clearly consistent" with security interests.
- Lumped, as criteria for dismissal, treason or other evidence of disloyalty with "any behavior, activities, or associations which tend to show that the individual is not reliable or trustworthy" as well as "any criminal, infamous, dishonest, immoral, or notoriously disgraceful conduct...."
- Made mandatory the permissive powers of the 1950 act to suspend and fire suspected employees, thus:

"Sec. 6. Should there develop at any stage of investigation information indicating that the employment of any officer or employee of the government may not be clearly consistent with the interests of the national security, the head of the department or agency concerned or his representative shall immediately suspend the employment of the person involved if he deems such suspension necessary in the interests of the national security and, following such investigation and review as he deems necessary, the head of the department or agency concerned shall terminate the employment of such suspended officer or employee whenever he shall determine such termination necessary or advisable in the interests of the national security, in accordance with the said Act of August 26, 1950."

TESTIMONY -- June 26 -- Sens. Eastland and McCarthy said the Supreme Court majority had written a "pro-Communist opinion" in its decision forbidding the firing of federal personnel on security grounds from non-sensitive jobs. Chief Justice Earl Warren was accused by both Senators of "following the Communist party line."

Eastland, who was conducting the hearing, said the Chief Justice "takes the same position they (the Communists) do when he says the Communist party is just another political party." McCarthy said, "The Court has sunk to a new low since Warren took over." (Associate Justice John M. Harlan wrote the decision for the Court; Warren concurred in it.)

Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) said the decision was "dangerous" and "reckless" and "ignored" the intent of Congress.

June 27 -- Spokesmen for the Americans for Democratic Action and the American Civil Liberties Union opposed the legislation. Joseph L. Rauh Jr., national chairman of the ADA, said, "If there is no national security information connected with the job, a security risk program is entirely out of place."

Patrick Malin, ACLU director, said, "In my view there has not been a hiatus (in national security) as a result of the Cole decision." He said the burden of proof of loyalty charges should be heavier on the government in the case of non-sensitive employees.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Subcommittee June 29 ordered S 4047, S 4050 and S 4051 reported to the full Committee. The Subcommittee said as a result of the Supreme Court ruling in the Cole case an estimated 86 percent of the 343 employees dismissed under Executive Order 10450 "may have to be reinstated with back pay." The remaining 14 percent were in sensitive positions and therefore not affected by the Supreme Court ruling, the Subcommittee said.

The full Judiciary Committee did not report the bills.

House

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

HEARING -- July 6 on Rep. Walter's bill (HR 11721).

TESTIMONY -- July 6 -- In letters to the Committee, Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. and Chairman Philip Young of the Civil Service Commission endorsed the proposed legislation. Brownell said: "I favor the enactment of HR 11721 which would grant authority for extension of the employee security program to all employees.... I believe it should be understood that any new legislation adopted now would be primarily for the interim period until the Wright Commission (on Government Security) reports and would be subject to review at that time."

Young said the June 11 Supreme Court decision limiting the security program to sensitive jobs "limits drastically the operation of the present security program. This program can no longer be applied to the approximately 80 percent of the 21,000 persons entering federal service monthly in non-sensitive positions. This decision will require corrective action in many of the cases which are being processed under the present program and will also nullify many actions heretofore taken during the past three years in the interests of national security." Young said use of normal civil service procedures to remove employees from non-sensitive jobs would be clumsy and would "increase our present costs by $300,000 a year."

John J. Gunther, legislative representative of Americans for Democratic Action, opposed the bills. "If there is no national security information connected with the job," he said, "there can be no question of an employee being a security risk, and a security risk program is entirely out of place. There is an abundance of statutory law now on the books to permit the government to dismiss employees who are unsuitable for public employment or unworthy of public trust. There is no justification for using a phony security risk procedure in the case of unsuitability."

The Committee did not report the bill.

CAIN CRITICISM

Harry P. Cain, whom President Eisenhower appointed to the Subversive Activities Control Board in 1953, opened fire on the federal employee security program in 1955 and continued in 1956. (1955 Almanac, p. 384) Cain's term on the SACB expired Aug. 9. President Eisenhower did not reappoint him to the Board.

In May, Cain charged that President Eisenhower had been fed "varnish" by his subordinates about the security program. He said he himself had been blocked from seeing the President. On June 7 Cain had a 45-minute conference with Mr. Eisenhower. Following it, Cain said he was "hopeful" for reform of security procedures.

Cain testified June 12-13 before the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee. He warned the Subcommittee that "by using weapons from the arsenal of the tyrant...we can become so anti-Communistic as to become pro-Fascist." He said the Supreme Court decision in the Cole case "requires a re-examination and reappraisal of every security program that has been adopted since 1939."

Cain said charges "relating to security should be separated from loyalty and suitability should be separated from security." The Attorney General's list of subversive organizations, Cain said should be "made intelligible through the issuance of a handbook which factually describes each organization listed."

REPORTS PUBLISHED

No major action was taken to revamp the employee security program in 1956. A committee of the Bar Assn. of the City of New York, following an 18-month study, issued a sharply critical report on the program July 8. A Senate Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee July 22, in a report on the program, also recommended substantial changes. (For summaries of the reports, see p. 582) The Eisenhower Administration indicated a desire to await a third report -- from the Commission on Government Security -- before making any major changes in the program. Congress in 1956 extended the deadline for the Commission's report from Dec. 31, 1956 to June 30, 1957.

Meanwhile Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., in an Aug. 2 memorandum, said former government employees fired from non-sensitive jobs were entitled to reinstatement and back pay if no more than 18 months had elapsed between their dismissal and their request for reinstatement.

Assistant Attorney General George Doub said approximately 280 persons would be affected by Brownell's ruling, but that the 18-month limit probably would disqualify from 25 percent to 30 percent of the total.

CQ Fact Sheet On Security Reports

TWO REPORTS ON FEDERAL SECURITY PROGRAM

On the eve of adjournment, Congress was presented with two critical studies of the federal security program, both of which recommended substantial changes.

- A nine-member special committee, named by the Assn. of the Bar of the City of New York, July 8 released its report on "The Federal Loyalty-Security Program" after an 18-month study.
- A three-member subcommittee of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee July 22 issued a report (S Rept 2790) based on its 18-month investigation of the "Administration of the Federal Employees' Security Program." (1955 Almanac, p. 518)

The Bar study, a private undertaking financed by a $100,000 grant from the Fund for the Republic, proposed changes many of which might be accomplished by administrative action. Similar recommendations were included in the Senate report which, however, concluded that Congress should enact legislation spelling out in detail the manner in which the security program should be conducted. Sen. Frank Carlson (R Kan.) complained that the report, as approved by his Democratic colleagues, Chairman Olin D. Johnston (S.C.) and Sen. A.S. Mike Monroney (Okla.), was "framed only as a criticism of the security program without constructive and helpful legislative proposals."

The only legislative action of 1956 was enactment of a bill (S J Res 182 -- PL 786) extending for six months -- until June 30, 1957 -- the date for the final report by the Commission on Government Security. Set up in 1955, the 12-member group was to report on the federal security program. (1955 Almanac, p. 383) The Supreme Court June 11, in the case of Cole vs. Young, issued an opinion drastically limiting the program. (See p. 579)

Scope of Program

Key recommendation of the Bar report would have the effect of reducing from six million to 1.5 million the number of jobs covered by the security program. Security clearances, it said, should be confined to "sensitive" positions, defined as those giving access to secret and top-secret material, or having a policy-making function bearing "a substantial relation to national security." Presently, clearances are required for all 2.3 million federal civilian employees, about three million employees of Defense Department contractors, 80,000 employees of Atomic Energy Commission contractors, 800,000 seamen and longshoremen and 3,000 U.S. citizens employed by international organizations. The Bar report recommended dropping the latter two groups from the program, and confining it to about 600,000 federal jobs currently classed as sensitive, some 800,000 defense contractor jobs and fewer than 80,000 AEC contractor jobs involving access to secret information.

This 75 percent reduction in the scope of the program, the report said, "would enhance rather than lessen the national security. All those positions involving substantial danger to the national security would be covered, and the program would not be diluted by application to positions where there is not such a danger to national security." To the argument that no "security risks" should be employed anywhere in the federal government or allowed access even to "confidential" information available to government contractors, the report replied that other internal security measures and Civil Service Commission suitability requirements provide adequate means for protecting the government's best interests.

Although written before the Cole decision, this recommendation coincided with the Court's reasoning that the 1950 law, on the basis of which the Eisenhower Administration in 1953 extended the security program to all federal employees, was in fact intended to apply only to agencies and positions "directly concerned with the protection of the nation from internal subversion or foreign aggression." Following the Court's ruling that the government therefore erred in firing an employee in a nonsensitive job in a nonsensitive agency under provisions of the security program, the Administration endorsed a bill amending the 1950 law to define all government jobs as sensitive.

In this connection, the Bar report cited Civil Service Commission figures showing that of 3,586 persons fired from March 28, 1953, to June 30, 1955, for alleged security reasons, only 342 were removed under authority of the security program, the remaining 90 percent being discharged under regular civil service regulations. The choice of authority, however, seems not to have been governed by the sensitivity of the job. According to Chairman Philip Young of the Civil Service Commission, an agency head might "elect to use the civil service procedures...because it might take him anywhere from one to six months longer to perhaps prove a security charge case."

The Senate report made no mention of narrowing the scope of the program, although it suggested that pending enactment of legislation "to cover the subjects of disloyalty and security," the executive branch act to confine the application of the security program to the 11 agencies stipulated in the 1950 law. In new legislation, however, Congress should "specify the sensitive departments and agencies by name" and should reaffirm "Congressional intent that all other dismissals of federal employees of a suitability nature must be in accordance" with civil service regulations.

Standards and Criteria

The Bar report recommended that the security standard for all sensitive positions be "whether or not in the interest of the United States the employment or retention in employment of the individual is advisable. In applying this standard a balanced judgment shall be reached after giving due weight to all the evidence, both derogatory and favorable, to the nature of the position, and to the value of the individual to the public service." This contrasts with the current requirement that employment must be "clearly consistent" with national security.

The report also recommended that a person's associations not be used as a basis for denying him clearance unless "he shares, is susceptible to, or is influenced by, the actions or views of such organizations or individuals." The report also urged that the Attorney General's list of subversive organizations "should be abolished, unless it can be and is modified and revised" in several respects. "There is widespread misconception and misuse of the list in federal personnel inquiries" extending to "states, municipalities and even private employers."

The Senate report left it up to Congress to "set forth clearly the criteria" to be used. But it stated that "the scrambling of the three categories of loyalty, security and suitability under one general classification of 'security risk' has brought about endless confusion," and recommended that Congress establish separate systems to cover "charges of disloyalty in all departments and agencies," and "charges of 'risk' in sensitive positions in sensitive departments or agencies." This legislation should also contain "a system of scaling the security standards to the sensitivity of the position occupied" and "a specification as to the makeup and use of the so-called Attorney General's list of subversive organizations."

Although urging a new standard, the Bar report recommended against any "re-examination of cases already determined" since this would bring "a renewal of public charges and recrimination at grave cost to a calm and fair consideration of the security program." The Senate report called for a procedure whereby all persons "dismissed, resigned or refused employment" because of derogatory information "might through proper hearing be accorded the opportunity to clear their records."

Organization and Procedure

The Bar report recommended, among other steps:

- Appointment of a Director of Personnel and Information Security responsible to the President to supervise the security program and classification of information.
- Establishment of a central screening board in the Civil Service Commission to decide when charges should be filed against any federal or private worker covered by the program.
- Transfer of employees under charges to non-sensitive jobs when possible, or continuation of pay to persons suspended until final disposition of charges.
- Reimbursement by the government of attorneys' fees for federal and private employees who are cleared at any step of the way.

According to the report, "a high percentage of persons are cleared after security charges have been filed against them." An independent central screening board would force an agency "to prepare its case with care and thoroughness in order to convince the board that charges were justified." The Senate report made no mention of organization or screening, but recommended that employees suspended and later cleared be reimbursed "without a deduction of any interim earnings outside of government," as is required under current law; and that such persons also be reimbursed "for expenses incurred in defending the charges of either being disloyal or a security risk."

Confrontation of Witnesses

The Bar report recommended that "the identity of an informant who regularly provides or is employed to provide secret information should not be disclosed by requiring his appearance before a screening board or a hearing board or otherwise identifying him." But in all other cases, the report urged the maximum possible appearance of government witnesses for cross-examination or for interrogation by the hearing board. In addition, screening and hearing boards should "have the power in their discretion" to subpena witnesses for both sides, who would be reimbursed for their expenses in appearing.

The report noted that "neither Great Britain nor Canada has provision for confrontation in their security programs," and added that "it is the counterespionage work rather than the personnel security system...that now furnishes the greater protection to the internal security of the nation." It also stated that "the Committee has been told that in the bulk of the security cases confrontation is not important because the facts as to which the government witnesses would testify are admitted by the charged employee." In summary, the Committee concluded that "charged employees are entitled to the maximum amount of confrontation consistent with the interests of the government in maintaining an effective program."

The Senate report called for "authorization of the power to subpena witnesses to hearing boards and the appellate agency," and "a specification of the instances when, and only when, unidentified informers and witnesses may be used in hearings" together with "a requirement that confrontation must be made except as the Congress shall delineate."

Final Determination

The Bar report recommended that the head of the charging agency should continue to have the power "to make the final security determination." The Senate report called for "an appellate procedure entirely outside the department or agency where accused is employed." It said that "failure of Executive Order 10450 to provide for a hearing of appeals outside the department or agency is a definite weakness in the program and should be corrected."

The Senate report criticized "the publication by the Civil Service Commission of the 'numbers' of so-called security risks eliminated from the federal payroll," and recommended that the Commission "cease the issuance of any further so-called consolidated reports." The Bar report made no mention of this controversy.

REORGANIZATION PLANS

Congress in 1956 rejected two reorganization plans submitted by President Eisenhower. The action -- taken without party-line battles -- marked the first time Congress failed to approve Mr. Eisenhower's reorganization proposals. Ten Eisenhower reorganization plans had been permitted to take effect in 1953, and two in 1954, giving the President a four-year batting average of 12 out of 14 plans approved. Former President Truman sent Congress 41 reorganization plans from 1949 to 1952, of which 29 were approved.

The President said that both 1956 plans would have carried out recommendations of the second (Hoover) Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government. Plan No. 1 of 1956 would have created the posts of Assistant Secretary for Research and Development in the Departments of Army, Navy and Air Force. Plan No. 2 of 1956 would have separated the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The Reorganization Act of 1949, as extended in 1955 until April 1, 1958, authorized the President to reorganize government agencies by submitting "reorganization plans" to Congress. Such plans automatically would take effect within 60 days -- without legislation -- unless disapproved by a constitutional majority of either the House or Senate (half the full membership plus one).

PLAN NO. 1 OF 1956

Plan No. 1, submitted to Congress by the President May 16, was designed to improve the management of research and development programs in the Department of Defense. "There is no function of the Department...in which coordination leading to effectiveness and efficiency is of greater importance," the President said. While the reorganization would not bring about immediate savings, "it is probable that it will bring about substantial long-run reductions of expenditures and also greater effectiveness of administration," he added.

PROVISIONS -- As submitted to Congress, Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1956 would have:

Established three new offices of Assistant Secretary for Research and Development, one each for the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Assigned each Assistant Secretary "such functions relating to the coordination of research and development functions of the military department concerned, and such other functions" as the Secretary of the military department might prescribe.

House

COMMITTEE -- Government Operations, Executive and Legislative Reorganization Subcommittee.

HEARING -- June 25, on a resolution (H Res 534) to disapprove Reorganization Plan No. 1.

TESTIMONY -- June 25 -- Chairman Carl Vinson (D Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee endorsed H Res 534. Vinson said he did not object to the plan itself, but said he knew nothing of it until "it was sent up here" by the Eisenhower Administration. He asked that the disapproval resolution be passed so his Armed Services Committee could consider the plan in the usual legislative manner.

Acting Secretary of Defense Reuben B. Robertson Jr., Deputy Director E.R. Jones of the Budget Bureau and Chairman Mervin J. Kelly of the Hoover Commission Task Force on Research and Development endorsed the reorganization plan.

ACTION -- The full Committee June 28 unanimously ordered H Res 534 favorably reported to the House (H Rept 2585), recommending that Reorganization Plan No. 1 be disapproved. The Committee said it was "not a valid reorganization plan," for "nothing appears to be reorganized.... It is never appropriate merely to create new offices by the device of a reorganization plan.... The purpose of the plan may be accomplished by the regular legislative process."

BILL REPORTED

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

ACTION -- June 28 favorably reported a bill (HR 11575 -- H Rept 2506) that would accomplish, through legislation, the same result as Reorganization Plan No. 1. The Committee said it "could not escape the conclusion that the Department of Defense, either by design or inadvertence, was circumventing the jurisdiction" of the Armed Services Committee. "To say that accomplishment of these matters through a reorganization plan saves time is simply an excuse and not a reason for avoiding the normal legislative process in such matters."

Floor Action

The House debated and passed HR 11575 by voice vote July 2, and sent the bill to the Senate. On July 5, the House then passed by voice vote, without debate, the resolution (H Res 534) disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 1. This action killed the reorganization plan and left up to the Senate the question of whether the plan's purpose would be accomplished through legislation.

DEBATE -- July 2 -- F. Edward Hebert (D La.) -- "I do not believe there is justification for adding more.... secretaries in the Department of Defense at this time.... If this bill is enacted...there will then be 32 statutory secretaries (four secretaries, one deputy, three under secretaries, 24 assistant secretaries).... There is already in the Department of Defense (an Assistant) Secretary to develop research and development...."

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- "We should defeat this measure" and provide that one of the existing Assistant Secretaries be designated in charge of research and development. "Do not forget there will be more air-conditioned Cadillacs rolling over the streets of Washington if you create three more Secretaries...."

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- "The importance of research and development in the military field cannot be overemphasized. One of the great difficulties in our military is that we have not had on a higher echelon of civilian position an assistant secretary for research and development, giving scientists the dignity and the importance they are entitled to...."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

ACTION -- July 19 tabled HR 11575, on a motion by Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.). The effect was to kill the proposal for 1956.

PLAN NO. 2 OF 1956

Plan No. 2, submitted to Congress by the President May 17, would have separated the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Management of the two had been merged since establishment of the Corporation in 1934. The plan would have given FSLIC its own management, independent of the Board.

The responsibilities of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board are principally (1) supervision and regulation of the eleven Home Loan Banks, (2) chartering, supervision, and regulation of federal savings and loan associations, and (3) management of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, together with supervision of insured institutions.

The President said Plan No. 2 was directed at the latter, "which is essentially a responsibility for the insurance of individual accounts in institutions of the savings and loan type...." The General Accounting Office had "questioned the desirability of permitting an agency having the authority to promote and charter federal savings and loan associations, which are required by law to be insured, also to administer the insurance underwriting," he added. "The GAO has stated that experience has shown that the responsibilities for those functions are inherently conflicting."

The President said he was "satisfied...that the time has come to separate the two agencies." He said the plan would result in a "modest increase in the over-all operating expenses" of both institutions but that the reorganization "will in the long run tend to reduce expenditures of the government by reason of the more effective protection of the government's large financial interest" in the affairs of the Corporation and of the institutions insured by it.

PROVISIONS -- As submitted to Congress, Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1956 would have:

Established a new, three-man board of trustees of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, two members to be appointed by the President, subject to Senate confirmation, the third to be the Chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, as an ex officio member.

Vested the management of FSLIC in the board of trustees.

Provided that the Corporation and the board of trustees would be separate and independent of the Bank Board and "subject to the direction and control of the President of the United States."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Government Operations, Reorganization Subcommittee.

HEARING -- June 27 on the reorganization plan and on a resolution (S Res 291) to disapprove the plan. The resolution was introduced by Sen. John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) and co-sponsored by Sens. J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) and Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.), the ranking members of the Banking and Currency Committee.

TESTIMONY -- June 27 -- Witnesses who opposed Plan No. 2 included the sponsors of S Res 291 and Sen. Gordon L. Allott (R Colo.); Owen A. Kane of the Comptroller General's office; Chairman Walter W. McAllister of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board; Henry A. Bubb of the U.S. Savings and Loan League, Chicago; W. Franklin Morrison of the National Savings and Loan League, Washington, D.C.; Dr. Joseph F. Maloney of Fordham University; Chairman Frank Muller Jr. of the Federal Savings and Loan Advisory Council, Washington, D.C.

Most of these witnesses took issue with the Hoover Commission's contention that having the Corporation run by the same officials who controlled the Bank Board was poor business. Others said the recommendations had not been given adequate study.

Those opposing the resolution to disapprove the reorganization plan were: Director Percival F. Brundage of the Budget Bureau and Col. Edward Sherman of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report. Brundage said the separation would give the government and insured savings and loan associations "just a little extra protection." He said it was not sound management to vest insurance underwriting authority in the same board charged with chartering savings and loan banks.

ACTION -- June 27 the Subcommittee ordered S Res 291 reported. Chairman John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) said Subcommittee members were "in general agreement... that a reorganization of this magnitude should be given much more thorough deliberation." The full Committee unanimously reported S Res 291 (S Rept 2388) June 29, recommending that the plan not be approved.

House

COMMITTEE -- Government Operations, Executive and Legislative Reorganization Subcommittee.

HEARING -- June 26 on a resolution (H Res 541), introduced by Rep. Dante B. Fascell (D Fla.), disapproving Plan No. 2.

TESTIMONY -- June 26 -- Rep. Chet Holifield (D Calif.) said trustees for FSLIC would be "susceptible to pressure from the President's office."

Chairman Brent Spence (D Ky.) of the House Banking and Currency Committee said his Committee had not been consulted. "I haven't heard of anyone in either agency who supports this reorganization, not one," he said.

ACTION -- The full Committee unanimously reported H Res 541 July 3 (H Rept 2599), recommending that the House disapprove the reorganization plan. The Committee said it did not necessarily consider the current organizational arrangement to be "the best," but that it did not feel that "a case was made" for the reorganization plan.

The Committee said it "was impressed with testimony concerning the necessity for a very careful control of the huge funds being handled by the local federal savings and loan associations and by the government's responsibility under the insurance programs. A thorough.. investigation of these matters seems indicated, particularly in view of the evidence of laxity in examinations of which the recent embezzlement in the Commonwealth Building and Loan Association of Norfolk, Va., seems to be an example."

Floor Action

The House July 5 adopted H Res 541 disapproving the plan, by voice vote and without debate. The action prevented the plan from taking effect.

FEDERAL-STATE POWERS

Controversy over the Supreme Court -- the most bitter since President Franklin D. Roosevelt tried to "pack" the Court in 1937 -- mounted in Congress in 1956. At issue were Supreme Court decisions, going back to 1942, which limited the powers of the states in fields of concurrent jurisdiction.

Leading the attack on the Court were Southerners outraged by the 1954 decision outlawing segregation in public schools. Joining them were some Northerners concerned over what they considered a growing trend toward federal supremacy in the Court's decisions.

More than 70 bills were introduced in the 84th Congress to curb in some way the power of the Court. These ranged from bills to establish a compulsory retirement age for justices and require previous judicial experience as a prerequisite for service on the Court to a proposed constitutional amendment -- sponsored by Sen. James O. Eastland (D Miss.) -- providing that "there shall be no limitation upon the power of any state to regulate health, morals, education, marriage and good order in the state."

Three bills were reported by Congressional committees in 1956, but none received floor action.

The Preemption Doctrine

Several of the bills were aimed at abolishing the doctrine of "preemption by implication" which permits the Supreme Court to invalidate state legislation in areas where Congress has enacted laws. The doctrine has been built up in a great many decisions by the Supreme Court, beginning with the famous case of Gibbons v. Ogden in 1824. In that case, concerning Congress' use of the constitutional power to "regulate commerce," Chief Justice John Marshall found "great force" in this argument:

"The word 'to regulate' implies in its nature full power over the thing to be regulated; it excludes, necessarily, the action of all others that would perform the same operation on the same thing.... It produces a uniform whole, which is as much disturbed and deranged by changing what the regulating power designs to leave untouched as that on which it has operated."

The Constitution delegates certain powers to Congress (Article I, Section 8) and prohibits the states from exercising other powers (Article I, Section 10). It long has been contended that the doctrine of "preemption by implication," which assumes that when Congress exercises one of its delegated powers it does so with the intention of excluding the states from acting in that field, does violence to the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution, which provides: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

RECENT USE

The most recent and most controversial use of the doctrine of "preemption by implication" by the Supreme Court came in 1956 in the Steve Nelson case. Nelson, a Communist organizer in Pennsylvania, was indicted and convicted of violating the Pennsylvania Sedition Act. In 1954, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court reversed his conviction on the grounds that federal legislation against sedition had left no room for state laws in that field. The United States Supreme Court upheld that decision, 6-3, on April 2, thereby knocking out anti-Communist laws passed by 42 states.

The majority found: "The scheme of federal regulation is so pervasive as to make reasonable the inference that Congress left no room for the states to supplement it." The minority said: "Congress has not, in any of its statutes relating to sedition, specifically barred the exercise of state power to punish the same acts under state law.... In these circumstances this court should not void state legislation without a clear mandate from Congress."

BILLS REPORTED

Three bills affecting the preemption doctrine -- so-called "states rights" bills -- were reported by Congressional committees in 1956:

HR 3 -- Introduced by Rep. Howard W. Smith (D Va.). The bill, as introduced, would have provided:

"No act of Congress shall be construed as indicating an intent on the part of Congress to occupy the field in which such act operates, to the exclusion of all state laws on the same subject matter, unless such act contains an express provision to that effect. No act of Congress shall be construed as invalidating a provision of state law which would be valid in the absence of such act unless there is a direct and positive conflict between an express provision of such act and such provision of the state law so that the two cannot be reconciled or consistently stand together."

Smith's bill was prompted by the Nelson case. Smith was the author of the 1940 Smith Act, one of the bills cited by the Supreme Court as indicating an intention by Congress to occupy the entire field of anti-sedition legislation. Smith wrote Feb. 4, 1954, that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court decision was "the first intimation I have ever had...that Congress ever had the faintest notion of nullifying the concurrent jurisdiction of the respective sovereign states to pursue also their own prosecutions for subversive activities." He framed his corrective legislation in general terms, rather than specifically relating it to the sedition field, because the Nelson case is only "the symptom of a dangerous disease that threatened to destroy completely the sovereignty of the states." (Jan. 6, 1955)

BROAD EFFECTS

In a brief submitted in support of his bill, Smith gave some hint of the broad effects it would have:

"First, it would provide that the so-called preemption doctrines as set forth by the Court would be effective only insofar as Congress had specifically stated that it was its intention to supersede all state law on that subject matter.... Secondly...it would require Congress to clearly express its intention to that effect when legislating."

Smith listed as "fertile fields for the application of the...Smith bill...decisions under the Interstate Commerce Act...federal power, natural gas, aeronautics and labor law."

The bill was endorsed by a number of Congressmen, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Association of Manufacturers and committees of the American Bar Association and the National Association of Attorneys General. Testimony against the bill was given by the Department of Justice, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the AFL-CIO.

HR 3 was reported by the House Judiciary Committee July 3 (H Rept 2576) with a substitute amendment which restricted its application to state sedition laws. The Committee said it was "questionable that a formula could be found that would serve to define in all instances just how the relationship between state and federal laws should be interpreted" and that the "broad coverage" of the original language of HR 3 "would also make it difficult to describe precisely the effect which that language would have if it should be enacted into law."

The Department of Justice backed this stand, holding that "in the fields of sedition and subversion, the federal and state governments can work together easily and well." The House Rules Committee July 10 granted an open rule with two hours of debate on HR 3, but the measure was never called up on the floor.

S 3617 -- Introduced by Sen. Styles Bridges (R N.H.) and 14 co-sponsors. S 3617 declared it the intent of Congress that the existence of federal statutes should not prevent the enforcement of state sedition laws. It, too, was an outgrowth of the Nelson case. S 3617 was reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee June 5 (S Rept 2117).

S 3143 -- Introduced by Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.) and 11 southern colleagues. The text of S 3143 was identical to that of HR 3 as introduced by Smith. The Senate Judiciary Committee June 14 reported the bill (S Rept 2230), with a technical amendment, by a 7-2 vote. In its report the Committee said: "The only controversy which has arisen is whether the Congressional intent (not to preempt a field of legislation) should be expressed in each statute involving concurrent jurisdiction or whether, as here proposed, a general statute should be adopted expressing, as Congressional intent, that state laws should not be rendered inoperative unless they are in direct and positive conflict with federal law in an area of primary federal jurisdiction."

The Department of Justice, which opposed the bill, said it would make it necessary for Congress to re-examine existing statutes to determine which should contain an "express provision." This process would take "a considerable period of time," and meanwhile "great confusion would be created in many areas." The Department recommended "that the present practice of determining Congressional intent from surrounding circumstances be continued except with respect to specific fields in which the Congress sees fit to express its intention to preempt or not to preempt."

(Congress does, on occasion, express its intent specifically. One notable example is the Taft-Hartley Act, which permits union shop agreements under certain conditions but provides that state laws which further restrict compulsory union membership take precedence over the federal law.)

Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) July 13 submitted an amendment to S 3143 stating that nothing in the bill should "lessen in any way the responsibility...to comply with the ...Constitution...as interpreted by the Supreme Court." The Douglas amendment would have limited S 3143's application to legislation. It would not have permitted any interpretation of S 3143 that would take away the Supreme Court's authority to interpret the Constitution as the Court did in its 1954 school segregation decision. No further action was taken on S 3143 or the Douglas amendment by the 84th Congress.

Segregation Manifesto

The issue of segregation brought other Congressional salvos to bear on the Court. In March, 1956, 101 Members of Congress from 11 southern states presented to Congress a "Declaration of Constitutional Principles" criticizing the Court for its school desegregation decision. The manifesto had no legal standing in Congress and required no Congressional action.

Said the manifesto: "We regard the decision of the Supreme Court in the school cases as a clear abuse of judicial power. It climaxes a trend in the federal judiciary undertaking to legislate, in derogation of the authority of Congress, and to encroach upon the reserved rights of the states and the people." In overruling the separate but equal doctrine, the manifesto said, "the Supreme Court of the United States, with no legal basis for such action, undertook to exercise their naked judicial power and substituted their personal political and social ideas for the established law of the land." The signers of the manifesto pledged themselves "to use all lawful means to bring about a reversal of this decision." (For text of manifesto, see p. 416)

North-South Political Alliance

Early in 1956, states rights groups in the North and South began efforts to coordinate their political activities. Leaders in this campaign were the Federation for Constitutional Government, coordinating body for white citizens' councils in 11 southern states, and For America, a group active since 1954 as exponents of nationalist and "strict constitutionalist" principles.

The approach to a common political strategy was achieved through acceptance by For America and some of its political allies of the doctrine of interposition. Interposition is the key legal weapon in the southern fight against the Supreme Court school decision and, as such, is of primary concern to the Federation for Constitutional Government.

Sen. A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) inserted in the March 28 Congressional Record a speech made three days earlier by Clarence E. Manion, co-chairman of For America. In it Manion called interposition "the theory that the Supreme Court has no constitutional authority to adjudicate disputes between a sovereign state and the federal government." He said it is "the current answer" to the "federal invasion of the long-standing constitutional prerogatives" of the states. "The word doesn't mean much to the average voter now, but in the coming months interposition may easily mean the difference between the success or failure of somebody's ambition to be President of the United States.... Whether it is gambling in Nevada, segregation in South Carolina, education in California, or the right to work in Kansas, the basic challenge to American liberty is the continuous, contemptuous disregard of the 10th Amendment by the Congress, the Executive and the Supreme Court."

The move toward political solidarity culminated in the National States Rights Conference, held Sept. 14-15 in Memphis, Tenn. Calling themselves a "National Conservative Movement," delegates from a dozen splinter parties in 25 states declined formally to establish a third party. However, they voted to support T. Coleman Andrews, former Director of Internal Revenue, for President and ex-Rep. Thomas H. Werdel (R Calif., 1949-53) for Vice President. The Andrews-Werdel platform promised "undeviating respect" for state and individual rights.

The conference adopted a Declaration of Principles which stated that any state, "if confronted with an unconstitutional exercise of federal authority upon its citizens...has the clear right and duty to interpose its own sovereignty to check...the abuse." The Declaration also "deplored" what it termed usurpation of legislative authority by the Supreme Court and urged Congress "to repeal all illegal, anti-States Rights acts enacted by the Supreme Court under the guise of judicial decisions."

The National Conservative Movement hoped to win enough Presidential electors to throw the election into the House of Representatives, where each state would have one vote, regardless of population. States rights leaders predicted they could win a "compromise" fight.

BYRNES ATTACK

James F. Byrnes, ex-justice of the Supreme Court (1941-42), May 18 added his voice to the attack on the Court. Byrnes, who was governor of South Carolina from 1951 to 1955, said of the Court's 1954 school decision: "The Court did not interpret the Constitution -- the Court amended it.... The usurpation by the Court of the power to amend the Constitution and destroy state governments may impair our progress and take our freedom." Byrnes said federal and state courts had to accept Supreme Court decisions, but "the court of public opinion" did not have to do so. "Power intoxicates men," he said. "It is never voluntarily surrendered. It must be taken from them. The Supreme Court must be curbed."

CONTEMPT CITATIONS

Congress in 1956 adopted 22 citations for contempt of Congress. All citations had been recommended by Congressional committees during 1956 except one involving Harvey M. Matusow that had been recommended in 1955.

Most of the citations resulted from refusals to testify concerning alleged Communist activities or affiliations.

The following citations were adopted by the House July 25:

H Res 631 -- Citing Anne Y. Kling
H Res 632 -- Citing John W. Simpson
H Res 633 -- Citing William E. Davis
H Res 634 -- Citing George Tyne
H Res 635 -- Citing Elliott Sullivan
H Res 636 -- Citing Peter Seeger
H Res 637 -- Citing Otto Nathan
H Res 638 -- Citing Arthur Miller.

The Senate adopted these contempt resolutions:

S Res 131 -- Citing Harvey M. Matusow, adopted March 29.
S Res 240 -- Citing Mary Knowles, adopted March 29.*
S Res 241 -- Citing Herman Liveright, adopted March 29.*

BACKGROUND -- See "Contempt Citations" (1955 Almanac, p. 393) for a history of the legal basis of contempt actions by Congress.

House Citations

Three citations grew out of witnesses' refusal to answer questions at hearings the House Un-American Activities Committee held in an investigation of Communist activities in the St. Louis, Mo., area.

Mrs. Anne Yasgur Kling of St. Louis June 6 testified she had worked as a stenographer in the St. Louis office of the Communist party between 1944 and 1948 but she refused to name anyone she knew then as a Communist.

John W. Simpson of St. Louis June 4 declined to answer any questions put to him by the Committee and cited the Fifth Amendment.

William E. Davis of St. Louis June 6 refused to answer any questions concerning his background and employment and invoked the Fifth Amendment.

ACTORS CITED

A 1955 investigation of Communist activities in the entertainment field by the Un-American Activities Committee resulted in three contempt citations. (1955 Almanac, p. 540)

George Tyne, an actor of New York City, Aug. 15, 1955 declined to answer numerous questions of the Committee, stating it had no right to "invade my inner beliefs and my conscience or my associations."

Elliott Sullivan, an NYC actor, appeared Aug. 16 before the Committee. He did not invoke the First or Fifth Amendments but refused to answer questions concerning alleged Communist affiliations, stating "I don't believe that you have the right to ask me any question having to do with my personal beliefs or associations."

Peter Seeger, a musician and folksinger of New York City, appeared Aug. 18 before the Committee. Questioned about alleged participation in Communist-sponsored programs, he refused to answer but did not claim any Constitutional protection.

Two noted intellectuals were cited by the Un-American Activities Committee as an outgrowth of hearings into a possible Communist conspiracy in securing U.S. passports.

Dr. Otto Nathan, a professor at New York University and executor of the estate of the late Dr. Albert Einstein,

June 12 refused to answer questions about alleged Communist party membership and cited the First, Fourth and Ninth Amendments as Constitutional protection.

Arthur Miller, Pulitzer prize winning playwright of Roxbury, Conn., June 21 refused to give the Committee names of persons with whom he attended Communist writers' meetings in 1947. He said, "My conscience will not permit me to use the name of another person...and bring trouble on him."

July 25, during House debate on the Miller contempt citation, Rep. Donald L. Jackson (R Calif.) said if Miller's reason for not answering was allowed to stand, it would provide a "clear pattern" for future witnesses and might destroy the Committee's usefulness. The House voted 373 - 9 July 25 to cite Miller for contempt. (For voting, see chart p. 224)

Senate Citations

Six persons were recommended for contempt citations by the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Improvements in the Federal Criminal Code following the Subcommittee's investigation of the narcotics problem in the U.S.

William F. (Butch) Evans, Joseph Bruno and Jesse Alexander, all of Chicago, Ill., and Salvatore Santoro and Joseph Bendinelli, both of New York City, refused to answer questions concerning their alleged participation in narcotic dealings. All five cited the Fifth Amendment. Robert T. Hosoi of Los Angeles, Calif. was recommended for citation because of his failure to appear before the Subcommittee.

Mary Knowles, a librarian of Plymouth, Pa., appeared July 29 and Sept. 15, 1955, before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Internal Security, which was investigating possible Communist activities of Mrs. Knowles. (1955 Almanac, p. 530) Mrs. Knowles refused to state whether she was ever a Communist and challenged the right of the Subcommittee to question her.

Herman Liveright, a television program director of New Orleans, La., appeared March 19, 1956 before the Internal Security Subcommittee. He was questioned about alleged Communist affiliations in New York and Louisiana and Communist party membership. Liveright refused to answer the questions but claimed Constitutional protection and filed a statement claiming an investigation of his political beliefs and associational activities was beyond the powers of the Subcommittee.

Mrs. Pauline Feuer, a former teacher and a graduate student of Tulane University, appeared April 5 at Subcommittee hearings into alleged Communist activities in the New Orleans, La., area. Mrs. Feuer denied that she was then a member of the Communist party but refused to answer questions about possible Communist membership at earlier dates. Mrs. Feuer did not cite any Constitutional protections but protested the Subcommittee's right to such an investigation.

NEWSMEN CITED

Robert Shelton, a copy editor of the New York Times, appeared Dec. 7, 1955 and Jan. 6, 1956 before the Internal Security Subcommittee, then investigating alleged Communist activities in the newspaper industry. Shelton refused to answer questions about alleged Communist party membership and Communist associations and cited the First Amendment.

Seymour Peck, a deskman of the New York Times Sunday Magazine, appeared Jan. 6, 1956 before the Internal Security Subcommittee. After stating he was a member of the Communist party between 1935 and 1949, Peck refused to name members of Communist organizations with which he then was affiliated.

Alden Whitman, a copyreader for the New York Times, Jan. 6 told the Subcommittee he was a Communist from 1935 to 1948 but refused to name members of the unit to which he belonged. Whitman did not invoke any Constitutional protections but submitted a statement questioning the investigative authority of the Subcommittee.

William A. Price, a former police reporter for the New York Daily News, Jan. 5 refused to answer questions about Communist party membership on grounds the Subcommittee had no jurisdiction to inquire into his political beliefs or associational activities.

MATUSOW CASE

Harvey M. Matusow, a self-professed former Communist, appeared before the Internal Security Subcommittee Feb. 21 to April 20, 1955 during an investigation of Matusow's claims that he had falsely testified before the Subcommittee in 1952 when he linked various persons with Communism. Matusow refused to answer numerous questions and cited the Fifth Amendment. (1955 Almanac, p. 526)

A citation for contempt was reported to the Senate July 12, 1955 but was not acted on because of federal grand jury indictment of Matusow, July 13, 1955. The indictment, on six counts of perjury, was based on Matusow's testimony at a hearing on a motion for retrial of 13 convicted Communists before a New York federal district judge. Brought to trial in September, 1956, Matusow was convicted on five of the six perjury counts and was sentenced Sept. 28 to five years in prison.

The Senate cited him for contempt March 29, 1956.

Court Action in 1956

Federal courts, including the Supreme Court, ruled in 1956 on several cases involving contempt citations passed in prior years.

The Supreme Court ruling March 26 upheld the validity of a 1954 act (PL 600, 83rd Congress) which compels witnesses to testify in national security cases, provided they are granted immunity from criminal prosecution. (1954 Almanac, p. 333) The Court's 7-2 decision upheld the conviction of William L. Ullman, a former Treasury Department official and one-time Air Force major, who was accused of having served at one time as a Soviet spy inside the Pentagon. He had refused to answer questions before a New York grand jury. (1955 Almanac, p. 395.)

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., Jan. 26 reversed the conviction of John T. Watkins of Rock Island, Ill., a regional organizer of the United Automobile Workers, cited for contempt of Congress in 1954. Watkins had refused to name former Communist associates in an investigation by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. (1954 Almanac, p. 373.)

Two of the three judges held that the questions Watkins would not answer were outside the scope of the Committee's authority, which could not be used to expose ex-Communists simply for the sake of exposure. Feb. 20, the Court of Appeals set aside the Jan. 26 decision and, acting on a government petition, called for a re-argument before the Court's full bench. April 23, a majority decision of the Court upheld the conviction of Watkins, who then appealed to the Supreme Court.

Leon J. Kamin, a former research assistant at Harvard University, Jan. 5 was acquitted of contempt of Congress by U.S. District Judge Bailey Aldrich at Boston, Mass. Kamin, cited in 1954, had refused to name former Communist associates at a hearing of the Senate Government Operations' Investigations Subcommittee. (1954 Almanac, p. 362) Judge Aldrich ruled the portion of the Subcommittee's investigation dealing with Communist infiltration of defense plants was not within the power of the Subcommittee. The decision was denounced by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.), the 1954 Subcommittee chairman.

Mrs. Millie Markison was acquitted of contempt of Congress Feb. 10 when U.S. Judge Edward M. Curran reversed his verdict of Jan. 31. Mrs. Markison was cited for contempt in 1954 after she refused, on grounds of self-incrimination, to tell the House Un-American Activities Committee whether she had ever worked for the federal government.

Diantha D. Hoag, a coil winder for the Westinghouse Electric Corp. at Buffalo, N.Y., won acquittal of contempt charges July 6. U.S. District Judge David A. Pine ruled she did not waive her right under the Fifth Amendment to refuse to say if she were a Communist when she testified she had never engaged in espionage. She had been questioned by the Senate Government Operations Investigations Subcommittee then investigating alleged Communist activities in defense plants. (1955 Almanac, p. 395)

The U.S. Court of Appeals reversed the conviction of Saul Grossman, of Detroit, Jan. 12. Grossman, a former secretary of the Michigan Committee for the Protection of the Foreign Born, had refused to produce records of the Committee when he appeared before the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1952. (1952 Almanac, p. 248)

FIVE CONVICTIONS

John T. Gojack, vice president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (Ind.), was convicted of contempt of Congress May 3 by U.S. District Judge David A. Pine. Gojack was found guilty on six of nine counts in an indictment charging him for refusing to answer questions about alleged Communist affiliations before the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1955. Gojack was sentenced to nine months in prison and fined $200. (1955 Almanac, p. 393)

Other contempt convictions in 1956 included:

Harry Sacher, New York attorney, convicted March 13, sentenced to six months in jail and fined $1,000. (1955 Almanac, p. 528)

Lloyd Barenblatt, former Vassar College instructor, sentenced March 15 to six months in jail. (1954 Almanac, p. 365)

Marcus Singer, former Cornell University professor, convicted March 16, fined $100 and given a three-month suspended sentence for refusing to name former Communist associates. (1954 Almanac, p. 364)

Norton Anthony Russell, former Antioch College student, convicted May 31, given a 30-day jail term and $500 fine. (1954 Almanac, p. 374)

PRESIDENT'S DUTIES

S Con Res 65 --Reported by Senate Rules and Administration Committee (S Rept 1462) Jan. 27, 1956.

- Adopted by voice vote of the Senate Feb. 20.

Prompted by President Eisenhower's Sept. 24, 1955, heart attack and ex-President Herbert Hoover's suggestion that Congress create an office of Administrative Vice President, both Senate and House early in 1956 considered ways of lightening the Presidential burden. The subject died from apparent lack of interest and was not revived following Mr. Eisenhower's June 9 ileitis operation.

S Con Res 65 would have set up a joint committee to study problems connected with the election, succession and duties of the President and Vice President. It was not acted upon by the House.

PROVISIONS -- As adopted by the Senate, S Con Res 65 would have:

Authorized creation of a temporary joint committee composed of five Senators and five Representatives to study "all matters connected with the election, succession and duties of the President and Vice President from the time of (their) nomination...until the termination of their respective terms of office, with the purpose of making the law certain and complete...."

Specified 14 subjects for study, covering election matters, succession to the office of President, Presidential disability and delegation of Presidential powers and duties.

Directed the Committee to make its final report, "including drafts of any legislation recommended and of any proposed constitutional amendments," by June 30, 1956.

Authorized $25,000 for expenses of the committee.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Rules and Administration.

ACTION -- Jan. 27 reported S Con Res 65 (S Rept 1462). The report listed 14 subjects the proposed joint committee should consider.

Floor Action

The Senate Feb. 20 adopted S Con Res 65 by voice vote, after adopting a technical amendment.

DEBATE -- Feb. 20 -- William F. Knowland (R Calif.) --The subject was already being studied by Senate and House committees. Establishment of a joint committee would lead to confusion.

Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.) -- Creation of a joint committee would direct public attention to "these questions which remain unanswered."

Senate Hearings

The Senate Government Operations, Reorganization Subcommittee held hearings in January on ways of easing the Presidency. In April the Subcommittee issued a report rejecting proposals to establish an Administrative Vice Presidency.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 16, 24-25.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 16 -- Former President Herbert Hoover renewed his plea for appointment of an Administrative Vice President to relieve the President of "a monumental amount of secondary duties." He said these duties ranged from approval of "diplomas for graduating classes of Gallaudet College" to receiving and approving the personnel board of the Coast and Geodetic Survey. He said his proposal, if carried out, would not conflict with the work of the constitutional Vice President.

Subcommittee Chairman John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) said there was no thought of encouraging delegation of "matters of policy" normally discharged by the President. He said it was not the Subcommittee's intention "to consider any delegation of constitutional duties... (requiring) a constitutional amendment."

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- In a letter to Kennedy former President Harry S. Truman said "I have always been of the opinion that the Chief Executive...is the responsible head of the government and...it is not possible for him to delegate any...functions of his office as...set out in the Constitution."

Special Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams Jan. 11 said in a letter to Kennedy "...I know of no objection which we would have if the Congress should decide to make such an office available to the President for his use."

Jan. 24 -- Prof. James Hart of the University of Virginia said "there is no escape" from Presidential burdens, that the people rightly expected "all the great decisions" to be made by the President or approved by him personally.

Clark Clifford, former special assistant to Truman, said the Vice Presidency could be "built up" through constitutional amendment, making the Vice President the chief operations officer under the President.

Jan. 25 -- Kennedy said if the Administration did not give more affirmative support to the Hoover plan "there is no point in going ahead with it."

REPORT RELEASED

ACTION -- The full Committee April 29 released the Subcommittee's report (S Rept 1960) on its study, which concluded:

"...the President, except for obviously nondelegable powers, has sufficient authority to delegate the performance of administrative functions to subordinate officials of the executive branch...

"There are appropriate officials to whom statutory functions suitable for delegation may be assigned, and the Administration has not indicated any existing need for the creation of a position of Administrative Vice President in the Executive Office at this time...

"Thus, the Congress should not take the lead in diluting the President's responsibilities or functions in order to lessen his burden, unless such legislative authority is actively sought from the Congress by the President."

House Hearings

A Special Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee was appointed early in 1956 to study the problem of Presidential disability. The Subcommittee held two days of hearings but issued no report.

President Eisenhower Jan. 19 told his press conference he thought Presidential disability was a subject which "should be carefully studied by the Congress... and some kind of a resolution of doubt reached."

HEARINGS -- April 11-12.

TESTIMONY -- April 11 -- Ex-President Hoover said in a telegram to the Subcommittee that the Cabinet should determine whether a President is so incapacitated that the Vice President should take over temporarily.

Sen. Frederick G. Payne (R Maine), author of S 2763, which would authorize the Vice President to raise the question of the President's capacity and a recommendation would be made by a panel of physicians picked by the Chief Justice, said the argument that framers of the Constitution did not intend the Vice President to succeed the President was the "most compelling" one.

Sen. John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) said the Subcommittee should consider how to reorganize the whole government in case of disaster.

April 12 -- Arthur Krock, New York Times correspondent, described a plan for a special council to decide the question of Presidential disability if it should be raised. The council would be authorized to have the Surgeon General appoint a medical panel to examine the President.

FISHING ADMINISTRATION

S 3275 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 2017) May 17, 1956.
• Passed by the Senate by voice vote May 24.
HR 11570 -- Reported, amended, by House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee June 28 (H Rept 2519).
S 3275 -- Passed by the House, amended, July 7.
• Conference report (H Rept 2942) agreed to by the House and Senate July 27, by voice votes.
P.L. 1024 -- Signed into law Aug. 8.

S 3275 was prompted by complaints of commercial fishing interests that their industry was submerged in the Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service. The bill split the Service's commercial and sporting functions and established a separate bureau for each.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, S 3275:

Established an Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife within the Interior Department and under him, a Commissioner of Fish and Wildlife.

Reorganized the Fish and Wildlife Service into two separate agencies: the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries and the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, both to be supervised by the Commissioner.

Created a $10 million revolving fund to enable the Secretary of Interior to make loans for financing of fish operations and research, at a minimum interest rate of 3 percent, to mature in a maximum of 10 years.

Directed the Secretary of Interior to cooperate with the Secretary of State in providing U.S. representation at all international fish and wildlife conferences.

Background

Twelve New England Senators wrote President Eisenhower March 23 urging appointment of an Assistant Secretary of Interior for Fisheries. The Senators said problems of the American fishing industry "can be resolved only through close cooperation of the industry, the states and the federal government." They said the commercial fisheries "are receiving less recognition from the federal government than any other segment of the American economy."

The Senators who signed the letter: Styles Bridges (R N.H.), Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.), George D. Aiken (R Vt.), Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), Ralph E. Flanders (R Vt.), Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine), John O. Pastore (D R.I.), Prescott Bush (R Conn.), William A. Purtell (R Conn.), John F. Kennedy (D Mass.), Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) and Norris Cotton (R N.H.).

The Senate version of the bill would have established the post of Assistant Secretary for Fisheries, set up a policy-making Fisheries Commission, a Fisheries Division and a Wildlife Service. Conservation groups protested that it would subordinate wildlife preservation to commercial fishing interests. The final version was satisfactory to conservationists.

PRESIDENT'S COMMENT

In signing S 3275 into law, President Eisenhower said he did not "regard as a directive" provisions calling for U.S. participation in international fish and wildlife conferences. "If they were to be so construed, they would, in my judgment, be unconstitutional" limitations on the President's authority, he said.

FISHERY TRAINING

S 2379 -- Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee with amendments (S Rept 2014) May 17, 1956.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote May 21.

HR 10433 -- Reported by House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee (H Rept 2475) June 26.

S 2379 -- House failed to pass July 2, under suspension of the rules, by a 256-133 roll-call vote. (See p. 212)
- Passed by the House, with amendment, by voice vote July 27.
- Senate agreed to House amendment July 27.

P.L. 1027 -- Signed into law Aug. 8.

Congress in 1956 amended the Vocational Education Act of 1946 to include aid for education in the fishery and distributive trades. The aim was to help solve the shortage of trained manpower in the fishing industry.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, S 2379:

Authorized the Secretary of the Interior to make grants to public and non-profit private universities and colleges to promote education and training of professional personnel needed in commercial fishing.

Authorized an annual appropriation not to exceed $550,000 for the educational grants.

Authorized an annual appropriation of $375,000 for vocational education in the fishery trades and industry.

Background

Sen. Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) June 30, 1955, said that while the field of vocational and academic training had "received growing attention and action in other major fishery producing nations, the meager facilities in this country have remained almost unchanged during the past three decades. While this condition merits immediate consideration because of the importance of the fisheries' contribution to the gross national product, it can be even more serious in that it can adversely affect our independence for protein food from foreign sources during periods of international emergencies."

He introduced S 2379 in an effort to improve the U.S. fishery situation.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARINGS -- March 19-23, 26.

ACTION -- May 17 reported S 2379 (S Rept 2014), with amendments to promote the U.S. fishing industry by providing for the training of needed personnel.

Floor Action

The Senate May 21 passed S 2379 by voice vote after adopting committee amendments. There was no opposition.

House

COMMITTEE -- Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

HEARING -- June 6 on a bill (HR 10433) that was similar to S 2379.

ACTION -- June 26 reported HR 10433 (H Rept 2475).

Floor Action

The House July 2 refused to suspend its rules and pass S 2379. The House roll-call vote of 256-133 to suspend the rules and pass the bill was four votes short of the two-thirds majority needed for passage under suspension of the rules. (For voting, see chart p. 212)

Prior to the roll call, the House rejected the measure on a 113-65 standing vote and a 149-61 teller vote. The motion to pass the bill provided for an amendment inserting the language of HR 10433, as reported by the House Committee.

On the last day of the session, July 27, the House passed S 2379, with an amendment, by voice vote. The amendment substituted the text of HR 10433, which first was approved by an 82-37 standing vote.

DEBATE -- July 2 -- Herbert C. Bonner (D N.C.) -- The bill "would provide urgently required encouragement of education of individuals in the field of commercial fisheries. There is an existing and increasingly serious lack of sufficiently trained manpower in the industry...."

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- The bill "is of vital interest to the fishing interests of the United States .... It was at their request that I introduced (HR 10433) and I was very glad to do so.... They are fighting with their backs against the wall. Imports are coming in... great quantities."

Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) -- "What (commercial fishermen) need is a greater supply of fish.... This bill goes at the problem from the wrong angle. If this money is wanted for research...I am with you.... We do not need to train men to catch and market more -- what we need is new knowledge as to how we can conserve the present crop, hatch and grow more. This bill should go back to committee and a new one be brought in to solve the real problem."

John W. Byrnes (R Wis.) -- "I do not know why this situation is so critical that the only way we can get people to be trained in this field is for the federal government to go in and engage in some kind of program.... Other industries may feel for the moment that they are short of skilled personnel. Are they going to come to us and say that the need is for the...government to spend more money? ...We are being too free with the taxpayers' money."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 27 agreed to the House version of S 2379, clearing the bill for Presidential action.

RUBBER PLANT DISPOSAL

A program launched in 1953 to dispose of government-owned synthetic rubber plants expired in 1956 with all but one plant sold. Congress provided, however, for the long-term lease of the plant, which was in Louisville, Ky. The last sale took place early in 1956 when Congress permitted Goodrich-Gulf Chemicals, Inc. to buy an Institute, W. Va. plant. The House in effect endorsed the sale by a 309-61 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 188)

The Rubber Producing Facilities Disposal Commission went out of existence Sept. 23 after the Senate failed to approve a House-passed bill (HR 11878) to extend its life to July 1, 1957. The remaining functions of the Commission were assigned by executive order to the Federal Facilities Corporation.

Sales by the Rubber Commission over a three-year period totalled $284,848,000 for capital assets representing a government investment of some $486 million. When the Commission was dissolved, the government-owned Louisville plant was valued at about $32 million.

Background

One of President Eisenhower's early requests to the 83rd Congress in 1953 -- one also made by President Truman in 1950 and 1952 -- was for legislation to permit the sale to private industry of the 28 synthetic rubber plants built during World War II and operated by the federal government.

The Rubber Producing Facilities Disposal Act (PL 205, 83rd Congress) provided for sale of the plants, subject to certain safeguards, and established a Commission to negotiate terms. The sales were to meet standards of fair return to the government, be consistent with the national security, give small businesses a chance to obtain a fair share of the end products at fair prices, provide for a free, competitive synthetic rubber industry and assure certain annual production goals. Each sales contract was to contain a national security clause providing that the facilities should be promptly returned to the government if needed within 10 years. (1953 Almanac, p. 423; 1955 Almanac, p. 429.)

KY., W. VA. PLANTS

In March, 1956, Congress passed a bill (S 3091 -- PL 433) authorizing sale or long-term lease of the alcohol-butadiene plant at Louisville, subject to Congressional approval. The bill also provided for dissolution of the Commission and authorized the President to designate a successor agency to inherit some of its powers.

The Commission recommended that the plant be sold to the Union Carbide and Carbon Co. but on May 23 the Justice Department registered disapproval of the sale. The terms would not satisfy the requirements of the Disposal Act that sales should foster development of a free, competitive synthetic rubber industry, the Department said. Acting on this advice, the House June 19 adopted by voice vote a resolution (H Res 524 -- H Rept 2360) disapproving the sale. Under the 1953 law, such action by one chamber was sufficient to block a sale.

By executive order 10678 Sept. 20, President Eisenhower delegated responsibilities of the expiring Commission to the Federal Facilities Corporation, a Treasury Department agency whose function is to wind up the government's synthetic rubber program. The Corporation Sept. 25 invited bids for a five-to-fifteen year lease on the Louisville plant. The terms of the lease could be disapproved by either house of Congress.

Earlier, Congress in effect approved the Commission's recommendation that the Institute, W. Va. plant be sold for $9 million to Goodrich-Gulf Chemicals, Inc.

Rep. Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) Feb. 1 introduced a resolution (H Res 396) calling on the House to disapprove the proposed sale. The resolution was reported adversely (H Rept 1750) Feb. 7 by the House Armed Services Committee, which unanimously endorsed the sale.

The House Feb. 8 turned down the resolution of disapproval by a 61-309 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 188)

DEBATE -- Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- "If we reject this sale, the plant cannot be offered for sale for at least another two years unless Congress passes a new law. This plant will employ as many as 700 people and...will certainly improve the employment situation in that area."

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- "A vote against the pending resolution is a vote for predatory business practices and against opportunity for small business to compete."

The Senate Feb. 8 also rejected a resolution (S Res 197 -- S Rept 1469) to disapprove the Institute sale. The action came on an unrecorded standing vote.

COMMERCIAL TREATIES

Execs E,G,H -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 9) July 9, 1956.

- Approved by the Senate July 11 by an 88-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 177)
- Ratifications signed by the President Sept. 14.

The Senate July 11 approved en bloc, by an 88-0 roll-call vote, three new commercial treaties with Iran, Nicaragua and the Netherlands (Execs E, G, and H, 84th Congress, second session.) (For voting, see chart p. 177)

BACKGROUND -- The Iranian treaty replaced two provisional agreements of 1928. The Nicaraguan treaty replaced one of 1867 which was terminated in 1902, and the Netherlands treaty replaced a convention of 1852 and an agreement on trademarks of 1883.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by the Senate:

The treaties of friendship, commerce and navigation with Nicaragua and the Netherlands followed in practically all respects provisions of previous postwar commercial treaties.

The Iranian treaty of amity, economic relations and consular rights, an abridged form of commercial treaty, included provisions on the privileges and immunities of consular officers.

RENEGOTIATION ACT

HR 11947 -- Reported, amended, by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 2549) June 30.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the House July 13.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 2624) July 18.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate July 19.
- House agreed, by voice vote, to Senate amendments July 21.

P.L. 870 -- Signed into law Aug. 1.

The measure extended and amended the Renegotiation Act of 1951 under which the government recovers excess profits made by defense contractors. The Act, due to expire Dec. 31, 1956, was extended to Dec. 31, 1958.

The bill was included in a July 10 listing by President Eisenhower of items he hoped would be passed before Congress adjourned.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, the major provisions of HR 11947:

Extended the authority of the Renegotiation Board from Dec. 31, 1956 through Dec. 31, 1958.

Applied the existing exemption from renegotiation to contracts providing $1 million or less in receipts and accruals, effective after fiscal 1956 (current exemption -- $500,000).

Limited renegotiation law to contracts made by the Defense Department and military departments, Maritime Administration and Federal Maritime Board in the Commerce Department, Atomic Energy Commission and General Services Administration.

Authorized the President, in a future national emergency, to bring under the law other agencies directly connected with national defense. (Technically, the U.S. is still under a national emergency proclaimed in 1950.)

Redefined "standard commercial articles and services" (exempted from renegotiation in 1954 and 1955) in order to establish a yardstick by which they could automatically be determined without individual findings by the Renegotiation Board.

Suspended their exemption from renegotiation in any future national emergency.

Permitted a two-year carryforward of losses (instead of the current one-year carryforward).

Made subcontracts with tax-exempt organizations negotiated after June 30, 1956, subject to renegotiation procedures.

Required the Renegotiation Board to submit an annual report to Congress, with a report for fiscal 1956 to be filed by Jan. 1, 1957.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Renegotiation Act." (1955 Almanac, p. 427)

The Renegotiation Act of 1951 was extended in 1954 through Dec. 31, 1954. President Eisenhower sent Congress a special message requesting renewal of the Act on March 5, 1955. Congress then renewed and extended it until Dec. 31, 1956 after providing for additional exemptions from renegotiation procedures.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

ACTION -- June 30 reported, with amendments, HR 11947 (H Rept 2549). A minority report opposing extension of the Act was signed by Reps. Richard M. Simpson (R Pa.), Noah M. Mason (R Ill.) and Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.).

Floor Action

The House July 13 passed HR 11947 by voice vote, with committee amendments.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) -- Exempt General Services Administration contracts from renegotiation; July 13. Voice vote.

Curtis -- Delete provision suspending exemption of standard commercial articles and services during a future national emergency; July 13. Voice.

DEBATE -- July 13 -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- The purpose of the 1951 Act was to assure that the "government got its money's worth in defense contracts..... During this period of semi-mobilization it is just as necessary to continue the renegotiation authority as it is during a war period."

Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- "The time should soon come when such arbitrary interferences with normal contracting procedures, such as renegotiation represents, must be removed."

Curtis -- Opposed the bill as encouraging "poor procurement practice," hindering small business efforts to get government contracts and costing too much (collecting $115 million in five years, at a cost to the government of $18 million).

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

ACTION -- July 18 reported HR 11947 (S Rept 2624) with amendments altering House provisions redefining "standard commercial articles and services."

Floor Action

The Senate July 19 passed HR 11947 by voice vote, with committee amendments.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- Raise the exemption from renegotiation to contracts providing $1.5 million (instead of the bill's $1 million); July 19. Standing vote.

DEBATE -- July 19 -- O'Mahoney -- "The big corporations doing business with the U.S. government...have so many pockets into which they can put their profits that they are...almost completely exempt from the penalties of renegotiation. The small businesses, which do not have subsidiaries and affiliates and...only one pocket for their profits, are the victims of renegotiation."

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- The $1 million exemption "is entirely too low" and should be raised to $2 million.

Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- The $1 million exemption "will eliminate from renegotiation 37 percent of contractors" currently subject to the Act "and should be of real benefit to small business." Under the bill, contracts with only eight government agencies, rather than the existing 21 agencies, will be subject to renegotiation.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 21 agreed by voice vote to the Senate amendments to HR 11947.

DEBT CEILING

HR 11740 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 2407) June 20, 1956.
- Passed by the House by voice vote June 21.
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 2398) July 2.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 3.

P.L. 678 -- Signed into law July 9.

Congress approved in 1956 a temporary increase in the statutory limit on the public debt. With the permanent limit $275 billion, Congress set the temporary ceiling at $278 billion for fiscal 1957, $3 billion less than the temporary limit during fiscal years 1955 and 1956.

While Republicans hailed the decrease in the temporary debt limit as evidence of the success of their fiscal policies, Democrats said it was due to unprecedented prosperity and not to reduced government expenditures.

DEBT REDUCED IN 1956

Public debt subject to the statutory limit declined by $1,623,000,000 during the 1956 fiscal year. The Treasury Department estimated the public debt subject to the limit at the fiscal year's end, June 30, at $272,361,000,000.

For fiscal 1956 the budget surplus (excess of income over expenditures), which Administration policy called for applying against the debt, amounted to $1,754,357,066. The surplus -- the first since 1951 -- was substantially greater than the amount President Eisenhower had predicted in January -- $230 million. (See p. 62)

Federal spending for fiscal 1956 came to $66,386,338,250. Receipts totaled $68,140,695,316.

In its mid-year review, Aug. 28, the Administration estimated spending in fiscal 1957 would be $69.1 billion while federal income would come to $69.8 billion. That would result in a $700 million surplus in the year ending June 30, 1957.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 11740: Permitted a temporary $3 billion increase in the statutory limit on the public debt for the period ending June 30, 1957, setting a temporary ceiling of $278 billion.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Debt Limit" (1954 Almanac, p. 498)

Congress approved in 1954 and 1955 a $6 billion temporary increase in the statutory limit on the public debt, setting the temporary ceiling for fiscal 1955 and 1956 at $281 billion. (1955 Almanac, p. 426)

President Eisenhower Jan. 16 in his 1956 budget message and Jan. 24 in his Economic Report asked for extension of the temporary increase in the debt limit. On Jan. 24 he said the legislation was needed "because of the seasonal disparities between expenditures and income, the limited cash balances with which Treasury operations are now being conducted, and the small gap between the outstanding debt and the temporary statutory limit of $281 billion."

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARING -- June 19 on HR 11740.

TESTIMONY -- June 19 -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey said the new limit would be "a tight fit" but expressed confidence the Treasury could stay within it, barring "an upset." He said that under current estimates "there is no leeway for any reduction in tax rates." Humphrey said Administration policy "calls for applying any surplus to debt reduction."

ACTION -- The Committee June 20 unanimously reported HR 11740 (H Rept 2407).

Floor Action

The House June 21 passed by voice vote the bill (HR 11740) to set a $278 billion ceiling on the national debt in fiscal 1957.

DEBATE -- June 21 -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- "The Secretary of the Treasury's request for a smaller temporary increase in the debt limit this year results from a budgetary surplus and from the fact that corporate tax payments...are gradually being spread more evenly over the year" so the Treasury no longer has to borrow as heavily in the early part of the fiscal year.

Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- "This sharp cutback in the amount of the temporary increase furnishes dramatic evidence of the magnificent accomplishments of this Administration in putting the fiscal affairs of the nation in order."

Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) -- "This represents a failure by the Administration to keep its promise to balance the budget without any increase in the debt limit."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

ACTION -- July 2 reported HR 11740 without amendment (S Rept 2398). The Committee said it was "gratified that the temporary increase this year is $3 billion rather than $6 billion" and hoped a continued surplus and the new method of collecting corporate income taxes in quarterly payments would make continuation of a temporary increase unnecessary for fiscal 1958.

Floor Action

The Senate July 3 passed the bill by voice vote.

DEBATE -- July 3 -- Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- Although the debt ceiling is raised only $ 3 billion instead of the $6 billion of the previous two years, the cut "results entirely from the prudent decision to hold current tax rates against unexpectedly high prosperity," rather than from reduced expenditures. The Administration has sought increased funds for non-defense programs and Congress has gone on a "spending spree."

FARM LOANS

HR 11544 -- Reported, amended, by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 2260) June 4, 1956.

• Passed by voice vote of the House June 20.

S 3429 -- Reported, amended (S Rept 2526), by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee July 11.

HR 11544 -- Passed with amendments by voice vote of the Senate July 12.

• Conference report (H Rept 2869) agreed to by both houses by voice votes July 25.

P.L. 878 -- Signed into law August 1.

The measure increased from $15 million to $65 million the amount of money available for emergency loans to farmers and stockmen under the emergency Farm Loan Act of 1953 and broadened provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act authorizing government loans to owners or operators of "family-size" farms who cannot get reasonable credit elsewhere.

The legislation implemented President Eisenhower's 1955 and 1956 requests for authority to make loans to low-income and part-time farmers.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 11544:

Amended PL 727, 83rd Congress, to extend to June 30, 1959 the Secretary of Agriculture's authority to make emergency loans to farmers and stockmen unable to obtain credit from private sources or other government programs.

Increased from $15 million to $65 million the amount of money from the Farmers' Home Administration revolving fund that could be used for such loans.

Made the following amendments to the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act:

Authorized the FHA, until June 30, 1959, to refinance -- through farm mortgage loans -- existing debts of eligible farmers on farms not larger than "family-size" if the borrowers were unable to meet the terms and conditions of their outstanding debts and were unable to refinance with responsible private lending agencies at rates and terms which they could reasonably be expected to fulfill. (A new provision of the law)

Permitted FHA to make or insure loans -- for acquisition, repair or improvement of family-size farms -- to farm owners, tenants, laborers or sharecroppers who obtain a "substantial portion" of their income from farming (in lieu of the "major portion", as provided in existing law).

Permitted operating loans and loans for repair, improvement and refinancing to operators of farms smaller than family-size if, with the aid of supplemental income, they can meet the loan and their living and operating expenses; such loans would be limited to "bona fide" farmers conducting "substantial farming operations" who have "historically" lived on farms and depended on farm income for their livelihood. (A new provision)

Permitted farm improvement loans to be made on family-size farms worth more than the average efficient family-size farm in the community (prohibited under existing law).

Permitted farm improvement loans up to $15,000 for farms operated by not more than three farm families or having not more than three farm dwellings. (A new provision)

Removed the $7,000 limit on the maximum initial operating loan to a farmer; prohibited loans exceeding $10,000 but provided for loans up to $20,000 in a limited number of cases.

Permitted extension of the repayment period on operating loans to 10 years from the date the original loan was made -- if, for causes beyond their control, borrowers had failed to repay their loans within seven years (the maximum period under existing law).

Increased the FHA loan insurance authority from $100 million to $125 million a year.

Broadened certain powers of the Secretary of Agriculture in compromising claims and dealing with other aspects of FHA activities.

Background

The Emergency Farm Loan Act of 1953 (PL 727, 83rd Congress), extended in 1955, authorized loans to farmers who suffer "economic disasters." (1955 Almanac, p. 188)

The Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, approved July 22, 1937, established the Farmers' Home Corporation, the loan administering agency affected by the 1956 farm loans legislation.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture, Conservation and Credit Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 19, April 17 and 26 and May 11 on miscellaneous farm credit bills.

TESTIMONY -- March 19 -- Rep. H. Carl Andersen (R Minn.) said Congress should approve legislation to liberalize farm credit laws in order to "help small farmers through a price squeeze." He said many farmers were in critical condition, "but they could work their way out of debt if payments on their loans were spread out over a longer period."

ACTION -- The Committee June 4 reported a bill (HR 11544 -- H Rept 2260) to expand and extend government loans for small farmers and farmers in disaster areas.

Floor Action

The House June 20 passed the bill by voice vote, with committee amendments.

The measure granted the Farmers' Home Administration authority, for the first time, to make loans to part-time farmers. It also expanded FHA powers in several other respects. An additional $50 million was provided for emergency loans to farmers and stockmen.

HR 11544 differed from the final version in these major respects:

It did not contain a section permitting up to $15,000 for farm improvement loans.

It set a limit of $9,000 on operating loans, whereas the final version set it at $10,000 and permitted loans up to $20,000 in a limited number of cases.

DEBATE -- June 20 -- There was no opposition to the bill, but several Representatives said it did not go far enough in meeting farmers' credit needs.

W.R. Poage (D Texas) -- "In the past, the Farmers' Home Administration could make no loan to any farmer unless he received the major portion of his income from the farm operation. This automatically eliminated about one-third of the farmers of America and generally eliminated those with the smallest income.... If a man during the past 10 years has in any one of those years depended on the operation of his farm for his livelihood, even though today he is making a large share of his living working in town, we will be able to make him a...loan" under the provisions of the bill.

H. Carl Andersen (R Minn.) -- "The bill...is generally good and has as its purpose the relief of credit stringencies which have mainly developed because of the decline in net farm income. However...it does not go far enough.... There will be no help under this bill...for farmers in those isolated communities (not officially designated disaster areas)...whose crops are damaged or destroyed by rain, flood or drought...."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry, Agricultural Credit and Rural Electrification Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 8, 17 and 24 on S 3429 and related bills dealing with Farmers' Home Administration operating and housing loans.

ACTION -- The Committee July 11 reported S 3429 (S Rept 2526) to amend the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. It had the same general objectives as the House bill but differed in many respects. One House provision -- extension of authority for emergency loans to farmers and stockmen -- was not included in S 3429 because a separate bill containing similar provisions (S 3559) had been passed by the Senate June 11.

Floor Action

The Senate July 12 passed HR 11544 by voice vote. The chamber first passed its own bill (S 3429), with amendments, then substituted its text for that of HR 11544 and sent the amended bill to conference.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 11544 was similar to the final version of the bill except that it:

Omitted provisions extending the Emergency Farm Loan Act of 1953 for farmers and stockmen.

Prohibited farm ownership or operating loans to applicants who are able to obtain loans from other sources at "reasonable rates" (rather than at rates not exceeding 5 percent, as under existing law).

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- Broaden definition of "family-sized" farms eligible for loans by permitting loans up to $15,000 for construction and repair of farm buildings and dwellings on farms operated by up to three farm families or having up to three farm dwellings; July 12. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Delete provision prohibiting loans to applicants able to obtain them from other sources at "reasonable rates" rather than the existing 5 percent maximum; July 12. Voice.

DEBATE -- July 12 -- Several Senators said the bill did not meet the credit needs of certain farmers, particularly those in areas affected by extended drought and other natural disasters.

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- No other legislation before the Senate "is of greater importance to farmers who are in difficulty...who are finding it hard to live or to refinance or to get new loans...or do many of the other things that are permitted under the terms of the bill -- which, frankly, is a very comprehensive liberalization of the...present Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act."

Humphrey -- The language in the bill relating to "reasonable" interest rates would "condone a practice of having the money market bear whatever cost the banking fraternity can get out of it.... The Department of Agriculture testified that the word 'reasonable' would be interpreted to mean interest rates as high as 6.7 or 8 percent."

Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- The bill "is a great improvement...but we have not done a basic job...because the laws are so complicated that the average FHA administrator is unable to interpret (them)...and thus render a speedy and adequate service to the farmers who need help.... What is needed is a complete rewriting of the law."

Conference

REPORT -- In a report filed July 21 (H Rept 2869), Senate-House conferees eliminated the Senate amendment that set the condition that a loan applicant must be unable to get credit elsewhere at "reasonable rates." The House language, which followed existing law, was retained but conferees pointed out that FHA loans were not intended to be used for "financing of well-to-do farmers who should be able to obtain adequate credit from other sources."

The conferees also:

Accepted Senate provisions that: permitted up to $15,000 for farm improvement loans; authorized second mortgage loans on real estate, as well as first mortgage loans; prohibited operating loans exceeding $10,000, except for a limited number of loans up to $20,000.

Extended the repayment period on operating loans to 10 years (under existing law, seven years was the maximum period) in certain "hardship cases."

Accepted the House provision extending and expanding the emergency loan program for farmers and stockmen.

ACTION -- The Senate and House July 25 agreed to the conference report by voice votes without debate.

FARM CREDIT

HR 10285 -- Reported, amended, by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 2160) May 14, 1956.
- Passed, amended, by a 246-4 roll-call vote of the House May 31. (See p. 204)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 2145) June 6.
- Passed with amendments by voice vote of the Senate July 12.
- House agreed, by voice vote, to Senate amendments July 16.

P.L. 809 -- Signed into law July 26.

The measure provided for the merger of two government-owned farm credit institutions, the production credit corporations and the federal intermediate credit banks. It was drafted to conform to provisions of the Farm Credit Act of 1953 (PL 202, 83rd Congress) to permit eventual farmer ownership of all phases of the agricultural credit program. The legislation was requested by President Eisenhower in his Jan. 9 farm message to Congress but he expressed "misgivings" about the final version.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, the major provisions of HR 10285, the Farm Credit Act of 1956:

Merged the production credit corporation in each of the 12 farm credit districts in the U.S. into the federal intermediate credit bank in that district.

Required the intermediate credit banks to take over the assets, liabilities and functions of the production credit corporations, including the supervision and service of the production credit associations (federally chartered cooperative organizations owned largely by farmers, which make loans to farmers and ranchers).

Set up two new classes of stock in the intermediate credit banks -- Class A stock, to be owned solely by the government, and Class B stock to be owned solely by the production credit associations.

Required the production credit associations to acquire 15 percent of the Class A stock of each bank by 1959.

Provided for the balance of Class A stock to be acquired by the production credit associations over a period of years (up to an estimated 40 years).

Required that the existing budgetary supervision of the banks by the government be continued until the production credit associations had paid for 15 percent of the government's stock in the banks.

Authorized the governor of the Farm Credit Administration to redistribute the invested capital of the government among the 12 intermediate credit banks in proportion to their needs. (Under existing law, the government had an equal amount -- $5 million -- invested in each bank.)

Required that any transfer of capital funds resulting from such a redistribution be in four equal installments, over a period of three years.

Permitted the banks to discount paper with maturities up to five years (instead of three years, as under existing law).

Set Jan. 1, 1957, as the effective date of the bill.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Farm Credit Board" (1953 Almanac, p. 114) "Farm Credit" (1955 Almanac, p. 182)

The Federal Farm Credit System has five parts: the federal land bank system, the production credit associations, banks for cooperatives, production credit corporations and the federal intermediate credit banks. Farmer-ownership of the first three was complete or under way by 1956. The Farm Credit Act of 1956 embodied legislation to convert the last two to farmer-owned institutions.

The federal land bank system provides farmers and ranchers with long-term credit on farm real estate. It was farmer-owned by 1947.

The production credit associations are cooperative organizations that make short- and intermediate-term loans to farmers and ranchers. Nearly all of these are farmer-owned.

The Farm Credit Act of 1955 (PL 347, 84th Congress -- see 1955 Almanac, p. 182) provided a formula to retire government stocks from the banks for cooperatives. These banks extend credit to farmers' marketing, purchasing and service cooperatives. The 1955 Act followed recommendations by a 13-member board established by the Farm Credit Act of 1953. (1953 Almanac, p. 114)

The federal intermediate credit banks were established to provide agriculture with a permanent source of short- and intermediate-term credit. They serve as banks of discount and not as direct lending banks, and finance the production credit associations and other financing institutions which make such direct loans.

The production credit corporations provide service to and supervise the production credit associations. Their functions include: establishing loan policies, making credit examinations and supplementing the capital of the production credit associations when necessary.

The board established by the Act of 1953 submitted further recommendations to Congress March 16, 1956, with respect to the production credit corporations and the federal intermediate credit banks. These organizations had been completely government-owned. The 1956 legislation, embodying the board's recommendations, merged the two and converted both to (eventual) farmer-owned institutions, placing all parts of the Federal Farm Credit System under (eventual) farmer-ownership.

President Eisenhower in his Jan. 9 Farm Message asked Congress to continue reorganization of the Farm Credit Administration by combining the production credit corporations and the federal intermediate credit banks. (For text, see p. 52)

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture, Conservation and Credit Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- April 19, 20 and 21 on HR 10285 and similar bills to merge production credit corporations in the federal intermediate credit banks and provide for the retirement of government capital in the intermediate credit banks.

ACTION -- The Committee May 14 unanimously reported, with amendments, a bill (HR 10285 -- H Rept 2160) to provide for increased farmer-ownership and control of the farm credit system. The Committee report said HR 10285 would "make it possible to complete the job of converting all institutions supervised by the Farm Credit Administration to wholly farmer-owned institutions."

Floor Action

The House May 31 passed the bill by a 246-4 roll-call vote, with committee amendments. (For voting, see chart, p. 204)

DEBATE -- May 31 -- Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- Objected to the bill because it "deprives the taxpayers... of some $61 million in surplus funds accumulated" in the merged institutions.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry, Agricultural Credit and Rural Electrification Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- April 23 and 24 on S 3564 (similar to HR 10285) and related bills.

ACTION -- The Committee June 6 reported, with amendments, HR 10285 (S Rept 2145).

Floor Action

The Senate passed HR 10285 July 12, by voice vote. Committee amendments and two floor amendments were accepted by voice vote.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Frank A. Barrett (R Wyo.) -- Provide that whenever the government redistributes its invested capital among the intermediate credit banks, such transfer of funds shall be made over a period of three years; July 12. Voice vote.

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Require that federal budgetary supervision of the intermediate credit banks be continued until the production credit associations had paid for 15 percent of the government's stock in the banks; July 12. Voice.

DEBATE -- July 12 -- Holland -- "The stock of the new institutions brought about by (the merger)...will be owned (eventually) by the production credit associations, which are composed of farmers.... No function is destroyed. The new institution...will have all the powers and functions of the two institutions that now exist. They will be able to save substantially in reduced overhead costs."

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 16 agreed to Senate amendments to HR 10285 by voice vote, without debate, clearing the bill for the President.

President Eisenhower July 26 signed the bill into law. The President said he did so with "misgivings" because of provisions that would preclude budget reviews and open the way for what might be a "windfall profit to private stockholders." He proposed that the next Congress correct that aspect of the Act.

CCC BORROWING POWER

HR 11132 -- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 2211) with amendment May 24, 1956.

S 3820 -- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 2289) with amendments June 22.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, July 3 by voice vote.
- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote July 7.
- Conference report (H Rept 2772) agreed to by the House July 20 and the Senate July 24, by voice votes.

P.L. 864 -- Signed into law August 1.

The bill increased the borrowing power of the Commodity Credit Corporation from $12 billion to $14.5 billion, as recommended by the Department of Agriculture. Differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill were minor. CCC's major activities are the financing of farm price support programs and, under the Agricultural Act of 1956, the first-year operations of the soil bank program.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, S 3820:

Increased the borrowing authority of the Commodity Credit Corp. from $12 billion to $14.5 billion.

Amended the penal provisions of the CCC Charter Act to make it a federal offense to wilfully steal or convert commodities or other property mortgaged or pledged to a private lending agency under a CCC program (existing law covered only property pledged to or owned directly by CCC).

Provided that such an offense would be punishable as a misdemeanor (rather than as a felony) if the property involved had a value of less than $500.

Background

Price-support operations are the major activity of the CCC. It conducts a storage facilities plan, export and foreign purchase programs and finances the soil bank plan inaugurated in 1956.

The Agriculture Department's request for an additional $2.5 billion borrowing power was made to meet existing commitments for price supports on 1956 crops and to finance the soil bank program until an evaluation of the program's dollar requirements could be made in 1957.

The CCC had $11.5 billion of its $12 billion borrowing power (authorized under previous law) in use May 31, 1956. The $12 billion ceiling was set in 1955; early in 1954 the ceiling was $6.75 billion. (1955 Almanac, p. 184)

Senate

DEBATE -- July 3 -- Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- "To capitalize the CCC to the extent of $14.5 billion is outrageous.... I can recall when a Secretary of Agriculture contemplated less than a half billion dollars worth of commodities and thought he was looking at a tremendously big figure.... I do not intend to oppose (the) bill. I only continue to express the hope that some day we may have some other answer than steadily to increase the borrowing power of CCC, and that instead...we will decide to sell these commodities and not to expand the amounts of them kept in the warehouses."

Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) -- "As of April 30, 1956, the Corporation had $11.5 billion of its borrowing authority in use...$8.6 billion of this...was covered by CCC's investments (in farm commodities) under the price support program.... The evidence which was submitted to the Committee indicated a need for this (additional) loan authority, and that...is the reason why we are proposing it.... It is merely borrowing authority" and will not be used "unless it is necessary...."

Anderson -- "I want to predict that they (CCC) will use it all if we give them authority."

House

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Elmer J. Holland (D Pa.) -- Require CCC to reimburse states and communities for expenses of storing surplus farm commodities donated to them by CCC; July 7. Standing vote, 11-60.

DEBATE -- July 7 -- There was little opposition to the bill but several Representatives said they were alarmed at growing government stocks of farm commodities acquired under the price support program financed by CCC.

William E. McVey (R Ill.) -- "The grand total of all commodities (owned by CCC) reached the staggering sum of $8.7 billion" on March 31, 1956. "No one can even estimate what the final loss (to the government) is going to be when these products are finally disposed of -- if that event should come to pass...."

John W. Heselton (R Mass.) -- If the taxpayers and the consumers "do not feel that there is a real effort being made to really solve this problem, they can well come in here and demand that all agricultural legislation be wiped off the books. If they do, that will certainly happen.... A day of reckoning will come...."

Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- "Under present law, quantities of commodities in CCC inventories must be considered in determining acreage allotments (and) these increases have resulted in substantial reduction in crop acreage each year.... While the U.S. farmer's acreage has been severely curtailed...agricultural production in other parts of the world has increased...."

Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.) -- "This increase (in CCC borrowing power) is not in any sense passing upon the merits or demerits of the farm program.... It is merely that under existing law certain commitments have been made, and it becomes the moral responsibility of Congress to provide the money to meet" them.

GREAT PLAINS PROGRAM

HR 11833-- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 2640) July 7, 1956.
- Passed by the House by voice vote July 23.
- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 2785) July 25.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 26.

P.L. 1021 -- Signed into law August 7.

The 84th Congress amended the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act and the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 to provide a long-range program to combat soil erosion in the Great Plains area. The legislation, completed by Congress July 26, differed from the soil bank program in that it was aimed at obtaining a shift in land use rather than a reduction in production. The measure was part of the Agriculture Department's legislative requests for 1956.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 11833:

Authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to make contracts, for a period of 10 years or less, with farmers and ranchers in the soil erosion areas of the Great Plains states (Colorado, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas and Wyoming) specifying conservation practices designed to salvage wind-eroded and otherwise deteriorated acreage. Participating farmers would receive approximately 80 percent of the cost from the federal government.

Guaranteed participating farmers that acreage allotments and marketing quotas under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 would not be decreased during the contract period.

Authorized a maximum appropriation of $150 million for the entire program; limited the payments for any one year to $25 million; and provided that contracts terminate not later than Dec. 31, 1971.

BACKGROUND -- President Eisenhower Jan. 11 transmitted to Congress an Agriculture Department program he said was designed to relieve "widespread suffering and heavy economic losses" by farmers in the Great Plains region.

The President said: "The Great Plains region, a vast agricultural empire peopled by 17 million of our citizens, is an area of severe climactic variations which periodically produce widespread suffering and heavy economic losses. In this region farm families have a continuous struggle to protect their best cultivated and grazing lands against soil erosion during seasons of high winds and frequent periods of extremely dry weather."

SMALL FLOOD CONTROL

S 3272 -- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 1732) April 16, 1956.
- Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, April 18.

HR 9555 -- Reported by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 2548) June 30.

S 3272 -- Passed by the House, by voice vote, amended, July 2.
- Senate agreed to House amendments, by voice vote, July 5.

P.L. 685 -- Signed into law July 11.

The Small Flood Control bill revised and increased by $7 million annually general authorizations for Army Engineer projects in the Flood Control Act of 1948.

PROVISIONS -- The House and final version of S 3272:

Authorized the Secretary of the Army to allot in any fiscal year a maximum of $10 million (instead of the existing $3 million authorization or the Senate's $15 million) for small flood control projects not specifically authorized by law, provided the Chief of Army Engineers felt such work was warranted.

Set a $400,000 maximum for a single project in any one year (instead of the existing $150,000 limit, or the Senate's $500,000 limit).

LITTLE WOOD RIVER

S 3227 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 2417) July 5, 1956.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate July 6.

HR 7850 -- Reported, amended, by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 1994) April 12, 1956.

S 3227 -- Passed by voice vote of the House July 27. (For roll-call vote, see chart p. 228)

P.L. 933 -- Signed into law August 6.

On the last night of the 1956 session, the House passed and sent to the President a bill authorizing the Secretary of Interior to construct and operate a reclamation project on the Little Wood River, Idaho. There was no debate on the merits of the bill itself, but a dispute arose in the House over the method of bringing it up for floor action. Republicans, contending the Democratic leadership had overlooked a promise to bring the bill to a vote, forced adoption, on a 173-168 roll call, of a resolution making consideration of the bill in order. (For voting, see chart p. 228)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, S 3227:

Authorized the Secretary of Interior to enlarge the Little Wood River Reservoir in order to improve the irrigation water supply of approximately 10,000 acres of land in Idaho and to assist in flood control.

Provided that the cost allocated to irrigation should be repaid over a 40-year period and that the cost allocated to flood control should be non-reimbursable.

Authorized appropriation of $1,880,000 for construction of the project.

SPECIAL SCHOOL AID

HR 11695 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee June 13, 1956 (H Rept 2357).
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the House July 7.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee July 21 (S Rept 2753).
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate July 23.
- Senate amendments agreed to by voice vote of the House July 25.

P.L. 949 -- Signed into law Aug. 3.

The bill extended until June 30, 1958 two laws providing federal aid to school districts overburdened by federal activities (PL 815 and PL 874, 81st Congress). It would provide an estimated $378 million in federal aid to the so-called "federally impacted areas" during fiscal 1957 and 1958.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 11695:

Authorized, through fiscal 1959, appropriations for construction of urgently needed minimum school facilities in school districts which since 1951-52 had substantial increases in school membership as a result of federal activities.

Extended until June 30, 1958, the final date by which applications for federal funds under the program must be received by the Commissioner of Education.

Based the federal share of the cost of constructing such schools on the estimated number of children in the school year 1957-58 who otherwise would be without such facilities.

Based total federal payments to a local educational agency on the estimated increase since the school year 1955-56 in the number of children living on federal property, living with parents working on federal property or whose presence in the community resulted directly from activities of the federal government.

Extended for two years an authorization for building new schools for Indian children living on isolated reservations; increased the appropriation ceiling from $20 million to $40 million.

SCHOOL MAINTENANCE

Extended for one year, from June 30, 1957, to June 30, 1958, the program of operation and maintenance of school districts crowded by federal activities (defined as those, with 35,000 or less daily attendance, in which 3 percent of the pupils derived from federal activities, or 6 percent in districts with over 35,000 attendance).

Provided for federal payments based on average daily attendance; set minimum local contribution rates based on average per pupil expenditure in the state and the national average local contribution rate.

Permitted children of servicemen who transferred to another base without their families to continue to be counted for calculation of federal aid.

Made school districts serving Air Force flight-training installations eligible for benefits.

Provided that former federal housing property should be considered as federal property for purposes of the bill for one year after the fiscal year in which it was sold or transferred to private owners.

PL 815, enacted in 1950, authorized federal aid for school construction in areas where increased population, because of defense and related activities, had overcrowded the schools. The law was extended in 1953 and made applicable to areas with large Indian populations as well as defense areas. In 1954, Congress extended school construction assistance for defense areas until June 30, 1956.

PL 874, also enacted in 1950, provided financial assistance for the maintenance and operation of schools in federally impacted areas. In 1953, Congress extended the act until June 30, 1956, and added a requirement -- which never became effective -- that a school district must absorb a number of federally connected children equal to 3 percent of its non-federal school enrollment before qualifying for federal aid in school maintenance. This requirement was postponed for one year in 1954.

Congress in 1955 enacted legislation (PL 382) to extend construction aid to Indian areas until June 30, 1956; postpone the effective date of the 3 percent absorption requirement for an additional year; and extend PL 874 until June 30, 1957.

President Eisenhower Jan. 12, 1956, in a special education message, asked Congress to extend the program of school construction aid in federally impacted areas. (For text of message, see p. 59)

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor, Special Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 27 - May 1.

Commissioner of Education Samuel M. Brownell requested a two-year extension of PL 815 and an $88 million appropriation for school construction under the program in fiscal 1957. He urged Congress to defer until 1957 action to extend PL 874.

ACTION -- The Committee June 13 reported a clean bill (HR 11695 -- H Rept 2357) to extend PL 815 and PL 874 until June 30, 1958. The Committee June 8 rejected, by a reported vote of 8-17, a proposal by Rep. Stewart L. Udall (D Ariz.) to extend federal aid to schools needing more facilities to carry out integration plans.

Floor Action

The House July 7 passed HR 11695 by voice vote with an amendment. An amendment to add general school aid to the bill, offered by Cleveland M. Bailey (D W.Va.), was ruled out of order. (For House action July 5 on general school legislation, see story, p. 411)

PROVISIONS -- See final version, above.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Horace Seely-Brown (R Conn.) -- Provide that federal housing property should be considered as federal property for one year following the fiscal year in which it was sold, instead of one year from date of sale; July 7. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Byron G. Rogers (D Colo.) -- Increase from 35,000 to 45,000 the average daily attendance at which the 6 percent (rather than 3 percent) eligibility requirement applies; July 7. Voice.

DEBATE -- July 7 -- John J. Rhodes (R Ariz.) -- "The thesis of this program is that the federal government by its activities has either denied the school district tax revenue which it otherwise would have or, because of its activities, has caused an impact or an influx of children who would not be there unless it were for some defense activity."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

ACTION -- July 21 reported HR 11695 (S Rept 2753) with three technical amendments.

Floor Action

The Senate July 23 passed HR 11695, with the committee amendments, by voice vote without debate.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 25 agreed to the Senate amendments by voice vote, clearing the bill for the White House.

RAILROAD RETIREMENT

HR 9065 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 2418) June 25, 1956.

S 3616 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 2747) July 21.

- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate July 23.
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 23.

P.L. 1013 -- Signed into law Aug. 7.

Congress in 1956 amended the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 to provide an increase in benefits estimated at $10 a month on the average. Although many increase bills were considered, both houses agreed on the Senate bill (S 3616), which failed to provide for additional revenue provisions. The Senate Committee said it would "act promptly" in 1957 on legislation to finance the increases.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted into law, S 3616:

Increased benefits under the Railroad Retirement Act, generally by 10 percent.

Exempted from the increases an annuity which equalled the annuitant's average monthly wage, or which had been increased, by reasons of the social security minimum, above that computed under the railroad retirement formula.

Retained the existing ceiling of $54.30 for a spouse's annuity.

BACKGROUND -- The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce and the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committees considered bills to give a 15 percent increase in benefits and a deduction for income tax purposes of up to $1,000 paid into federal or private retirement funds. But the House Ways and Means Committee, which oversees tax legislation, rejected the revenue provisions of the bill. The Senate Committee July 21 reported S 3616 (S Rept 2747), calling for a 10 percent increase in pension payments and deleting all tax provisions.

PRESIDENT'S VIEWS

President Eisenhower August 7 signed the bill, saying the increased benefits would "help thousands of retired railroad employees and their wives to meet their day-to-day living expenses." He said "the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee has indicated its unanimous determination to act promptly in the next session of the Congress on a measure which will finance the cost of these benefit increases.... It is imperative satisfactory legislation for this purpose be proposed and enacted."

Group Stands

Nineteen lobby registrations were filed under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act from Feb. 21, 1956 to the date of passage of the bill, favoring increased pension benefits for railroad workers and their dependents. Leading group, with eight registrations, was the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. Other groups with one or more registrations included the Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks.

Chairman J. Percy Priest (D Tenn.) of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee June 29 said "there was no undue pressure on the Committee" to report the retirement bill. Priest said he did not think the number of registrations was "unusual" as the railroad unions "were using the individual approach" in lobbying.

CONTRACT BIDS

S 1644 -- Reported by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 617) June 21, 1955.

- Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 27.
- Reported by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 2362) June 15, 1956.
- Rejected by the House by a roll-call vote of 246-145, under procedure of suspension of the rules, July 23. (See p. 222)

The House July 23 rejected a bill (S 1644) intended to aid subcontractors on federal contracts. Acting on a motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill, the House voted for the bill on a 246-145 roll call, falling 15 votes short of the two-thirds majority necessary to pass the bill under suspension of the rules. (For voting, see chart, p. 222).

The bill was designed to discourage "bid shopping," a practice in which a contractor, after getting a bid from a subcontractor and then signing a government contract, looks for a subcontractor to underbid the original offer. S 1644 would have required government approval when a contractor substituted a new subcontractor and, if savings resulted, would have reduced the contract price. It would have affected all lump-sum construction contracts of over $100,000 for work within the United States, except those in which the head of the contracting government agency decided public need warranted waiver.

BACKGROUND -- S 1644 was passed by voice vote in the Senate July 27, 1955, and reported (H Rept 2362) by the House Judiciary Committee June 15, 1956. The House Rules Committee tabled a request for a rule on the bill.

DEBATE -- July 23 -- William E. Miller (R N.Y.) -- Under the bill the government would adopt "a decent, logical, sensible business practice...followed for years by duPont, General Motors, Ford and other companies." The bill would "help small business...subcontractors (and) defend them against the practice of bid shopping." It also would help the government by encouraging more subcontractors to submit bids.

Ben F. Jensen (R Iowa) -- "It will cost the government more money," both for administrative personnel and on higher contract costs, because prime contractors and subcontractors would have to be under bond.

Robert T. Ashmore (D S.C.) -- All agencies "in charge of federal contracts" opposed the bill on grounds "they would have to become watchdogs (and) come in and squabble...between the prime contractor and the subcontractor."

Charles A. Boyle (D Ill.) -- "This legislation is fair to everyone in the construction industry and...will enable the government to obtain better construction at lower costs."

D.C. TRANSIT

S 3073 -- Reported by the Senate District of Columbia Committee (S Rept 1791) April 20, 1956.

HR 8901 -- Reported by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 2034) April 24.

S 3073 -- Passed by a 41-31 roll-call vote of the Senate May 9. (See p. 165)

- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the House May 17. (For roll-call vote, see p. 200)
- Conference report (H Rept 2751) accepted by voice votes of the House July 19 and the Senate July 20.

P.L. 757 -- Signed into law July 24.

The bill provided for the sale of Washington's bus and streetcar company, Capital Transit, to new operators, D.C. Transit System Inc. The legislation, passed in the last days of the 84th Congress, granted a 20-year franchise to the new company.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, S 3073:

Granted a 20-year transit franchise to D.C. Transit System Inc.

Froze fares at existing levels until Aug. 15, 1957.

Exempted the corporation from certain taxes.

Directed it to convert to bus operations within seven years.

Authorized District Commissioners to make interim transit arrangements if the corporation was not prepared to begin service by Aug. 15, the date its franchise began.

Background

Employees of the Capital Transit Co. struck July 1, 1955, for higher pay. The 1956 legislation was the direct result of the 51-day strike that ended Aug. 21, 1955. The House Committee said the stoppage "adversely affected" large segments of the population and "impaired" the functions of government.

In 1955 Congress passed legislation (PL 389, 84th Congress) designed to give the District of Columbia Commissioners authority to intervene in the strike and settle it. The law cancelled the transit company's franchise, effective one year later, and revoked the company's corporate charter. The Commissioners settled the strike but were unable for some time to find a successor to Capital Transit Co., whose chairman, Louis E. Wolfson, was under heavy fire. The Commissioners asked Congress to set up a D.C. public authority to run the transportation system.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- District of Columbia.

HEARINGS -- In February and March on a bill (S 3073) to create a public corporation to provide a transportation system in the District of Columbia for three years.

ACTION -- April 20 reported S 3073 with amendments (S Rept 1791).

Floor Action

The Senate May 9 passed S 3073, amended, by a roll-call vote of 41-31. An amendment to designate the public authority a federal agency, so as to prohibit employees from striking, was defeated on a 32-42 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 165)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 3073:

Created the "Washington Metropolitan Transit Authority," a public corporation, to establish an adequate transportation system in the District of Columbia.

Authorized the Transit Authority to sell, before Aug. 15, 1959, the transportation system to any eligible purchaser.

Said the Transit Authority would become permanent on Aug. 15, 1959, if the transportation system were not sold by then.

Authorized interim financing for the Authority by the Secretary of the Treasury, up to $20 million.

Gave the Authority exclusive right to operate a transportation system in the D.C. metropolitan area, except for those lawfully operating when the law was enacted.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- Set regulations governing conditions of employment of personnel by the interim Authority; May 9. Voice vote.

Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) -- Provide for retention of Capital Transit Co. corporate personnel with more than 10 years' service; May 9. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Allott -- Provide that the interim Authority shall be considered an agency of the U.S. for purposes of the legislation, thus prohibiting employees from striking; May 9. Roll-call vote, 32-42.

DEBATE -- Allott -- "If there is to be a no-strike provision in the bill, arbitration should be compulsory.... Less than nine months ago the governmental functions of this country were...brought almost to a...standstill because of the strike."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "There is no need for (a no-strike requirement) if...we are concerned about...the danger of a strike. If the public authority will arbitrate, the union will arbitrate. That is the record of the union."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Transportation and Communications Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 20-23, March 1 and 8 on HR 8901, which authorized a public authority to operate D.C. transportation.

ACTION -- The Committee April 24 reported a revised version of HR 8901 (H Rept 2034). Minority views (H Rept 2034, Part 2) were filed April 27 by John W. Heselton (R Mass.).

The Committee substitute extended the Capital Transit Co. franchise, subject to certain requirements. The Committee opposed a public authority on grounds the authority would possess "broad-sweeping and far-reaching powers."

Heselton's minority report said Congress' decision in 1955 to repeal the franchise "was justified fully in the public interest." He said the managerial policies of the company were "flagrantly contrary to the attitude which should be...held by the operators of a public transportation company." Heselton introduced an alternative bill (HR 10871) to establish an interim public authority for three years.

Floor Action

The House May 17 passed the committee substitute for HR 8901 by voice vote, after lengthy debate. Then it amended the Senate's bill (S 3073) to include the House text and sent it to conference.

Earlier, the House defeated, by a roll-call vote of 161-172, a move to recommit the measure to the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. (For voting, see chart p. 200)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House and sent to conference, S 3073:

Extended the franchise of the Capital Transit Co. to operate the transportation system of the District of Columbia after Aug. 14, 1956, subject to requirements that it:

Adopt a fixed system for rate-making, based on a "fair and reasonable" profit of 6.5 percent, but with no guarantee of that amount.

Freeze fares at existing levels until Aug. 15, 1957.

The bill also exempted the company from the existing 2 percent gross receipts tax (about $450,000 annually); granted partial relief from existing motor vehicle fuel taxes.

DEBATE -- May 17 -- John L. McMillan (D S.C.) -- "I would dislike very much to have to go back to my district and tell my constituents that I dipped down into the Treasury of the federal government for $25 million to finance the operation of a transit system here in Washington."

DeWitt S. Hyde (R Md.) -- "The Capital Transit Co., at least under its present management, has no intention of continuing to operate this transit system" because they "do not expect a profit to be made from the future operations of the transit system...."

Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.) -- "It is my opinion...that when (the transit) strike occurred...every action taken on the part of the union, the Public Utilities Commission and the D.C. Commissioners was solely to destroy the company and get them out of town rather than to have a peaceful, proper and orderly settlement of the strike."

Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.) -- "The only excuse given us for passing a bill that strips the people of the District of Columbia as naked as an oak tree in December is that unless we do...there will be no local transportation after Aug. 14. That is what you might call bluffing big at poker...."

AGREEMENT REACHED

The conference committee on S 3073 took no action on the bill for two months while the D.C. Commissioners negotiated with prospective transit operators. Finally, agreement was reached with a new company, the D.C. Transit System, Inc., headed by O. Roy Chalk of New York City.

Conference

REPORT -- Senate and House conferees reported an entirely new version of S 3073 July 17 (H Rept 2751). It granted a franchise to the D.C. Transit System Inc. (See provisions of enacted bill, above)

ACTION -- The House July 19, and the Senate July 20, by voice votes agreed to the conference report on S 3073.

D.C. STADIUM

HR 11967 -- Reported by the House District of Columbia Committee (H Rept 2615) July 5, 1956.
- Passed by a 287-80 roll-call vote of the House July 9. (See p. 216)

The bill, as passed by the House, would have cleared the way for construction of a National Memorial Stadium on federal land in the northeast section of Washington, D.C. The legislation amended a law approved December 20, 1944 (PL 523 -- 78th Congress) -- creating a commission to "consider a site and design" for the stadium -- by specifying a site and requiring a report from the commission by Dec. 31, 1957.

The Senate failed to approve the bill.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 11967:

Authorized the commission to make surveys, estimates, plans and designs for the construction of an athletic field and stadium.

Directed the commission to formulate a method of financing the stadium on a self-liquidating basis.

Designated the site of the stadium as land currently used by the National Training School for Boys.

Background

The commission, established in 1944, was active for a short period of time, but inactive thereafter. On June 26, 1956, Vice President Richard M. Nixon appointed Sens. Francis Case (R S.D.), Matthew M. Neely (D W.Va.) and John Stennis (D Miss.) to the commission. House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) June 27 appointed Reps. Carroll D. Kearns (R Pa.), Richard E. Lankford (D Md.) and Frank Thompson (D N.J.). The District of Columbia Commissioners also appointed three members: John Reilly, a banker; Floyd Akers, a car dealer; and Fred A. Smith, a realtor.

President Eisenhower June 7 said "I am all for an athletic program, (and) I don't see how it could be better symbolized than a good, big stadium in this city."

House

COMMITTEE -- District of Columbia.

ACTION -- July 5 reported a bill (HR 11967 -- H Rept 2615) to reactivate the stadium commission and specify the site to be used.

Floor Action

The House July 9 passed HR 11967 by a 287-80 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 216)

DEBATE -- July 9 -- Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) -- "Why should the taxpayers...establish a profit-paying stadium for the District to operate as a commercial proposition? A monument is one thing, a profitable enterprise is something else."

Gordon Canfield (R N.J.) -- Passage of the bill "will be approved by every athlete and friend of sports in America...at a time when American athletic prowess is being challenged as never before."

COMMISSION MEETS

The nine-member commission headed by Sen. John Stennis (D Miss.) met July 25 to organize. Failure of Congress to appropriate funds -- a $10,000 allotment for the commission was stricken from the 2nd Supplemental Appropriations Bill (HR 12350) in conference -- left the commission without means for further planning.

INTERNATIONAL WHEAT PACT

Exec I -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 7) July 5, 1956.
- Approved by the Senate by an 85-2 roll-call vote July 11. (See p. 177)
- Ratification signed by the President July 13.

S 4221 -- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 2623) July 18.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 23.
- Passed by the House by voice vote July 25.

P.L. 945 -- Signed into law Aug. 3.

The Senate in July, 1956 ratified a new International Wheat Agreement signed by six wheat exporting and 34 importing nations, and Congress promptly passed a bill (S 4221) to implement the treaty. The Agreement was the third in which importing countries promised to buy, and exporting countries to sell, assigned quantities of wheat within a stated price range. The first came into force in 1949, the second in 1953. The new Agreement would expire in July, 1959.

Under the terms of the Agreement, negotiated at London and Geneva in late 1955 and early 1956, the United States was guaranteed annual sales of 132 million bushels of wheat, 64 million bushels less than under the 1953 Agreement, at prices ranging from $1.50 to $2 a bushel. Terms of the Agreement, which covered an estimated 31 percent of world wheat trade, reflected increased world wheat production. The largest wheat importer, the United Kingdom, was not a party to the Agreement or to earlier ones.

The Senate approved the treaty July 11. Congress then acted promptly to enable the government to carry out the terms of the treaty. A bill (S 4221 -- PL 945) on which action was completed July 25 authorized the Commodity Credit Corporation to pay exporters the difference between the export price under the Wheat Agreement and the U.S. domestic price. In July, 1956, the subsidy was about 70 cents a bushel. The Department of Agriculture estimated that, at that rate, the first year of operation under the Agreement would cost the government $92.5 million.

PROVISIONS -- The Agreement approved by the Senate and incorporated in PL 945:

Provided that six exporting nations -- Argentina, Australia, Canada, France, Sweden and the U.S. -- should sell to importing nations 302,915,145 bushels of wheat a year until July, 1959 at prices ranging from a $1.50 minimum to a $2 maximum.

Guaranteed the U.S. sales of 132,098,561 bushels a year within that price range.

Continued the general framework of the International Wheat Council and subsidiary bodies; authorized the Council to study and exchange information on the world wheat situation, and to make any desirable arrangements with intergovernmental organizations and governments not connected with the Agreement.

Expressly reserved to member countries complete liberty of action in their internal agricultural and price policies.

Background

The first International Wheat Agreement came into force in 1949 after 18 years of sporadic negotiations that began in Rome in 1931. In 1953, the Agreement was revised and extended for three years. Signed by 41 importing countries and four exporting countries (not including Argentina and Sweden, who signed the 1956 Agreement), the 1953 pact covered sales of 395 million bushels of wheat at prices ranging from $1.55 to $2.05. (1953 Almanac, p. 240)

U.S. exports under the Wheat Agreements from 1949 to 1956 totaled 1,295,000,000 bushels, at a cost to the government in subsidies of about $811 million. The subsidy per bushel averaged 61 cents under the 1949 agreement, 66.5 cents under the 1953 agreement and an estimated 70 cents in the first year of the 1956 agreement. U.S. contributions to maintain the International Wheat Council were approximately $27,500 a year.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

ACTION -- July 5 unanimously reported (Exec Rept 7) the International Wheat Agreement of 1956 (Executive I, 84th Congress, second session.) The Agreement, covering sale of almost 303 million bushels annually, had been signed in Washington in May, 1956, by representatives of 40 nations. The Committee said that the decrease in wheat sales from the 1953 agreement, which covered 395 million bushels after adjustments, was "primarily a reflection of the changed world wheat supply situation." The reduction in guaranteed U.S. sales from 196 million to 132 million bushels was "a more realistic figure", the Committee said, and about the same as the actual sales in the last year of the old agreement.

The report said the Wheat Agreement had "worked well for the seven years that it (had) been in force", with "a minimum of friction and disagreement among the parties."

Floor Action

The Senate July 11 approved, by an 85-2 roll-call vote, U.S. participation for another three years in the International Wheat Agreement. (For voting, see chart p. 177)

DEBATE -- July 11 -- J. Allen Frear Jr. (D Del.) -- Opposed the Agreement "as a matter of principle" because it interfered with the free market.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Favored the Agreement but criticized Department of Agriculture policies on surpluses for failing to provide "new outlets, instead of...subsidies."

AVIATION, TOURING TREATIES

Exec F -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 4) March 28, 1956.

Execs A, B -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 5) April 11.

- Approved en bloc by the Senate April 19 on an 81-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 163)
- Ratifications signed by the President May 4.

The Senate April 19 approved, by an 81-0 roll-call vote, three treaties: a protocol amending the Convention on International Civil Aviation (Executive F, 84th Congress, second session); a convention concerning customs facilities for touring (Executive A, 84th Congress, second session); and a convention concerning temporary importation of private road vehicles (Executive B, 84th Congress, second session).

BACKGROUND -- The aviation protocol was opened for ratification June 14, 1954 and sent to the Senate Jan. 12, 1956. The customs conventions were signed June 4, 1954 and transmitted to the Senate Jan. 12, 1956.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by the Senate:

The protocol (Exec F) amended the Convention on International Civil Aviation to provide for meetings of the ICAO Assembly once every three years, instead of once every year.

The touring convention (Exec A) permitted temporary importation, duty-free, of personal effects and souvenirs by tourists into contracting countries.

The vehicle convention (Exec B) permitted duty-free importation of automobiles for private use for visits of not more than six months' duration.

TAX CONVENTIONS

Execs J, K -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 10) July 18, 1956.

- Approved by the Senate July 19 by an 87-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 180)

Exec J -- Ratification signed by the President Aug. 2.

Exec K -- Ratification signed by the President July 20.

The Senate July 19 approved, by an 87-0 roll-call vote, two new tax conventions with France and Honduras (Executives J and K, 84th Congress, second session). (For voting, see chart p. 180)

BACKGROUND -- The treaty with France, signed June 22, 1956, renewed and supplemented earlier tax conventions with that country. The treaty with Honduras, signed June 25, was the first such convention between the United States and a Latin American country.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by the Senate:

The treaty with France (Exec J) eliminated double taxation on the transfer of any property -- real, personal or mixed.

The treaty with Honduras (Exec K), similar to previous double taxation conventions with foreign governments, would reduce the burden of double taxation in cases in which both the U.S. and Honduras levied a tax on the same income or transaction.

TRADE SAMPLES TREATY

Exec Q -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 3) Feb. 14, 1956.

- Approved by the Senate Feb. 22 on a 76-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 152)

The Senate Feb. 22 approved, by a 76-0 roll-call vote, an international convention (Executive Q, 83rd Congress, first session) to facilitate the importation of commercial samples and advertising matter. Legislation required to carry out the terms of the convention was introduced in the Senate (S 3589) but not acted on before the end of the session.

BACKGROUND -- The agreement to remove import duties and restrictions on most commercial samples and advertising material was signed Nov. 7, 1952 and sent to Congress by President Eisenhower in 1953.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by the Senate, the convention provided:

Duty-free entry for samples "of negligible value" and advertising materials, except film.

Temporary duty-free admission, for at least six months, for other samples, subject to deposit being made and other restrictions, and for advertising film.

Waiver or temporary waiver of import prohibitions and restrictions on samples and advertising matter.

SLAVERY, CUSTOMS TREATIES

Execs F, P -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Repts 1 and 2) Jan. 12, 1956.

- Approved en bloc by the Senate Jan. 25 on an 84-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 149)
- Ratification of Exec F signed by the President Feb. 13; of Exec P, Sept. 20.

The Senate Jan. 25 approved, by an 84-0 roll-call vote, ratification of two treaties: a protocol amending the Slavery Convention of 1926 (Executive F, 83rd Congress, second session) and a protocol modifying the Convention Concerning Creation of an International Union for the Publication of Customs Tariffs (Executive P, 82nd Congress, second session).

BACKGROUND -- The protocol amending the Slavery Convention was signed Dec. 16, 1953 and sent to the Senate by President Eisenhower in 1954. The protocol on customs tariffs, signed Dec. 16, 1949, was sent to the Senate by former President Harry S. Truman in 1952.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by the Senate, the treaty amending the Slavery Convention (Exec F) assigned to the Secretary General of the United Nations and the International Court of Justice functions formerly assigned to the Secretary General of the League of Nations and the Permanent Court of International Justice.

The second treaty (Exec P) increased assessments for the International Bureau for the Publication of Customs Tariffs, raising the U.S. contribution from $2,233 a year, as established in 1890, to $8,658 a year.

APPROPRIATIONS SUMMARY

The Eisenhower Administration fared better at the hands of Congress, money-wise, in 1956 than it had in any of the three preceding years.

The Administration asked Congress for $60,892,420,237 in new money in 1956 for fiscal 1957 and earlier fiscal years. In addition it estimated need for $12,405,139,392 in permanent and indefinite appropriations -- that is, funds granted without Congressional action. This brought total estimates to $73,297,559,629.

In its second session the 84th Congress voted $60,648,725,025 in new funds. The breakdown by fiscal years to which the money was applied:

Fiscal 1957	$59,727,212,680
Fiscal 1956	914,995,803
Fiscal 1955 and prior	6,516,542

Permanent and indefinite appropriations brought the grand total to $73,041,364,417.

The Democratic-led Congress in 1956 cut budget requests by only $256,195,212, compared to cuts of $2.1 billion in 1955. By contrast, the GOP-controlled 83rd Congress slashed $2.6 billion from President Eisenhower's budget in 1954 and $4.6 billion in 1953.

Thirteen regular appropriations bills were enacted in 1956. Regular funds for the Atomic Energy Commission, previously carried in the public works appropriations bill, were included in the second supplemental appropriation for fiscal 1957. Otherwise the bill breakdown used in 1955 generally was followed again in 1956.

PARTISAN ISSUES

The most disputed appropriation voted in 1956 was for the Defense Department. The Senate adopted a series of Democratic-backed committee amendments to boost Air Force funds to $16.6 billion -- an increase of $912,625,000 over President Eisenhower's requests. Most of this amount was earmarked for increased production of heavy bombers. A Senate-House conference committee reduced total air force funds to $16.5 billion, which still was a $792.6 million increase over budget estimates. President Eisenhower July 2 signed the bill without comment, but Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said the extra Air Force funds would not be used to speed production of B-52 bombers, as the Senate had provided. Instead, he said, it would "go into the bank" to be spent later "as needed."

The President's foreign aid requests also received rough treatment in Congress. The House July 11 voted $3.4 billion for the mutual security program in fiscal 1957 -- about $500 million less than Congress had authorized two days earlier and $1.4 billion less than the President had sought. The President pleaded for restoration of "a substantial part" of the foreign aid cuts and Administration leaders in Congress said they would fight for an increase in the Senate. The Senate July 24 voted $4.1 billion for the foreign aid program, and the conference committee roughly split the difference between amounts voted by the two chambers. Final appropriation: $3,766,750,000.

Public vs. private power sparked controversy in consideration of two appropriations bills. With five of six Republican members dissenting, the House Appropriations Committee disallowed an Administration request for $3.5 million in the second supplemental appropriation for fiscal 1956. The money was to finance construction of a generating addition to the John Sevier Steam Plant of the Tennessee Valley Authority; the Committee said TVA revenues should be used for the work. The Senate and its Appropriations Committee voted to restore the $3.5 million which the House had dropped but a conference committee deleted the provision.

Later, during consideration of the public works appropriations bill for fiscal 1957, the same issue arose again. TVA received the smallest appropriation in its history -- $5,357,000 -- and divided advice from Congress. The House maintained TVA should use its own revenues to construct added generating units. The Senate Appropriations Committee held that TVA should not be permitted to add units at existing plants without specific Congressional approval of each job. It urged the appropriate committee to consider legislation to require such approval.

Despite the target date for winding up Congressional action on money bills, -- June 30, the end of the fiscal year -- Congress did not tie its purse strings until July 27, the last day of the session, when it sent the mutual security appropriation and the first and second supplementals for fiscal 1957 to the White House. It had not met the fiscal deadline since 1948.

AIR FORCE FUNDS RAISED IN DEFENSE BILL

HR 10986 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 2104) May 3, 1956. Recommended appropriation: $33,635,066,000.

- Passed by the House, amended, on a 377-0 roll-call vote May 10. (See p. 200) Appropriation voted: $33,635,066,000.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2260) June 18. Recommended: $34,983,734,000.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, on an 88-0 roll-call vote June 26. (See p. 173) Voted: $34,783,734,000.
- Conference report (H Rept 2529) agreed to June 29 by a standing vote of 79-57 in the House and by voice vote in the Senate.

P.L. 639 -- Signed into law July 2. Final appropriation: $34,656,727,000.

Amid evidence of growing Communist air power and anxiety over relative United States strength in the air, controversy over the fiscal 1957 Defense Department money bill (HR 10986) centered on the adequacy of the Air Force budget submitted to Congress by the President. Despite statements by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson that the Administration's $15.7 billion Air Force budget was adequate and that more money could not be used, Senate Democrats led a fight to increase Air Force funds that paved the way for the final appropriation of $16.5 billion -- a net increase of almost $800 million.

The House Appropriations Committee, after hearing testimony that the fiscal 1957 Defense budget was sound and the Air Force program adequate though "austere", recommended appropriations slightly below the Administration's request. The House approved its Committee's recommendation and rejected an attempt to add $1 billion to the bill for more B-52 jet bombers.

Before the Senate Appropriations Committee had acted on the bill, interest in U.S. air strength was intensified by testimony given before a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee investigating the adequacy of the nation's air power. (See page 716)

After hearing Air Force officials characterize the budget for their service as "adequate, austere and meeting the essential minimum requirements," the Senate Appropriations Committee was told by Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, commander of the Strategic Air Command, that he did not believe the budget would "produce the force we need."

The Committee recommended $1.1 billion more for the Air Force than the Administration had requested, with $800 million of the increase earmarked for stepped up production of B-52 bombers. With Democrats leading the fight, the Senate upheld its Committee, rejected Republican efforts to cut the increase in half and approved funds for the Air Force amounting to a $912.6 million increase over budget estimates. A Senate-House conference committee approved all but $120 million of the additional Air Force money.

President Eisenhower signed the measure July 2 without commenting on the extra Air Force funds. On the same day Secretary Wilson said the money would not be used to accelerate production of B-52's but would "go into the bank" to be spent later "as needed."

The $34,656,727,000 total appropriation in the final version of HR 10986 represented a net increase of $508.9 million over Administration budget estimates. The bill granted the Air Force $792.6 million more than Mr. Eisenhower requested but provided less than the President's budget estimates for the Army, Navy and interservice activities. The Army budget was cut by $222.1 million, the Navy by $48.1 million and interservice activities by $13.5 million.

The Defense Department was granted an additional $1,504,950,000 in appropriations -- mostly for military construction programs -- in the first fiscal 1957 supplemental appropriation bill (HR 12138). (See p. 637)

Air National Guard	258,700,000
Subtotal, Air Force	$16,459,125,000
TOTAL	$34,656,727,000

In addition to appropriating funds, the bill:

Barred, with certain exceptions, the use of Defense Department funds to procure any food, clothing, cotton, spun silk yarn for cartridge cloth or wool, not grown, produced or reprocessed in the U.S. (a so-called "Buy American" provision).

Limited the average cost of schooling for military dependents to $245 a pupil a year.

Limited to $41 million expenditures for preparation for sale and salvage of scrap and surplus materials.

Permitted the Defense Department to use foreign currencies, real property, services and commodities from foreign countries under mutual defense agreements or occupational arrangements.

Reduced the amounts available in the Army Industrial Fund by $110 million and the Navy Industrial Fund by $52 million.

Background

The fiscal 1956 Defense Department appropriation bill appropriated $31,882,815,726. (1955 Almanac, p. 219) The breakdown:

Office of Defense Secretary	$ 12,670,000
Interservice Activities	682,250,000
Army	7,329,953,000
Navy	9,118,179,556
Air Force	14,739,763,170
TOTAL	$31,882,815,726

The second supplemental appropriation bill for fiscal 1956 (see page 616, this volume) included additional appropriations of $10,417,900 to cover increased pay costs, bringing total fiscal 1956 appropriations for the Defense Department to $31,893,233,626, exclusive of military construction.

In his fiscal 1957 budget Jan. 16 and in an April 9 supplemental request (H Doc 373), President Eisenhower requested a total of $34,147,850,000 in new appropriations for the Defense Department for fiscal 1957, exclusive of military construction. The breakdown of budget estimates:

Office of Defense Secretary	$ 14,950,000
Interservice Activities	657,375,000
Army	7,761,425,000
Navy	10,047,600,000
Air Force	15,666,500,000
TOTAL	$34,147,850,000

The largest item in the April 9 supplemental request was an additional $248.5 million for Air Force procurement of aircraft -- to be used to step up production of B-52 bombers.

In fiscal 1945, the last year of World War II, U.S. expenditures for the defense establishment reached a peak of $79.9 billion, while the strength of U.S. Armed Forces numbered 12.3 million men on June 30, 1945. The latter figure dropped abruptly to 3.3 million a year later and to a low of 1.4 million in 1948, when defense spending also hit its post-war low of $11.1 billion. With the Korean war, U.S. Armed Forces climbed to 3.6 million in 1952, then declined steadily to 2,806,441 on June 30, 1956.

President Eisenhower's budget for fiscal 1957 estimated defense spending at $34.6 billion for fiscal 1956, ending June 30, and at $35.5 billion for fiscal 1957 (see box, below). On May 1, Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said 1956 spending would hit $35.1 billion, or $500 million more than estimated in January.

DEFENSE POLICY

In his budget message for fiscal 1957, the President Jan. 16 said the U.S. defense program had been "successfully reoriented" during the previous three years on the basis of the following policies and concepts:

"1. Gearing our defense preparations to a long period of uncertainty instead of to a succession of arbitrarily assumed dates of maximum danger.

"2. Maintaining the capability to deter a potential aggressor from attack and to blunt that attack if it comes -- by a combination of immediate retaliatory power and a continental defense system of steadily increasing effectiveness.

"3. Developing military forces which minimize numbers of men by making maximum use of science and technology.

"4. Relating the number and degree of readiness of major units in the active forces to the practical limitations on the rapid deployment of major military forces from the United States immediately upon the outbreak of aggression, and relying, for the remainder, on ready reserve forces.

"5. Utilizing military personnel on active duty with maximum effectiveness so as to hold to a minimum the number of men withdrawn from work in the civilian economy.

"6. Concentrating our efforts on those forces which best complement the forces our allies are most capable of raising and supporting.

"7. Maintaining a strong and expanding peacetime industrial structure, readily convertible to the tasks of defense and war."

The President said his recommendations for fiscal 1957 continued the same basic policies and concepts, which were providing the U.S. "with the greatest military power in its peacetime history."

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations, Department of Defense Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 23 - April 20 on Defense Department budget requests for fiscal 1957. Hearings were closed to the public.

TESTIMONY -- Made public March 30 and May 2, with security matter deleted. Highlights of the testimony:

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, Jan. 24: "The defense program we are proposing for fiscal year 1957 is not fundamentally different from that outlined... last year. Nothing has occurred in the international situation during the past year which would indicate the necessity for any major change in it...The program...will provide, in my judgment, a sound and flexible defense structure for the nation. We will continue our efforts toward the improvement of the quality, readiness, and effectiveness of our military forces and to completing the buildup and strengthening of our reserve forces.

"This does not mean that defense costs in the future will be lower; they may be higher.... There is a great tendency to add new things to what we already have. In addition, new weapons and equipment not only cost more, but also cost more to operate and maintain. Higher performance is almost always associated with increased complexity...(which) usually means higher costs.

"I think the (defense) budget provides the proper amount and the proper activities.... The President never said to me 'There is a certain (budget) figure that the Defense Department has to get down to.'.... I can say that nothing was deleted from pressure to balance the budget."

General Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff, Feb. 9: "While Congress heeds the clear evidence of growing Communist airpower, there appear to be some who ignore it.... Because we believe the Communists can build strength faster than we originally predicted, we recommended (in June, 1955) a stepup of our aircraft production program.... We also stepped up the planned production rate of our newest heavy fighters...(and) our newest heavy bomber, the B-52.... Despite these actions, the questions 'Are we still ahead in airpower' and 'Are the Soviets overtaking us?' assume greater importance than ever before.

"If we are speaking about numbers of aircraft in combat units, we are not ahead, and have not been ahead for years. In Soviet combat units (there) are now some 20,000 combat aircraft. This compares to thousands less in the United States Air Force. Our counter to this quantity of force has been quality -- better airplanes, better weapons, better airmen. It is in quality that we have been able to stay ahead. However, the Soviets are now closing the quality gap. This concerns us much more than comparisons of numbers.

"Nevertheless, numbers are important.... To sum up, they either have overtaken us, or can overtake us, in all categories of warplanes except that of the medium jet bomber.... Any comparison of numbers is far from encouraging.

"We have our biggest advantage" in nuclear weapons. "Nevertheless the Soviets are making impressive efforts ...(They) are attempting to close this gap by greatly increasing their research and development efforts.... It is apparent that they are putting more men and money into this battle of the laboratories than we are. This greater effort could also result in the Soviets obtaining better missiles sooner than we.... They have stated they expect to have ocean-spanning (missile) weapons in the near future. Judging from their progress in aircraft, they could make good this combination of promises and boasts.

"The program I have outlined (for the Air Force) and the budget for fiscal year 1957 is austere. It meets only our most essential needs on a minimum basis. To keep this minimum program going and to reach and support 137 wings, will require an increased budget in 1958. On this basis, I urge support of this year's program."

Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles, Feb. 9: The Air Force budget "is a sound budget. It will support the 137-wing force structure; will permit us to proceed with our modernization program; will afford a sound, level program of research and development; and will enable us to maintain our facilities on a minimum essential basis. By certain one-time economies, such as a calculated reduction in lead time, we have been able to cut down our request for funds in some appropriations. However, if we are to continue to support an Air Force program of this magnitude there is no escape from a larger budget in fiscal 1958.... It is only fair that we apprise the Congress of this outlook...."

DEFENSE PROCUREMENT

The Subcommittee March 23 released an investigative staff report on Defense Department procurement. The report said:

There were "glaring errors" in procurement and "chaotic conditions" in inventories.

Nine percent of the airplanes out of commission were grounded for lack of parts costing less than 25 cents each.

Equipment totalling 14,000 tons was "lost in the mud" at a French supply point.

"Generally excessive" profits were allowed on $1 billion in contracts with Western Electric Co. for the Nike and M33 antiaircraft fire control system.

ACTION -- The full Committee May 3 reported (H Rept 2104) HR 10986, recommending $33,635,066,000 in appropriations for the Department of Defense for fiscal 1957. The total was $512,784,000 less than the amount requested by the President. Over half of the cut represented items budgeted for support of troops and facilities in Germany. The Committee "emphatically stated" that none of the recommended reductions would affect the "full implementation of the military programs encompassed by the budget...."

Funds for military personnel approved by the Committee would provide a total armed forces strength of 2,865,200 men by June 30, 1957. This compared with a strength of 2,806,441 on June 30, 1956. Breakdown of the projected strength for the four services, by June 30, 1957: Army, 1,045,300; Navy, 678,100; Marine Corps, 205,700; Air Force, 936,100.

Other highlights of the Committee report:

Aircraft and Related Procurement -- The Committee approved appropriations of $6,048,500,000, the amount recommended by the President, which included the $248,500,000 supplemental request to speed up production of B-52 heavy long range jet bombers.

Missiles -- "It was generally agreed by all interested witnesses that adequate funds, both currently available and proposed, have been programmed for guided missile development and that any additional funds, if made available, could not be used to advantage."

Research and Development -- Testimony led to "considerable apprehension on the part of some Members as to whether or not the Department is adequately financing many vital research activities for 1957." The Committee approved the amounts requested by the Administration for research and development except for a $1 million cut in Navy funds.

Air Force Budget -- The U.S. concern is to have an Air Force "equipped with the best modern aircraft to act as a deterrent to any possible aggression," rather than to "stay ahead of the Soviets in the over-all size of our Air Force and in the numbers of aircraft to be produced."

Floor Action

By a roll-call vote of 377-0, the House May 10 passed HR 10986, carrying total appropriations of $33,635,066,000 -- the amount recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

By voice vote the House rejected an amendment to add $1 billion to the Air Force budget for more long range B-52 bombers. The House accepted, by a roll-call vote of 222-156, an amendment to delete from the bill a provision giving the Senate and House Appropriations Committees veto power over Defense Department plans to discontinue or place under private contract commercial-type operations traditionally performed by civilian personnel of the Department. (For voting, see chart p. 200)

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds appropriated in HR 10986, as passed by the House and sent to the Senate:

Office of the Secretary of Defense	$ 14,950,000

AIR FORCE
Aircraft, related procurement	$ 6,048,500,000
Procurement other than aircraft	1,100,000,000
Research and development	610,000,000
Operation and maintenance	3,684,185,000
Military personnel	3,718,440,000
Reserve personnel	59,300,000
Air National Guard	258,700,000
Subtotal, Air Force	$15,479,125,000
TOTAL	$33,635,066,000

In addition to appropriating funds, the bill:

Contained a "Buy American" provision, which barred, with certain exceptions, the use of Defense Department funds to procure any food, clothing, cotton, spun silk yarn for cartridge cloth, or wool not grown, produced or reprocessed in the U.S.

Limited the cost of schooling for military dependents to $245 a pupil a year.

Limited to $31 million expenditures for preparation for sale and salvage of scrap and surplus materials.

Permitted the Defense Department to use foreign currencies, real property, services and commodities from foreign countries under mutual defense agreements or occupational arrangements.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Leo E. Allen (R Ill.) -- Delete provision prohibiting the disposal or transfer by contract of work traditionally performed by civilian personnel of the Defense Department, unless approved by the House and Senate Appropriations Committees; May 10. Roll-call vote, 222-156.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) -- Increase funds for procurement of aircraft from $6,048,500,000 to $7,048,-500,000 to provide for purchase of more B-52 long-range intercontinental bombers; May 10. Voice.

DEBATE -- May 9 -- Discussion centered on the threat of growing Russian military power to the U.S. defense position, and the adequacy of the military program.

George H. Mahon (D Texas) -- "A few years ago our Secretary of State (John Foster Dulles) talked glibly about massive retaliation. Well, the Soviet Union is developing the same massive retaliation capability that we have. The bleak fact is that massive retaliation is rapidly becoming a two-way street.... The military situation, relatively speaking, is bad.... Indications are that we must continue the high rate of military spending (and)...perhaps raise it a bit from year to year...."

Errett P. Scrivner (R Kan.) -- Said he did not agree with Mahon's comment that the military situation was bad. "The funds that you provide this year and have been providing in past years gives you the best, if not the biggest Army in the world. It gives you the biggest and best Navy in the world, and it gives you the best Air Force and the greatest air power in the world."

Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) -- "I find this room (the House chamber) today thick with an atmosphere of omniscient complacency, and out of an abundance of caution, if for no other reason, I violently take exception...with that attitude toward this bill.... We do not have the biggest and the best Army in the world today -- somebody else has.... We do not have the biggest and the best Air Force in the world today -- somebody else has. We are no longer top dog."

May 10 -- Flood -- It would be better to achieve "parity at least with...Russia on B-52 bombers" before balancing the budget.

Mahon -- Some aircraft already produced could not be adequately used because of a lack of trained personnel. An additional $1 billion for B-52's "could not be properly used at this time."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations, Defense Department Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 8 - June 12, in open and executive sessions, on HR 10986.

TESTIMONY -- May 8 -- Secretary of Defense Wilson said "the almost daily stories alleging that the U.S.S.R. is far outstripping the United States in terms of airpower" were not true. The schedule for production of B-52 bombers had been increased to a proposed "peak rate of 20 per month" which "is believed to be sound and fully justified."

May 11 -- Secretary of Air Force Quarles -- "Merely to add another great number of bombers or any other piece of equipment to the (Air Force) program would throw it out of balance and not be an effective thing to do."

June 11 -- General Curtis E. LeMay, Commander of the Strategic Air Command (testimony given in closed session, later released with security matter deleted) -- "I do not believe the (over-all Air Force budget) will produce the force that we need.... I support (the 1957 budget for SAC) because that is the way my boss wants it done. My original requirement was for a much higher figure ($3.8 billion more).... I thought it was necessary then. I think it is more necessary now because we have additional information (on Russian capabilities)."

If war started "tomorrow we would unquestionably be the victor. The United States would be hurt in such a war but it would emerge as the superior power.... By 1959 the Soviets will have the superior strategic air force.... By 1958-1959...the Russians will have as many bombers as we have (and)...twice as many of the heavy bombers as we have...."

The current 137-wing goal for the Air Force "is now obsolete and should be changed." To man the 137 wings properly, LeMay said the Air Force needed 1.2 million persons, instead of the 975,000 programmed.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee June 18 reported (S Rept 2260) the fiscal 1957 defense appropriations bill, recommending total appropriations of $34,983,734,000 -- an increase of $1,348,668,000 over the amount voted by the House and $835,884,000 more than budget estimates submitted by the President.

Prior to this action the Committee voted 13-12 to accept an amendment offered by Sen. Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) to increase by $1,160,000,000 the amount voted by the House for the Air Force. Voting for the amendment were Democrats Chavez, Richard B. Russell (Ga.), Carl Hayden (Ariz.), Lister Hill (Ala.), John L. McClellan (Ark.), A. Willis Robertson (Va.), Warren G. Magnuson (Wash.), John Stennis (Miss.), Earle C. Clements (Ky.), Lyndon B. Johnson (Texas) and Republicans Milton R. Young (N.D.), Joseph R. McCarthy (Wis.) and Margaret Chase Smith (Maine).

Opposed were Republicans Styles Bridges (N.H.), Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.), William F. Knowland (Calif.), Edward J. Thye (Minn.), Karl E. Mundt (S.D.), Henry C. Dworshak (Idaho), Everett McKinley Dirksen (Ill.), Charles E. Potter (Mich.), Ralph E. Flanders (Vt.) and Democrats Allen J. Ellender Sr. (La.), Spessard L. Holland (Fla.) and Harry Flood Byrd (Va.).

Other increases in Air Force funds approved prior to the Chavez amendment brought the total recommended for this branch to $16.8 billion -- a net increase of $1.1 billion above budget estimates and $1.3 billion above the House allowance.

MORE BOMBERS ORDERED

The largest increase approved by the Committee was in Air Force funds for procurement of aircraft. A total of $6.8 billion was recommended for this item -- which was $800 million more than budget estimates and the House allowance. The Committee directed that the additional funds be used primarily for increasing production of heavy bombers for the Strategic Air Command. Part of the additional funds also would be available, if needed, for increased production of fighter aircraft for continental defense, the report said.

Included in the Air Force fund boost was $200 million for construction of bases that had not been requested by the Administration for inclusion in the defense money bill. The item was part of a $1.2 billion budget request for funds to be included in a subsequent military construction bill. The Committee said it assumed that a like amount would be deducted when the later bill was considered.

Other increases over the amounts recommended by the Administration for the Air Force included an additional $100 million to speed up research and development; an $18.4 million boost in funds for personnel, to provide more manpower to implement "an augmented Air Force."

One item in the Administration's requests for the Air Force -- funds for operation and maintenance -- was cut $5.8 million. The Committee recommended $3.8 billion, which was $96 million more than the amount voted by the House.

The Committee cut budget estimates for the Army by $215.6 million and for the Navy by $47.6 million.

The Committee said that examples of Defense Department duplication were revealed during hearings which "in some cases...borders on unconscionable waste of the country's resources." The Committee directed the "responsible officials" to institute a program of "economy consciousness" that "would presume that unification of the armed services is a fact and that the joint use of existing facilities, where feasible, is not only desirable but mandatory."

As the House had done, the Committee denied budget estimates for funds to replace German currency support for troops and facilities.

Floor Action

By a roll-call vote of 88-0, the Senate June 26 passed the fiscal 1957 defense funds bill with amendments and sent it to conference carrying total appropriations of $34,783,734,000. Passage came after five days of debate on whether President Eisenhower's $15.7 billion Air Force budget was adequate to meet the threat of growing Soviet air power. The Senate rejected the President's judgment of airpower needs by adopting a series of Democratic-backed committee amendments to boost Air Force funds to $16.6 billion -- an increase of $912,625,000.

The largest item in the stepped-up Air Force budget was the increase of $800 million recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee to increase production of heavy bombers. The Senate accepted it June 26 by a roll-call vote of 48-40. (For voting, see chart, p. 172) All other committee amendments were accepted by voice votes June 25 and 26. One amendment recommended by the Committee -- to grant $200 million to the Air Force for construction of bases -- was withdrawn June 26 on the assumption that the funds would be included in a subsequent military construction bill.

Prior to passage, the Senate June 26 rejected, by a roll-call vote of 42-47, a compromise amendment offered by Sen. Styles Bridges (R N.H.) to cut $460 million from the proposed increase in Air Force funds.

A June 21 remark by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson that Senate efforts to increase Air Force funds were "phony" unleashed a volley of angry Democratic criticism of Wilson that continued throughout debate on the bill.

The differences between amounts voted by the Senate for the Air Force, as compared with the President's budget estimates and the funds voted by the House, are shown below, in millions of dollars:

	President	House	Senate
Aircraft procurement	$ 6,049	$ 6,049	$ 6,849*
Other procurement	1,177	1,100	1,177
Research, development	610	610	710
Operation, maintenance	3,786	3,684	3,780*
Military personnel	3,727	3,718	3,745
Reserve personnel	59	59	59
Air National Guard	259	259	259
TOTAL	$15,667	$15,479	$16,579

*Bridges amendment proposed $450 million less for aircraft procurement and $10 million less for operation and maintenance.

Subtotal, Air Force	$16,579,125,000
TOTAL	$34,783,734,000

In addition to appropriating funds, the bill:

Contained a "Buy American" provision that barred, with certain exceptions, the use of Defense Department funds to procure any food, clothing, cotton, spun silk yarn for cartridge cloth, or wool not grown, produced or reprocessed in the U.S.

Limited the average costs of schooling for military dependents to $245 a pupil a year.

Limited to $53,500,000 expenditures for preparation for sale and salvage of scrap and surplus materials.

Permitted the Defense Department to use foreign currencies, real property, services and commodities from foreign countries under mutual defense agreements or occupational arrangements.

Specified that appropriations for major procurement of aircraft and missiles would be available for expenses of development.

Authorized $40 million from the Navy Industrial Fund and $110 million from the Army Industrial Fund to be transferred to the Air Force Industrial Fund.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Styles Bridges (R N.H.), two amendments considered en bloc. Appropriate $6,398,500,000 -- in lieu of Committee-recommended $6,848,500,000 -- for Air Force procurement of aircraft; appropriate $3,770,185,000 -- in lieu of Committee-recommended $3,780,185,000 -- for Air Force operation and maintenance; June 26. Roll call, 42-47.

DEBATE -- June 19 -- Bridges said his amendment was co-sponsored by Republicans Knowland and Saltonstall and Democrats Byrd and Holland. "The Administration and the Defense Department have knowledge of (the amendment)...but I could not say it has their approval.... I have a belief that if our amendment is adopted...the Department will endeavor in good faith to make use of the money."

Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) -- In increasing Air Force funds the Committee was "only trying to do what the military wanted to have done." AF Chief Twining, "speaking about the recommendation made by the Bureau of the Budget, very coyly said that this is an austere budget. What he really wanted to tell us was that it was not enough. But he was working under orders."

Henry C. Dworshak (R Idaho) -- "It is not the lack of funds or the lack of procurement of modern planes that may be responsible for our gradual loss of air supremacy to the Soviets.... Until we can develop personnel and build bases, I think it is idle for us to contend that if we were to appropriate an additional billion, or an additional $5 billion, we could then tell the American people to become complacent because everything had been done to guarantee that we should not lose air supremacy...."

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- Gen. LeMay recommended an additional $3.8 billion for the Air Force. "The Committee, after hearing him, recommended an increase of only $1 billion."

June 21 -- Chavez -- "The Committee recognizes that since 1945, the greatest single deterrent to war has been the strength of the United States Air Force together with its possession of nuclear weapons. If we are to believe the experts, today the U.S. is in danger of falling behind in the development and production of the means to deliver this 'greatest single deterrent.' The amendments (increasing Air Force funds)...are the Committee's answer to this threat"

"PHONY" CHARGE DISPUTED

(Secretary of Defense Wilson June 21 said that Senate efforts to increase the Air Force's budget were "phony." He added, "maybe I shouldn't have said that...but I'd like to see the same people (who are urging the boost) stand up and be counted" if added taxes were needed. Asked if he would refuse to spend the extra money if Congress appropriated it, he said "I'll cross that bridge when I get to it." He did not endorse Bridges' compromise amendment.)

June 22 -- Democrats criticized Wilson for his use of the word "phony" and several called for his ouster from the Cabinet. No Republican came strongly to Wilson's defense.

(Wilson June 22 said he didn't "quite want to accuse any particular person of putting on a phony performance.... If I'd thought more about it, I probably would not have used the word." Wilson said the "phony" expression was meant to label the effort to increase the Air Force budget as "unnecessary" and unable to stand "analysis.")

June 25 -- Controversy over whether Air Force funds should be increased, and by how much, continued.

Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) -- Opposed any increase. "I am willing to trust the judgment of our Joint Chiefs of Staff.... They have at hand facts which we do not have."

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- Supported the Bridges amendment. The Administration's Air Force budget was "austere," and "the funds available for aircraft production must be figured very closely." If the Senate adopted the Bridges amendment "there will be a certain degree of flexibility which will allow the Air Force a little more leeway in building B-52's, if that is the thing to do."

Stuart Symington (D Mo.) -- Favored the full Committee increase. "This Administration, instead of trying to raise the level of skilled (Air Force) personnel, states that because we do not have the personnel we do not need the planes or the bases."

June 26 -- Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- "In the course of my duties...as Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, I have strictly sought to follow a nonpartisan course.... There have been times when my patience has been sorely tried by the attitude of the present Secretary of Defense in his appearances before the Committee.... (He) has treated the Congress with disdain -- yea at times almost with contempt.... His vanity and his arrogance in his committee appearances have been excelled only by his lack of understanding of... our system of government and division of powers.... He has sought to intimidate the officers of the armed services from fully expressing their opinions to, and advising with, the Congress...on the all-important matter of national defense."

The proposed increase for the Air Force was "an exceedingly modest one...that is still one-third of what General (Curtis) LeMay (Strategic Air Commander) said he thought was necessary to meet his responsibility in preventing war."

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- "The budget, which was presented to Congress under the constitutional responsibility of the President ...went through the normal budgetary processes, including studies by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, consideration by the National Security Council, and consideration by the President.... I submit that President Eisenhower...would not knowingly recommend to Congress anything which would adversely affect the security of the American people.... I should be quite willing to lean over a little further beyond that judgment if necessary. I am for that reason supporting (the Bridges amendment)."

Conference

A Senate-House conference committee June 28 reported (H Rept 2529) a compromise version of the Defense Appropriations bill providing a total of $34,656,727,000. The conferees accepted all but $120 million of the Senate-voted increase in funds for the Air Force, providing a total of $16,459,125,000 -- a net increase of $792,625,000 over the amount requested by the President. Conferees agreed to a Senate amendment adding $800 million to the Air Force budget for aircraft and related procurement and agreed that the additional money should be used to "expedite production of heavy bombers, tankers and other essential Air Force weapons to the optimum limit of existing facilities." House conferees said approval of the additional funds "should not be interpreted as an invitation toward waste and loose fiscal procedures" and called attention to a report on procurement policies released by the House Appropriations Committee March 23.

HOUSE ACTION

The House adopted the conference report on HR 10986 June 29 by a standing vote of 79-57, over the objections of Members who opposed the increase in Air Force funds.

DEBATE -- Dewey Short (R Mo.) -- "If we vote for this conference report it will lead only to an unbalanced budget and to unwise and extravagant spending and a waste of public funds.... We do not have the existing plant facilities, nor the trained mechanics to spend this money wisely and well. And if we could get the planes, we do not have sufficient bases or trained pilots to man them.... This is an election year and perhaps some people who are hungry for a political issue...are scraping the bottom of the barrel."

George H. Mahon (D Texas) -- "I doubt that the additional funds in the bill will cost the taxpayers any additional money in the long run.... This is an election year. There are political overtones in many of the things we do...(and) this is not unwholesome. The defense issue...is not an improper issue.... Within the next two to five years, if we do not speed up our production...we are going to be second best to the U.S.S.R. in several vital defense fields.... That portion of funds which cannot be advantageously used this year will be carried into the succeeding fiscal year at which time, as is generally agreed, substantial additional funds will be required."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate June 29 adopted the conference report on HR 10986 by voice vote, without debate, clearing the bill for the President.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL, 1956

HR 10004 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1897) March 15, 1956. Recommended appropriations: $795,743,823.

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote March 21. Appropriations voted: $795,768,823.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1725) April 11. Recommended: $858,864,176.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote April 12. Voted: $838,864,176.
- Conference report (H Rept 2149) agreed to by the House and Senate May 16, by voice votes.

P.L. 533 -- Signed into law May 19. Final total: $852,414,896.

Disagreement over the method of financing future expansion of Tennessee Valley Authority power facilities highlighted Congressional action on the second supplemental appropriation bill for fiscal 1956 (HR 10004). The measure appropriated $852,414,896 in supplemental funds for various government agencies for the remainder of the fiscal year that ended June 30. The largest item covered costs of pay raises granted federal employees in bills enacted in 1955. The total was $24,721,631 below budget estimates submitted by the President.

TVA ISSUE

Although the final version of the bill did not contain any reference to TVA, the legislative history of the measure was interpreted as an affirmation of TVA's right to use its power revenues to finance additional generating units -- for the time being, at least -- without getting the prior approval of Congress. Such a right had been hotly disputed, particularly in the Senate.

In his Jan. 16 budget message to Congress, President Eisenhower recommended enactment of legislation to permit TVA to finance future steam-power facilities through the sale of revenue bonds. Three additional power units were needed at existing plants, the President said, to meet anticipated power loads through 1958. Pending enactment of the bond proposal, he requested a $3.5 million supplemental appropriation to begin work on one unit -- at the John Sevier plant -- which would cost an estimated $28 million to complete.

The House Appropriations Committee, when it reported HR 10004, denied the requested $3.5 million appropriation for the John Sevier unit. The majority held that TVA should "follow normal business procedure" and use its own power revenues to finance the unit. A five-man minority -- all Republicans -- dissented.

The House, in effect, upheld its Committee but the Senate Appropriations Committee restored the appropriation for John Sevier and stated in its report that none of TVA's power revenues should be used for construction of new power producing units "unless and until approved by act of Congress."

The Senate approved the appropriation for the unit, but a Senate-House conference committee deleted the item and thus upheld the position of the House. Although several Senators objected strongly to the conference report, contending that Congress was in effect abdicating control over TVA expenditure of "public money", there was no attempt to block approval of the report because government agencies urgently needed the supplemental funds provided in the bill.

Despite indications on the Senate floor that Senators would attempt to "reinstate" Congressional control over TVA purse strings through subsequent legislation, no such attempt was made before adjournment of the 84th Congress. (The $5.4 million granted TVA in the public works appropriation bill -- HR 11319, page 633-- covered routine expenditures and did not include funds for construction of new generating units.)

EISENHOWER ON TVA

In a statement issued when he signed HR 10004 May 19, President Eisenhower said the "conflict of opinion as to the existing authority of TVA" made it "imperative" that Congress "decide how new plants and additions to existing plants are to be financed." He again urged authorization of the revenue-bond method of financing. Congress adjourned, however, without taking any action on the bond proposal.

TVA chairman Herbert D. Vogel May 31 said the agency planned to use surplus funds from its power revenues and to go ahead with construction of the John Sevier unit, two other new units "and perhaps others as the need is indicated." Vogel said the use of power revenues was only a temporary answer to the financing question and that he hoped the revenue bond method eventually would be enacted.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, HR 10004 appropriated the following funds:

Agriculture	$ 6,266,220
Commerce	153,428,000
General government matters	396,000
Independent offices	236,579,300
Interior	17,969,500
Labor and Health, Education and Welfare	114,020,000
Public works	15,610,000
State, Justice and Judiciary	3,950,690
Treasury and Post Office	19,750,000
Legislative	979,149
Claims and judgment	2,367,341
Increased pay	281,098,696
TOTAL	$852,414,896

Included in the bill were these provisions:

$27,000,000 for scientific research to prepare for the International Geophysical Year, including $19,262,000 budgeted for instrumentation for the earth-circling satellite program.

$27,800,000 for grants to states for polio vaccinations.

$25,000,000 for maintenance and $9,900,000 for construction of schools overcrowded because of federal activities.

$185,000,000 for veterans' readjustment benefits.

$100,000,000 to reimburse the states for the federal share of highway costs.

An increase, from five to ten, in the number of replacement cargo ships on which federal construction subsides might be paid.

$30,000,000 to pay maritime operating-differential subsidies in fiscal 1956 under existing contracts ($110,000,000 had been appropriated in the regular 1956 bill for this item).

Extension through Dec. 31, 1956, of previously authorized emergency funds under the Agricultural Conservation Program for disaster damage.

Background

The first Supplemental Appropriation Act for fiscal 1956, granting $1.7 billion, was enacted in 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 242)

In February, 1956, Congress approved a deficiency bill appropriating $66 million for fiscal 1956. (See p. 632) Subsequently, President Eisenhower requested an additional $835,902,923 in supplemental funds for fiscal 1956, including $3.5 million to begin work on a new generating unit at the John Sevier plant in the Tennessee Valley.

TVA FINANCING

TVA budgets for fiscal years 1954 - 1956 contained no funds for starting construction of new power generating facilities. In its annual report covering 1954 -- issued in 1955 -- TVA estimated it would be able to meet power demands at the end of 1956 "by only the narrowest of margins" unless additional power facilities were constructed. "Generating capacity...under construction... makes no provision for meeting the additional power requirements forecast for 1957 and 1958", the report added.

The TVA's three-man board in April, 1955, urged the Budget Bureau to allow TVA to issue its own revenue bonds to finance future expansion of power facilities. In its report on the bond-financing plan, the Bureau suggested changes which were opposed by two of TVA's directors. Chairman Herbert D. Vogel, who had supported the original plan, said the changes would "be in the national interest."

Congress took no action on the bond proposals in 1955 and the TVA controversy centered on the Administration-backed Dixon-Yates contract -- subsequently canceled -- calling for private construction of power facilities to replace TVA power being diverted to the Atomic Energy Commission. (1955 Almanac, p. 227)

In a September, 1955 letter to the Budget Bureau outlining the fiscal 1957 budget, the TVA directors proposed that five additional power generating units be installed at three existing projects, to be financed "from corporate funds utilizing current power revenues. When legislative action has been taken with regard to alternative means of financing it might prove advantageous to finance the costs of construction through use of revenue bond proceeds, and the situation will be reviewed at that time," the letter said.

The proposal to finance new units from power revenues was not new. In the past, 10 generating units in existing projects had been started with earnings from the power system and all but two had been completed out of earnings. In 1947, language was inserted in the Government Corporations Appropriation Act of 1948 (PL 268, 80th Congress) providing that "none of the power revenues of the TVA shall be used for the construction of new power producing projects unless and until approved by act of Congress."

On Sept. 10, 1955, TVA counsel Joseph C. Swidler rendered an opinion on this language to the TVA directors which said: "In thus prohibiting the use of revenues for construction of 'new power producing projects' without prior Congressional approval, Congress clearly intended that the prohibition should apply only to new steam plants...and not to generating units in existing plants...." The validity of Swidler's interpretation was subsequently challenged.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 23 - March 8, in closed session, on budget estimates for supplemental fiscal 1956 appropriations.

ACTION -- March 15 reported a bill (HR 10004 -- H Rept 1897) recommending $795,743,823 in supplemental appropriations. The Committee disallowed the Administration request for $3.5 million to begin construction of a new generating unit at TVA's John Sevier steam plant.

"The Committee finds that the TVA's power revenues have provided it with sufficient funds for construction of such additional units as TVA now requires, and believes that the agency should follow normal business procedure, using its revenues to the extent necessary," the report said. "Recognizing that only two methods of financing are available to TVA at the present time -- the appropriation of funds by Congress or the use by TVA of its revenues...the latter method is recommended.... No position is taken (by the Committee) on the merits of revenue bond legislation since that is a matter for the appropriate legislative committees of the Congress."

Five of the six Republicans on the Public Works Subcommittee, in a dissenting statement, said the use of power revenues for construction was expressly prohibited by the appropriations bill proviso added to the Government Corporation Control Act in 1948. Rep. H. Carl Andersen (R Minn.) did not sign the dissent.

The minority said: "There is still grave doubt in the minds of able lawyers and of Members of the Congress whether there was actually any constitutional authority for the TVA to build steam plants at any time.... Certainly no more money should be voted to the TVA to build steam plants or additional units until the question is resolved....

"None of the requested additional power...is to be used for national defense, nor for the needs of the federal government; this is an effort to draw industries into the TVA area, at the expense of the taxpayers of the other states where local, state, and federal taxes are paid on power revenues."

The majority said that "the minority is simply opposed to the people of the TVA region having power to meet increasing needs.... It is unthinkable that the Congress would deliberately schedule a power shortage in 1957 and 1958.... A breakdown of TVA power supply would be a national disaster.... Over the years 10 generating units in existing projects have been begun with earnings from the power system and all but two have been completed out of earnings. Two...were begun after the addition of the language in the 1948...Act.... It is more sound to use money at hand rather than make new appropriations."

Floor Action

The House passed HR 10004 March 21 by voice vote, with an amendment. No amendment relating to TVA was offered although Members disagreed sharply in debating the language in the Committee report

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown in HR 10004, as passed by the House:

Agriculture	$ 5,144,000
Commerce	133,428,000
General government matters	396,000
Independent offices	235,579,300
Interior	15,494,500
Labor and Health, Education and Welfare	113,690,000
Public Works	15,610,000
State, Justice and Judiciary	3,950,690
Treasury and Post Office	3,750,000
Legislative	340,300
Claims and judgments	1,614,562
Increased pay	266,771,471
TOTAL	$795,768,823

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) -- Add $25,000 to the public works appropriation "for the dredging of the Kalamazoo River where it flows into Lake Michigan;" March 20. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- March 20 -- John Taber (R N.Y.) -- "This...direction to the TVA, which is in the majority report, to use its revenues to build this additional power unit...is not in an act of Congress. In my opinion...the direction is an absolute nullity. It gives us no opportunity to raise the question here on the floor and simply is an attempt to bypass the Congress and its control over the spending of the people's money.... It is impossible under the rules of the House to amend a committee report on the floor.... Nor is it possible to provide any legislative amendment to an appropriation bill which would be of any value here."

Joe L. Evins (D Tenn.) -- In the past, "Congressional approval has not been required for adding units or facilities at existing plants. The law gives (TVA) that authority.... In addition, custom and usage have established TVA's practice in this field.... There is absolutely no question of Congressional intent or the legality of this method of financing.... This was brought out fully" in the September, 1955 opinion of TVA counsel Swidler.

John Phillips (R Calif.) -- "The legislative history... leaves no doubt that Congress intended that TVA should have no authority to use power revenues for constructing new generating units without the specific approval of the Congress."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- March 21 - 27 on HR 10004.

TESTIMONY -- March 27 -- Comptroller General Joseph Campbell, in a letter to the Committee, said TVA had voted to go ahead with a $178 million expansion program without prior approval from Congress. Congress should amend the law "to clearly state its intent" on TVA expansion, he said.

ACTION -- The Committee April 11 reported HR 10004 (S Rept 1725), amended, recommending total appropriations of $858,864,176. The Committee restored the requested $3.5 million appropriation to begin an additional generating unit at the John Sevier plant and stated in the report: "It is the sense of the Committee that none of the power revenues of the TVA shall be used for the construction of new power producing units, installations or projects...unless and until approved by act of Congress."

Floor Action

The Senate passed HR 10004 April 12, by voice vote, after brief debate on two floor amendments and no mention of TVA. Committee amendments, including the appropriation for the John Sevier unit, were accepted en bloc by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 10004 appropriated the following funds:

Agriculture	$ 17,139,000
Commerce	123,428,000
General government matters	340,000
Independent offices	237,579,300
Interior	16,029,500
Labor and Health, Education and Welfare	117,020,000
Public works	19,110,000
State, Justice and Judiciary	4,000,690
Treasury and Post Office	19,750,000
Legislative	979,149
Claims and judgments	2,367,341
Increased pay	281,121,196
TOTAL	$838,864,176

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), as modified -- Add $10 million to Agriculture funds for the school lunch program; April 12. Voice vote.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Delete $30 million appropriation for maritime operating-differential subsidies; April 12. Voice.

Conference

A Senate-House conference committee May 11 reported (H Rept 2149) a compromise version of the bill appropriating $852,414,896. The conferees deleted the Senate appropriation of $3.5 million for TVA's John Sevier unit and thus, in effect, upheld the position of the House Appropriations Committee that TVA could use its power revenues to construct the unit. Two of the Senate conferees -- Republicans Styles Bridges (N.H.) and Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.) -- refused to sign the conference report in a protest against elimination of the TVA amendment.

The conference committee deleted the Senate amendment appropriating $10 million for the school lunch program and reinserted a House provision, deleted by the Senate, appropriating $30 million for maritime subsidies.

HOUSE ACTION

The House May 16, by voice vote, agreed to the conference report on HR 10004 and sent the legislation to the Senate.

DEBATE -- May 16 -- Debate centered on the question of Congressional approval for TVA construction.

Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.) -- "...if TVA is to be permitted to apply these power revenues to the building of additional steam plants, then they will be accomplishing the same thing by indirection that the Congress has said in recent years time and again that they cannot do, which is to require the taxpayers all over the country to build further steam-producing facilities in the Tennessee Valley."

Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- "...the opponents of TVA are against appropriating any money for it. They are against TVA's standing on its own feet through the issuance of revenue bonds. They are against its using its own resources...how is it possible for the Administration to keep its commitment to TVA, which was to do nothing which would impair its efficiency, without at least permitting it to use one or the other of these methods of financing?"

SENATE ACTION

The Senate May 16 agreed to the conference report by voice vote and sent the bill to the President.

DEBATE -- May 16 -- Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- "If the Members of the Senate do not want to see the Congress...gradually stripped of its powers one by one... they should take stock of the question involved, because it establishes the principle that the Congress has no more to say about the use of money in the building of TVA plants."

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- The Senate may agree to the conference report "because of the necessity to make needed appropriations for various departments.... I, for one, would not want it to be assumed by the counsel of the TVA...that such action in effect amounted to endorsement by us of abdication of Congressional responsibility.... If the appropriate legislative committee does not promptly report to the Senate a bill which will reinstate Congressional control over the (TVA) purse strings, I think we should use some other vehicle to achieve that end.... We might do that in connection with consideration by the Senate of a bill whose enactment is both necessary and desirable."

Albert Gore (D Tenn.) -- "I do not think I have ever (before) heard as much misinformation or such a one-sided presentation of an issue...." He defended TVA's right to use its power revenues for new units -- the only Senator on the floor to do so.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- TVA Chairman Herbert D. Vogel, in testimony on the public works appropriation bill (HR 11319 -- see p. 633), May 31 told the Senate Appropriations Public Works Subcommittee: "I believe that we have been told by the Congress in the instance of the supplemental appropriation that we should proceed (with construction of new units) on the basis of utilizing our power revenues.... We now propose to do that, and to start construction of (John Sevier and two other new units)...and perhaps others as the need is indicated. Additional units will be reported in the budget submission, but it will probably be after the doing....

"This is not an answer for the future...and we are hopeful that some action will take place" on legislation "whereby we may be able to finance ourselves by the sale of revenue bonds."

AGRICULTURE FUNDS

HR 11177 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 2148) May 11, 1956. Recommended appropriations: $1,983,512,568.

- Passed by the House May 14 by voice vote.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2023) May 18. Recommended: $2,016,771,068.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote May 22. Voted: $2,018,331,068.
- Conference report (H Rept 2214) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate May 29.

P.L. 554 -- Signed into law June 4. Final total: $1,993,744,968.

The fiscal 1957 Agriculture Appropriations bill carried total appropriations of $1,993,744,968 for the Department of Agriculture and Farm Credit Administration. The total was $3,903,300 more than President Eisenhower requested and $1,097,626,650 more than Congress appropriated for fiscal 1956. The increase over fiscal 1956 appropriations consisted chiefly of a $927,652,519 increase for restoration of capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corp., to make up realized losses sustained in fiscal 1955. Total realized losses in 1954 amounted to $547,168,841, of which all but $1,134,659 was restored through cancellation of notes in 1954.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 11177 carried the following breakdown of funds:

Agricultural Research Service	$ 124,919,708
Extension Service	53,515,000
Farmer Cooperative Service	550,000
Soil Conservation Service	97,232,000
Agricultural Conservation Program Service	227,500,000
Agricultural Marketing Service	127,380,000
Foreign Agricultural Service	3,750,000
Commodity Exchange Authority	787,400
Commodity Stabilization Service	108,800,000
Federal crop insurance	6,210,000
Rural Electrification Administration	8,600,000
Farmers' Home Administration	26,750,000
Office of General Counsel	2,740,000
Office of Secretary	2,500,000
Office of Information	1,325,000
Library	735,000
Commodity Credit Corp., restoration of capital impairment	929,287,178
Special activities of Department of Agriculture	271,163,682
TOTAL	$1,993,744,968

In addition to appropriating funds, HR 11177:

Authorized $214 million for rural electrification loans, $100 million for loans under the rural telephone program and $194.5 million for loans under programs of the Farmers' Home Administration.

Set a limit of $6,356,000 on the amount of corporate funds the Farm Credit Administration could use for administrative expenses.

Background

President Eisenhower, in his Jan. 16 budget message, estimated net spending for the government's farm program in fiscal 1957 at $3.4 billion -- $12 million less than estimated fiscal 1956 spending and more than $1 billion below fiscal 1955's costs. His soil bank proposal would cost $400 million in fiscal 1957, the President estimated. But the net cost of price support programs was expected to drop $485 million.

The President originally requested an appropriation of $1,953,887,268. Later requests brought the budget estimate to $1,988,341,668. Of this amount, $787,888,808 was for regular activities of the Department of Agriculture, $929,287,178 was for restoration of capital impairment of the CCC and $271,165,682 was for special activities of the Department -- including strategic research and reimbursement to the CCC for non-price-support activities.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 11 reported HR 11177 (H Rept 2148) with a recommended appropriation of $1,983,512,568. The bill also authorized loans of up to $359,300,000, principally to finance extension of rural telephone and electric service and farm ownership and subsistence projects.

The Committee cut $10.8 million from the funds requested for the Agricultural Research Service, including an $8.9 million reduction in funds for construction of an animal disease laboratory at Beltsville, Md. The Committee increased funds available for the school lunch program $16.8 million over budget requests.

Floor Action

The House May 14 passed HR 11177 by voice vote without amendment.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 11177 carried the following breakdown of funds:

Agricultural Research Service	$ 131,069,708
Extension Service	53,265,000
Farmer Cooperative Service	550,000
Soil Conservation Service	97,232,000
Agricultural Conservation Program Service	217,500,000
Agricultural Marketing Service	127,100,000
Foreign Agricultural Service	3,600,000
Commodity Exchange Authority	780,000
Commodity Stabilization Service	103,600,000
Federal crop insurance	6,210,000
Rural Electrification Administration	8,500,000
Farmers' Home Administration	26,405,000
Office of General Counsel	2,700,000

Office of Secretary	$ 2,500,000
Office of Information	1,325,000
Library	725,000
Commodity Credit Corp., restoration of capital impairment	929,287,178
Special activities of Department of Agriculture	271,163,682
TOTAL	$1,983,512,568

In addition to appropriating funds, HR 11177:

Authorized $145.3 million for rural electrification loans, $49.5 million for loans under the rural telephone program and $164.5 million for loans under the programs of the Farmers' Home Administration.

Set a limit of $6,356,000 on the amount of corporate funds the Farm Credit Administration could use for administrative purposes.

DEBATE -- May 14 -- Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- "This being an appropriation bill, we cannot change the law governing cotton acreage or corn acreage; we cannot do anything in this bill toward price stabilization. There are many things we cannot do to correct situations that bother those engaged in agriculture. The thing we can do is try to give thought to those programs that may be of slight benefit in meeting the problems we have today."

William H. Natcher (D Ky.) -- "For the fiscal year 1957, appropriations totaling some $65,900,000,000 will be approved by the Congress of the United States, and only 4.8 percent of this amount is for agriculture. I say ...that if 10 percent went for agriculture we would not be out of line."

Peter F. Mack Jr. (D Ill.) -- "In this bill there is a $10 million item of appropriation for animal disease laboratory facilities...at Beltsville, Md.... I am vehemently opposed to the construction of a laboratory near the densely populated area of Washington, D.C.... I think this type of facility should be located in the Midwest, where the markets, the packing-houses and the livestock facilities are located."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 18 reported HR 11177 (S Rept 2023) with recommended appropriations of $2,016,771,068, which was $33,258,500 more than the House had voted. The Committee report requested the Secretary of Agriculture to submit, by Sept. 1, 1956, a report on systems of price support for cotton.

Floor Action

The Senate May 22 passed HR 11177 by voice vote, with amendments. As passed by the Senate, the bill carried total appropriations of $2,018,331,068, which was $34,818,500 more than the House voted and $29,989,400 more than the Administration requested. The Senate increased funds for soil conservation payments by $32.5 million over the amount voted by the House. Also included in the Senate version was $1.25 million to combat a Mediterranean fruit fly infestation in Florida.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 11177 carried the following breakdown of funds:

Agricultural Research Service	$ 126,400,108
Extension Service	53,800,000
Farmer Cooperative Service	550,000
Soil Conservation Service.	$ 97,232,000
Agricultural Conservation Program Service	250,000,000
Agricultural Marketing Service	127,485,000
Foreign Agricultural Service	3,750,000
Commodity Exchange Authority	787,400
Commodity Stabilization Service	108,800,000
Federal crop insurance	6,210,000
Rural Electrification Administration	8,700,000
Farmers' Home Administration	26,805,000
Office of General Counsel	2,762,700
Office of Secretary	2,500,000
Office of Information	1,325,000
Library	773,000
Commodity Credit Corp., restoration of capital impairment	929,287,178
Special activities of Department of Agriculture	271,163,682
TOTAL	$2,018,331,068

In addition to appropriating funds, HR 11177:

Authorized $214 million for rural electrification loans, $100 million for loans under the rural telephone program and $214.5 million for loans under programs of the Farmers' Home Administration.

Set a limit of $6,356,000 on the amount of corporate funds the Farm Credit Administration could use for administrative purposes.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Increase by $1.5 million funds for plant and animal disease and pest control; earmark $1.25 million of these funds for use in eradication and control of Mediterranean fruit fly; May 22. Voice vote.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Increase research funds by $60,000 to provide for prune harvester research; May 22. Voice.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Increase loan authorizations for the Rural Electrification Administration to $314 million (House had authorized $194.8 million, plus a "contingency" loan fund of $119.2 million); May 22. Voice.

DEBATE -- May 22 -- Humphrey -- "We have always had two categories, one the regular loan fund and the other the contingency fund. However, last year...we modified the formula in the REA Act, and it is now unnecessary to have a contingency-fund allocation."

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- "Under the language used, it seems to me that the appropriation is divided into two parts. There is no contingency-fund provision now on the statute books. Certainly this language does not create a contingency fund, even though it is so referred to in the House report."

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee reported HR 11177 May 28 (H Rept 2214). Conferees accepted a Senate amendment to eliminate a House provision appropriating $10 million for construction of animal disease laboratory facilities at Beltsville, Md. Other cuts brought the bill's total to $24.5 million below the Senate figure.

ACTION -- The House and Senate May 29 agreed, by voice votes, to the conference report carrying total appropriations of $1,993,744,968.

TREASURY-POST OFFICE

HR 9064 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1743) Feb. 3, 1956. Recommended appropriations: $3,618,699,000.

- Passed by voice vote of the House, without amendment, Feb. 7.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1624) March 6. Recommended appropriations: $3,639,579,000.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote, without floor amendment, March 7.
- Conference report (H Rept 1956) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate March 28.

P.L. 467 -- Signed into law April 2. Final total: $3,629,139,000.

The Treasury-Post Office Appropriations bill carried funds for the two departments and the Tax Court of the United States for fiscal 1957. The final total of the bill was $20,633,000 less than the amount requested by President Eisenhower.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 9064, as signed by the President:

TREASURY

Office of the Secretary	$ 2,900,000
Bureau of Accounts	19,025,000
Bureau of the Public Debt	45,500,000
Office of the Treasurer	15,125,000
Bureau of Customs	44,250,000
Internal Revenue Service	305,000,000
Bureau of Narcotics	3,250,000
U.S. Secret Service	4,484,000
Bureau of the Mint	3,650,000
U.S. Coast Guard	200,250,000
TOTAL	$ 643,434,000

POST OFFICE

Administration	$ 19,000,000
Operations	2,113,440,000
Transportation	650,000,000
Finance	12,900,000
Facilities	189,000,000
TOTAL	$2,984,340,000

The Tax Court was allotted $1,365,000.

HR 9064 also:

Authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to use up to $1,060,000 of funds derived from its activities for "administrative expenses" in fiscal 1957 in connection with liquidating itself.

Authorized funds for training of employees and repair and improvement of "federally owned property" occupied for postal purposes.

BACKGROUND -- In his budget for fiscal 1957, Mr. Eisenhower requested total appropriations of $3,649,872,000 including $648,507,000 for the Treasury, $3,000,000,000 for the Post Office and $1,365,000 for the Tax Court.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Reported HR 9064 (H Rept 1743) Feb. 3, recommending a total of $3,618,699,000.

Floor Action

The House Feb. 7 passed the bill by voice vote, without amendment.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 9064, as passed by the House:

TREASURY

Office of the Secretary	$ 2,900,000
Bureau of Accounts	19,025,000
Bureau of the Public Debt	45,500,000
Office of the Treasurer	15,125,000
Bureau of Customs	44,250,000
Internal Revenue Service	305,000,000
Bureau of Narcotics	3,250,000
U.S. Secret Service	4,484,000
Bureau of the Mint	3,650,000
U.S. Coast Guard	200,250,000
TOTAL	$ 643,434,000

POST OFFICE

Administration	$ 19,000,000
Operations	2,108,000,000
Transportation	645,000,000
Finance	12,900,000
Facilities	189,000,000
TOTAL	$2,973,900,000

The Tax Court was allotted $1,365,000, the amount of its request.

HR 9064 also:

Authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to use up to $1,060,000 of funds derived from its activities for "administrative expenses" in fiscal 1957 in connection with liquidating itself.

Authorized funds for training of employees and repair and improvement of "federally owned property" occupied for postal purposes.

DEBATE -- Feb. 7 -- Members of both parties discussed the need for increases in postal rates to help shave down the postal operating deficit, estimated at $470 million for fiscal 1957.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Reported HR 9064 (S Rept 1624) March 6, recommending two amendments raising Post Office funds for Operations by $10,880,000 and Transportation by $10 million.

Floor Action

The Senate March 7 passed the bill by voice vote, with Committee amendments.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to conference, the Senate version of HR 9064 provided:

POST OFFICE

Administration	$ 19,000,000
Operations	2,118,880,000
Transportation	655,000,000
Finance	12,900,000
Facilities	189,000,000
Subtotal	$2,994,780,000
Treasury	$ 643,434,000
U.S. Tax Court	1,365,000
TOTAL	$3,639,579,000

No changes were made in funds granted by the House for the Treasury Department and the Tax Court.

DEBATE -- March 7 -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- In its report, the Appropriations Committee stressed the need to cut down the postal deficit and urged Congressional Committees on the Post Office and Civil Service to provide increased postal revenues. The Senate "must deal with the postal deficit. Action (on raises in mail rates) is long overdue."

Conference

REPORT -- The conference report (H Rept 1956) filed March 27 adjusted two items:

The Senate version of the bill provided the Post Office with $10,880,000 additional funds for Operations. The conference agreed to $5,440,000.

The other Senate amendment also was cut in half. House conferees accepted a $5 million increase for Transportation in the Post Office.

ACTION -- The Senate and House March 28 agreed, by voice votes without debate, to the conference report.

STATE, JUSTICE, JUDICIARY

HR 10721 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 2021) April 20, 1956. Recommended appropriation: $541,367,372.

- Passed by the House by voice vote April 25. Funds voted: $541,367,372.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2034) May 21. Recommended: $556,271,517.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote May 25. Voted: $556,271,517.
- Conference report (H Rept 2288) agreed to June 11 by the House and Senate by voice votes.

P.L. 603 -- Signed into law June 20. Final appropriation: $548,930,957.

The House and Senate completed action June 11 on the Departments of State, Justice, the Judiciary and Related Agencies Appropriation Bill for fiscal 1957 (HR 10721). The bill carried a total of $548,930,957, about $50 million less than the President requested, but over $54 million more than comparable appropriations for fiscal 1956 (including supplemental appropriations). (1955 Almanac, p. 215)

A sizeable increase, almost $26 million, went to the United States Information Agency, but the $113 million appropriated was still $22 million less than the President had asked.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 10721, as sent to the White House:

STATE DEPARTMENT

Salaries and expenses	$ 90,500,000
Foreign Service representation allowance	800,000
Acquisition of buildings abroad	19,000,000
Diplomatic and Consular Service emergencies	1,000,000
Foreign Service retirement and disability fund	1,304,000
Contributions to international organizations	33,859,285
Missions to international organizations	1,257,000
International contingencies	1,500,000
U.S.-Mexican International Boundary and Water Commission	1,969,000
American sections, international commissions	296,000
Passamaquoddy tidal power survey	935,000
International fisheries commission	645,587
International educational exchange activities	20,000,000
Rama Road, Nicaragua	2,000,000
Subtotal	$175,065,872

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT

Legal activities and general administration	$ 37,773,650
Federal Bureau of Investigation	95,510,000
Immigration and Naturalization Service	47,550,000
Federal prison system	35,210,000
Subtotal	$216,043,650

JUDICIARY

Supreme Court	$ 1,527,785
Court of Customs and Patent Appeals	284,850
Customs Court	625,000
Court of Claims	702,000
Courts of appeals, district courts and other judicial services	33,181,800
Subtotal	$ 36,321,435
U.S. Information Agency	$113,000,000
Refugee relief (office of the President)	8,500,000
GRAND TOTAL	$548,930,957

In addition, the bill:

Stated Congress' view that the Communist Chinese government should not be admitted to the United Nations as the representative of China.

Barred the use of funds for publicity purposes not authorized by Congress.

Authorized non-appropriated fund expenditures of $950,000 by Federal Prison Industries Inc., $3,000,000 by the Office of Alien Property and $3,107,700 by bankruptcy referees.

Authorized $250,000 to the Justice Department's prison system to make plans for a maximum custody penitentiary and a western youth guidance center, but specified that no sites should be selected until further action by Congress.

Authorized $350,000 of USIA funds to be used for private broadcasting to foreign countries.

Background

The President requested, in initial and supplemental requests for State, Justice, the Judiciary and related agencies, a total of $599,104,820 for fiscal 1957. The breakdown: State, $182,142,285; Justice, $235,880,000; Judiciary, $37,582,535; U.S. Information Agency, $135,000,000; and the President's refugee relief fund, $8,500,000.

The Administration request of $135 million for the Information Agency represented an increase of 54 percent over the fiscal 1956 appropriation ($87,336,630, including supplemental appropriations). USIA, a semi-autonomous organization under the State Department, came into being in 1953 as the successor to the State Department's International Information Administration. The following table shows Administration requests and final appropriations for the international information program since 1952:

Fiscal Year	Request	Appropriation
1953	$157,000,000	$87,325,000
1954	114,515,800 (Truman budget)
	87,900,000 (Eisenhower budget)	74,220,000
1955	89,000,000	77,114,000
1956	88,930,000	87,336,630
1957	135,000,000	113,000,000

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- In January, February and March on the Department of State and the refugee relief program; Jan. 25-27 on the Judiciary; in January and February on the Department of Justice; and in February on the U.S. Information Agency.

ACTION -- The Committee April 20 reported HR 10721 (H Rept 2021) with recommended appropriations of $541,367,372. The Committee denied USIA's request for $3,790,500 to convert an obsolete aircraft carrier into a floating Cinerama exhibit ship to tour ports in Asia and Africa. In recommending $110 million for USIA the Committee said that to grant the full Administration request of $135 million would be "a wasteful aberration."

Floor Action

The House April 25 passed HR 10721 by voice vote, without amendment.

By a roll-call vote of 179-184 the House rejected an amendment that would have deleted a provision raising to super-grade level the civil service grades of three Immigration and Naturalization Service officials. (For voting, see chart p. 196)

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 10721, as passed by the House and sent to the Senate:

STATE DEPARTMENT
Salaries and expenses	$ 90,000,000
Foreign Service representation allowance	700,000
Acquisition of buildings abroad	19,000,000
Diplomatic and Consular Service emergencies	1,000,000
Foreign Service retirement and disability fund	1,304,000
Contributions to international organizations	33,830,875
Missions to international organizations	1,257,000
International contingencies	1,500,000
U.S.-Mexican International Boundary and Water Commission	1,906,000
American sections, international commissions	296,000
International fisheries commission	542,862
International educational exchange activities	18,170,000
Rama Road, Nicaragua	2,000,000
Subtotal	$171,506,737
JUSTICE DEPARTMENT
Legal activities and general administration	$ 37,945,000
Federal Bureau of Investigation	95,510,000
Immigration and Naturalization Service	47,550,000
Federal prison system	34,960,000
Subtotal	$215,965,000
JUDICIARY
Supreme Court	$ 1,527,785
Court of Customs and Patent Appeals	284,850
Customs Court	625,000
Court of Claims	702,000
Courts of appeals, district courts and other judicial services	32,256,000
Subtotal	$ 35,395,635
U.S. Information Agency	$110,000,000
Refugee relief (office of the President)	8,500,000
GRAND TOTAL	$541,367,372

In addition, the bill:

Authorized non-appropriated fund expenditures of $950,000 by Federal Prison Industries, $3,000,000 by the Office of Alien Property, $1,233,500 for salaries of referees in bankruptcy and $1,874,200 for expenses of the referees.

Specified that no funds appropriated in the bill could be used for publicity purposes not authorized by Congress.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Tom Murray (D Tenn.) -- Delete provision authorizing five assistant commissioners and one district director in the Immigration and Naturalization Service to be paid at the rate of Grade GS-16 (so-called "super-grade"); April 25. Adopted by teller vote, 90-78. Rejected by roll call, 179-184.

Peter F. Mack (D Ill.) -- Increase funds for buildings and facilities, federal prison system, from $1,425,000 to $10,925,000 to provide for construction of a new maximum security prison; April 25. Standing vote, 26-96.

Frank T. Bow (R Ohio) -- Prohibit use of Justice Department funds to prosecute violations of wheat marketing quota law when the entire wheat crop grown on a farm was used for seed, feed or food on such farm; April 25. Standing, 68-134.

DEBATE -- April 25 -- Walter H. Judd (R Minn.) -- The proposal for a floating Cinerama exhibit ship "had real merit and I...hope the Senate committee will consider it more favorably.... It is a bold and imaginative idea to carry the American story to the people of Asia and Africa."

John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) -- The Appropriations Committee turned over to the Justice Department and the House Un-American Activities Committee testimony it received concerning 10 alleged Communist musicians sent overseas in 1955 as part of a State Department "Symphony of the Air" project.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- Jan. 12 and May 15 on the Department of State; May 10 on the Department of Justice; May 11 on the Judiciary; and May 14 and 16 on the U.S. Information Agency.

ACTION -- The Committee May 21 reported HR 10721 (S Rept 2034) with amendments increasing by $14,904,145 the amount approved by the House. Included in State Department funds were the entire $20 million for international educational exchange activities requested by the Administration and $935,000 requested by the President May 15, after passage of the House measure, to initiate a survey by the International Joint Commission (with Canada) of the feasibility of building a tidal power project at Passamaquoddy Bay, Maine.

In restoring $5 million to the U.S. Information Agency for a total of $115 million, the Committee was "insistent that none of these additional funds should be spent in Europe or on 'Operation CV', the aircraft carrier, a floating Cinerama project, also denied by the House." They authorized $350,000 of the amount to be used for private broadcasting to foreign countries to promote friendship. Justice Department funds included $3.5 million to begin construction of a new penitentiary and a western youth guidance center.

Floor Action

The Senate May 25 passed HR 10721 by voice vote with committee amendments.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 10721, as passed by the Senate and sent to conference:

STATE DEPARTMENT
Salaries and expenses	$ 91,210,000
Foreign Service representation allowance	1,000,000
Acquisition of buildings abroad	19,000,000
Diplomatic and Consular Service emergencies	1,150,000
Foreign Service retirement and disability fund	1,304,000
Contributions to international organizations	33,859,285
Missions to international organizations	1,257,000
International contingencies	1,500,000
U.S.-Mexican International Boundary and Water Commission	1,969,000
American sections, international commissions	296,000
Passamaquoddy tidal power survey	935,000
International fisheries commission	645,587
International educational exchange activities	20,000,000
Rama Road, Nicaragua	2,000,000
Subtotal	$176,125,872
JUSTICE DEPARTMENT
Legal activities and general administration	$ 37,931,910
Federal Bureau of Investigation	95,510,000
Immigration and Naturalization Service	47,550,000
Federal prison system	38,460,000
Subtotal	$219,451,910
JUDICIARY
Supreme Court	$ 1,527,785
Court of Customs and Patent Appeals	284,850
Customs Court	625,000
Court of Claims	702,000
Courts of appeals, district courts and other judicial services	34,054,100
Subtotal	$ 37,193,735
U.S. Information Agency	$115,000,000
Refugee relief (office of the President)	8,500,000
GRAND TOTAL	$556,271,517

In addition, the bill:

Authorized $3.5 million to the Justice Department's prison system to acquire sites and begin construction of a new penitentiary and a western youth guidance center, whose total cost would be $17 million.

Authorized expenditure of, but did not appropriate, funds of $3,000,000 by the Office of Alien Property, and $1,233,500 for salaries and $1,874,200 for expenses of referees in bankruptcy (judiciary).

Authorized the U.S. Information Agency to spend $350,000 of its funds for private broadcasting to foreign countries.

DEBATE -- May 25 -- Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- "Several of us (on the Appropriations Committee) felt very strongly that the USIA should have more money than was finally agreed upon; but we unanimously agreed...to try to hold the $5 million increase in the conference."

Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) -- An Appropriations subcommittee will study the expenditures and programs of the USIA. "As we learn more about it...I believe we can obtain additional funds to carry out this great program.... I am confident it is one of our most important weapons in the achievement of a lasting peace."

Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) -- "It is a waste of money for us to have an information service scurrying around and spending American tax dollars in England... France...Italy and other friendly countries...to show...our European allies that we are not barbarians.... Most of the money ought to be channeled in such ways that it will reach the peoples behind the Iron Curtain."

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- "I think our USIA has done a magnificent job."

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- "Members of the Committee were very much concerned about the percentage of contribution the United States was making (to the United Nations) compared with the number of American personnel employed."

Conference

A Senate-House conference committee June 8 reported (H Rept 2288) a compromise version of HR10721. The full amount proposed by the Senate for international educational exchanges -- $20,000,000, compared with $18,170,000 proposed by the House -- was accepted. USIA was allowed $113 million instead of $110 million proposed by the House and $115 million by the Senate.

House conferees were not authorized to agree on four Senate additions to the bill which had not been before the House: $935,000 for a survey of the possibility of a tidal power project at Passamaquoddy Bay, Maine; $3,500,000 for the Justice Department to begin construction of a new penitentiary and youth guidance center; $350,000 from other USIA funds for private broadcasting to foreign countries to promote friendship; and $28,410 for past years' contributions to the Inter-American Radio Office.

HOUSE, SENATE ACTION

On June 11 the House approved by voice vote the Senate amendments on the tidal power survey, funds for private broadcasting and contributions to the Inter-American Radio Office, and agreed to a compromise sum of $250,000 for plans for a new penitentiary and youth guidance center, with the proviso that no sites be selected until further action by Congress. Then, by voice vote, the House approved the conference report as amended.

The Senate June 11 approved by voice vote the conference report as amended by the House.

COMMERCE FUNDS

HR 10899 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee April 27, 1956 (H Rept 2076). Recommended appropriation: $1,382,003,000.

- Passed by the House by voice vote with an amendment May 2. Appropriation voted: $1,382,003,000.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee May 23 (S Rept 2039). Recommended: $1,445,566,000.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote May 31. Voted: $1,446,316,000.
- Conference report (H Rept 2344) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate June 14.

P.L. 604 -- Signed into law June 20. Final appropriation: $1,416,732,000.

Controversy over the fiscal 1957 Department of Commerce and related agencies appropriations bill (HR 10899) centered in 1956, as in 1955, on subsidies for airlines, maritime operations and ship construction.

The final version carried $16.2 million for airline subsidies, $82.7 million for shipbuilding subsidies and $124 million for maritime operating subsidies. Congress had voted $52.5 million, $86.45 million and $140 million, respectively, for these programs in fiscal 1956.

The final over-all appropriation of $1,416,732,000 was $95,941,000 less than President Eisenhower requested.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 10899 appropriated the following funds:

COMMERCE DEPARTMENT

General Administration	$ 2,450,000
Census Bureau	10,375,000
Civil Aeronautics Administration	200,422,000
Civil Aeronautics Board	20,825,000
Coast and Geodetic Survey	14,600,000
Business and Defense Services Administration	6,900,000
Bureau of Foreign Commerce	2,400,000
Office of Business Economics	960,000
Maritime Activities	224,910,000
Patent Office	17,000,000
Bureau of Public Roads	799,000,000
National Bureau of Standards	10,130,000
Weather Bureau	37,900,000
Subtotal	$1,347,872,000

OTHER AGENCIES

Canal Zone Government	$ 15,410,000
Small Business Administration	51,900,000
Tariff Commission	1,550,000
TOTAL	$1,416,732,000

BACKGROUND -- Administration budget requests for fiscal 1957 totaled $1,522,673,000. The President sought the following subsidies: airlines, $20 million; ship construction, $151.6 million; maritime operations, $124 million. Included was a request for $37.9 million for construction of three prototype merchant ships, one a nuclear-powered tanker.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 27 reported HR 10899 (H Rept 2076). The Committee expressed concern about the "continuous increase" in appropriations for Civil Aeronautics Administration air traffic control activities. It disallowed $37.9 million for construction of three prototype merchant ships, expressing doubt as to the legal authority of the Maritime Administration to build the vessels.

The Committee cut $5 million from the $20 million requested by the Administration for Civil Aeronautics Board air subsidy payments and $96.8 million from the $151.6 million requested for ship construction. The Small Business Administration was commended for "a good job in meeting loan needs during the past year, particularly in disaster areas."

Floor Action

The House May 2 passed HR 10899 by voice vote with an amendment. As passed, the bill carried total appropriations of $1,382,003,000, which was $140,670,000 less than the Administration had requested. The biggest cut -- $96.8 million -- was in funds requested by the Maritime Administration for ship construction subsidies.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Herbert C. Bonner (D N.C.) -- Specify that funds for Maritime Administration payments to deactivate chartered merchant ships be limited to ships chartered "for limited emergency purposes during fiscal year 1957;" May 2. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) -- Cut appropriations for air subsidy payments from $15,000,000 to $7,245,504; May 2. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- May 2 -- Prince H. Preston (D Ga.) -- "There may be some reductions in this bill that will require bringing...a supplemental request.... We think it not good practice to appropriate funds that we realize cannot be used in the immediate future."

Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) -- Of the $15 million for air subsidies "$6 million is presently programmed for subsidy payment by the CAB to Pan American World Airlines as subsidy for its international operations.... Certainly America's hard-pressed taxpayers have a right to insist that CAB ask the prudent and proper questions before turning over the $6 million.... Is not Pan American big enough and has it not been subsidized long enough, so that we can take it off the taxpayers' back?"

Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) -- "...if you want to give Pan Am or some of these other people an opportunity to make money...take MATS (Military Air Transport Service) out of competition, give the airlines this business that the government is doing itself but which private business people should have. Then you will not need this subsidy...."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION --May 23 reported HR 10899 (S Rept 2039) after restoring $63,563,000 of the funds cut by the House. The Committee, like the House, did not allow funds for construction of three prototype merchant ships. It recommended appropriation of $17.4 million for airline subsidies, $108,880,000 for ship construction subsidies, and the full $124 million requested by the Administration for maritime operating subsidies.

Floor Action

The Senate May 31 passed HR 10899 by voice vote with amendments adding $750,000 to Census Bureau funds. As sent to conference, the bill appropriated $1,446,-316,000.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Grant $650,000 to the Census Bureau for a national housing survey; May 31. Voice vote.

Charles E. Potter (R Mich.) -- Provide $100,000 to the Census Bureau to continue publication of "County Business Patterns;" May 31. Voice.

DEBATE -- May 31 -- George A. Smathers (D Fla.) -- Most of "the increase over the amount in the House bill is to be found in the ship construction item."

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- The bill carries a total of $448.8 million in direct and indirect subsidies to airlines and shipping lines. "I think the CAB has made an honest effort...to reduce the amount of the subsidies.... They deserve much credit for what they have done."

Conference

A House-Senate conference committee reported HR 10899 June 12 (H Rept 2344). Largest change recommended in the report concerned shipbuilding subsidies, for which conferees allowed $82.7 million. The appropriation agreed to by the conferees included $2.3 million for the conversion of two Mariners for the American President Lines, $65 million for the ship replacement program, $10 million for acquisition of replaced ships, $4 million for research and development and $1.4 million for administrative and warehouse expenses.

HOUSE ACTION

The House June 14 agreed to the conference report by voice vote and sent the bill to the Senate.

DEBATE -- John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) -- "Although there has been a cut in ship construction money...there has been allowed new construction of six cargo ships for American Export Lines and Moore-McCormack Lines."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate June 14, by voice vote, agreed to the conference report and sent the bill to the President.

DEBATE -- Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Conferees agreed to appropriate the full $40 million requested by the Administration for establishment of the air-navigation facilities program of the CAA. They agreed to "split the difference" between amounts voted for subsidy payments to airlines and recommended appropriation of $16.2 million.

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- "I regret that the conference committee...did not find it possible to include funds for the improvement of construction statistics and the improvement of a number of important statistical series compiled by the Office of Business Economics..."

INDEPENDENT OFFICES FUNDS

HR 9739 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1847) March 2, 1956. Recommended appropriations: $6,005,157,260.

- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the House March 7. (For roll call on amendment, see p. 190) Appropriations voted: $6,010,543,290.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2041) May 24. Recommended: $5,916,997,258.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate June 6. Voted: $5,925,187,646.
- Conference report (H Rept 2396) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate June 20.

P.L. 623 -- Signed into law June 27. Final total: $5,966,517,826.

The Independent Offices appropriation bill for fiscal 1957 (HR 9739) authorized nearly $6 billion for the independent government agencies, of which $4.7 billion went to the Veterans Administration. The final amount was some $183 million more than the Administration had requested. It included $525 million for the civil service retirement and disability fund, $230 million more than the executive branch had asked. The House Appropriations Committee said the government was not contributing its share to the fund, to which federal employees pay in 6.5 percent of their salaries (the payment was raised from 6 percent in HR 7619 -- PL 854, enacted in the last days of the 1956 session).

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 9739, as it became law:

Civil Service Commission	$ 544,919,000
Disaster assistance	6,000,000
Federal Civil Defense Administration	93,560,000
Federal Communications Commission	7,828,000
Federal Power Commission	5,225,000
Federal Trade Commission	5,550,000
General Accounting Office	34,000,000
General Services Administration	214,296,700
Housing and Home Finance Agency	158,725,000
Interstate Commerce Commission	14,879,696
National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics	75,887,500
National Capital Housing Authority	38,000
National Science Foundation	40,000,000
National Security Training Commission	50,000
Renegotiation Board	3,675,000
Securities and Exchange Commission	5,749,000
Selective Service System	29,050,000
Veterans' Administration	4,727,084,930
TOTAL	$5,966,517,826

In addition the bill:

Rescinded $199,349,000 appropriated in prior years to the GSA for strategic materials and $1,960,945 previously appropriated for the HHFA's public facility loans.

BACKGROUND -- The President in initial and supplemental budget requests asked for $5,783,704,000 for the independent offices in fiscal 1957. Included in the request were: $315,216,000 for the Civil Service Commission; $123,200,000 for the Federal Civil Defense Administration; $221,624,000 for the General Services Administration; $177,325,000 for the Housing and Home Finance Agency; $4,719,495,000 for the Veterans' Administration.

Fiscal 1956 appropriations for the independent offices amounted to $5,898,031,000. (1955 Almanac, pp. 207,242. See also Second Supplemental Appropriation for 1956, this volume, p. 616)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- March 2 reported the Independent Offices appropriation bill for fiscal 1957 (HR 9739 -- H Rept 1847). Recommended funds totalled $6,005,157,260. The Committee recommended $600 million as the government payment to the civil service retirement and disability fund, for which the Administration had requested only $295 million. The Committee report noted that government contributions had been reduced while the executive branch considered whether to put the fund on an actuarial basis or pay the annual government cost and continue the deficit, estimated at $13.4 billion. The Committee said, "Regardless of what plan of financing is to be adopted, certainly the federal contribution this year should be increased substantially over the inadequate amount proposed in the budget...."

Floor Action

The House March 7 passed by voice vote the Independent Offices appropriation bill (HR 9739) making appropriations for fiscal 1957 of $6,010,543,290. This total, $226,839,290 more than the Administration requested, included $600,000,000 as a government payment to the civil service retirement and disability fund, $305,000,000 more than the Administration request.

The House rejected, by a roll-call vote of 151-231, an amendment to eliminate 11 supergrade positions in the General Services Administration. On March 6, the House by voice vote had agreed to the amendment. Accepted without opposition was an amendment to drop a provision to end compulsory retirement of Civil Service employees when they reached the age of 70. (For voting, see chart, p. 190)

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 9739 as approved by the House:

Civil Service Commission	$ 619,756,500
Disaster Assistance	5,386,030
Federal Civil Defense Administration	86,100,000
Federal Communications Commission	7,800,000
Federal Power Commission	5,200,000
Federal Trade Commission	5,400,000
General Accounting Office	34,000,000
General Services Administration	211,340,900
Housing and Home Finance Agency	152,700,000

Interstate Commerce Commission	$ 13,900,000
National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics	74,475,000
National Capital Housing Authority	37,000
National Science Foundation	35,915,000
Renegotiation Board	3,675,000
Securities and Exchange Commission	5,700,000
Selective Service System	28,442,000
Veterans' Administration	4,720,715,860
TOTAL	$6,010,543,290

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Herbert C. Bonner (D N.C.) -- Provide an additional $5,386,030 for assistance to states and local governments in major disasters; March 6. Voice vote.

Albert Thomas (D Texas) -- Strike out the language "that any requirement of law for compulsory retirement from the competitive civil service solely because of age shall not be effective." This would have made ineffective a provision of the Civil Service Retirement Act providing for mandatory retirement of Civil Service employees at age 70 with 15 years or more of service; March 7. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

John Dowdy (D Texas) -- Eliminate a provision adding 11 supergrade positions to the General Services Administration. Agreed to March 6, voice vote; rejected March 7, roll-call vote, 151-231.

Harris Ellsworth (R Ore.) -- Increase appropriations to the Interstate Commerce Commission by $100,000 and allot not less than $424,000 to carry out the activities of the Car Service Section of the Bureau of Safety and Service; March 6. Voice.

DEBATE -- March 6 -- Olin E. Teague (D Texas) said the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund "is delinquent" as far as U.S. contributions, "calculated at $13 billion. Federal employees are paying 6 percent of their wages into this fund, but the federal government is not matching their contributions on the basis required.... There should be appropriated into the fund about $850 million annually to represent the normal government cost.... In addition...some payments could and should be made on the $13 billion deficit of this fund."

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee should pass upon supergrade positions recommended by the Appropriations Committee. He said this group "was the proper Committee for the General Services Administration to go to for an increase in supergrades."

March 7 -- Edward H. Rees (R Kan.) -- The provision to eliminate the compulsory retirement age of 70 did not belong with the appropriation bill since it was a legislative matter and not concerned with funds.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 24 reported HR 9739 (S Rept 2041) recommending a total appropriation of $5,916,997,258, or $93,546,032 less than the House had voted March 7. The chief difference was a reduction in the recommended government contribution to the civil service retirement fund. The Senate figure was $440,438,000 compared with the House's $600,000,000.

Floor Action

The Senate June 6 passed HR 9739 by voice vote. Floor amendments added $8,190,388 to the sum recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 9739 as approved by the Senate:

Civil Service Commission	$ 460,519,500
Disaster Assistance	6,000,000
Federal Civil Defense Administration	123,200,000
Federal Communications Commission	7,828,000
Federal Power Commission	5,250,000
Federal Trade Commission	5,550,000
General Accounting Office	34,000,000
General Services Administration	217,728,650
Housing and Home Finance Agency	164,150,000
Interstate Commerce Commission	14,879,696
National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics	78,200,000
National Capital Housing Authority	39,000
National Science Foundation	41,300,000
National Security Training Commission	75,000
Renegotiation Board	3,675,000
Securities and Exchange Commission	5,749,000
Selective Service System	29,050,000
Veterans' Administration	4,727,993,800
TOTAL	$5,925,187,646

In addition, the bill:

Rescinded $199,349,000 appropriated in prior years to the GSA for strategic materials and $1,960,945 previously appropriated for the HHFA's public facility loans.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- Provide an additional $3.5 million for major alteration of VA hospitals in McKinney, Texas, and Nashville, Tenn.; June 6. Voice vote.

Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Grant an additional $187,088 for salaries and travel expenses for 22 additional ICC inspectors for the Bureau of Motor Carriers; June 6. Voice.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Amend Magnuson amendment (above) to add $82,500 for 10 additional car service agents to police the use of railroad boxcars; June 6. Voice.

George H. Bender (R Ohio) -- Specify that construction of a VA hospital at the Wade Park site, Cleveland, Ohio, include not less than 800 beds; June 6. Voice.

Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- Increase funds for GSA records management by $100,000; June 6. Voice.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Strike language from the bill that would prevent use of FTC funds for a statistical analysis of the consumer's dollar; June 6. Voice.

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Increase the number of Veterans' Administration public relations personnel from 15 to 22; June 6. Voice.

Magnuson -- Increase VA funds for medical administration by $4,320,800 and make available $10 million for medical research; June 6. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- The conference committee on HR 9739 filed its report (H Rept 2396) June 19, recommending appropriation of $5,966,517,826, an amount about mid-way between the House and Senate totals. In compromise on the government contribution to the civil service retirement and disability fund, $525 million was appropriated. Left in the bill was a provision, upheld by a roll-call vote of the House, for 11 new supergrade positions in the General Services Administration. The compromise bill included $40 million for the National Science Foundation, of which $9.5 million was earmarked for the supplementary training of high school science and mathematics teachers.

ACTION -- The House and Senate June 20, by voice votes, agreed to the conference report on HR 9739.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES' FUNDS

HR 9536 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1812) Feb. 27, 1956. Appropriations recommended: $14,849,275.

- Passed, unamended, by voice vote of the House March 1.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2042) May 24. Recommended: $14,969,975.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote June 6.
- Senate amendments concurred in by voice vote of the House June 7.

P.L. 578 -- Signed into law June 13. Final total: $14,969,975.

Funds for the Executive Office of the President and several small agencies were provided in the General Government Matters appropriation bill for fiscal 1957 (HR 9536). The appropriation was $44,500 less than the President's budget requests.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in the bill, as signed by the President, were:

Executive Office of the President
President's compensation	$ 150,000
White House office	1,875,000
Special projects	1,500,000

Subversive Activities Control Board	350,000
TOTAL	$14,969,975

LEGISLATIVE FUNDS

HR 11473 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 2212) May 25, 1956. Recommended appropriation: $88,976,450.

- Passed by the House, by voice vote, May 29.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2236) June 14. Recommended: $117,804,058.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, by voice vote June 18. Voted: $117,404,058.
- House agreed to Senate amendments, by voice vote, June 20.

P.L. 624 -- Signed into law June 27. Final appropriation: $117,404,058.

The Legislative Appropriation Act for fiscal 1957 provided funds that were $4,692,875 below budget estimates and $14,652,351 over fiscal 1956 legislative funds. Most of the increase was earmarked for continued construction of new Senate and House Office Buildings and for extension of the East Front of the Capitol building. The Senate added $28,427,608 to the amount allowed by the House, of which $28,404,315 was for Senate expenses on which the House took no action. Included in the increase were funds for 30 new Senate employees.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 11473 as it became law:

Senate	$ 21,226,615
House of Representatives	35,499,240
Capitol Police	111,895
Office of the Legislative Counsel	328,000
Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures	22,500
Education of Pages	50,000
Miscellaneous	2,086,000
Architect of the Capitol	34,998,200
Botanic Garden	253,600
Library of Congress	10,637,608
Government Printing Office	12,190,400
TOTAL	$117,404,058

The bill also made a deficiency appropriation of $400,000 for fiscal 1956, to be available immediately for the Government Printing Office.

In addition to appropriating funds, HR 11473:

Provided for the dissolution of the Joint Recording Facility (operated jointly by the Senate and House since 1947) and established a House Recording Studio to assist Members in making disk, film and tape recordings; established a revolving fund to finance the studio; provided for the operation of the studio by the Clerk of the House, supervised by a committee of three House Members to be appointed by the Speaker; prohibited employees of the studio from engaging in non-Congressional work of a similar nature unless approved by the supervisory committee.

INTERIOR APPROPRIATION

HR 9390 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1772) Feb. 17. Recommended appropriations: $415,963,200.

- Passed by voice vote of the House, without floor amendment, Feb. 21.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1761) April 17. Recommended: $433,851,400.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate, amended, April 23. Voted: $433,876,400.
- Conference Report (H Rept 2250) agreed to by voice votes of the House June 4 and Senate June 5.

P.L. 5/3 -- Signed into law June 13. Final total: $423,934,100.

The fiscal 1957 appropriations bill for the Interior Department and related agencies, including the Forest Service of the Agriculture Department, granted $11 million less than the President requested. But the National Park Service received $1.8 million more than the budget request for construction, and the Forest Service $4.2 million more than requested.

PROVISIONS -- Funds provided in the bill were:

INTERIOR

Office of the Secretary	$ 4,098,800
Bureau of Land Management	22,869,300
Bureau of Indian Affairs	87,050,000
Geological Survey	31,602,000
Bureau of Mines	22,197,050
National Park Service	68,020,000
Fish and Wildlife Service	18,802,100
Office of Territories	23,996,000
Administration	2,222,000
Subtotal	$280,857,250

RELATED AGENCIES

Commission of Fine Arts	$ 31,000
Federal Coal Mine Safety Board of Review	70,000
Forest Service, Department of Agriculture	100,960,750
Indian Claims Commission	124,600
Jamestown-Williamsburg-Yorktown Celebration Commission	115,000
National Capital Planning Commission	1,650,000
Smithsonian Institution	39,642,000
Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Commission	10,000
Woodrow Wilson Centennial Celebration Commission	48,500
Virgin Islands Corporation	425,000
Subtotal	$143,076,850
TOTAL	$423,934,100

BACKGROUND -- President Eisenhower requested $295,993,200 for the Interior Department and $139,149,100 for the related agencies -- a total of $435,142,300.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Feb. 17 reported HR 9390 (H Rept 1772), recommending $277,172,600 for the Interior Department and $138,790,600 for the other agencies.

The Committee recommended a $15 million appropriation for National Park Service construction, instead of the requested $13.5 million, pointing out that park visitors were increasing at a rate of 2 million persons a year. It reduced by $3.5 million the construction request of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and by $2 million the Bureau of Mines request for conservation and research. This cut included a $1 million reduction in the request for oil shale research. The Committee refused a $13.8 million request for a bridge across the Potomac river.

Floor Action

HR 9390 was passed by voice vote of the House Feb. 21 without amendment. Of the $415,963,200 total appropriation, $67,688,000 was for the National Park Service and $96,773,000 for the Agriculture Department's Forest Service.

DEBATE -- Feb. 21 -- E. Keith Thomson (R Wyo.) -- Asked for restoration of a $200,000 cut in requested funds for a Bureau of Mines research laboratory at Laramie, Wyo. He said the cut would "freeze all progress in future process development" in the study of shale oil refining.

Don Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Said the Committee felt it was time for private industry to continue the research on its own.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 17 reported HR 9390 (S Rept 1761), recommending amendments to provide $17,888,200 more than the House had voted, and $1,290,900 less than the President requested, for a total of $433,851,400.

Committee recommendations included these increases over House allowances: $3.8 million for Bureau of Indian Affairs construction; $2 million for Bureau of Mines conservation and development; and $9.6 million for the Forest Service.

Floor Action

The Senate April 23 passed HR 9390 by voice vote, with amendments bringing the total appropriation to $433,876,400. The Park Service was allotted $68,020,000 and the Forest Service $106,348,500.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Increase by $25,000 the National Park Service appropriation, to preserve archeological remains in the Dalles Dam area in Oregon; April 23. Voice vote.

Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) -- Allocate $240,000 of Bureau of Indian Affairs funds for construction of elementary schools for Pueblo Indians in Municipal School District No. 1, Sandoval County, N.M.; April 23. Voice.

Frank A. Barrett (R Wyo.) -- Make immediately available $1.5 million of National Park Service funds for improvements at Yellowstone National Park, Wyo.; April 23. Voice.

DEBATE -- April 23 -- Morse -- The Administration "performed a gross disservice" toward Congress by sending budget estimates "which do not reflect accurately what the budget and receipts picture will be." He cited the Forest Service budget as an example.

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- Said inclusion in HR 9390 of Forest Service appropriations "by no means" meant Congress was indicating "any approval to the eventual shifting of various of the executive agencies."

Conference

REPORT -- A House-Senate conference committee May 31 reported (H Rept 2250) a compromise version of HR 9390. The conferees disallowed $1 million for experimental oil shale mining work at Rifle, Colo., by the Bureau of Mines. In compromising Senate-House differences, the report allotted $44 million for national forest protection and management, $12 million for state and private forestry cooperation and $5 million for construction by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

ACTION -- As approved by the House June 4 and the Senate June 5, the final version of HR 9390 appropriated $280,857,250 for the Interior Department and $143,076,850 for the related agencies in fiscal 1957. The sum was $7,970,900 more than the original House version, $9,-942,300 less than the initial Senate grant, and $11,208,200 less than President Eisenhower requested.

D.C. APPROPRIATION

HR 10003 -- Reported by the House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1896) March 15. Recommended District of Columbia budget: $179,-797,800. Recommended federal payment and loan to the District: $33,058,650.

- Passed by the House by voice vote March 19.
- Reported with amendments by the Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2094) June 1. Recommended budget: $181,682,050. Recommended federal payment and loan to the District: $33,408,650.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 5. Budget voted: $181,687,490. Federal payment and loan voted: $33,408,650.
- Conference report (H Rept 2484) agreed to June 27 by the House and Senate by voice votes.

P.L. 637 -- Signed into law June 29. Final budget: $181,612,490. Final federal payment and loan: $33,258,650.

The District of Columbia Appropriation Act for fiscal 1957 carried a budget for the capital's operating expenses and capital outlay that was $1,287,010 less than budget recommendations. Federal payments were $200,000 more than budget requests, federal loans were the same as budget requests -- $10,700,000.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 10003:

Appropriated the following funds as the federal payment toward D.C. operating costs for fiscal 1957:

General fund	$20,000,000
Water fund	1,813,950
Sanitary sewage works funds	744,700
TOTAL	$22,558,650

Authorized the following federal loans to the District for capital outlay:

Highway fund	$ 5,400,000
Water fund	5,300,000
TOTAL	$10,700,000

Provided for the following total D.C. expenditures for fiscal 1957, to be financed out of D.C. revenues and the federal payments and loans listed above:

Operating expenses	$146,900,290
Capital outlay	34,712,200
TOTAL	$181,612,490

URGENT DEFICIENCY

HR 9063 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1742) Feb. 2, 1956. Recommended appropriation: $61,504,201.

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote Feb. 7. Appropriation voted: $64,670,201.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1476) Feb. 8. Recommended: $70,195,066.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote Feb. 10. Voted: $65,695,066.
- Senate amendments agreed to by the House Feb. 14, without objection.

P.L. 406 -- Signed into law Feb. 14.

The Urgent Deficiency Appropriation bill for fiscal 1956, the first money measure cleared by the second session of the 84th Congress, appropriated $65,695,066 in supplemental funds. President Eisenhower requested $64,505,201, mostly for flood control in the northeastern states and disaster relief.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, HR 9063 appropriated:

$25,000,000 for the President's disaster relief fund.

$750,000 for the Veterans' Administration disabled veterans' insurance fund.

$34,796,000 for the Department of the Army for flood control in the northeastern states, including $330,000 for review of flood control plans, $34,436,000 for planning and construction of projects and replacement of funds used for emergency assistance during the 1955 floods and $30,000 for general expenses.

$1,039,865 for the legislative branch, including $940,000 for Senate investigations and inquiries.

$4,109,201 for claims and judgments against the U.S.

$40,000 for regulating the District of Columbia election of delegates to national political conventions (to be paid out of the D.C. general fund, and therefore not included in the bill's appropriation total).

HR 9063 also authorized appropriation of additional funds for the extension of the central part of the Capitol building.

PUBLIC WORKS FUNDS

HR 11319 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee May 21, 1956 (H Rept 2181). Recommended appropriation: $787,453,000.

- Passed by the House May 22, by voice vote with amendments. (For roll-call vote, see p. 202) Appropriations voted: $790,758,000.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee June 8 (S Rept 2169). Recommended: $871,886,000.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate June 13 by voice vote. Voted: $872,186,000.
- Conference report (H Rept 2413) agreed to June 27 by voice votes of the House and Senate.

P.L. 641 -- Signed into law July 2. Final appropriation: $856,727,000.

The bill appropriated $856,727,000 for federal public works projects in fiscal 1957. The total was $65,969,000 more than the House had appropriated and $15,459,000 less than allotted by the Senate. The final appropriation exceeded budget requests by $38,226,000. The bill covered appropriations for the Tennessee Valley Authority, Bonneville Power Administration, Bureau of Reclamation, Southeastern and Southwestern Power Administrations and Department of the Army civil functions -- most of them carried out by the Army Engineers.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 11319 carried the following breakdown of funds:

Tennessee Valley Authority	$ 5,357,000
Department of the Interior
Southeastern Power Administration	1,378,000
Southwestern Power Administration	1,000,000
Bonneville Power Administration	26,100,000
Bureau of Reclamation	181,114,500
Civil Functions, Department of the Army
Quartermaster Corps	6,765,000
Corps of Engineers	635,012,500
TOTAL	$856,727,000

BACKGROUND -- Public Works appropriations for fiscal 1956 totalled $847,555,514. The Tennessee Valley Authority received $27,053,000; Department of Interior, $204,175,000; and Department of the Army, civil functions, $616,327, 514.

Appropriations for the Atomic Energy Commission, included in the fiscal 1956 public works appropriations, were not so included in 1957. (1955 Almanac, p. 227)

The Administration requested $818,501,000 for fiscal 1957 public works. The President requested $5,357,000 for TVA; $224,267,000 for the Department of Interior; and $588,877,000 for civil functions of the Department of the Army.

(For fiscal 1957 appropriations for the AEC, see "Second Supplemental, 1957," p. 639)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 21 reported HR 11319 (H Rept 2181), recommending total appropriations of $787,453,000. The Committee allotted TVA the smallest appropriation it had ever received -- $5,357,000 (the amount of the budget request) -- and said TVA should use its own revenues to construct added generating units. A minority report, disagreeing with this recommendation, was filed by four Republicans: Reps. Ben F. Jensen (Iowa), John Phillips (Calif.), John Taber (N.Y.) and Glenn R. Davis (Wis.). The same issue arose in consideration of the second fiscal 1956 supplemental appropriation. (See p. 616)

(The Committee May 18 released transcripts of testimony on HR 11319. According to May 2 testimony by Herbert D. Vogel, chairman of the TVA board, it would be "entirely impracticable" for TVA to operate solely through use of its own revenues. "The only way that could be accomplished," he said, "would be by increasing the rates so that the income might thereby be increased." Vogel also said a sizable jump in defense power needs could not be met with existing production capacity. He said TVA anticipated a "modest reserve" of about 300,000 kilowatts in power at the end of 1956.)

The Committee allotted the Bureau of Reclamation $164,767,000 -- a cut of $31,022,000 below the amount requested. It affected funds for construction and rehabilitation and the Upper Colorado River Basin fund.

Floor Action

The House May 22 passed HR 11319 by voice vote, with amendments. The total appropriation voted was $790,758,000 -- $27,743,000 less than President Eisenhower requested, but $3.3 million more than the Appropriations Committee had recommended.

The House rejected by voice vote a motion by Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.) to recommit the bill.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 11319 carried the following breakdown of funds:

Tennessee Valley Authority	$ 5,357,000
Department of the Interior
Southeastern Power Administration	1,378,000
Southwestern Power Administration	1,000,000
Bonneville Power Administration	26,100,000
Bureau of Reclamation	167,612,000
Civil Functions, Department of the Army
Quartermaster Corps	6,500,000
Corps of Engineers	582,811,000
TOTAL	$790,758,000

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- Add $160,000 for a resurvey of the Tennessee Tombigbee Waterway in northeastern Mississippi and northwestern Alabama; May 22. Standing vote, 106-87; teller vote, 123-92; roll-call vote, 179-170. (For voting, see chart, p. 202)

Hale Boggs (D La.) -- Add $300,000 planning funds for a proposed $88 million tidewater channel from New Orleans to the Gulf of Mexico; May 22. Standing vote, 174-148.

John J. Dempsey (D N.M.) -- Increase the payment to the Upper Colorado River Basin fund from $3,155,000 to $6 million; May 22. Voice vote.

Howard H. Baker (R Tenn.) -- Prevent use of funds to acquire or build an administration office for TVA; May 22. Standing, 79-58.

Hugh Q. Alexander (D N.C.) -- Bar use of any funds for planning or construction of the Wilkesboro, N.C., Reservoir; May 22. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) -- Provide $1 million to complete plans and the first year's construction for the Davenport Center Dam, N.Y.; May 22. Standing, 87-117; teller, 80-122.

Kenneth J. Gray (D Ill.) -- Add $75,000 for a study of the canalization of the Big Muddy River, Ill.; $50,000 for a flood control study of Cache River, Ill., and $25,000 for a flood control study in Harrisonville and Ivy Landing District No. 2, Monroe County, Ill.; May 22. Standing, 93-111; teller, 111-120.

Overton Brooks (D La.) -- Add $300,000 for engineering and planning of the Overton-Red River Waterway, La.; May 22. Voice.

Carl D. Perkins (D Ky.) -- Provide $1 million for construction of the Buckhorn Reservoir, Ky.; May 22. Standing, 84-116.

Myron V. George (R Kan.) -- Add $100,000 for additional planning of Strawn Reservoir, Kan.; May 22. Standing, 37-62.

William H. Avery (R Kan.) -- Provide that no funds be spent for construction of Tuttle Creek Reservoir, Kan.; May 22. Voice.

O.C. Fisher (D Texas) -- Provide $50,000 for general investigation of the Colorado River and tributaries in Texas; May 22. Standing, 54-86.

DEBATE -- May 22 -- Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.) -- Said HR 11319 was "a hodgepodge.... It was not a good, well-rounded proposal when it came to the Committee... it has grown worse."

Clarence Cannon (D Mo.) -- "In this bill, we have something for everybody....bills like this are increasing inflation."

Philip J. Philbin (D Mass.) -- From the standpoint of his state and area HR 11319 "represents the greatest step forward in federal flood-control legislation since the inception of this government."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 8 reported HR 11319 with amendments (S Rept 2169). The Committee increased by $59,625,000 the amount the House allotted the Corps of Engineers, largely for construction, and gave the Department of Interior's Bureau of Reclamation $21,238,000 more than the House had appropriated.

The Committee allotted TVA the same funds approved by the House. In its report the Committee said, however, it "believes it is unwise" for TVA to be permitted to add units at existing plants without specific Congressional approval of each job. At present, "Congress cannot authorize a new plant in this area without losing all control over its continuing expansion." the report said. The Committee urged "the appropriate legislative committee" to take action on the matter before another appropriation request was submitted.

Floor Action

The Senate June 13 passed HR 11319 by voice vote, with amendments. The Senate version carried total appropriations of $872,186,000, which was $81,428,000 more than appropriated by the House, but only $300,000 more than the Senate Appropriations Committee recommended.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate and sent to conference, HR 11319 carried the following breakdown of funds:

Tennessee Valley Authority	$ 5,357,000
Department of the Interior
Southeastern Power Administration	1,378,000
Southwestern Power Administration	1,000,000
Bonneville Power Administration	26,100,000
Bureau of Reclamation	188,850,000
Civil Functions, Department of the Army
Quartermaster Corps	6,765,000
Corps of Engineers	642,736,000
TOTAL	$872,186,000

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- Increase by $300,000 funds for Corps of Engineers, general construction; June 13. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- June 13 -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- A formula should be found, in river and harbor appropriations, to assess a portion of the cost against the localities and individuals benefited, according to ability to pay.

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- HR 11319 was "the most forward-looking step" which the Committee and Senate had every taken toward flood control and conservation. An even more aggressive program was necessary in the future, however.

Allen J. Ellender Sr. (D La.) -- It was "a great pity" that it took a calamity like a hurricane to awaken people in Connecticut and Massachusetts to the need for providing flood control funds.

Conference

A conference report (H Rept 2413) filed June 25 accepted Senate allotments on all but about 30 of some 300 individual projects. Conferees agreed to the Senate's $13 million figure for the Upper Colorado River Basin fund, instead of the House's $6 million. For Bureau of Reclamation construction and rehabilitation they agreed to $131,225,500, instead of $125,900,000 proposed by the House and $138,961,000 proposed by the Senate. Conferees agreed on $455,949,500 for construction by the Corps of Engineers, which was $7,723,500 below the Senate figure and $33,915,500 above the House allotment.

HOUSE ACTION

The House June 27 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- John Taber (R N.Y.) -- Protested the number of new projects because "we cannot go along continuing to pile up projects that are...to cost a tremendous amount of money and yet have the nation land right side up. The merits of some of these projects I know are quite questionable."

Edward P. Boland (D Mass.) -- Some navigation projects, "on some of the smaller tributaries," were "wasteful, uneconomical and serve no good purpose." The Senate bill "was loaded for compromise."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate June 27 agreed to the report by voice vote after a brief explanation of the bill.

BILL SIGNED

President Eisenhower signed HR 11319 into Public Law 641 July 2. In approving the measure, he said he was "concerned" over Congress' action in adding 52 Army Engineer projects which he had not recommended. He said these projects would cost the government $1.5 billion more than the federal budget called for and that this would have a "serious" effect on future government commitments. (For the President's veto of a bill -- HR 12080 -- authorizing $1.6 billion in new river, harbor and flood-control projects, see p. 574)

LABOR AND H.E.W. FUNDS

HR 9720 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1845) March 2. Recommended appropriations: $2,296,810,781.

- Passed, with an amendment, by voice vote of the House March 5. Appropriations voted: $2,296,981,781.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2093) June 1. Recommended: $2,372,023,281.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate June 5. Voted: $2,372,523,281.
- Conference report (H Rept 2414) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate June 27.

P.L. 635 -- Signed into law June 29. Final total: $2,366,380,781.

The fiscal 1957 appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health, Education and Welfare, and related agencies included a record-breaking $184 million allotment to the Public Health Service's National Institutes of Health -- $171 million for medical research, the remainder for operating expenses and construction of surgical facilities.

The House voted $135.5 million for NIH, which was $9 million more than the President requested; the Senate voted an appropriation of $184.4 million. The final NIH appropriation was nearly $58 million more than the President requested.

PROVISIONS -- Funds provided in HR 9720:

LABOR

Office of the Secretary	$ 1,751,000
Office of the Solicitor	2,021,000
Bureau of Labor Standards	911,500

National Mediation Board	1,212,000
Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service	3,305,000
Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin	5,000
Subtotal	$ 13,473,500
TOTAL	$2,366,380,781

The bill also:

Authorized $7 million for the Railroad Retirement Board and $6,564,000 for the United States Soldiers' Home.

Authorized spending of $97 million from the federal Old-Age and Survivors trust fund for administrative expenses.

Authorized $1,025,000 for HEW reimbursement to other agencies for school construction assistance.

Included these grants for health research:

National Cancer Institute	$48,432,000
Mental health activities	35,197,000
National Heart Institute	33,396,000
Dental health activities	6,026,000
Arthritis and metabolic disease activities	15,885,000
Microbiology activities	13,299,000
Neurology and blindness activities	18,650,000

Background

President Eisenhower requested $2,363,885,400 for the regular fiscal 1957 appropriation, including $421,321,000 for the Department of Labor, $1,925,988,400 for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and $16,576,000 for related agencies.

The President later requested supplemental funds of $211,530,000 for the Departments and these requests were considered in the first and second fiscal 1957 Supplemental Appropriations (HR 12138 -- PL 814 and HR 12350 -- PL 855). (See p. 637 and 639)

On Dec. 20, 1955, Secretary Marion B. Folsom of Health, Education, and Welfare said his department would seek 25 to 30 percent hikes in Public Health Service research appropriations for fiscal 1957. The fiscal 1956 appropriation for health research was $97.6 million, which was $7 million more than was requested.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- March 2 reported HR 9720 (H Rept 1845), recommending a $2,296,810,781 total. The Committee cut the President's requests for the Labor Department by $40.7 million and Health, Education and Welfare $22.8 million. The Committee recommended an increase of $9 million over the President's request for the National Institutes of Health.

Floor Action

HR 9720 was passed by the House by voice vote, with one amendment, March 5.

PROVISIONS -- Funds provided in HR 9720, as approved by the House:

Department of Labor	$ 380,348,500
Department of HEW	1,903,184,781
Related agencies	13,448,500
TOTAL	$2,296,981,781

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Antonio M. Fernandez (D N.M.) -- Provide an additional $171,000 for salaries and expenses of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service; March 5. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- Increase funds for the Office of the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare by $140,000 for initiation of a program to solve problems of the aged; March 5. Standing vote, 9-54.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 1 reported HR 9720 (S Rept 2093), recommending appropriation of $2,372,023,281. Included was an increase of $48.9 million over the amount voted by the House for the National Institutes of Health.

Floor Action

HR 9720 was passed by the Senate by voice vote, with two amendments, on June 5.

PROVISIONS -- Funds provided in HR 9720, as approved by the Senate:

Department of Labor	$ 380,963,000
Department of HEW	1,977,841,781
Related agencies	13,718,500
TOTAL	$2,372,523,281

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- Increase funds for salaries and expenses of the Office of Education from $4.5 million to $5 million; June 5. Voice vote.

Charles E. Potter (R Mich.) -- Increase by $100,000 -- to $1.1 million -- the authorization for school construction assistance to pay for technical services of the Housing and Home Finance Agency in federally impacted areas; June 5. Voice.

DEBATE -- June 5 -- Thye -- His amendment would provide money for research into the growing shortage of students and teachers in basic science fields.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "We should be spending much more" on cancer, heart and mental disease research. "The reason why we are not spending much more ...is that we do not have the personnel which would justify the larger appropriations."

Conference

A House-Senate conference committee June 25 filed a report (H Rept 2414) on HR 9720.

In compromising the House-Senate differences the conferees: allotted $125 million for hospital construction grants instead of the $111 million voted by the House and the $130 million allotted by the Senate; and allotted $41.1 million for HEW's Office of Vocational Rehabilitation instead of $38.9 million voted by the House and the Senate grant of $41.2 million.

The conferees failed to reach a compromise between the $135.5 million grant for the National Health Institutes voted by the House and the $184 million allotted by the Senate.

HOUSE ACTION

The House June 27 adopted the conference report by voice vote and agreed to a number of Senate amendments reported in dispute. Eight of these added $49 million to the National Institutes of Health, for a total of $184 million.

DEBATE -- John E. Fogarty (D R.I.), Gordon Canfield (R N.J.), Charles A. Wolverton (R N.J.), George S. Long (D La.), Ben F. Jensen (R Iowa) -- Supported the increase in medical research funds.

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- The Appropriations Committee's acceptance, "with the greatest of ease," of a 37 percent increase for the Health Institutes was "an admission that it either was wrong in the first instance or is easily influenced by others."

Clarence Cannon (D Mo.) -- "We are dealing with the most adroit and most effective lobby I have ever seen" -- "25,000 lobbying telegrams" asking support of the Senate amendments for increased NIH funds. "In a superheated, hysterically pressured atmosphere like this, nobody is going to vote against home and mother and free beer -- nobody is going to vote in favor of cancer and heart disease."

Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) listed as organizations supporting additional funds for NIH: the American Dental Assn., the New York State Society for Mental Health, the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, National Mental Health Committee, Eastman Dental Dispensary, Brooklyn Assn. for Mental Health, Assn. for the Help for Retarded Children, Rochester School of Medical Dentistry, the Farmers Union and the National Health Education Committee.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate June 27 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Lister Hill (D Ala.) -- Despite some doubts about the necessity for increased NIH appropriations, the Committee was assured by "eminent doctors and scientists" that the funds could be "prudently and wisely spent."

FIRST SUPPLEMENTAL, 1957

HR 12138 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 2638) July 7, 1956. Recommended appropriation: $1,555,535,425.

- Passed by the House by voice vote, with amendments, July 12. (For roll-call votes, see p. 218) Appropriation voted: $1,555,589,275.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2580) July 14. Recommended: $1,722,089,325.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, by voice vote July 16. Voted: $1,724,639,675.
- Conference report (H Rept 2864) agreed to by the House July 23 and the Senate July 25, by voice votes.

P.L. 814 -- Signed into law July 27. Final appropriation: $1,691,341,875.

Congress completed action July 25 on a supplemental appropriations bill for fiscal 1957 (HR 12138) carrying new funds of $1,691,341,875 for a wide variety of activities. New funds for military construction totalled almost $1.4 billion, of which the Air Force received $1,228,000,000. Included in the bill were funds for construction in the Washington area: $49 million for a new Central Intelligence Agency building, $44.9 million for enlarging the State Department building and $14.3 million for a new bridge to span the Potomac at Jones Point between Virginia and Maryland. State Department funds included $5.9 million for the President's program of participation in international trade fairs and cultural and athletic exchanges.

Two roll-call votes on the bill were recorded in the House. By a 25-369 roll call July 12, the House rejected a motion to recommit the bill with instructions to strike out funds for the Jones Point Bridge. Earlier, the House on a 362-30 roll call adopted a resolution waiving points of order against provisions of the bill. (For voting, see chart p. 218)

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 12138, as it became law:

Agriculture Department	$ 32,250,000
Bureau of the Budget	385,000
Commerce Department and related agencies	17,702,429
Central Intelligence Agency	49,000,000
Defense Department
Army	88,000,000
Navy	165,000,000
Air Force	1,246,500,000
Interservice	5,450,000
Foreign operations (Army occupation costs)	2,350,000
Health, Education, Welfare Dept.	$ 3,689,500
Independent offices
Commission on Government Security	632,500
General Services Administration	21,785,000
Public Housing Administration	450,000
National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics	789,000
District of Columbia Auditorium Commission	150,000
Interior Department	325,000
State Department	46,504,200
President's International Cultural Exchange, Trade Fair Program	5,900,000
Treasury Department	1,435,850
Legislative branch	360,000
Claims and judgments	2,683,396
TOTAL	$1,691,341,875

In addition, the bill:

Authorized transfers from military stock funds to military construction programs that totaled $437 million: $202 million for the Army from its stock fund and, for the Navy, $200 million from its stock fund and $35 million from the Marine Corps'

Required that any funds appropriated for Reserve facilities under the bill "or any other Act" be used "for the sole purpose for which they were appropriated."

Included funds for acquiring or building 84,218 family housing units for military personnel.

Permitted up to $5 million of military construction funds to be used to acquire Wherry military housing projects.

BACKGROUND -- President Eisenhower May 15 sent Congress a supplemental appropriations request of $187,064,134 for fiscal 1957. Most of it was earmarked for construction of federal buildings in the Washington area. Included were $49 million for a new Central Intelligence Agency headquarters and $55.6 million to expand the existing main State Department building. The President May 10 requested a supplemental appropriation of $405,000 for fiscal 1957 to permit the Bureau of the Budget to carry out the recommendations of the Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch on government budget and accounting practices.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- July 7 reported HR 12138 (H Rept 2638), recommending $1,555,535,425 in supplemental appropriations for fiscal 1957. The amount was some $333 million more than budget estimates, mostly due to the fact that the Committee favored direct appropriations of $357 million for Air Force construction rather than transfer of that amount from the Army stock fund as proposed by the Administration. The same amount previously appropriated to the Army Fund was rescinded, as were other funds, so the increase was "more than offset", the Committee said.

The Appropriations group was sharply critical of Administration procedure in clearing and funding military construction projects. They recommended lump sum apportionment of funds to each service rather than detailed justification of individual items, and said reserved funds should be limited to those needed in a given fiscal year. The Committee set out in detail approved construction projects, itemizing amounts to be spent for each.

Floor Action

The House July 12 passed HR 12138 by voice vote, appropriating $1,555,589,275 in supplemental funds for various government agencies in fiscal 1957. The largest item in the bill -- $1.4 billion for military construction -- was earmarked mostly for the Air Force and included $400 million for overseas air bases.

A motion to recommit the bill with instructions to strike out funds for the Jones Point Bridge across the Potomac River between Maryland and Virginia was rejected on a roll-call vote of 25-369. Earlier, the House adopted on a 362-30 roll call a resolution (H Res 584) waiving points of order against provisions of the bill. (For voting, see chart p. 218)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Overton Brooks (D La.) -- Specify that funds appropriated for the Air Force Reserve could not be used for any other purposes; July 12. Voice vote.

Robert E. Jones (D Ala.) -- Appropriate $50,000 for the proposed President's Advisory Commission on Presidential Office Space; July 12. Voice.

Robert L.F. Sikes (D Fla.) -- Appropriate $3,500 to provide a medal for each surviving Civil War veteran; July 12. Voice.

Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.) -- Appropriate $350 for a gold medal to Gustaf E. Lambert for his yellow fever investigations in Cuba; July 12. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Delete appropriation of $14.3 million for construction of the Jones Point Bridge; July 12. Standing, 36-65.

Paul F. Schenck (R Ohio) -- Prohibit use of funds in bill for construction of a building at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., for headquarters of the Air Research and Development Command; July 12. Standing, 38-45.

John Taber (R N.Y.) -- Specify that Section 309 of the bill shall not deprive the Defense Department, Comptroller or Budget Bureau of any authority which they now have; July 12. Standing, 36-56.

Gross -- Delete $150,000 appropriation for planning a D.C. auditorium; July 12. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- July 14 reported HR 12138 (S Rept 2580) with amendments. The Committee recommended a total of $1,722,089,325, a net increase of $166,500,050 over the House allowance and $363,229,500 more than recommended by the Administration. Most of the latter increase was due to a bookkeeping transaction in which unspent funds from previous years -- that the Administration wanted to spend in fiscal 1957 -- were returned to the Treasury and an equal amount of new money was appropriated.

In approving $7.1 million for the President's special international program of trade fairs and athletic and artistic presentations abroad, the Committee said it "disapproves the use of funds for jazz bands, ballet and dance groups...and strongly urges that greater emphasis be placed in sponsoring choral groups and...sports projects." Funds for trade fair participation included "approximately $1.2 million for fairs behind the Iron Curtain," the report said. The Committee concurred in House action denying a budget request for a supplemental $3 million federal payment to the District of Columbia.

Floor Action

The Senate July 16 passed the bill by voice vote and sent it to conference, voting $1,724,639,675 in supplemental funds for fiscal 1957. Committee and floor amendments were added by voice votes.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- Appropriate $2.5 million for the Department of Agriculture for the Mediterranean fruit fly eradication program in Florida; July 16. Voice vote.

Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- Appropriate $50,000 to be used to install an elevator in a government building at Anderson, S.C.; July 16. Voice.

DEBATE -- July 16 -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- "The Administration claims credit for economy when it presents its budget at the first of the year. But thereafter, when no one is looking, the Administration slips in the supplemental appropriations bills.... So, the initial figures the public receives do not bear a very accurate relationship to what finally happens...." This is not the "great business reform" promised in the 1952 campaign.

Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- "The Bureau of the Budget makes its recommendation six months in advance of the time when we deliberate on these appropriations. Thereafter...new factors and new questions become involved; and therefore it is necessary to have the supplemental" bills.

Johnston -- Explained that because the Anderson, S.C. building had no elevator, "judges have refused to hold court in the building for several sessions, due to the fact that, as they are old, they cannot walk up and down the steep steps" in the 2½ story building.

Conference

REPORT -- The conferees July 21 filed their report (H Rept 2864) on HR 12138. The final appropriation was $1,691,341,875.

The conferees approved for Air Force construction, the lower House figure of $1,228,000,000 instead of the Senate's $1,238,000,000. A Senate provision restricting use of military construction funds to "authorized programs...approved by Congress" was stricken. In its place the conferees framed language restricting funds appropriated for Reserve facilities to use "for the sole purpose for which they were appropriated." The House list of approved construction projects was augmented by most of those suggested by the Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2580), but the conferees questioned proposed Air Force bases at Dublin, Ga., Hobbs, N.M. and Mitchell, S.D.

In recommending $5,900,000 for participation in the international trade fair program, the conferees said emphasis should be placed on fairs, and that artistic and sporting events were "of value" but should be "carefully scrutinized."

ACTION -- The House July 23, and the Senate July 25, by voice votes, accepted the conference report.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL, 1957

HR 12350 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 2849) July 20, 1956. Recommended appropriations: $2,341,895,000.

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote July 24. Appropriations voted: $1,941,895,000.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 2770) July 24. Recommended: $2,311,391,438.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote July 25. (For roll-call vote, see p. 183) Voted: $2,316,142,438.
- First conference report (H Rept 2941) rejected by the Senate July 26, by voice vote.
- Second conference report (H Rept 2950) agreed to by voice votes in the House and Senate July 27.

P.L. 855 -- Signed into law July 31. Final total: $2,257,729,438.

The Second Supplemental Appropriations Act for fiscal 1957, covering funds for the emergency needs of a dozen federal agencies, allotted the bulk of the money to the Atomic Energy Commission, which received $1,898,700,000. Because budget requests for the agency were delayed, AEC had received no funds in the regular appropriation bills for fiscal 1957.

The final appropriations granted in HR 12350 were $107,823,600 less than the President requested.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 12350, as it became law:

Atomic Energy Commission
Operating expenses	$1,740,400,000
Plant acquisition and construction	158,300,000
Interior Department
Southeastern Power Admin.	500,000

In addition, the bill permitted the AEC to use unexpended balances of previous years' appropriations for operating expenses.

BACKGROUND -- The House Appropriations Committee received budget requests of $1,912,095,000 for the Atomic Energy Commission and Department of the Interior. The Senate Appropriations Committee considered supplemental requests totaling $2,365,553,038.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- June 13 - July 3.

ACTION -- July 20 reported HR 12350 (H Rept 2849), recommending $2,341,895,000, including $2,338,700,000 for the AEC and $3,195,000 for the Interior Department. Included was $440 million to speed up, on a "crash" basis, the civilian atomic power program, which the Administration had not requested.

The report sharply criticized the AEC and its chairman, Lewis L. Strauss, for "misleading" the public on the progress toward a civilian atomic program and for becoming "immersed in partisan politics as evidenced by unyielding insistence that the federal government should not go vigorously forward with the construction of these needed atomic power plants."

A minority report signed by 15 GOP members of the Committee said the proposed "crash" program would "open the door for federal domination and control of atomic power" and lead toward "complete socialization of the electric utility industry."

Floor Action

The House July 24 passed HR 12350 by voice vote. Following House rejection July 24 of a Democratic-sponsored bill (HR 12061) to accelerate the civilian atomic power program (see p. 542), provision of $400 million for the projected program was stricken from the supplemental bill.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 12350, as sent to the Senate:

Atomic Energy Commission
Operating expenses	$1,780,400,000
Plant acquisition and construction	158,300,000

Interior Department
Office of the Secretary	$ 500,000
Bonneville Power Admin.	195,000
Bureau of Reclamation	2,500,000
TOTAL	$1,941,895,000

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- In July on fiscal 1957 supplemental appropriations.

ACTION -- July 24 reported HR 12350 (S Rept 2770), recommending $2,311,391,438, which was $54 million less than budget requests. The Committee disallowed a $34,700,000 request for a new airport near Washington, D.C. but recommended that a subcommittee report on the proposed site by Jan. 15, 1957. Of $91,670,000 requested for strategic mineral purchases over a 2½ year period, the Committee recommended $35 million to carry the program through January, 1957. A request of $1.1 million for the President's Committee on Education Beyond the High School and for grants to similar state committees was rejected in its entirety.

The Committee granted the entire $54,075,000 requested for a speedup in procurement of air-traffic control and navigation equipment, plus facilities for control of airspace above 15,000 feet. It allowed $22 million for Maritime Administration construction of a nuclear-powered merchant ship and said the AEC had $21 million in funds carried over from fiscal 1956 for the project.

Floor Action

The Senate July 25 passed HR 12350 by voice vote, with amendments that brought the total appropriation to $2,316,142,438, after deletion of $40 million for the rejected atomic power program. An amendment to provide funds for work on a Burke, Va. airport near Washington, D.C., was rejected by a 32-56 roll-call vote after the four Senators from Maryland and Virginia said Baltimore's Friendship airport should be used by Washington traffic. (For voting, see chart p. 183)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate and sent to conference, HR 12350 appropriated:

Atomic Energy Commission
Operating expenses	$1,740,400,000

In addition, the bill:

Permitted the AEC to use unexpended balances of previous years' appropriations for operating expenses.

Authorized use of $3.5 million in foreign currencies in the informational media guaranty program for educational, scientific and cultural purposes.

DEBATE -- There was no opposition to the bill, but various Senators explained their amendments.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- Appropriate $6 million for construction of three Coast Guard vessels; July 25. Voice vote.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Provide $50,000 for the President's Advisory Commission on Presidential Office Space; July 25. Voice.

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- Provide $34,050,000 for federal payments to school districts in impacted areas; July 25. Voice.

Bridges -- Grant $300,000 for the President's Committee on Education Beyond the High School; July 25. Voice.

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- Delete $40 million from AEC's operating expenses; July 25. Voice.

Anderson -- Reinsert language permitting AEC to use unexpended balances of previous years' appropriations, spend $100,000 for confidential objects, transfer sums to other agencies for work performed, set limits on fees paid contractors; July 25. Voice.

Anderson -- Reinsert language for merging and transferring certain AEC funds; bar fellowship funds to disloyal persons and set penalties for disloyal persons who accept AEC employment or fellowships; July 25. Voice.

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- Appropriate $50,000 for the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation; July 25. Voice.

HEALTH AMENDMENTS

Lister Hill (D Ala.) -- Provide $1 million to the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation for grants to the states for training practical nurses, provided the states pay $1 for each $2 from the government; July 25. Voice.

Hill -- Grant $200,000 to the National Institutes of Health to administer the Health Research Facilities Act (S 849), instead of transferring funds from regular appropriations; July 25. Voice.

Hill -- Grant $1,371,000 for NIH facilities for housing animals and $300,000 for plans for an NIH general office building, instead of transferring funds for those purposes; July. Voice.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Increase Public Health Service sum for water pollution to $4,550,000 in order to raise research funds by $450,000; July 25. Voice.

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Authorize use of $3.5 million in foreign currencies in the informational media guaranty program for educational, scientific and cultural purposes in Israel; July 25. Voice.

Dirksen -- Grant $225,000 for the Booker T. Washington Centennial Commission; July 25. Voice.

George H. Bender (R Ohio) -- Increase to $100,000 from $10,000 the State Department's appropriation for the Pan American Games in Cleveland in 1959; July 25. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- Appropriate $12,943,750 for an airport at Burke, Va., near Washington, D.C.; July 25. Roll call, 32-56.

Conference

FIRST REPORT -- Senate-House conferees July 26 filed a conference report (H Rept 2941) in which the Senate's $35 million appropriation for purchase of strategic minerals was eliminated. Conferees also deleted a Senate appropriation of $6 million for construction of three Coast Guard vessels for patrolling the Gulf of Mexico.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 26 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Clarence Cannon (D Mo.) -- The report, though recommending more than the House voted, was "probably as good as we could get."

Gordon Canfield (R N.J.) -- Endorsed provision of funds for additional narcotics agents.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 26 rejected the conference report and asked for a second conference. The report was recommitted by voice vote after western Senators objected to elimination of the strategic minerals purchase appropriation.

SECOND REPORT -- Following the Senate's recommittal, Senate-House conferees July 27 filed a second report (H Rept 2950) in which they agreed on a $21 million appropriation for the strategic mineral program. They sustained the deletion of the $6 million appropriation for Coast Guard patrol boats, said the Coast Guard would be directed to increase its vigilance through maintaining two boats in the Gulf of Mexico as long as needed.

The final version of HR 12350 appropriated $35 million for establishment of CAA air navigation facilities, instead of the Senate's $54,075,000. Conferees eliminated the $350,000 voted by the Senate for education grants for the mentally retarded but accepted other Senate grants for health programs.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 27 agreed by voice vote to the conference report.

DEBATE -- Cannon -- All the "turmoil and repudiation of a complete agreement...was occasioned by two minor items," minerals and patrol boats. The "real bug under the rug was a proposition to send gunboats down to start a war with Mexican fishermen."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 27 agreed to the second conference report, clearing the bill for the White House.

FOREIGN AID STUDIES

Reviews of foreign aid policy and programs by committees of both the Senate and House were authorized before adjournment of the 1956 session. The Senate study, conducted by a special committee, was to be completed Jan. 31, 1957; the House review by the Foreign Affairs Committee, by Feb. 1.

The White House announced Sept. 5 that a private citizens group, headed by retired steel executive Benjamin F. Fairless, would also make a study of foreign aid, with the results to be in by March 1.

By authorizing their independent studies, the House and Senate disregarded Administration views that the executive branch should share in any study made, or, failing that, Congress should limit its survey to operations and methods while an executive group studied policy.

Even before completion of debate on the mutual security authorization and appropriation bills (see p. 418) the need for a comprehensive review had been widely discussed and accepted in both houses. At issue, however, was the question of who should make the study.

GEORGE PROPOSAL

Chairman Walter F. George (D Ga.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee April 12 circulated in the Committee a proposal for a Congressional study using the services of private research groups.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles April 14 said George's proposal "actually parallels thinking that has been going on within the Administration...." He said he thought a "comprehensive study" of foreign aid would be "useful."

President Eisenhower at his May 4 press conference disclosed that the Administration was "studying ways and means of establishing a commission to look into this long-range plan...." At an April 30 meeting with legislative leaders the President was reported to have suggested the formation of a citizens' committee to make the study. Members would be appointed by the Administration and approved by the Senate.

Senate Study

In two decisive actions the Senate rejected the Administration's claim for a share in the projected study.

The Senate June 29 rejected, by a 41-45 party-line vote, an amendment by Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) to the foreign aid authorization bill establishing a Hoover-type commission (half public officials, half private citizens) to make the study. (For voting, see chart p. 174) Knowland read a letter from Secretary Dulles endorsing a mixed commission in preference to a Congressional inquiry.

On July 11 the Senate adopted by voice vote an amended resolution (S Res 285), sponsored by Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), calling for "exhaustive studies" of foreign aid by a special Senate committee. The Foreign Relations Committee, in reporting (S Rept 2278) the resolution June 20, proposed studies by the Committee itself. It explained that it rejected an alternative proposal for a Hoover-type commission (S 4035, sponsored by Knowland) because it "believed that a thoroughgoing legislative study of foreign aid, independent of the executive branch, is necessary for an accurate evaluation of foreign aid at this time."

A proposal (S Con Res 82) by Edward Martin (R Pa.) for a joint Senate-House committee to make the study was also turned down by the Committee as involving "excessive delay."

PROVISIONS -- S Res 285, as approved by the Senate:

Created a special Senate committee composed of the members of the Foreign Relations Committee and the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Appropriations and Armed Services Committees to make "exhaustive studies" of foreign aid and its relation to the national interest.

Directed the committee to study, among other things: the proper objectives of aid programs and the measures of their success; U.S. capability to extend aid; foreign countries' need and capacity to make effective use of it; related actions to make aid effective.

Instructed the committee to report, with findings and recommendations, by Jan. 31, 1957.

Directed the committee to make full use of the help of private persons and organizations, and empowered it to use subpenas to secure information.

Authorized $300,000 for the study.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- Create a special committee to include, in addition to members of the Foreign Relations Committee, the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Appropriations and Armed Services Committees and give the proposed committee subpena powers; July 11. Voice vote.

MEMBERS APPOINTED

Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) July 26 named an executive committee of the special committee to carry on the foreign aid study during Congress' recess. Included were: Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.), chairman; Richard B. Russell (D Ga.); J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.); Styles Bridges (R N.H.); H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.); and William F. Knowland (R Calif.).

The full special committee membership included the 15 members of the Foreign Relations Committee, Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) and Bridges of the Appropriations Committee, and Russell and Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) of the Armed Services Committee.

Other Studies

The House Foreign Affairs Committee June 21 announced it would "examine and re-appraise, under the direction of the Chairman, the objectives, methods and results of the foreign policies and programs of the United States involved in the Mutual Security Act...." The Committee action did not require House approval as no special funds were sought for the study.

On Sept. 24 the executive branch study group headed by Benjamin F. Fairless met with President Eisenhower, announced it would make a preliminary report by Dec. 1, a final report with recommendations by March 1, 1957.

The seven-member committee, called the President's Citizen Advisers on the Mutual Security Program, included, besides Fairless: John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers' president; Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, former head of the Central Intelligence Agency; Whitelaw Reid, board chairman of the New York Herald Tribune; Colgate W. Darden Jr., University of Virginia president; Richard R. Deupree, board chairman of Proctor and Gamble; and Jesse W. Tapp, board chairman of the Bank of America.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty Sept. 5 said the committee's job would be "to review the United States programs and to recommend as to future government policy in regard to military, economic, technical and other programs."

1956 Reports

The President's ninth semi-annual report on the Mutual Security Program was filed May 6. Covering operations from July 1 - Dec. 31, 1955, the report noted "two conspicuous changes" during the six months: "efficient transfer" of administrative responsibility to the International Cooperation Administration from its predecessor, Foreign Operations Administration, and "sharply increased activity" by Russia in barter trade and aid to non-Communist countries.

Two reports on the technical assistance programs also were filed during the 1956 session.

One (S Rept 1956), filed May 7 by the Technical Assistance Subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and based on 18 months' study, unanimously recommended that the technical cooperation program be continued at the existing level. The Subcommittee said a shortage of qualified technical personnel limited the program. It recommended that projects be "more carefully planned" and the role of private agencies in the program be studied. Increased contributions to the United Nations technical assistance program "might be justified," the Subcommittee said, but the U.S. proportionate share of the program should not be increased.

A report (H Rept 1985) filed March 29 by the House Government Operations' International Operations Subcommittee criticized the U.S. technical assistance program in Latin America as lacking "clearly defined objectives." The Subcommittee commented unfavorably on administration of the program and said some projects had "assumed characteristics of economic aid." Criticized also were the methods of presenting to Congress budget requests and facts about host countries' contributions to the program.

1956 PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATIONS

The top-ranking Presidential nomination in 1956 was that of Frederick Andrew Seaton as Secretary of the Interior on May 28. The Senate confirmed his nomination June 6. Seaton, an ex-Sen. (R Neb., 1952) and a White House Assistant before his appointment, succeeded Douglas McKay, who resigned to run for the Senate in Oregon.

The President Sept. 29 named William Joseph Brennan Jr. as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, to succeed Justice Sherman Minton, who retired, effective Oct. 15. Brennan, a Democrat and until his appointment an Associate Justice of the New Jersey Supreme Court, would serve under a recess appointment pending Senate confirmation in 1957. Brennan, the 114th Supreme Court appointee, was President Eisenhower's third appointment to the high Court. The others were Chief Justice Earl Warren and Associate Justice John Marshall Harlan, both Republicans. (For list of the 114 names, see p. 644)

Donald A. Quarles, who received a recess appointment in August, 1955 as Secretary of the Air Force, was confirmed by the Senate Feb. 17. He succeeded Harold E. Talbott, who resigned during a Senate investigation of his outside business interests. (1955 Almanac, p. 665)

Russell C. Harrington was confirmed by the Senate Jan. 16 as Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Harrington received a recess appointment following the resignation of Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews in October, 1955. Andrews in 1956 assumed the leadership of the Independent States Rights Movement and became the party's Presidential candidate. In a reversal of his role as Internal Revenue Commissioner, Andrews became a champion of "drastic tax reform" to reduce the income tax levy.

The President Oct. 12 named Bertram D. Tallamy as administrator of the new federal highway construction program, effective upon confirmation by the Senate in 1957. Tallamy was chairman of the New York State Thruway Commission.

GRAND TOTAL, 83rd and 84th Congresses -- 153,631 nominations.*

Several of the President's nominations met with opposition. Solicitor General Simon E. Sobeloff of Baltimore, nominated to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals in 1955, was not confirmed until after several months of hearings in 1956. (1955 Almanac, p. 665) Opposition came from Southerners who questioned Sobeloff's fitness because of his 1955 role in Supreme Court hearings on implementing the school integration decision. The Senate confirmed his appointment July 16, by a 64-19 roll-call vote. (See story, p. 649)

The recess appointment in 1955 of Charles J. Lowen Jr. as administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Administration led to his involvement in hearings covering the resignation of his predecessor, Frederick B. Lee, and the entire CAA setup. Lowen was confirmed by the Senate June 6 but died Sept. 5.

The Senate failed to act on the 1955 recess appointment of Wesley A. D'Ewart as Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Public Land Management, and he resigned the post July 31. His appointment was opposed by Chairman James E. Murray (D Mont.) of the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, which held hearings on the nomination. Murray, who defeated D'Ewart, a Republican, in a 1954 Senate race, said the GOP had linked him with "red fronts" during the Montana campaign. D'Ewart was an ex-Congressman (R Mont., 1945-55).

The Senate disputed President Eisenhower's renomination of two Tariff Commission members -- William E. Dowling and James Weldon Jones -- and his request that they switch terms. The nominations were finally confirmed, by a 92-0 roll-call vote on March 12. (See story, p. 650)

Strong controversy was generated when President Eisenhower July 13 named Paul G. Hoffman as a U.S. representative to the eleventh session of the United Nations General Assembly. Hoffman, board chairman of Studebaker-Packard Corp. and president of the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic, was criticized by some Congressmen for his policies as Economic Cooperation Administrator. He was confirmed July 20 by a 64-22 roll-call vote. (See story, p. 650)

MAJOR RESIGNATIONS

Resignations from top posts during 1956, in addition to McKay's, included: Budget Bureau Director Rowland R. Hughes; General Services Administrator Edmund F. Mansure; ex-Sen. Harry P. Cain (R Wash.), a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board; and Robert B. McLeaish, head of the Farmers' Home Administration.

Mansure, who had been under Congressional criticism in connection with the operation of a government nickel plant in Cuba, resigned Feb. 6. He gave his reason as "personal obligations," said the resignation had been "clouded by misrepresentations which have been given wide currency in the press." President Eisenhower named as his successor Assistant Secretary of Defense Franklin G. Floete.

Hughes, Budget Director since 1954, resigned April 1 for "compelling personal and family reasons." The President named as his successor Deputy Budget Director Percival F. Brundage.

Cain, a frequent critic of the Administration's government employees security program, offered his resignation July 17, since his three-year term was due to expire in August. President Eisenhower July 25 accepted the resignation. Cain was succeeded by Mrs. Dorothy McCullough Lee of Portland, Ore.

McLeaish resigned as FHA administrator June 19 and said his action was "strongly suggested" by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. McLeaish was involved in Senate Post Office and Civil Service hearings in June on the conduct of FHA employees. One witness, John M. Ferguson Jr., president of Houston Fire and Casualty Insurance Co., said his $1 million FHA contract was terminated because he refused to hire one of McLeaish's friends as a salesman in 1953, and he refused McLeaish's request to make "friends of the Administration" agents for the account. McLeaish was succeeded by Kermit H. Hansen.

During 1956 the President sent 43,487 nominations to the Senate; 23 were withdrawn, 42,797 were confirmed and the remainder not acted upon. None was rejected. In 1955, President Eisenhower requested Senate approval of 40,686 nominations; in 1954, 45,917; and in 1953, 20,753.

William F. Knowland, of California, representative to the 11th session of the General Assembly; confirmed July 19.

Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., of Massachusetts, representative to the 11th session of the General Assembly; confirmed July 19.

Courts

U.S. COURT OF APPEALS

Warren E. Burger, of Minnesota, U.S. circuit judge, District of Columbia circuit; confirmed March 28.

Simon E. Sobeloff, of Maryland, U.S. circuit judge, fourth circuit; confirmed July 16.

Charles E. Whittaker, of Missouri, U.S. circuit judge, eighth circuit; confirmed June 4.

Stanley N. Barnes, of California, U.S. circuit judge, ninth circuit; confirmed March 20.

Frederick G. Hamley, of Washington, U.S. circuit judge, ninth circuit; confirmed June 29.

David T. Lewis, of Utah, U.S. circuit judge, 10th circuit; confirmed June 4.

SOBELOFF CONFIRMATION

NOMINATED --Solicitor General Simon E. Sobeloff, July 14, 1955, to be U.S. circuit judge of the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

APPROVED -- Senate Judiciary Committee, 9-2, June 29, 1956.

CONFIRMED -- By the Senate July 16, by a roll-call vote of 64-19. (See p. 178)

Simon E. Sobeloff was nominated by President Eisenhower in 1955, but the Senate adjourned without acting on the appointment. Following hearings in May and June, 1956, concerned mainly with his views on school segregation, he was confirmed as judge of the fourth circuit, which covers Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia and the Carolinas.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

HEARINGS -- May 5, 21, 22, by special Subcommittee; June, 4, 28, by full Committee.

TESTIMONY -- May 5 -- Fourth Circuit Court Judge Morris A. Soper said he had known Sobeloff for 40 years and would recommend him "unqualifiedly." He said Sobeloff's reputation was "of the highest."

Sen. Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.), in a statement submitted to the Subcommittee, said Sobeloff was "completely unqualified" for the post. Johnston said Sobeloff was involved in a conflict-of-interests situation in the 1930s when he accepted a court appointment to investigate a bank liquidation in Baltimore, Md.

Sen. John Stennis (D Miss.), in a submitted statement, said Sobeloff's public speeches "indicate he has a judicial philosophy wholly foreign to the American Constitutional concept."

Sobeloff said he represented the government before the U.S. Supreme Court in 1955 arguments on implementing the Court's 1954 anti-segregation decision regarding public schools. He said he advocated "orderly accomplishment" and would handle any segregation problems "with fairness, understanding and moderation."

Senators J. Glenn Beall (R Md.) and John Marshall Butler (R Md.) endorsed Sobeloff.

May 21 -- Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.) said Sobeloff "condones if he does not actually approve" the Supreme Court's "usurpation" of state powers. Sobeloff said he took the "middle ground" in arguments on what kind of decree the Supreme Court should issue to enforce its anti-segregation ruling.

May 22 -- Subcommittee Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) and Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) said after a brief hearing they were satisfied with Sobeloff's qualifications and would vote for his confirmation.

ACTION -- The Subcommittee May 24 favorably reported the nomination to the full Committee, which then held further hearings.

TESTIMONY -- June 4 -- Sen. Johnston said he opposed Sobeloff because of "charges against his professional conduct" in a Baltimore case and because "Mr. Sobeloff's philosophy, pre-judgment of issues and his participation in matters affecting states' rights was such as to make him wholly unacceptable to the great majority of the people" in the fourth circuit. Sobeloff's "disposition to pre-judge issues," Johnston said, was "demonstrated by his failure as the chief law officer of the United States to participate in the government's appeal in the case against Prof. John P. Peters of the Yale Medical School... (and) by his failure to represent the government...in connection with the security cases involving the Coast Guard employees." (1955 Almanac, p. 665)

June 28 -- Sen. A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) said Sobeloff was "a man known to be prejudiced" against the South on the school segregation issue. He said, "I feel it would be impossible for him to perform the duties of this judgeship in a manner satisfactory to the people of the area he would serve...."

NOMINATION APPROVED

ACTION -- The Committee June 29 approved Sobeloff's nomination by a 9-2 vote. Four Democrats, Sens. O'Mahoney, Estes Kefauver (Tenn.), Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Mo.), and Matthew M. Neely (W.Va.), and five Republicans, Sens. Watkins, Butler, William Langer (N.D.), Everett M. Dirksen (Ill.) and Alexander Wiley (Wis.) voted for the nomination.

Sens. Johnston and James O. Eastland (D Miss.) voted against the nomination. Price Daniel (D Texas), William E. Jenner (R Ind.) and Herman Welker (R Idaho) were absent. John L. McClellan (D Ark.) voted "present."

The Committee July 6 reported the nomination (Exec Rept 8), with minority views.

The report said the Committee found "no merit in the objections" to the appointment. It reviewed the five major objections with these conclusions: Sobeloff's alleged "confict-of-interests" role in the Baltimore Trust Co. receivership -- his conduct was "unexceptionable" and a "petty incident" had been magnified "indefensibly;" his participation in segregation cases before the Supreme Court -- he showed "awareness of the human factors on both sides of the question;" his alleged views on separation of powers -- his attitudes were not those "of a man who would seek to override the separation of powers;" failure to sign the Peters case brief -- honest differences were not cause for disqualification; the claim that a South Carolinian should get the appointment -- there was neither tradition nor requirement for rotation among states.

A minority report signed by Sens. Johnston and Eastland said the nomination was "totally unacceptable to the people of Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.... Such action has the inevitable consequence of lowering the dignity of the court in the minds of the people who will be adversely affected by the views and philosophy of this man serving on the bench."

Floor Action

The Senate July 16, by a 64-19 roll-call vote, confirmed the nomination of Sobeloff to the circuit court. A motion to recommit the nomination to the Judiciary Committee, offered by Johnston, was rejected on a 20-63 roll-call. (For voting, see chart, p. 178)

DEBATE -- July 16 -- John Marshall Butler (R Md.) -- "...the fact that every judge on the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals is urging us to confirm the nominee -- were there nothing more to be said in his favor -- would render worthless the contention of the minority that he is not qualified, that his nomination is a political device and that the nominee is unacceptable to the people within the circuit."

A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- "...even if the prejudice against this nominee did not have a solid foundation, the fact of the very existence of that prejudice would make it difficult if not impossible for him to function in this judicial role."

J. Glenn Beall (R Md.) -- "I do not blame South Carolinians for pressing for representation, but it should not be pressed here and at the expense of an eminently qualified nominee. Another vacancy already exists on the Court. That position may be available to South Carolina.... Our job is not to nominate, but to confirm if the nomination is a good one."

Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.) -- "If it were not for the fact that there is agitation about racial questions in the United States at this time, the Senate would not take five minutes to reject a nomination which is obnoxious to six of the 10 Senators representing the area concerned."

James O. Eastland (D Miss.) -- "This nominee is an extreme left-winger. His nomination is a step toward the destruction of the American system of government.... Here is a man who says be believes the Supreme Court should legislate...who says that the judiciary should usurp the legislative and executive branches of the government."

HOFFMAN CONFIRMATION

NOMINATED -- Paul G. Hoffman, July 13, 1956, to be a U.S. representative to the 11th session of the United Nations General Assembly.

APPROVED -- Senate Foreign Relations Committee, unanimously, July 17.

CONFIRMED -- By the Senate July 20, by a 64-22 roll-call vote. (See p. 181)

Paul G. Hoffman, board chairman of Studebaker-Packard Corp. and president of the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic, had served as Economic Cooperation Administrator from 1948 to 1950. His policies while in the ECA post were a point of debate during Senate action on his appointment.

Senate

The Senate confirmed Hoffman's nomination July 20 by a 64-22 roll-call vote. (For voting, see p. 181)

DEBATE -- July 11 -- Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) -- "Paul Hoffman...is a huckster of one of the major themes of the Communist party line: namely, that the fight against Communism in this country is destroying our civil liberties and must therefore be stopped... A man who has allowed himself to be used as a 'transmission belt' for the spreading of the most blatant variety of Communist propaganda is surely not qualified to withstand the blandishments of the Soviet propagandists at the UN.... We have...evidence that Paul Hoffman, as Economic Cooperation Administrator, played the role of guardian angel to a man whom he had good reason to believe had been and perhaps still was a member of the Communist party... (Note: McCarthy later modified this charge.) The Senate would be derelict in its duty if it permitted Mr. Hoffman to be appointed to another high position without...a convincing explanation."

July 19 -- Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- "I have never known a man who has been more consistently and with greater vigor opposed to Communism than Paul Hoffman. (He) is a man of strict honesty, outstanding loyalty and unquestioned patriotism. He is a man of fine mental stature and of unimpeachable moral stature."

William E. Jenner (R Ind.) -- "We are voting to approve or disapprove, as a representative of the U.S., a man who has been clearly identified over many years with the softening and corruption of public opinion in the United States and the undermining of its power to meet the Communist danger. ...if Paul Hoffman does not see what is going on, he is not competent to represent the United States in an intellectual duel with spokesmen for the Soviet Union."

McCarthy -- "I have never maintained that Paul Hoffman is a Communist, but judging by his line, I would say that he often appears to be cheating the Communist party out of dues "

July 20 -- Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- As "Administrator of the Marshall plan," Hoffman "was a credit to the U.S.... I commend the President for having selected him as a delegate" to the UN.

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- "...I do not question the patriotism or the integrity of Mr. Hoffman.... (But as ECA Administrator he) set a pattern of waste and extravagance that has cost the American taxpayers millions of dollars...."

TARIFF COMMISSION

NOMINATED -- William E. Dowling of Michigan and James Weldon Jones of Texas, Jan. 9, 1956, to Democratic posts on the Tariff Commission.

APPROVED -- Senate Finance Committee: Dowling, Jan. 12; Jones, Jan. 16.

CONFIRMED -- By the Senate March 13, by a 92-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 155)

At the time of their 1956 nominations, both William E. Dowling and James Weldon Jones already were Tariff Commission members. Jones' nomination to fill a vacancy for a term ending June 16, 1957, had been confirmed by the Senate June 14, 1955. On July 28, 1955, Mr. Eisenhower nominated Jones for a term that would end in 1961 and picked Dowling for the term ending in 1957. The Senate did not act on the nominations before the 1955 session adjourned and on Aug. 22 Dowling was given a recess appointment for the longer term.

On Jan. 9, 1956, the President resubmitted Jones' and Dowling's nominations, again proposed that the two switch terms, with Dowling taking the shorter term. (Tariff Commission terms are for six years, with one expiring each year.)

Senate

The Senate March 13 confirmed the nominations of Dowling and Jones by a 92-0 roll-call vote, despite misgivings expressed by some Democrats. (For voting, see chart, p. 155)

DEBATE -- March 13 -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Said the shift in terms was "unprecedented," called for "a full explanation of the real reasons," but added that he had "no personal animus toward either nominee." Said the President "while preaching freer trade, has packed the Tariff Commission with protectionists."

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Supported the nominations because "I heard nothing which reflected upon the character, the integrity, the patriotism or the ability of either of these gentlemen."

LOBBY ROUNDUP

How Lobbies Fared

CQ Fact Sheet On Lobby Record

HOW LOBBIES FARED IN 84th CONGRESS

Intensive lobby activity shaped key decisions during the second session of the 84th Congress and offered a preview of the pressure drives expected in the 85th Congress.

Major lobby drives were set in motion when Congress considered natural gas, farm price supports, veterans' pensions, highways, power, housing, school aid and social security legislation. Many will be lobby issues again in 1957.

Lobby efforts in favor of passage of farm legislation, the Colorado Reclamation Project, social security, highways and housing were successful, at least for the time being, when legislation was enacted. But some groups were dissatisfied with the measures and may press for revision.

Unsuccessful lobby fights on natural gas, school aid, postal mail rates and power disputes portend intense pressures on these issues in 1957.

Congressional Quarterly's annual lobby roundup tells what the lobbies wanted and what they got on major issues in the second session of the 84th Congress:

Natural Gas

Biggest lobby battle in 1956 was over HR 6645, a bill to exempt gatherers and producers of natural gas from federal public utility regulation.

Final consideration of the bill was overshadowed by a Feb. 3 announcement by Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) that he had rejected a $2,500 campaign contribution from John M. Neff, Lexington, Neb., lawyer interested in passage of HR 6645. The Senate Feb. 7 set up a Select Committee, headed by Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.), to investigate the contribution. On Feb. 22 the Senate established a Special Committee to Investigate Political Activities, Lobbying and Campaign Contributions. The Committee, headed by Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.), began hearings May 1.

WHAT PRO-REGULATION LOBBIES WANTED -- The Mayors' Committee on Natural Gas urged Congress to continue federal control of natural gas sales in interstate commerce. In Washington, the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, Council of Local Gas Companies, National Farmers Union and the United Automobile Workers (AFL-CIO) supported federal regulation. All argued that a release from government control would mean an increase in the price of natural gas for the consumer.

WHAT ANTI-REGULATION LOBBIES WANTED -- Favoring passage of the bill were the General Gas Committee, Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee and Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Assn. They represented oil and gas interests. A mayors' group was formed in opposition to the pro-regulation Mayors' Committee by former Mayor Alex M. Clark of Indianapolis. It called itself the Joint Committee of Consumers and Producers of Natural Gas. Anti-regulation groups argued that because of the "hazardous" nature of gas exploration and the "vigorously competitive" market, federal regulation would result in "diminished supplies" of natural gas at higher prices.

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- The House in 1955 passed a bill (HR 6645) to exempt independent producers of natural gas from federal utility-rate control. The Senate Feb. 6 passed and sent the bill to the President. President Eisenhower Feb. 17 vetoed the bill. He said "since the passage of this bill, a body of evidence has accumulated indicating that private persons, apparently representing only a very small segment of a great and vital industry, have been seeking to further their own interest by highly questionable activities." (See p. 469)

Price Supports

WHAT FLEXIBLE SUPPORT LOBBIES WANTED -- The American Farm Bureau Federation made a determined stand in support of the flexible farm price support program enacted by the 83rd Congress. Assisted by some farm commodity and business groups, the Federation argued that farmer income would be maintained at the "highest possible" levels if the price system were permitted to serve as the main balance wheel between supply and demand. It also argued that increased farm efficiency, lower costs and market expansion at home and abroad were the "sound" ways to stop the drop in net farm income which it attributed to rigid supports. The AFBF was supported by the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. and the National Grange.

WHAT RIGID SUPPORT LOBBIES WANTED -- The National Farmers Union and a new group, the National Farmers' Organization, urged 100 percent of parity but supported legislation calling for 90 percent of parity rigidly fixed. The NFU said the flexible support program was a "serious mistake" and "unworkable by its very nature." It contended the farmer's position could not be improved "by cutting his prices and income."

WHAT OTHER FARM LOBBIES WANTED -- The National Milk Producers Federation said price supports for dairy products should be "not less than 80 percent of parity."

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- Congress passed a revised farm bill (HR 10875) setting up acreage and conservation reserves -- the soil bank program -- but did not include price supports. Earlier, the House refused to override (202-211) President Eisenhower's veto of a Democratic-sponsored farm measure (HR 12) which provided for a return to rigid 90 percent price supports. (See p. 375)

(a) Some groups qualified their stands
(b) Chamber Members rejected resolution to support O.T.C.
(c) President Eisenhower vetoed Natural Gas bill.

(Organizations selected took a position on two or more of the issues listed.)

Federal Aid to Schools

WHAT SCHOOL LOBBIES WANTED -- A coalition of national organizations pooled resources and influence in a drive for a federal aid to school construction program. Leading school groups, led by the National Education Assn. and the Council of Chief State School Officers, coordinated plans and worked closely with Congressional committees. Support for the educators' program came from such groups as the AFL-CIO, National Farmers Union, American Assn. of University Women and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. They argued that the existing shortage of at least 340,000 class rooms, coupled with sub-standard school buildings and the short supply of teachers, made increased federal aid mandatory.

WHAT OTHER LOBBIES WANTED -- The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People said that anti-segregation provisions should be incorporated in any school aid proposal. The National Assn. of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. opposed federal aid provisions of school bills. The Council of State Chambers of Commerce as well as the U.S. Chamber took the position that school construction needs could be met fully at the state and local levels without federal aid.

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- The House rejected a Democratic-backed measure (HR 7535) to provide $1.6 billion in grants over a four-year period. Earlier the House adopted a controversial amendment to bar aid to states with segregated schools. It also rejected an amendment to substitute an Administration bill providing that aid be distributed to the states according to need. The Senate took no action. (See p. 411)

Hells Canyon

WHAT PUBLIC POWER LOBBIES WANTED -- Public power groups wanted the federal government to build a single, multi-purpose high dam at Hells Canyon on the Snake River, about 90 miles north of Wieser, Idaho. These groups -- led by the National Hells Canyon Assn., National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn. and American Public Power Assn. -- argued that greater economic development would be possible with the high dam. The additional prosperity would pay off in more federal tax revenue, they said.

WHAT PRIVATE POWER LOBBIES WANTED -- The National Assn. of Electric Companies backed the Idaho Power Co.'s bid to build three small dams on the Snake River in place of the single federal dam. NAEC argued that the federal high dam would cost more and would have a poorer tax yield. Private interests also claimed Idaho Power's plan was in line with the Administration's "partnership" power policy.

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- The Senate defeated a bill (S 1333) to authorize construction, operation and maintenance of a single high federal dam at Hells Canyon. The House took no final action. (See p. 499)

Veterans' Pensions

WHAT THE AMERICAN LEGION WANTED -- The American Legion led the fight for a general pension plan to increase compensation payments to service-disabled veterans and for non-service-connected pensions. The Legion urged presumed disability for all veterans at age 65. Qualifying veterans would receive $85 monthly before age 65 and $105 monthly after age 65, providing their outside income did not exceed $1,800 if they did not have dependents and $3,000 a year if they did.

WHAT THE VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS WANTED -- The VFW supported Legion proposals for a general pension plan but hoped to limit presumed disability at age 65 to veterans of World War I. Qualifying veterans under the VFW plan would receive $100 a month plus 20 percent for overseas service. Income limitations would be set at $2,400 for veterans without dependents and $3,600 for veterans with dependents.

WHAT OTHER VETERANS GROUPS WANTED -- The Disabled American Veterans, American Veterans of World War II and the Korean War and the American Veterans Committee opposed increases in non-service-connected pensions. The AMVETS and the DAV pushed for adoption of increased benefits for the service-connected disabled. Maj. Gen. Melvin J. Maas (USMC, ret.), DAV national commander, Feb. 29 said there was a limit on dollars this nation could spend on its veterans. "If we go into a general pension plan," he said, "it is going to have to be taken away from the service-connected disabled veterans or their widows or orphans." Rudolph G. Pesata, AMVETS national commander, June 18 said the Legion bill (HR 7886) had no chance of passage and urged the Legion to compromise on compensation increases.

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- The House passed a bill (HR 7886) to increase rates and liberalize the basis for payment of non-service-connected pensions. The Senate took no final action. The House later passed a bill (HR 12038) increasing service-connected disability compensation payments, but again the Senate took no action. (See p. 527)

Public Housing

WHAT PRO-PUBLIC HOUSING LOBBIES WANTED -- Requests that the housing bill include 200,000 units a year of public housing came from the National Housing Conference, the AFL-CIO and Americans for Democratic Action. Proponents of public housing said the Administration request for 35,000 units a year was inadequate to meet the needs of low-income families and elderly persons.

WHAT ANTI-PUBLIC HOUSING LOBBIES WANTED -- Opposition to any public housing program was led by the National Assn. of Real Estate Boards, National Assn. of Home Builders, Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. and the National Retail Lumber Dealers Assn. George W. West of the Chamber said additional public housing was not necessary because of the tremendous surge of private home ownership since 1940. The NAREB said public housing was "inherently dangerous to our free society" and should be terminated.

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- Congress passed a bill (HR 11742) authorizing construction of 35,000 public housing units a year for two years for persons of low incomes, providing the municipality first had a "workable program" to get rid of slums. The plan would have to be approved by the Housing and Home Finance Agency Administrator. Single elderly persons, 65 years of age or more, would get priority in admittance to public housing projects. (See p. 511)

Highways

Major lobbying activity surrounding the highway bill was centered on highway financing and whether or not the Davis-Bacon Act should apply to the highway program. The Davis-Bacon Act enables the federal government to set wage levels on federal projects.

FINANCING

WHAT HIGHWAY LOBBIES WANTED -- The American Automobile Assn. and the Assn. of American Railroads favored a sliding scale of tax increases on the basis of weight and mileage of vehicles. AAA contended that highways take more of a beating from trucks and heavy vehicles than from passenger cars. The American Trucking Assns. supported HR 9075, a highway finance bill, but the National Assn. of Motor Bus Operators and the National Tire Dealers and Retreaders Assn. said the proposed new taxes on tires and retread rubber would impose a burden on dealers and buses. The American Farm Bureau Federation opposed further federal spending for highways. It said the states "should continue to have the primary responsibility for financing highways." The National Assn. of Taxicab Owners and the American Taxicab Assn. said taxis should be exempt from increased taxes as they rarely use the national highway systems.

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- Congress passed the Highway Revenue Act (PL 627, 84th Congress) increasing gasoline, diesel and fuel taxes from 2 to 3 cents a gallon for vehicles registered for highway use, excluding local transit vehicles. Tire taxes were increased from 5 cents to 8 cents a pound. Manufacturers' taxes on trucks, buses and truck trailers were increased from 8 percent to 10 percent. A tax of $1.50 a thousand pounds on trucks and buses weighing more than 26,000 pounds was included. (See p. 398)

DAVIS-BACON

WHAT PRO-DAVIS-BACON LOBBIES WANTED -- The four basic construction unions in January, 1955, formed the National Joint Heavy and Highway Construction Committee to press for the inclusion of the Davis-Bacon Act provision for wage fixing in the highway bill. Adoption of the provision , said the Committee, would not be an innovation since the government already determines prevailing wage rates under grants-in-aid and insured programs such as those for airports, schools, hospitals and housing. They argued that since the government would pay 90 percent of the Interstate System construction costs, the government should set the prevailing wage.

WHAT ANTI-DAVIS-BACON ACT LOBBIES WANTED -- The Associated General Contractors and the American Road Builders Assn. said the wage issue should be left to the states. The Contractors' group said inclusion of the Davis-Bacon provision would "unnecessarily increase the cost of highway construction" and could upset the economy of local communities. The Road Builders said the legislation was interfering with the rights of the states.

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- Congress passed the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1956 (PL 627, 84th Congress) which included the Davis-Bacon provision. The Secretary of Labor was directed, in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act and after consultation with state highway departments, to determine local prevailing wage rates to be paid workers employed on construction of the Interstate System. (See p. 398)

Organization For Trade Cooperation

WHAT PRO-OTC LOBBIES WANTED -- The Committee for a National Trade Policy and the Committee for Foreign Trade Education led the fight for Congressional authorization for United States entry into the Organization for Trade Cooperation. Supported by groups including Americans for Democratic Action, Committee for Economic Development, and the American Farm Bureau Federation, the free trade groups said OTC would be an administrative body which would speedily settle international trade disputes arising from U.S. participation in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

WHAT ANTI-OTC LOBBIES WANTED -- Opponents of OTC were led by the American Tariff League and the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy. Opponents said U.S. participation in OTC would mean Congressional approval of GATT and be a "dangerous delegation of...(Congressional)...authority" over trade and other domestic matters to an international body.

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- The House Ways and Means Committee reported a bill (HR 5550) to authorize U.S. membership in OTC, but the bill was never voted on. (See p. 485)

Social Security

WHAT PRO-SOCIAL SECURITY LOBBIES WANTED -- The Townsend Plan, National Institute for Social Welfare and the AFL-CIO led the fight for social security legislation in 1956. These groups urged paying OASI benefits to totally and permanently disabled workers before they reached the normal retirement age of 65 and lowering the age for retirement and survivors benefits for women to 62, instead of 65. The National Farmers Union joined these groups and further recommended compulsory coverage of self-employed members in their occupational fields.

WHAT OTHER GROUPS WANTED -- The American Medical Assn. and the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. led the fight opposing disability payments before retirement age. The AMA, the American Farm Bureau Federation and the American Dental Assn. opposed compulsory coverage for the self-employed. Major lobbies on both sides of the question supported legislation extending coverage to all workers employed by somebody else.

WHAT CONGRESS DID -- Congress passed a bill (HR 7225) extending coverage to more than 200,000 additional persons, lowered the retirement age for women from 65 to 62 and established a new program of disability benefits at age 50. Congress also extended compulsory coverage to the self-employed. (See p. 392)

Other Lobby Fights

ALASKA MENTAL HEALTH BILL -- One of the most controversial pieces of legislation tackled by Congress in 1956 was a routine bill (HR 6376) designed to give the territory of Alaska responsibility for the care of its own mentally ill residents. The bill was supported by the American Medical Assn., American Psychiatric Assn. and National Assn. for Mental Health. Opponents said the bill would authorize establishment of a "concentration camp for political prisoners" and a "Siberia in Alaska for the deportation of undesirable patriots." Opponents included the American Public Relations Forum, For America League, Christian Nationalist and the Minute Women of the U.S.A. Congress passed the bill, but only after all commitment procedures, its most controversial feature, had been eliminated. (See p. 576)

POSTAL RATE INCREASE -- A hot lobby issue, as well as a hot political issue, the postal rate increase bill (HR 11380) was generally supported by post office unions and opposed by several publishing houses and newspapers. The National Assn. of Postmasters, National Assn. of Letter Carriers (AFL-CIO) and the National Assn. of Post Office Clerks supported increased postal rates to reduce the Post Office Department's deficit and increase efficiency in its operation. They were joined by the Washington Publishers Assn. and Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance which said publishing houses should bear their share of postal rates. The National Assn. of Direct Selling Cos. led the fight against postal rate increases. Joined by Street and Smith Publications and the International Allied Printing Trade, they said the Post Office Department is a public institution and should be publicly supported. The House passed a bill (HR 11380) calling for increased postal rates but time ran out on Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee consideration of the bill. (See p. 464)

ATOMIC REACTORS -- A bill authorizing the federal government to build six atomic reactors for power production set off a lobby fight between private and public power supporters. The Cooperative League of the U.S.A., National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn., United Automobile Workers of America (AFL-CIO) and National Farmers Union urged Congress to authorize the reactors for cheaper electric power and to keep the U.S. in the field of peaceful atomic research. The National Coal Assn., Utility Workers of America (AFL-CIO) and many private power companies said the government should not enter the atomic power field. The Senate approved a bill (S 4146) calling for construction of six atomic reactors. The House killed the bill by ordering its recommittal in the fading days of the 84th Congress. (See p. 542)

LOBBY SPENDING GOES UP IN 1955

Lobby groups spent $4,365,843 to influence legislation in Congress during 1955, according to official spending reports.

An annual survey by Congressional Quarterly showed that 274 groups filed spending reports with the Clerk of the House of Representatives through March 31, 1956. The 1955 total was slightly higher than the $4,286,158 reported by 225 groups in 1954. (1955 Almanac p. 678.)

The National Assn. of Real Estate Boards said it spent $131,006 to influence legislation during 1955, the largest amount reported spent by any lobby group as of March 31, 1956. The realtors were followed by the National Assn. of Electric Companies reporting $114,835, the AFL with $114,079 for its 1955 lobbying, and the American Farm Bureau Federation which said it spent $113,610. Twenty-eight lobby groups reported spending more than $50,000. (See Box)

Authority for Reports

Under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act of 1946 all groups whose principal purpose is to influence legislation are required to register and file quarterly accounts of their receipts and expenditures. However, since the 1954 Supreme Court decision in the case of U.S. vs. Harriss, et al (347 U.S. 612), some groups have announced a change in reporting techniques. (1954 Almanac, p. 674).

Many groups criticized the law in statements attached to their official reports. Some claimed the law needed clarification because of "uncertainty as to coverage...and reporting obligations." Additional confusion existed concerning reporting methods. Some groups listed all expenditures, including salaries, administrative expenses and overhead costs; others said only a small percentage of their total expenditures could be regarded as lobby spending.

For example, the former CIO said the figures in its report "are necessarily estimated and represent the closest approximation possible." The National Assn. of Electric Companies reported it was "allocating its receipts and expenditures as between coverable and non-coverable items...", and the Transportation Assn. of America said "if any of (its) expenditures are required to be reported under the Act...the amount thereof would not be in excess of 1 percent of the total expenditures ...." The American Petroleum Institute said it reported 1.8 percent of the general dues and contributions received during 1955.

1955 Reports Confusing

The 1955 reported spending figures contained additional complications. For example, the No. 2 spender, NAEC, reported spending $4,298 more than in 1954 when it placed seventh on CQ's list of top spenders. Five of the top six spenders of 1954 reported much less in 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 678)

A second confusing aspect involved reports filed by the Transportation Assn. of America and the American Tariff League. Each of these groups reported spending more than $150,000 during the first half of 1955 and landed in first and second place, respectively, on CQ's first-half spending survey for 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 680) However, their final reports showed that each group spent less than $5,000 in 1955.

TOP LOBBY SPENDERS

In 1955, 28 lobby groups each reported spending more than $50,000. The 28, with reported 1954 spending for comparison:

After the 1955 first half spending figures were published, Harold F. Hammond, TAA executive vice president, said TAA's spending for lobbying was "actually" $2,000. He said that "next time" his group would report only the amount considered "to be actual lobbying spending."

Richard H. Anthony, executive secretary of the Tariff League, Feb. 1 said his group's second and fourth quarterly reports for 1955 were "not comparable." He said that for the first half of 1955 the League "furnished a complete breakdown of all expenditures above $10." However, Anthony added, since the first-half total was "misinterpreted" and since the League "could not estimate" the amount it spent for legislative purposes by categories set forth in the official forms, it submitted "an arbitrary sum" in the fourth-quarter report for 1955.

Previous to the December, 1955, AFL-CIO merger, each union filed separate spending reports. For the period after the merger, a single report was filed for the two groups. If all three reports were combined, AFL-CIO would have out-spent any other single organization with a total of $236,011. If the AFL-CIO December report was divided equally between the CIO and the AFL, each would have spent more than NAEC.

Ups and Downs

The 1955 reports showed some big decreases in reported spending as well as big increases. The largest single drop was reported by the National Milk Producers Federation which said it spent $174,583 less in 1955 than during 1954. The largest single increase in reported spending was made by the General Gas Committee which said it spent $80,434 more in 1955 than in 1954.

Other significant increases in reported spending included the realtors with $70,434, the U.S. Cuban Sugar Council with $64,715 and the Colorado River Assn. with $43,992.

Groups with considerable drops in reported spending included the Assn. of American Railroads with an $80,573.29 decrease, the National Federation of Post Office Clerks with $55,461, the Transportation Assn. of America with $53,233 and the American Tariff League with $42,169.

Lobby spending reports are due the 10th day after the close of each calendar quarter. However, CQ found in 1955 that 30 groups filed late reports during the period of Jan. 31-March 31. These reports carried a total of $203,716 and included the fourth quarterly report of the year's top spender, NAREB.

The late reports put the Upper Colorado River Grass Roots Inc. and the National Committee for Insurance Taxation into the $50,000 or more group.

Yearly Totals
